LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1980

The House met at 2 p.m.

ACCESS TO LEGISLATIVE BUILDING

Mr. M. N. Davison: On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker: When I returned to my office at 1:40 this afternoon I was stopped at the north door by a member of the Ontario Government Protective Service. He first asked me if he could be of assistance to me. When I informed him that he could not be of assistance to me, he asked me if I worked here. I said, "No, I am a member of the Legislative Assembly." He said, "Sorry, sir."

When I suggested to him that I would be rather upset if any of my constituents were grilled as they tried to come to visit me in my office, his response was that his superiors would be even more upset if he didn't stop people at the entrance to this building. This particular guard is new to his duties at Queen's Park and I have no complaint against him personally. That does not constitute part of my point of privilege.

However, when I contacted Senior Supervisor Watts of the government protective service at Queen's Park and asked him what orders had been given to the security staff here, I got the following explanation of what kind of people would be stopped and held at the doors of the building. I think Mr. Watts' definition includes a large number of the members of the assembly. He said: "There is a consensus that you can spot people with a grievance against the government, people who want to air their views, or people who are not quite right in the mind." He said he thought the guard had probably stopped me because it was the first time he had seen me.

As I say, this person is new to his duties here and I have no complaint against him, but that is an incredibly unacceptable answer for the government protective service to provide. I don't want any of my constituents to be treated like that. I think my privileges and the privileges of my constituents have been breached. Mr. Speaker, I would like you to look into this matter. Specifically I would like to know who gave those orders to the security staff in this building.

Mr. Speaker: I think we all have had those difficulties from time to time as a result of quite a large turnover of staff. Obviously there has been a misunderstanding. I will undertake to look into it.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

TORONTO ISLAND HOMES

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, today I will be introducing a bill that will effectively stay the execution of the writs of possession upon the residents of Toronto Island until July 1, 1981. This action is necessary because on October 27 the Ontario Court of Appeal found the writs of possession to be still valid. At that time, the commission, headed by Barry Swadron, QC, was still under way.

Last June the Lieutenant Governor in Council established this commission, under section 249 of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, to inquire into the future use of those lands on Ward's and Algonquin islands that were used for residential purposes. Originally the intention was to have a commission made up of five people, two from the city of Toronto and two from Metro, along with Mr. Swadron. However, during the summer Metro declined to nominate its two commissioners, so the commission was set up with Mr. Swadron only.

This is the first time the whole issue of future uses for these islands has been looked at in depth by an independent commission. Mr. Swadron has been holding meetings and intense discussions over the past few months with everyone interested and concerned about this matter. There has been an opportunity for a thorough examination of the situation. The commission has received 160 written submissions and has heard from more than 140 individuals during the hearings.

I understand the commissioner has almost completed all the groundwork, the meetings, the discussions and the research, and has begun to write his report, which we expect to be submitted in December. The passage of this bill will allow the residents of the islands to remain in their homes until the Swadron commission can report and its recommendations can be responded to.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I would like to give the members of the House an update on our seven-point program to develop the needed facilities to treat and control liquid industrial waste.

First of all, I am tabling today an update of our investigation to date into the allegations over the operations of Walker Brothers Quarries in the Niagara Region. Secondly, I would like to report on the status of our various proposals for interim and short-term waste facilities. However, before I do that, I would like to draw the attention of the House to the interim report on liquid waste from the standing committee on resources development.

Although the report is already part of the official record of this House, I want to commend the committee for its excellent recommendation. As this House will note, many of the recommendations have been incorporated into our program, including the suggestion that the ministry should assist and encourage companies in establishing a solidification plant in the province.

The citizens of Thorold held a referendum on Monday to express their opinion on the proposal to locate a solidification facility near their community. The result was an overwhelming no. During September a local newspaper conducted an informal but well-organized poll on the attitude of the residents of Harwich township to a similar proposal. Again there was an overwhelming response expressing opposition to this proposal. In each of these communities, the citizens have taken their position before the environmental assessment process had the opportunity to study adequately the safety and the effectiveness of the proposals, or to demonstrate the urgent need.

Both sides of the House, as recommended in the committee report, have stated a commitment to the public hearing process as a step in decision-making. I not only concurred with that recommendation, but I so ordered it. Yet certain members have acted to frustrate the environmental assessment process by urging rejection before hearings could be held and the issues fully addressed. Clearly, the temptation to support the "not in my backyard" syndrome is an easy and attractive position for a politician.

Ontario is clearly running out of options for the treatment of liquid industrial waste and the crisis is building. The combination of these many factors has now served to delay the establishment of urgently needed facilities. My ministry has been considering other options for some time, but I do not intend to make a final decision on our future course of action until we have received the final report from James F. MacLaren Limited.

As the honourable members will recall, this engineering consulting firm was hired in January 1979 to make recommendations on a permanent, long-term liquid waste treatment facility. The completion of this report has been a high priority. The final cost is estimated at just under $425,000. I anticipate the recommendations will form the basis of the government's future plan of action. I expect to receive this final report tomorrow. After I have personally had the opportunity to assess the recommendations, I will report back to the House on November 25. At that time, I will table the report and outline the ministry's course of action.

In the meantime, I am putting a freeze on ministry activities and participation in the proposals for solidification facilities in Harwich township, as well as at Walker Brothers, and for the interim storage facility for polychlorinated biphenyls in Middleport.

COMMUNITY SERVICES CONTRIBUTION PROGRAM

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, I regret that today I must inform the House that my colleague the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) and I have received notification from the Honourable Paul Cosgrove, federal Minister of Public Works and the minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, that the community services contribution program will terminate with the expiration of the interim agreement on December 31, 1980.

The arbitrary termination of this program, which replaced funding for the former neighbourhood improvement program, municipal incentive grant program and municipal infrastructure program, and has operated successfully in Ontario, is of significant importance to bring before the Legislature for two basic reasons.

First, the unilateral decision of the federal government to share no longer in the costs of water and sewerage installations or neighbourhood improvement projects, or to provide capital support for nonprofit housing under the CSCP not only will affect the quality of life of many Canadian residents but will also have far-reaching economic consequences in terms of forgone construction and loss of indirect and induced employment.

Second, the current agreement, which terminates in less than seven weeks, states that both parties will endeavour to conclude a long-term agreement prior to December 31, 1980, and that negotiations for this program would commence not later than November 1 of last year. The termination of this program is a complete reversal of the spirit in which the original program negotiations were conducted and the direction in which my ministry and CMHC have been moving for the past two years. This places the entire federal-provincial negotiation process in question at a most inopportune time. One wonders whether unilateral federal action will terminate other existing financial arrangements.

I would like to provide the honourable members with some specifics as the program relates to Ontario. In the first program year, 1979, the federal government allocated $51.6 million to Ontario which escalated to $85.95 million in the second year, 1980. This level was to continue over a long-term period. The related provincial contributions to eligible municipal projects were $90 million in the first year, 1979, and $153 million in the second year, 1980.

Municipalities from all parts of the province, ranging in size from the cities of Toronto, Ottawa, Windsor, Sault Ste. Marie and Timmins, to the towns of Chesley, Smiths Falls and Leamington, are participating in neighbourhood-improvement-type projects funded in part by CSCP funds. These projects are upgrading existing neighbourhoods through the improvement of municipal services and public utilities as well as the provision of social and recreational facilities. These efforts, combined with the Ontario main street and downtown revitalization programs, are contributing to the fight against urban decline which is plaguing cities and towns in parts of our province and indeed in Canada.

In all, 45 municipalities are improving the quality of life for their residents through this component of CSCP in the first two program years and the demand for the program stretches far into the future. For example, the municipal demand for funds in 1980, or program year two, amounted to approximately $46 million from 48 municipalities in our province. However, only $23 million of federal CSCP funds were available on a priority basis to fund projects in 30 municipalities. Eighteen other municipalities with defined needs were deferred in anticipation of the continuation of the program and were expecting to receive CSCP funds from program years three, four, five and beyond.

In terms of employment, approximately 3,000 man-years of direct and indirect employment were generated by the expenditures of all three levels of government on hard services in the first two program years. In addition, the private sector has been encouraged to renovate and rehabilitate residential and commercial properties in NIP areas, producing employment and increasing property values and municipal revenues.

Another component of the program in Ontario was a 10 per cent capital write-down for municipal nonprofit corporations. The first program year provided $6.6 million in federal funds and assisted in the provision of approximately 1,200 units and produced 4,200 man-years of employment throughout this province. It is anticipated that 2,100 more units will receive grants from program year two, amounting to approximately $12 million, to produce 7,350 more man-years of employment. These nonprofit units for the most part will provide accommodation to families and senior citizens of low and moderate income and are good examples of the benefits of CSCP to the people of Ontario.

However, these federal capital grants will no longer be available. The bulk of the CSCP allocation to Ontario is utilized by our Ministry of the Environment for municipal infrastructure projects. The gross value of water and waste water facilities and storm sewers constructed annually in Ontario is estimated to be about $550 million. More than 300 projects, worth about $375 million, are directly assisted by the CSCP grants, amounting to $52 million per year.

However, the termination of the CSCP will cause about $175 million of construction of water and waste water facilities to be lost annually in Ontario. Some 95 projects in about 50 municipalities will be affected and direct onsite construction employment loss could approach 3,000 man-years annually, based on 1980-81 prices. Loss of indirect and induced employment, e.g., equipment manufacturing and supply of materials, will be at least 6,000 man-years annually.

The related effects on housing starts and the curtailment of the growth due to a slow-down in the servicing of raw land are difficult to estimate, but will be substantial. We anticipate the main effects will be felt in small to medium-sized urban centres where insufficient municipal financing will force the deferral of servicing.

The environmental consequences of the termination of the federal funding related to municipal infrastructure projects must also be considered. For example, under the Canada-Ontario agreement on Great Lakes water quality, in excess of $600 million in federal funds was utilized to accelerate the cleanup of the municipally caused water pollution problems. The successful efforts of the three levels of government allowed Canada to meet its international commitment under the Canada-US agreement and provide leverage in promoting comparable US pollution abatement efforts.

The demands of the 1980s for protection and improvement of the Great Lakes will be even greater than those of the 1960s and 1970s. Governments are committed to an international response in connection with the reduction of toxic and hazardous substances, the control of raw sewage, combined sewage and storm water discharges, and the further reduction of phosphorus discharges from urban and rural sources. The termination of CSCP will now seriously weaken Ontario's ability to meet commitments under the Canada-Ontario agreement and, in turn, the Canada-US agreement on Great Lakes water quality.

These are but a few of the emerging problem areas that will require capital-intensive solutions and will now further burden provincial and municipal spending. It would be unrealistic for me to suggest that the province will be able to fill the gap created by the withdrawal of federal funding. I will be meeting in the near future with the provincial Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller), the Minister of the Environment and the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs (Mr. Wells) to discuss this matter. But we are still looking to the federal government for funding in those areas it has traditionally funded for years in the past.

My cabinet colleagues and I are deeply disturbed by the termination of the CSCP, as the municipalities of our province will be. To date I have received copies of resolutions from more than 100 municipalities addressed to the federal Minister of Public Works urging continuation of that program. This unilateral federal Liberal decision is a classic example of the insensitivity of the federal government to the needs of the provinces and their municipalities.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: I am waiting until these members start to bark about their municipalities not getting funding. I am waiting.

Mr. Riddell: Did you wait to get the Premier's (Mr. Davis) approval before you came in with that?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: The member for Huron-Middlesex should wait until he finds his area does not get its sewer and water grants; we will see what he has to say then. Obviously these members are going to do their barking here because they are afraid to do it back home; I can see that.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that as it attempts to control expenditures, the federal government is adopting a policy of unilateral program abandonment. This course of action, if it is pursued to its extreme in the social policy area of which the CSCP and the housing programs are part, will seriously impair the province's ability to provide housing accommodation for those of low and moderate income. The serious economic and social consequences that will result from this federal decision have been outlined.

In conclusion, I would like to state quite emphatically that when the CSCP was launched in 1979, there was never any thought it would not be continued for a lengthy period of time in Canada. No consultation was held with any of the provinces prior to the federal decision to terminate the program, nor have we received any information regarding a possible replacement.

Ontario, together with the other provinces, invited the Minister of Public Works, Mr. Cosgrove, to participate in an August meeting to discuss our concerns about the program but he declined to attend. He decided he would rather cut a ribbon in his own riding on a CSCP grant he was giving out that day. He has now indicated that he is looking forward to a meeting with us early in 1981; I would suggest it is a little late for the subject now.

In the interim, I would urge all municipalities and groups affected by the termination of the program to get in touch with their federal members, with the federal Minister of Finance and with the federal minister reporting for housing and request them to reinstate the long-term federal-provincial agreement that was understood to be staying in place.

Mr. Speaker, I apologize for the length of the statement but I felt the House should have a full explanation of the ramifications of this discontinuation by the federal Liberal government of a program that has been good for the economy of this country.

MINI-BUDGET

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of privilege relating to the mini-budget that will be brought in by the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) this evening.

I have before me a copy of Corriere Illustrato dated Saturday, November 8, 1980. On page one is an article which, when translated, reads, "Grossman Predicts Sales Tax Reduction." The article is what is described as an exclusive interview with the Minister of Industry and Tourism in which the minister clearly indicates the government intends to bring in sales tax reductions in the mini-budget tonight.

Surely as members of the Legislature we are entitled to have first look at the budget. I was always under the impression that there were traditions within the parliamentary system that had to do with the prerelease of budget information before it was brought into this House.

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, there has been speculation in a number of newspapers and by a number of people, including members of both parties. I can assure the member at this point that the minister does not know what is in the budget.

Mr. Breithaupt: It would appear, surely, that it is in the tradition of cabinet solidarity in government that various speculations on component parts of any budget have caused ministers to lose their jobs in a variety of areas.

I would suggest to the Treasurer that if the Minister of Industry and Tourism does not know what is in the budget, perhaps the Treasurer should lose his job, because obviously the cabinet does not know what one side or the other is doing. If this has been a breach, which I think it may well have been from the report, it may well be a serious breach of the traditional responsibility of cabinet government.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, we have here a question of cabinet responsibility. The Treasurer has just told us that the Minister of Industry and Tourism did not know what was in the mini-budget coming tonight. If that is true, the Minister of Industry and Tourism misled the reporter who reported the story and he has misled the public who read that publication. If that is true, he has caused speculation and possible buying or lack of buying because of financial information that the reporter had every reason to expect the minister had. There deserves to be not only an apology from the minister, but a demand for his resignation put by the Premier (Mr. Davis).

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, some in the House may recall that a few years ago a federal member by the name of John Reid, MP, who was not then in the cabinet, was brought before a committee of the House of Commons because he had indicated to one of his constituents by way of letter that he thought there might be a certain tax break in the forthcoming budget. As I said, at that time John Reid was not a member of the cabinet and had absolutely no information or knowledge about what was going to be in the budget.

This matter was raised in a newspaper article and there was great concern expressed, particularly by the members of the Conservative opposition in Ottawa at that time. My brother, Mr. Reid, subsequently had his hearing and was absolved of all blame or anything else.

Surely this is an extremely important matter and goes to the fundamentals of our democratic system and process. The whole theory and practice of cabinet solidarity is that when a cabinet minister speaks, he speaks for the cabinet as a whole. I do not think we can take this matter lightly at all. We should refer this matter to the standing committee on procedural affairs for its attention.

Mr. Speaker: There are two points here. The first one is that the member for Bellwoods is drawing the chair's attention and the House's attention to something that is alleged to have been said outside the House by way of a newspaper interview. The other point that has been raised is whether or not there has been a leak of information about something that is supposed to be in a statement by the Treasurer this evening.

The chair cannot be asked to rule on something that took place by way of an interview. The chair similarly cannot be expected to monitor whether or not there has been a breach of cabinet solidarity. In the absence of definitive action by the House, I would have to say the honourable member has brought the matter to the attention of the chair and the House and it is beyond my purview to do anything other than to have listened to the honourable member.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, in view of your ruling on this very important matter, may I ask whether it would be in order at this time for a resolution to be put to refer this matter to the standing committee on procedural affairs?

Mr. Speaker: There is no opportunity for any honourable member to get up without a notice of motion and move a resolution in the House. If the honourable member wants to go that route, it will be up to the House to decide whether it is something appropriate for referral.

Mr. Cassidy: On this point, Mr. Speaker, I think we should wait to see what is in the budgetary statement by the Treasurer this evening. If it confirms statements that were made by the Minister of Industry and Tourism, it seems to me there will then be a prima facie case that information in the hands of a cabinet minister was improperly put out to the public and the matter should be investigated by the standing committee on procedural affairs.

Mr. Speaker: That is purely hypothetical.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, to keep this matter in perspective, I would gather my friends across the way have not seen the article in the paper. We are talking about an article in a paper that has been paraphrased for us by a member and has not been seen by anyone else in the House except perhaps some other colleagues in his caucus.

Mr. Cassidy: And the people who read the paper.

Hon. Mr. Wells: That is all right; the people who read the paper.

We are taking the honourable member's translation of that story. I think before we come to any hasty conclusions about anything, we should all have the article with a complete translation.

My friend from Rainy River referred to the case of his brother. That case and the letter were mentioned prominently in many newspapers. It was not something that was unknown to people at the time it came before the House. He is suggesting that this House take some sort of action and ask a committee to look into something without our even having a complete translation of some story that has appeared in a newspaper. I think it behooves us all at least to get all that information before anyone considers any further action.

ORAL QUESTIONS

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. S. Smith: On a separate point of order, if I might, Mr. Speaker: When the Minister of the Environment spoke, he referred to a certain report he was making to the Legislature. I did not hear clearly whether this additional report, which in fact constitutes an apology to Walker Brothers concerning the matter raised in this House last week—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Whether or not the Leader of the Opposition heard or was satisfied that the statement by the Minister of the Environment satisfied some misgivings that he has—

Mr. S. Smith: Not at all. That is not the point.

Mr. Speaker:—he can raise it in the question period.

Mr. S. Smith: That is not the point, Mr. Speaker. On the point of order—

Mr. Speaker: There is not a point of order. There is nothing out of order.

Mr. S. Smith: There is. I did not finish my sentence, Mr. Speaker, and I am going to finish my sentence.

Mr. Speaker: No.

Mr. S. Smith: The question is—

Mr. Speaker: There is nothing out of order.

Mr. S. Smith:—was this placed on the record or not?

Mr. Speaker: There is nothing out of order. Does the Leader of the Opposition have a question?

Mr. S. Smith: I will ask the question of the minister. Mr. Speaker, with the greatest respect, I think in this instance you should have heard the point.

Mr. Speaker: Order. What the Leader of the Opposition is saying is that by virtue of the fact that the Minister of the Environment stood up and made a statement to the House, he was out of order or the House was out of order in listening to him. That is what a point of order means.

Mr. S. Smith: No, it has to do with this report.

Mr. Speaker: It is a ministerial statement, and if the honourable member wants the minister to elaborate on it, he can simply do so by asking him a question. Do you have a question?

Mr. S. Smith: Again, you have misconstrued my point, Mr. Speaker. With the greatest respect, this says "a report to the Ontario Legislature."

Mr. Speaker: Do you have a question?

Mr. S. Smith: All right, I will ask a question.

Mr. Speaker: I have ruled there is nothing out of order.

Mr. S. Smith: All right, I will accept your ruling.

Mr. Speaker: You do not need to get up on your high horse. I have called for oral questions and if you have one, please put it.

Mr. S. Smith: I will ask the minister whether this statement, which is called a report to the Ontario Legislature, which he made some reference to but did not read, and which I take to be an apology to Walker Brothers as well as covering certain other matters—on the very matters raised in this House last week—has been tabled with the Clerk so that it is on the record of the House. I would ask why he did not read it and whether he intends not only to apologize to Walker Brothers as he has via this letter, but to apologize to this House for his refusal to acknowledge here what he has finally been willing to acknowledge in this letter?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the letter and the report are part of the record of the House and I do not have any questions that they should be. I do not mind any part of that letter or any part of this report being read into the record a second time. That is perfectly okay by me.

There were allegations made. I am sure this House would ask me to take those allegations seriously. That I did. There were three or four of them. The one matter, I think, is clearly something the official of the ministry made a statement about. I do not think the facts bear the matter out. I have said that in the letter. As a matter of fact, as a courtesy to Mr. Walker, I called him at 1:15 this afternoon so I am not at all embarrassed by having that on the record. Indeed, on the contrary, there are other allegations still pending. I think this House would clearly expect me to act on these allegations and put them all on the record. That I shall do.

Mr. S. Smith: Supplementary: Since the minister continues to be willing to admit that the point we raised repeatedly last week was correct but still refuses to acknowledge this in a gentlemanly way—that is exactly what has happened—I will ask him this:

Could the minister explain why he and his official, Mr. Majtenyi, still insist on expressing shock to discover liquids of some kind had been placed in the Walker Brothers quarry, when a letter to the member for Beaches-Woodbine (Ms. Bryden) in September 1978, signed by the minister, said his records indicated liquid waste disposal had occurred in these eight sites, including Walker's quarry?

Since in 1978 the minister knew liquids had been deposited in Walker's quarry, why should he have pretended to this House that somehow it was a shock to learn liquids appeared there and that the whole matter came to his attention at the time of the W5 program?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I think it is clear that that certificate at that time was quite a different certificate from the one that exists today. The certificate was amended on June 23, 1980, and that is the continuing program of this ministry; we will update our certificates.

Mr. S. Smith: The certificates never allow liquids.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I think if one were to look at those certificates carefully over the past decade, one would find that in earlier times they were not as definitive as I think they should be and as we are moving towards. That was one of the recommendations of the standing committee. We believe the certificates should be far more definitive than they were in 1973, 1974 and later. In the decade of the 1960s there were no certificates to speak of at all; one could do practically what one wanted.

We are moving in a direct fashion to have the certificates made far more specific and much tougher on how those wastes are handled. We will continue to do so. I have repeatedly said to industry: "You have to face up to the fact that you are going to be severely regulated on the matter of liquid industrial waste. You have to face up to the fact that you are going to pay for the destruction of those wastes and there is no other alternative for industry." They must face the reality that a new day has dawned.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the minister's promise of toughness and in view of the fact that his statement indicates quite clearly that at least seven drums containing various kinds of liquid waste were buried in the Walker's quarry dump—as per the written statement from Mr. Edenson that I tabled in the Legislature a few days ago—at a time when Walker Brothers licence quite clearly did not permit it to accept liquid wastes, and since the ministry also indicates there may be 70 more drums containing similar materials, is it the ministry's intention now, being so tough, to prosecute Walker Brothers Quarries for illegally accepting liquid waste contrary to its licence?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, the matter is under two investigations. One is being done by the Ontario Provincial Police, and I have not received that report yet but I expect it should be completed soon. The other is being done to determine whether there is a breach of the certificate. That is a very significant problem that must be addressed. I can assure the member that if and when there is proof there was a violation of that certificate, charges will be laid, but I do not have the privilege of making allegations and simply saying it will be done; I must have the positive proof.

We are in the process of getting those drums, doing the analysis on them and finding what is in those drums. Not only that, in the two that were empty, we are doing scrapings on the drums to see if perhaps the liquid has leaked out and what might have been in there. We are doing the most thorough and comprehensive investigation that is possible. Based on that certain knowledge, we will take the appropriate—

Mr. Cassidy: Last week the minister wanted one drum, that was all. It is the pressure in this House that has made that happen.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Not at all. It was done well in advance.

Mr. S. Smith: Supplementary: Why has the minister persisted in his story that the reason liquids went in there—and they were reported to the member for Beaches-Woodbine in 1978, yet somehow come as a surprise to the minister—has to do with a lack of specificity in the certificate of approval, when I have in my hand every certificate of approval made out for Walker's quarry in the last decade, and plainly these state that 95 per cent is to be solid waste and the other five per cent construction debris?

Liquid waste was never permitted in Walker's quarry by any certificate of approval, yet the minister included that as a liquid waste receiving place in his letter of 1978 and now professes surprise. Why does the minister not admit that he does not know what is happening in his ministry and it has to be cleaned out from top to bottom, starting with himself?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: If I were going to send someone to a recycling location, I think I would start with the Leader of the Opposition,

Hon. F. S. Miller: You might have difficulty getting a certificate of acceptance.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I agree it might be difficult to get a certificate of acceptance.

Mr. Speaker, let me be more serious about this. I think the whole matter of what was in that site is certainly worthy of a full investigation. I will continue to report to this House on our findings. If there was a violation of the certificate, prosecutions will be held; if not, the company has the right, and I think it is an important right, to an assurance that no one is found guilty until a fair trial is held. If the company was in total compliance with the certificate, the world will know and I will be the first to tell it.

Mr. Swart: Does the minister not realize that the opposition to the solidification plant does not come just from the not-wanting-it-in-our-backyard syndrome? It is because the people and the opposition members do not trust the minister's ministry nor do they trust Walker Brothers. The minister's own engineer in the Niagara area said his faith and trust in Walker Brothers has completely gone down the drain. The minister has stated that he will lay charges.

Mr. Speaker: Is there a question there?

Mr. Swart: May I ask the minister, if charges are laid and a conviction is made, will he then suspend for all time the procedures for the establishment of the solidification plant with Walker Brothers because they are untrustworthy?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I will do it quite differently from the way of the honourable member who asked the question. I will do it after the trial, not before, and I will base it on solid, positive evidence. I read from the committee's report: "The final recommendation of this committee is one of high importance, and that is, the committee believes that the public hearing should be mandatory."

I do not know of any party that was more insistent that the hearing process be held than the member's party. Fair enough; I agree with that. But in this instance, because it seemed politically expedient to do so, there was never an opportunity to put on the record at a fair environmental assessment hearing both the pros and the cons. That was sidestepped; it was short-circuited. I think it is a miscarriage of justice that the opportunity to put all the facts on the record and then make a decision was not given in this province.

REST HOMES

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services on the subject of rest homes in Ontario.

Given the recommendations of the 1977 coroner's jury arising from a death at Dr. Rajovic's rest home in Metro Toronto and given that the Ontario Advisory Council on Senior Citizens in April 1978 called for immediate action to ensure proper standards in rest homes—and he has had several requests from that council—and given that the minister spoke in the estimates on the bill introduced by the member for Sarnia (Mr. Blundy), as I recall, in favour of improved regulation and said he is studying the matter, can he explain how it is that the Dr. Rajovics of this world can continue to operate in conditions that were so graphically described in the Toronto Star recently?

Given the fact that our elderly people are being kept in such conditions of filth and squalor in 1980 in the province, will the minister pass some kind of law in Ontario that would oblige municipalities to set proper standards, or is he going to continue to rely on the individual municipalities to somehow clean up the situation by themselves?

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, as the Leader of the Opposition has indicated, he obviously recognizes that municipalities do have very significant authority to ensure appropriate standards in terms of health care, fire safety and other kinds of safety in such residential accommodation. In terms of those aspects of the care, it would be perhaps unwise for the province to attempt to duplicate the authority the municipalities already have.

If these kinds of conditions do exist as the member described them—and I think many exaggerations are being made these days; nevertheless I am willing to acknowledge there may be cases where less than adequate conditions prevail—then I think the municipalities ought to be moving into those situations and doing something about them.

It is not good enough to sit back and simply say another level of government should come in, especially when we are talking about major municipalities; I can understand some of the smaller municipalities might have some difficulty because of the lack of appropriate staff to inspect, but our major municipalities clearly have that capacity and ought to be doing it.

With respect to the member's reference to standards, I have indicated that my colleagues and I are looking at ways in which we might assist. I do not think we will be getting into passing province-wide legislation and regulation of each and every one of the boarding homes and lodging homes in this province because, frankly, we do not have the capacity to inspect on that basis across the province. However, what I suggest we may well look at is the possibility of providing guidelines for the municipalities or, if the member wishes, model proposals for the municipalities so that they might follow through with their responsibility.

Mr. S. Smith: Will the minister admit that, with all his guidelines, suggestions, constructive statements and so on, we still have between 50,000 and 90,000 people in rest home beds in Ontario? There is considerable difficulty in finding nursing-home accommodation, especially when more than a small amount of nursing care is required.

Given that more and more people seem to be lining up for these rest homes, will the minister admit he has a responsibility to oblige the municipalities to act, and not merely to suggest they act? Does he not have a responsibility to set certain standards and say that the municipalities have the duty to enforce those standards, and if they don't enforce them the province will take certain actions against them?

Surely the minister cannot just sit there and wash his hands of the squalor and the despicable circumstances in which many of our elderly are now living.

Hon. Mr. Norton: I was not simply washing my hands of the situation. The Leader of the Opposition has to bear in mind that the municipalities, as well as the provincial government, are duly elected and responsible levels of government. I certainly will continue to do whatever I can to encourage them and press them to take action in those kinds of situations.

Mr. Warner: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The government was forced to bring in a Nursing Home Act prior to 1972 because of the deplorable state of nursing homes in this province. In view of this, how big a mess must be created, how much must we learn in this Legislature about the deplorable conditions in rest homes before this government will act to bring a rest homes act into the province?

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that question was intended to elicit an answer. It was a histrionic statement based upon information the honourable member is using in what I think is an alarmist way.

STRATFORD FESTIVAL

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question, to the Minister of Culture and Recreation, about the turmoil in the Stratford Festival Theatre, a theatre that is receiving a grant of $300,000 this year from the taxpayers of Ontario through the Ontario Arts Council.

Is the minister aware that the board of directors recently told the four Canadians who had been hired to run next year's season they were being fired because, it said, their program would incur a deficit of $1 million, which was unacceptable?

Is the minister also aware that, just days earlier, the same board of directors was making a submission to the Canada Council—which was signed by the president, Mr. Hicks, by the treasurer, Mr. Thomas, and by the newly appointed executive director, Mr. Stevens—that indicated they intended to have the season, that the plan would have to run on a balanced budget and would do so?

Is the minister aware of the contradiction between what the board of directors told those four Canadians who were being fired and what they were telling the Canada Council?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, I have been following the events of Stratford very closely over the last few weeks and, to paraphrase a line from Shakespeare, "Methinks there is something rotten in the state of Stratford."

I am very perplexed and, I must admit, annoyed, as is my federal colleague, because both the federal agency, the Canada Council, and the Ontario Arts Council have been supporting the theatre in Stratford at a very substantial level. Fortunately over the last few years Stratford has been able to raise a great deal of its money through the box office. This has been successful to the point where now, between the Canada Council and the Ontario Arts Council, we are probably financing only about 12 to 15 per cent of the total budget. Nevertheless, the theatre people at Stratford seem to know very well where to run and where to ask for help when they need it when they run into deficit situations.

I must say I am sufficiently perplexed about what is happening there, the termination of the contracts of these four Canadians and the hiring of Mr. Dexter, that I am asking the chairman of the Ontario Arts Council—who is, after all, the person from Ontario who should be dealing with Stratford directly; we do not deal directly with Stratford—to take a serious look at Stratford and see whether in the light of actions like these the Ontario Arts Council should continue to finance that at a level of about $310,000 a year, as the member for Ottawa Centre has indicated.

That is, of course, only the annual grant that Stratford gets. In addition to that, we have undertaken to pay up to $2,900,000 for Stratford under the arts challenge fund. We have given Stratford all kinds of ad hoc grants over the years; we have tried to support them, again at arm's length.

In response to the question, it seems to me that in the light of what has happened in the last few weeks, which is really something that is astonishing, regrettable, and something I deplore, the time may have arrived for the Ontario Arts Council to take a very serious look at whether the taxpayers of this province should continue their annual support of that theatre.

Mr. Speaker: That response took three minutes and 30 seconds. I wish the minister would be a little bit crisper.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the proposal of the minister would punish Stratford for what they have done in firing the four Canadians, letting them go and bringing a foreign director in, but would not cure the problem of incompetence or deviousness that is now found in the Stratford Festival board of directors, will the government be making representations to Mr. Axworthy and to the Stratford Festival board to ensure that the artistic direction at Stratford be in the hands of Canadians rather than those of a continuing series of people who, however qualified, come in from other countries?

Will the government also be seeking to ensure that, if Ontario taxpayers' funds continue to go to Stratford, in future there will be a representative of the arts council or the people of Ontario put on the board of directors to avoid the kind of devious behaviour we have seen in recent weeks?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Again, Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. That was a long question.

As I indicated a moment ago, I will not, and our government will not, make a direct contact with Stratford. I will ask the chairman of the Ontario Arts Council to look into these things and report back to us. I will certainly not take the kind of direct steps that I think have been suggested and were implicit in that question.

DAY CARE

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services which relates to the day care needs of people in the Ottawa-Carleton region, particularly in the municipalities of Nepean and Kanata where certain political events are taking place.

Is the minister aware of the fact that, despite 60 per cent of the women with children in the Carleton constituency area being at work, private day care centres in that area are seeing their waiting lists shrink because people with family incomes of more than $17,000 cannot afford even low-cost, privately run day care centres? Does the government have any plan to ensure adequate day care for these families, or does the government intend to stand by until those private day care centres have no choice but to fold?

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, unless I missed something at the beginning of that question, it is not clear to me how the honourable member drew the cause-and-effect relationship in terms of the reduction in waiting lists, as I believe he said. That may be his conclusion and it may be correct, I do not know, but before I would agree with that conclusion I would have to examine the data which led him to come to that conclusion.

Nevertheless, as I have indicated on a number of occasions, within the next short time—in a very few weeks—a series of announcements will be made relating to the initiatives on the part of this government in the area of day care. I might add, for the benefit of the honourable member, that these initiatives have been in the planning stage for a lengthy period of time. I want to assure him they bear no relationship to the current controversy that exists around the issue of day care but are the result of deliberate and competent planning on the part of this government.

Mr. Cassidy: Can the minister assure the House that not only will there be an expansion of day care to meet the needs in the Ottawa-Carleton region but also the traditional funding of the government will be maintained? Will he assure the House that the funding of the $171,000 recently given to the region of Ottawa-Carleton for day care purposes will not be repeated, since that funding involved only $15,300 coming directly from the province, with the remainder coming from either federal sources or the local municipalities? Will the government assure us that in future Ontario will not back out on its responsibilities to day care the way it did with that $171,000 grant, where it paid less than 10 per cent?

Hon. Mr. Norton: With respect to that particular grant, I think the honourable member ought to bear in mind the circumstances under which it became necessary. Again, it related to the particular kind of administration that was being carried on in that region, as it was in Metropolitan Toronto. I cannot assure the member or any municipality in this province of that. If they do not manage their own houses appropriately within their budgets during a given fiscal year, I cannot assure them they can have open-ended rights to spend money and expect me to come up with 80 per cent—albeit 50 per cent federal and 30 per cent provincial—to subsidize them if they are not going to manage their budget programs appropriately.

I would ask the member to consider that it has been acknowledged by both Metropolitan Toronto and Ottawa-Carleton, knowing the circumstances under which those projected deficits arose this year, that the province has been very generous with them in assisting them out of those situations.

With respect to the other guarantees the member requested of me, I can only ask that he be patient and wait for the announcements in the next few weeks.

Ms. Gigantes: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the minister is aware that even in low-cost, private day care service centres, such as the Bayshore centre in Ottawa-Carleton, the waiting list is dropping from the normal 50 to 60 parents looking for spaces to about 10 parents, although the inquiries about day care services continue to come in at the same rate. According to the director of that centre, this is because parents whose family income is slightly more than $17,000 simply cannot afford to contemplate looking for day care services for their kids.

Is the minister going to wait until these centres close and use that as proof that the day care need does not exist? This is the kind of approach he has taken in the past.

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, I have never taken that approach.

Ms. Gigantes: Yes, you have. What were your speeches about recently?

Hon. Mr. Norton: I would ask the honourable member to remain calm for just a moment. I would remind her also, by the way, she has not raised yet in the House the issue she took me on about a while ago in terms of those subsidies. I think since she received that report from Ottawa-Carleton she realizes I was correct.

Ms. Gigantes: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege: I want to make reference to the fact that I have not raised again a question which I raised twice in this House and which the minister has not chosen to answer. I would like the minister to get up and tell us what documentary evidence he has—

Mr. Speaker: Order. That is not a point of privilege; that is correcting the record. The honourable minister will complete his answer.

Hon. Mr. Norton: Perhaps in response to the request from the honourable member I could point out to her the report which I am sure she has received from some of her friends on the Ottawa council. I will stand by my original information, because that report bore me out and demonstrated my figures were quite correct. I have nothing to add to my original remarks, because they were borne out by that report.

Ms. Gigantes: Where is the report? Table it.

Hon. Mr. Norton: Did the member say, "Table it"? It is not my report to table. Why does the member not table her copy? She has seen the report.

I have forgotten what the honourable member's original question was, as a matter of fact.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Ottawa East with a new question.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, is it safe?

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. In spite of all the histrionics, the member for Ottawa East still has the floor.

Mr. Roy: I can assure the minister I have no intention of leaving—

Mr. Speaker: Do you have a question?

Mr. Roy: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have. You will agree there has been some disturbance here.

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Premier (Mr. Davis) and the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry), I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs. My question to the minister involves his colleague's comments in Montreal yesterday before the Chambre de Commerce. If I may quote briefly from his speech, he said those "who curse the darkness, especially with inaccuracies that cannot but mislead, do not serve . . . Canada. Instead, they serve a vile, hateful and mean-spirited approach based on self-interest and selfishness."

Considering that the Attorney General was talking about the comment made by a Conservative colleague, the Premier of New Brunswick, what steps does the minister intend to take to correct the inaccuracies in his colleague's pamphlet in Carleton which states that the Premier, "Bill Davis prevented the federal government from putting forward what is called blanket bilingual policy in favour of Ontario," and secondly, "the leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario favours official bilingualism for Ontario," both of which are clearly inaccurate? Is the minister going to ask him to correct that?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, to correct the record, my colleague the Attorney General did not use those words that were attributed to him by my friend. The Globe and Mail's Stan Oziwicz, who was there, indicates he did not use those words in his speech.

Mr. Roy: I have his speech here.

Hon. Mr. Wells: He can answer that. The answer to the member's other question is that the inclusion or non-inclusion of section 133 in the Canadian charter of rights in the package that is now before the House of Commons would have provided for bilingual laws in this Legislature, in other words, all the work of this Legislature, including acts being passed in both English and French with both versions having official validity, and a full court system—not only criminal courts, as we are in favour of, but also civil courts—being completely bilingual in this province. These were the things suggested for the charter of rights by the federal government at some time which we said were not acceptable in this province.

Mr. Roy: That's not what you say.

Hon. Mr. Wells: It is what we say, because the implementation of those things would have gone a long way towards an official bilingual Ontario policy, which we are not for. At different times the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. S. Smith) has indicated he was in favour of a bilingual Ontario. If he wishes to correct the record, that is fine, but it is my understanding that at other times and in other places my friend, and some members of his party anyway, have been in favour of officially declaring Ontario bilingual as the federal government has declared.

All we have said is that the record of what we have done in this province for the franco-phones is a commendable record. That record has been done without the kind of tokenism of declaring Ontario officially bilingual, which is not needed to achieve the kinds of ends that need to be achieved in this province. The record in the school system, the courts, and in dealing with governments and so forth speaks for itself.

Mr. Roy: I will not criticize the government's record, which is not part of my question. Does the minister not think one of the reasons that he and his colleague the Attorney General have such difficulty and the government lacks such credibility at the national level is that each and every time they feel it is publicly advantageous, whether it is the Carleton by-election or the 1975 general election, they try to stir up the anti-French vote?

Why else would their candidate use about half of his pamphlet just talking about gross distortion of our policy and the federal policies?

Hon. Mr. Wells: If it is gross distortion of the Liberal Party policy, I ask the member to stand up now and tell this House that their policy is not for an officially bilingual Ontario.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I would ask this of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs: Given the importance of the question of French-English relations in Canada, and given the fact that this House by a solemn and unanimous resolution in May at the time of our constitutional debate, just before Quebec went to the referendum, acknowledged that the status quo is unacceptable, that it had to be changed and clearly that some concessions had to be made in this province with respect to French Canadians because of the concerns that have been raised for so many years in Quebec, will the minister undertake on behalf of the government to stop fudging the issues the way the government seems to be so anxious to do right now?

Will he make it quite clear that adoption of section 133 for this province would mean the recognition of French in the Legislature, as it is recognized now, and the translation of our statutes in Ontario, as is taking place at this moment, as well as guaranteeing the use of French in the courts of Ontario, something that has also been accepted by the government and now is spreading across the province on a planned basis?

Since that and that alone is what was involved with section 133, will the government stop trying to pretend that concession, which would be very real in the symbolic sense for Franco-Ontarians, for the French Canadians across Canada and for the Quebecois, is quite different from what the government seems to be pretending—

Mr. Speaker: The question has been asked, surely.

Mr. Cassidy: Why can they not be clear and why can they not give that answer—

Mr. Speaker: That has been asked.

Mr. Cassidy: —which is so important for the future of Canada?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Let me answer by saying that there are obviously differences of opinion between those on that side and we on this side. The kind of progress we have seen, which we have been able to accomplish in this province without taking the kind of tokenism that adoption of 133 would mean at this time, speaks for itself.

This government takes no back seat to anyone in providing services for our Franco-Ontarian population. That is an accepted fact. But it is also an accepted fact that kind of progress would be seriously impeded by taking the kind of steps the member has suggested.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. Swart: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. I made a formal request on Tuesday to Mr. John Cowan, the treasurer of Walker Brothers, to see the uncovered drums and get a sample of the liquid for an independent analysis. Will the minister explain why the reply from Mr. Cowan, after a top-level, 15-minute meeting—and perhaps a phone call to the minister; I do not know—was that I would not be permitted to view the site or get samples unless the minister gave permission? Does he not think this indicates Walker Brothers has something to hide? What is his cosy relationship in this matter?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I think the member had better address that question to his constituent. If he wants on the site I am sure if he is there for noble ends they will be more than pleased to accommodate him. We will give him the results of the test; of course we will.

Mr. Swart: Would the minister have no objection to a representative of the citizens' committee or the city council or myself being there at all times when digs are taking place to take samples out of the drums so we can have an independent analysis? There is no trust left in his ministry.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I think the member misses one very significant point. The representatives of the Ministry of the Environment—the representatives who should be there, who are there and who will supervise that site—are his civil servants just as much as they are mine. He seems to have missed that point. They are there to protect the people of this province and they happen to be doing it. I was at the reception last night for the International Joint Commission. It is rather interesting to hear an outside perspective of what a fine job the officials of this Ministry of the Environment are doing in the province.

COMMUNITY SERVICES CONTRIBUTION PROGRAM

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Housing. Several small communities in my riding will be drastically affected by the change in federal policy relating to the community services contribution program. As a matter of fact, I have one community that received $1 million, the village of Elora, and the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) put in $1.6 million. It was only because of the involvement of the two governments—

Mr. Speaker: Is there a question there?

Mr. J. Johnson: Yes, sir. The question is, will these municipalities be allowed to proceed with projects, especially the water and sewage projects, in view of the change in policy of the federal government?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, any program or project by a municipality which now has approval, both by my ministry and by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, to be funded under the terms of reference of the program for 1980, will advance to its conclusion provided all funds for that project are drawn down by March 31, 1982.

As to any projects or programs that are being applied for in the current year that have not had our approval, either at the federal or provincial level—being applied for by various municipalities across the province, represented by all parties of this Legislature—they are not going to be approved at this time because of lack of funding as a result of the turndown of the CSCP.

At March 31, 1982, we anticipate we will have most of the programs with their total entitlement of funds drawn down.

LAND SEVERANCE

Mr. Riddell: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Can the minister explain why an order in council was issued on his advice on July 31, 1980, to grant a severance on agricultural land in Vespra township to a Gordon Atkinson which overturned an Ontario Municipal Board decision and which went against the township official plan? What reason did the minister and the cabinet have for overturning the OMB decision other than the fact that Mr. Atkinson was a fundraiser for the Conservative member for Simcoe Centre (Mr. G. Taylor)?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the honourable member is aware that I have many orders in council. I will take his question as notice and return with a response.

Mr. Riddell: I would like to be able to ask the minister where his commitment is to agriculture and just sit down, but I will not. I will go on.

What purpose is there in a municipality's creating an official plan and having it approved by the ministry over there if it can be ignored by the government and, if the minister felt so compelled to support this severance, why did he not do so at the hearings before the OMB? Does the minister not agree that this kind of political decision by the government makes a mockery of the planning process and of his foodland guidelines to preserve agricultural land? Where is his commitment to his foodland guidelines?

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

MINIMUM WAGE

Mr. Samis: A question of the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker, a very simple question: Can the minister explain to the people in this province why we have the lowest minimum wage in all of Canada?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: A new question?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Thank you very much for giving me the opportunity not to answer, Mr. Speaker, but the member has asked about minimum wage. I have indicated to him on previous occasions that the matter was under active review. He is not unaware of the fact that the Institute for Research on Public Policy has recently come out condemning minimum wage. Certainly that has given the government reason to review it very carefully and we are actively reviewing it at the present time.

Mr. Samis: Can the minister explain to the House—

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The members who are interjecting are the ones who claim they cannot get on the question period. It is no wonder why.

Mr. Samis: Good advice, Mr. Speaker.

Can the minister explain to the House why there has been no increase whatsoever in the minimum wage in 22 months, and can he give some assurance to the working poor of this province that there will be at least some increase before January 1, 1981?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I can say nothing else other than that the matter is under active review, and I hope to have the result very shortly.

INVESTMENT COMPANIES' FAILURE

Mr. Breithaupt: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations concerning the ongoing Astra Trust and Re-Mor matter: Can the minister inform the House if at the time of the Re-Mor application the registrar of mortgage brokers was aware of the judge's comments and the evidence tendered by the Ontario Securities Commission in the receivership application against C and M?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, in fairness, I will take that as notice and report back tomorrow.

Mr. Breithaupt: While he is doing that, will the minister table in the House the application for the Re-Mor mortgage brokerage licence, including all accompanying correspondence, notations and comments from all involved individuals and government officials?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Certainly. I hope to do it tomorrow, but no later than Monday.

INDUSTRIAL HEARING LOSS

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, I have a question regarding industrial deafness and, after listening to the member for Huron-Middlesex (Mr. Riddell), I think we should apply the rules here.

Mr. Riddell: You have to shout to get through to those characters over there.

Mr. Martel: In the second annual report, there is a recommendation regarding indutrial deafness, that the Minister of Labour consult with the Workmen's Compensation Board to consider appointing an independent committee of experts to investigate and make recommendations to the minister and the board on the basis of compensation for noise-induced hearing loss. Has that been done yet and, if not, when can we anticipate such a committee being established to deal with this serious problem?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, just by way of background, may I say that—

Mr. Kerrio: What do you talk about when you are out to dinner together?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Careful. I do not want to give the member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Kerrio) a hearing loss.

It was due to a conversation I had with the member for Sudbury East about industrial hearing loss and our mutual concern about the problem that the matter was referred by me to the Advisory Council on Occupational Health and Safety for some views and recommendations. We have already initiated one part of its recommendations, namely, the standard with regard to industrial noise. We are now awaiting some briefs on that, and we will make decisions about whether it should stay as it is or whether to make some changes.

The real issue the honourable member and I are concerned about in addition to that relates to compensation and rehabilitation. I have forwarded the recommendations of the advisory council to the board, and I have received an initial response indicating it would like to wait until the Weiler report is received. That will be tabled next week. As soon as that is received, I will have further meetings with the board to pursue the matter.

Mr. Martel: With respect to rehabilitation, has anything been done to date to provide speech therapy for the more than 800 workers in the Sudbury area who are suffering from industrial deafness and to ensure there are adequate speech therapists trained in the province to meet the need, not only in the Sudbury basin but also across northern Ontario, which has the highest incidence of severe deafness in the province?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I do not have that information available. I will take the question as notice and respond later.

BURLINGTON GAS EXPLOSION

Mr. Bradley: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Can the minister tell the House what action his ministry is taking pursuant to its responsibilities for safety under the Energy Act as a result of a natural gas explosion that destroyed a Burlington home on September 16?

Specifically, will the minister explain why it took his officials more than a month to obtain the report of the Ontario Research Foundation which was completed at the end of September and which concluded that a plastic T-joint had separated from the pipeline supplying gas to the Burlington house?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I will get the report on that matter for the honourable member.

Mr. Bradley: When the minister obtains that report and reports back to the House, will he tell the House at that time whether it is correct that 30 per cent of these fittings, which were tested by the Consumers' Gas Company at its Chatham laboratory, have failed to meet pressure specifications and that AMP of Canada Limited, the manufacturer, now makes fittings to higher specifications? If so, does the minister not agree there is a problem of some urgency with regard to the old type of fittings which have already been installed? Will the minister report back to the House on that?

Hon. Mr. Drea: The honourable member is asking a question about the joints. If there were defective joints, I am sure the minister would have known about it some time ago.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION PROGRAMS

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour on the ineffectiveness of voluntary affirmative action programs even within the government ministries.

With the women crown employees office specifically charged with affirmative action programs within the ministries, how can this minister and this government possibly condone the fact that over the last four years the government spent almost double the amount of money on staff training for men than it did for women and that in the past year the per capita expenditure on staff training for men averaged $79.56 and only $27.38 for women, a factor almost two thirds less?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, it is always nice to have the advantage of figures in front of one. As soon as I have reviewed those figures and can evaluate the real things that led to those figures, I will be glad to respond to the member personally.

Let me tell my friend that this government is very serious about the affirmative action program for women crown employees. That program is being reviewed twice a year, the targets are being reviewed annually and I sense a sincere commitment to it in every area of this government.

Mr. Bounsall: How can the minister say this government is serious about affirmative action for its own employees when of the 40 per cent of staff employees in Ontario who are women, 63 per cent are in the $9,000 to $12,000 bracket only, three per cent earn even less than $9,000 and only five per cent are in the highest range of $25,000 or over? The representation of women at the director level in this past year dropped from 5.3 per cent to 4.9 per cent. What sort of seriousness is that?

3:30 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: The member may like to select figures, but he knows from having talked to people in my branch there is no doubt that changes are taking place. The introduction of the affirmative action program within the government will, I predict, have very effective and meaningful results.

SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism regarding the heavy unemployment in the Windsor-Essex county area and the need for new industry. The Windsor-Essex County Development Commission has already approached the minister and asked that he set up a southwestern Ontario development corporation to assist them. Is the minister considering that and will he be implementing such a thing to enable the community at least to provide substantial employment in the near future?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the mechanism of starting a new development corporation would solve the problem. The kinds of things we are doing in conjunction with the industrial development commission of Windsor and Essex are the kinds of things that will make that happen. I do not think opening a new bureaucracy and setting up a separate development corporation will solve the problem.

For example, the sorts of things the United Automobile Workers in Canada proposed yesterday and some other initiatives we have been taking for a long time and the honourable member has suggested on previous occasions are the kinds of things that will bring new development there.

In the event we get an opportunity to assist a firm that is already in that area or a firm that is thinking of moving into that area, then regardless of what programs are in place through the Ontario Development Corporation or the employment development fund, we would be flexible with either of those programs or any of our programs to make sure the plant either located or expanded. So there is no problem in terms of flexibility or availability of our programs.

Mr. B. Newman: In the communication to the minister dated October 23 it specifically mentions that a southwestern Ontario development corporation could expedite applications and would be able to provide extensive knowledge to those who may be interested in setting up industry in the community. Those are two positive suggestions that the establishment of a corporation would eventually provide. Does the minister not think that is important enough to set up such a corporation?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would wonder about that suggestion because we would end up with the same people who are now there—our ODC staff who are working in southwestern Ontario. They are very well trained to understand the economy of southwestern Ontario. They are in a position to expedite those applications that must be expedited. None of that would change one bit if we told them they would now be working for something called the Southwestern Ontario Development Corporation as opposed to the Ontario Development Corporation.

KEATING CHANNEL DREDGING

Ms. Bryden: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of the Environment, if he will come back to his seat.

My question relates to the granting of an 18-month exemption from the Environmental Assessment Act for the Keating Channel dredging in Toronto. It also concerns the issue of a provisional certificate of approval under the Environmental Protection Act to permit the Ministry of Natural Resources to dredge and dispose of the dredgeate in a pond attached to the Leslie Street spit in Toronto.

In view of the fact that Dr. Donald Chant, chairman of the Premier's steering committee on environmental assessment, has advised the Premier "that the issue of the need for dredging Keating Channel remains unresolved and that a—"

Mr. Speaker: There is not a question yet. All I heard was, "In view of the fact . . ."

Ms. Bryden: Let me just conclude Dr. Chant's quote: "That the issue of the need for dredging Keating Channel remains unresolved and that a hearing on this specific issue should be held as soon as possible and before any"—

Mr. Speaker: What is the question?

Ms. Bryden: The question is, Mr. Speaker—Dr. Chant said to request exemption before any irrevocable approvals are given. Will the minister indicate whether he is prepared to cancel the exemptions and certificates of approval until an independent inquiry, such as Dr. Chant recommends, is held, or is he going to ignore the advice of Dr. Chant, as has been done on many occasions?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, if the member reads the letter in greater detail, I think she will find a commitment was made. She will notice the point where it says the now-defeated mayor of Toronto has a certain plan to take care of any flooding. Now that he is not the mayor we had better consult with the new mayor to see whether the commitment to take care of the contingency of flooding is still valid. That is a very pertinent point. That will have to be addressed in the immediate future.

MINI-BUDGET

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has expired.

The Minister of Industry and Tourism would like to shed some light on a point of privilege that was raised earlier.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Can we hear it now?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I take it that in my absence earlier today, while I was speaking to some people concerned with high technology in the Ottawa area, a point was raised here with regard to an article that appeared in a prestigious Italian newspaper. I was surprised when I came to discover that the member opposite, who I know was disappointed to see a Tory in one of the ethnic newspapers, had made the suggestion that I had been directly quoted as giving some information with regard to the budget.

First, I would like to say that while I, like many other of my colleagues, have made suggestions to the Treasurer (Mr. F. S.

Miller), the budget remains within his purview. I will be here at eight o'clock tonight to discover what will be in the budget.

Second, I have had a chance to receive a translation of the newspaper article, and my recollection of it was confirmed. Anyone reading the article will see that none of the points attributed to me by the member opposite is in quotation marks. They are not direct quotations from me.

Third, the article itself as translated, and I have had three Italian translations, which were all translated the same way, reads as follows in the key portion: "The government is examining the possibility of reducing sales tax since, declared Grossman, it has already been demonstrated other times that similar reductions facilitate a revitalization of certain economic sectors."

That is exactly the same kind of speculation that the Treasurer himself, and others, have made over the last few weeks. It was the point of several questions raised in this House and therefore was entirely consistent with everything else that has been said or speculated about the budget. It does not indicate any extraordinary, unusual reflections upon the budget, nor any information, which I do not have, with regard to the budget to be presented this evening and which I know the House will enormously applaud.

SPEAKER'S RULINGS

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege: Am I correct in saying the Speaker's rulings on procedural affairs cannot be challenged at any time?

Mr. Speaker: My rulings can be challenged at any time except in question period.

Mr. Sargent: May I ask the Speaker how many times in the past four years has he been before the procedural affairs committee?

Mr. Speaker: Never.

Mr. Sargent: My point is this: I, as one member of this Legislature, do not think that one person like the Speaker alone can decide what should be discussed in this Legislature for the people of Ontario. The Speaker alone makes those decisions, and I very much object to those methods after what happened today with my leader here.

Mr. Speaker: I am awfully sorry the honourable member thinks that way. There are another 123 members who have charged me with that responsibility.

MINI-BUDGET

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, in view of the Minister of Industry and Tourism's statement, will he give the House an undertaking to have the translation of that article typed up and distributed to us? I am not so sure that I, as a member, am prepared to accept his explanation that he was just speculating like any other member of the public. I think there is much more to it than that. I would say on my own behalf, at least, that I would like to have that translation and perhaps pursue the matter further.

3:40 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Gregory: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: In view of the request from the honourable member—

Mrs. Campbell: There is nothing out of order.

Hon. Mr. Gregory: Oh, the new Speaker. Was it a point of privilege the member was speaking on then? In view of the request by the honourable member and in view of the translation the minister has brought forward, I am wondering, if that translation is satisfactory to all Italian-speaking people, whether the member for Bellwoods should be asked to apologize for his translation?

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention whatsoever of apologizing to the minister or anybody else for such an obvious violation of parliamentary principles and parliamentary tradition. I will be moving a motion at the appropriate time to deal with this matter.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, just to clarify what I said earlier, there were three things that I pointed out earlier. I am quite satisfied with the three translations, but the point I wish to make regardless of any interpretation or any translation anyone else wants to make of that article—is that there are two things that are quite obvious. First, the remarks attributed to me are not in quotation marks; they are someone's reflections. Second, I say to this House, quite openly and clearly, I did not say there were going to be retail sales tax cuts. That is a straight fact. Therefore, regardless of how anyone might have translated it, my remarks made here this afternoon may be accepted at face value and it would be challenged regardless of the translation.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Di Santo: On a point of privilege—

Mr. Speaker: What is your point of privilege? Is it the same point of privilege?

Mr. Di Santo: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As one person who can understand the language in which the article was written, I can tell the House that whoever reads the article gets a clear indication that the government is proposing two initiatives: (1) to reduce sales tax and (2) in favour of the small industries in Ontario.

This is grave because it can perturb the market and the citizens in their decisions as to whether to buy goods. This is a very serious leak of the budget responsibility because the minister says, and it is quoted: "The government is examining the possibility of reducing sales tax . . ." In other words, the minister revealed what action the government was studying. I think my colleague the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan) was totally correct. The minister not only should apologize but also should resign.

Mr. Speaker: Order. There is no motion of any sort before the House that the Chair can judge upon. It was raised by the member for Bellwoods by way of a point of privilege—an alleged point of privilege—where he seems to be saying that something reported to have been said by the Minister of Industry and Tourism is a breach of his privileges. That has not been established, and all I can do is look at the record of what other members have said and what the minister has said by way of clarification. I will look at it and see whether the allegations are well-founded and whether there is a point of privilege.

NOTICE OF DISSATISFACTION

Mr. Speaker: I want to remind the members of the House that the member for Port Arthur (Mr. Foulds) had stated he was dissatisfied with the answer to a question asked previously of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott). By mutual agreement, they have decided the adjournment debate will take place at 10:30 p.m., November 20, which is next Thursday.

LEGISLATIVE PAGES

PETITION

CONTROL OF TIPS

Mr. Mackenzie: Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by more than 270 of the lower-paid workers in our society, waiters and waitresses, protesting against the fact that they do not control the tips that are paid to them in the establishments they work within.

MOTIONS

COMMITTEE SITTING

Hon. Mr. Wells moved that the select committee on plant shutdowns and employee adjustment be authorized to sit this afternoon.

Motion agreed to.

COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTION

Hon. Mr. Wells moved that Mr. Martel be substituted for Mr. Cooke on the select committee on plant shutdowns and employee adjustment.

Motion agreed to.

3:50 p.m.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Does it have something to do with motions?

Mr. McClellan: Yes. I have a motion. I give notice of the following—

Mr. Speaker: Not under this item you can't.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, is it not permitted to move motions at this point?

Mr. Speaker: No. These are government motions—routine motions dealing with the business of the House.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I would ask your interpretation of rule 37(c). Does the notice that is spoken of in that motion simply require a filing with the table or does it require oral notice as well? My interpretation of 37(c) would be that the motion would require notice and oral notification and permission from you in writing as well at this point in time.

Mr. Speaker: It is quite clear under the rule that any motion that is introduced under that item requires notice.

Mr. Foulds: My question then is, does the motion simply have to be filed in writing or should you give oral notice at this point in time?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform my friend that usually these notices appear on the Notice Paper, notice having been given, and the calling of those motions is at the discretion of the government House leader.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, my colleague the member for Bellwoods has filed notice with the Clerk of the House for a motion that the matter he brought up on a point of privilege under rule 37 be considered by the standing committee for procedural affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Obviously a private member's motion such as this, whether it be by way of a resolution or the introduction of a bill, would be filed with the Clerk and it would appear on the Order Paper and it would be debated in turn in the same way as any other private member's motion.

Mr. McClellan: You will excuse my confusion, Mr. Speaker, but I was under the impression, and I may be wrong, that we had the same requirement to give notice of motion as we do to move and briefly describe a private member's bill. I simply wanted to indicate to you and to the House that we intend to refer the matter raised by me earlier with respect to the Minister of Industry and Tourism's remarks in Corriere Illustrato to the standing committee on procedural affairs, and the motion has been filed with the table to that effect.

Mr. Speaker: I will review it, but my understanding of it is that any motion proposed by a private member will be treated as private member's business and will be handled in that way.

Mr. Foulds: On the point of order, if I might, Mr. Speaker: I would very much like you to review that, because there is nothing in rule 37 which confines those motions to the government House leader.

Mr. Speaker: That is my understanding of it but I will review it.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

TORONTO ISLANDS ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moved first reading of Bill 181, An Act to stay the Execution of Certain Writs of Possession issued in respect of Certain Premises on Toronto Islands.

Motion agreed to.

MUNICIPALITY OF METROPOLITAN TORONTO AMENDMENT ACT, 1980

Hon. Mr. Wells moved first reading of Bill 182, An Act to amend the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, this bill permits the Toronto Transit Commission to conduct a transit consulting business on a self-financing basis. We believe the legislation will allow the TTC to make an important contribution as a consulting partner in Ontario's efforts to obtain a share of the growing international urban transit market.

The bill will also enable the Metro council to delegate to its staff the ability to grant certain permits, approvals or authorizations and, in addition, the existing section which enables the Metro council to designate lanes on Metro roads for the exclusive use of TTC transit vehicles, taxis and cars carrying a specified number of persons will be expanded to grant the area municipalities in Metro the same power over roads within their own jurisdiction and to allow councils to define classes of transit vehicles other than TTC vehicles, which would be able to use the reserved lanes.

DOG LICENSING AND LIVE STOCK AND POULTRY PROTECTION AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Henderson moved first reading of Bill 183, An Act to amend the Dog Licensing and Live Stock and Poultry Protection Amendment Act.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, sections 19(2) and 19(3) of the act deal with compensation for killing or injuring of livestock and poultry by wolves in territories without municipal organization. The subsections are re-enacted to constitute agricultural representatives and assistant agricultural representatives as valuers in territories without municipal organization, and to set out in detail and expand the procedure for determining the amount of compensation payable. At present, such procedures are incorporated by reference to certain subsections of section 14 of the act.

SHEEP AND WOOL MARKETING ACT

Hon. Mr. Henderson moved first reading of Bill 184, An Act respecting the Marketing of Sheep and Wool.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is to extend the application of the Wool Marketing Act to the production and marketing of sheep that are sold for the production of meat.

ASSESSMENT AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Maeck moved first reading of Bill 185, An Act to amend the Assessment Act.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is to postpone to December 1981 the return of assessments at full market value across the province. The bill will allow us to continue with the section 86 reassessment program, which has been successfully implemented in 108 municipalities to date. Approximately 110 more municipalities will be reassessed under section 86 later this year for 1981 taxation purposes.

In addition, I am proposing in this bill administrative amendments to further clarify and update certain operating provisions within the Assessment Act.

BRUCE COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION AND TEACHERS DISPUTE RESOLUTION ACT

Mr. Sargent moved first reading of Bill 186, An Act to resolve the Dispute between the Bruce County Board of Education and the Secondary School Teachers.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to resolve the strike between the Bruce County Board of Education and the secondary school teachers. I hope this bill can do something towards resolving the problem.

It is a pretty unbelievable situation in a democratic, free society, and with a minority government, that this bill could get before the House, but our kids still cannot be educated. Although they are paying their bills, they cannot be educated. It is a terrible situation.

TORONTO ISLAND HOMES

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: In view of the fact that the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs has introduced a bill with reference to the stay for the Islanders, can he enlighten us as to what procedures we are to follow to ensure that the bill is in place before Monday when the evictions are effective?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I was going to announce this when we announce House business later on today. We intend to call the bill for second and third reading tomorrow. It is hoped that royal assent can be given if those stages are passed tomorrow.

ANSWER TO QUESTIONS ON NOTICE PAPER

Clerk of the House: Mr. Speaker, the government House leader has just tabled the answers to questions 283, 284, 370, 372, 373, 382, 384, 385 to 387, and 394, and the interim answers to questions 376, 379 and 384 standing on the Notice Paper. (See appendix, page 4250.)

ORDERS OF THE DAY

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

WOMEN'S ECONOMIC EQUALITY ACT

Mr. Charlton moved second reading of Bill 157, An Act respecting Economic Equality for Women in Ontario.

Interruption.

Mr. Speaker: Order. We welcome visitors in our gallery. We are pleased that you take a great deal of interest in what we are doing here, but I will have to request that you remain silent so we will have an opportunity to hear what the member who has the floor has to say.

Mr. Charlton: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased and proud to have been able to introduce this bill for first and second reading and to be able to debate this bill here this afternoon. It is a little unfortunate that a matter so important will be somewhat limited in time, but none the less it is a very important bill. It is, as I think the House is aware, part of an economic package this caucus put forward in three bills, all of which are complementary and all of which are very important, one to the other.

The purpose of Bill 157 is, first of all, to create in the Ministry of Labour an equal employment office which will start to deal in an effective way with the whole question of valid and successful affirmative action programs in Ontario in employment.

Second, the bill will design, along with and complementary to the other bills that have been introduced, an apprenticeship and skills training program in Ontario, and see that women have fair access to that program, which it would appear they do not now have. I think the statistics point to the problems quite clearly.

The bill, in addition, will provide for universally acceptable and affordable day care so that the women in this province will have full access to meaningful employment in a situation where they can, first, notice that most of their pay cheque is not going to be gobbled up by day care and, second, know that the quality of day care they get is adequate and meaningful for their children.

The bill will establish as well a principle we debated at length last year, the establishment and enforcement of equal pay for equal work of equal value in Ontario. This is a principle that is also extremely important in the province, and I will get into that a little bit later.

Lastly, the bill will create in statute, in law, a definition of and protection from sexual harassment in the work place.

This caucus has been in the forefront of dealing with women's legislation in Ontario, especially in the labour field. Over the years we have dealt with a number of bills dealing with the problems and the discriminations that women are confronted by in the work place and in their employment. My colleague the member for Windsor-Sandwich (Mr. Bounsall), who was up during question period, has dealt with bills on domestics, bills on equal pay for work of equal value and a number of other issues. This member has debated in this House the bill on domestics. My colleague the member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. M. N. Davison) currently has a bill before the House dealing with sexual harassment.

The bill we have here today is probably the most important of all the women's bills we have dealt with in this Legislature. It is the most comprehensive bill attempting to deal in a fairly straightforward way with the kinds of problems that women in this province tell us they have: not imagined problems, and not solutions based totally on principle either, but solutions based on the realities women are confronted with and solutions suggested by the women's organizations that have been dealing with women's problems in the work place.

It is not even fully a case here of ideological differences between this side of the House and the government side. It is, more properly put, the difference between the recognition and the understanding of the problem and the will to deal with it.

My colleague asked the Minister of Labour (Mr. Elgie) a question about the crown employees affirmative action program this afternoon, and I understand the minister's unwillingness to admit openly the program is not working. On the other hand, we get a little tired in this House of hearing the minister brush off or rant about the government's commitment to affirmative action when we do not see in hard statistics the success of that program. No one is going to believe it is working until we do. All of the provisions of this bill will be administered by the Ministry of Labour with the exception of the day care provisions.

It is our belief that the present economic situation in Ontario, the intolerably high level of unemployment and the resultant social problems and social costs are the most serious and important issues currently facing us in the province. Furthermore, we recognize that the economic burdens on women are inevitably much more severe than for society as a whole when we are under the kind of economic circumstances we are under at present.

Traditionally and continually, unemployment for women is higher than that for men. Women's wages go up more slowly than men's. Their access to the better-paying jobs is not there. In the economic hard times we are faced with right now, they continually receive the brunt of that economic hardship. Women are participating in the work force in greater numbers than ever before. The majority of working women do so out of necessity.

We have had a social problem in this province for a long time. I suppose the total blame cannot be put on the government for some of the social attitudes that exist about women participating in the work force. There are still a lot of people in this province who believe that when women work they take jobs away from men. Unfortunately, there does not even seem to be any discrimination of the same kind against men when it may not be necessary for them to work. Let us be realistic. In a free society such as ours is, or is supposed to be, everyone who wishes to work should have the right to do so.

As I suggested, the majority of women who are working today are working out of necessity to support themselves and their families as a sole wage earner or to supplement their spouse's income, which may be extremely low; it may result from the fact that Ontario has the lowest minimum wage in the country. Women are working, whether they be sole supporters or whether they are attempting to supplement the very low income of their husbands, to provide a decent standard of living for their families and a decent opportunity for their children in the future.

On average, women in this province earn only 58 per cent of what men earn. As inflation continues to climb, women's wages generally rise more slowly and they fall further and further behind. At present, unemployment for women is about 7.7 per cent, while for men the rate is below seven per cent. Generally, the unemployment rate for women runs one or two percentage points above that for men.

Many working women need access to good quality day care as well to work. It has been argued that we cannot afford more day care, but I would suggest as strongly as I can that we cannot afford not to provide it, both in economic terms and in social terms.

In terms of those sections of the bill that deal with affirmative action and with equal pay for work of equal value, I would like to take a moment to read a couple of things into the record. Most members will recall that last January and February the committee on general government held hearings and did a clause-by-clause study of Bill 3, a bill designed to create equal pay for work of equal value. I want to read a couple of quotes from the former member for Carleton, Mr. Handleman, who is no longer with us. As a matter of fact, there is a by-election going on in his riding right now. He was a member of that committee.

I want to read this to members so that we can understand clearly what the issues are here today. I do not want to hear the Minister of Labour stand up and deny the problem is as bad as we are making it out to be. This is Mr. Handleman's comment in a discussion with Mr. Towill and Mr. Keen of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association on the morning of January 17: "Your suggestion here is that you say you could accept, I assume, or approve of a direct government policy of equal opportunity. May I ask you, because I'm a proponent of self-regulation, what have you done—either your association or your labour relations committee—to bring into being on a fairly general basis throughout your membership, programs—affirmative action programs, equal opportunity programs—supporting them, promoting them and asking your members, ‘Will you please try to do this kind of thing?’ I’m asking you as the Canadian Manufacturers’ Association and labour relations committee, what have you done to prevent the government from intervening by bringing in a bill and forcing you to do it?”

Reading further on, Mr. Handleman says, “I have had, of course, dialogues with your organization before about the need to avoid legislation by your anticipating the needs of society and doing something yourself. I happen to be against the proliferation of legislation, but where there is a void, as in this case, whether this government does this”—“this” referring to equal opportunity or affirmative action—“or does what Dr. Bounsall is asking it to, I think, by your own inaction and lack of recognition of the problem you have led to another form of intervention in the economy, which displeases me, but which is necessary in order to solve a social problem.”

I wanted to read that into the record so we could be very clear that the problem exists, that the problem is not now being dealt with—by the very clear admission of the former member for Carleton—and that the problem has to be dealt with. Because it is not being dealt with voluntarily, it has to be dealt with by this Legislature.

During the course of those hearings last winter a fairly large number of employers and employer associations who came before the committee suggested they would prefer the legislated affirmative action route to the equal-pay-for-work-of-equal-value route.

We as a party and I as a member of this House do not see those two as mutually exclusive approaches to the problems confronted by women in the work force. In fact, we feel that both are necessary parts of this government’s initiatives in those areas. Hence we have provided for both in this bill. We have taken the approach on the affirmative action program that an equal employment office should be set up in the Ministry of Labour. We have no illusion that it is not going to take some time to accomplish. But that office should sit down with those companies, industry by industry, and work out a reasonable and satisfactory approach to affirmative action in each company. We say that if an agreement cannot be reached, a tribunal should be set up to impose an affirmative action program and to impose the goals of that program. I am quite sure, if this bill were to pass and become law, the present government certainly would not abuse that.

Mr. Bounsall: They might even get re-elected.

Mr. Charlton: That is quite a possibility.

Mr. M. N. Davison: But they don’t deserve to be.

Mr. Charlton: But at least it would put government in a position that it is in now, or having some input in affirmative action programs and some input into monitoring their success and changing them when they are not working. They have none of that now, and affirmative action programs in this province just are not working.

One of the parts of the bill is an expansion of skills training programs and a commitment on the part of the government in legislation that those affirmative action programs would be accessible to women in a fair and open way. In the matter of affirmative action for women and the skills training and retraining programs that are being run in this province, the statistics are just horrible in terms of women.

The equal pay sections are just as important to the affirmative action program in this bill as the affirmative action program itself. One of the things that was made very clear in the committee last winter was that each deals with different problems. Equal pay for work of equal value deals with the question of the value of a job. Affirmative action and equal opportunity deals with getting women into jobs from which they have been traditionally excluded. Both are necessary to deal with the economic problems that women are confronted with in the work place. Both are necessary simply because affirmative action programs, although they may move some women and eventually substantial numbers of women into better-paying jobs from which they have been excluded in the past, are not necessarily going to do anything to solve the existing job ghetto problems in the textile industry, the clerical sector and so on. It is not going to do anything to solve those problems. Equal pay for work of equal value will start to deal with some of those problems as well.

In wrapping up, I want to say quickly that the Ontario Human Rights Commission ruling on sexual harassment earlier this year was a welcome one, but it is still not good enough. A number of the comments that were made at the time of that ruling suggested very clearly that, although everybody was extremely happy with the ruling, a much clearer definition of sexual harassment was still needed. It is time that this Legislature saw that there was a clear definition of sexual harassment as it relates to the job, as it relates to dismissal from employment, as it relates to punishment and as it relates to withholding promotion and access to other positions. Those definitions are required and are long overdue in this province. We need them. We need this bill.

We need the whole range of tools with which to start dealing with, first, the economic inequality that exists in this province for women and, second, the social attitudes that have to be changed and will take time to change. We need all of these tools to deal with those, and we need them as quickly as we can get them. The longer we wait and piddle around with adding a few people here and a few people there to the enforcement of existing legislation which is not working, the worse the problem will be when it comes time finally in the government's eyes to deal with it.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, the bill before the House today raises some important issues, most of which we have discussed and debated before. What separates us from the sponsors of this particular bill are not its objectives but rather the means by which they can best be achieved.

Mr. Cassidy: How long? How long do we go on with that?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I extended the member the courtesy of listening; if he is capable of doing that, I would ask him to please try.

I quite appreciate that in supporting these objectives of the bill, while opposing its substantive provisions, there will be some who will argue that the government is somehow opposed to the aspirations of women for equity in the labour market. I suppose we can never hope to convince those who misconstrue our commitment. But for those who are genuinely interested in knowing the government's strategy for achieving equal rights for women in employment, I would like to outline briefly what is now being done and what we plan for the future.

First of all, let me say that we believe the interrelated problems of equal pay and equal opportunity cannot be tackled and solved by a narrow-gauge, one-track legislative approach. What is required, in our view, is action on a number of fronts simulaneously, some legislative and some programmatic.

Mr. Foulds: Try a wide-gauge, one-track approach. Try something.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Try it again; my friend can be polite shortly.

We need a blend of legislative compulsion and educational persuasion. We believe it is defeatist and quite bluntly incorrect to assume that the only effective route to equality is through legislative action.

What are the elements of the government's approach? First of all, there are the existing equal pay provisions of the Employment Standards Act. Under that act, women are entitled to be paid the same as men for performing substantially the same work in the same establishment where skill, effort and responsibility are substantially the same. Under the present act, there have been substantial settlements achieved in response to individual complaints, and the complaint number is mounting. More recently, a program of random audits has been undertaken.

A special section of the branch has been established, staffed with specially trained officers who have been assisted in their training by representatives of the women's bureau. New staff have been added for this purpose. In addition, as members know, there was a major media campaign on equal pay last summer. All the indications are that the campaign and the activities of the inspectorate have increased public awareness of employees' rights and, equally important, employers' obligations under the law.

Notwithstanding the strength of the existing law, I believe there are some changes that can and should be made to increase its effectiveness. For example, I think the present restriction to comparisons within a single establishment should be broadened. As well, provisions should be made to prohibit an employer from substituting persons of the opposite sex in jobs or restricting entry to jobs to one sex to avoid the application of the act.

Finally, I believe there is considerable merit in using a composite test, and I said so before the committee last winter, a combined profile of skill, effort and responsibility rather than requiring each of these elements to be considered and met separately in determining whether those performing substantially similar jobs are being paid equally.

I will soon be discussing these proposals with my colleagues, and I have every reason to believe I will be in a position to present them to the House in the near future.

The third point concerns affirmative action. This government is a strong proponent of voluntary affirmative action programs, not only for women but also for other groups who have historically suffered from systemic discrimination and have not had equal access to the labour market.

To reinforce this commitment within the Ontario public service, a work force of some 83,000 persons, the women crown employees office of my ministry has spearheaded a phased equal opportunity program which culminated this year in cabinet approval for individual ministry and government-wide target setting. The targets, based on projected vacancies and the availability of women applicants, are aimed at achieving a 30 per cent female participation rate in all bargaining unit categories in the management module. This program not only should benefit women crown employees but also should serve as a model and indeed an inducement to private sector employers to follow suit.

The fourth area also deals with encouraging affirmative action in the private sector. This continues to be one of the major goals of the women's bureau of my ministry. The bureau's efforts have two major elements. The first is the affirmative action consulting services. The staff of that consulting service informs, consults, advises, exhorts and persuades employers that it is not only fair but also in their own self-interest for them to institute and vigorously pursue affirmative action plans. A recent comprehensive questionnaire survey conducted by the bureau indicates substantial advances in this area.

Complementing the work of the consulting service is the Equal Opportunity Advisory Council, formed in April 1979 and comprising leaders of business and labour. The council has two functions: first, to advise me and my staff on how equal opportunity can be encouraged in the most effective way and, second, to exert their own influence within their own constituencies to heighten awareness and bring about positive and measurable results through new affirmative action initiatives in the private sector.

The fifth point relates to sexual harassment. As members know, and as the member has previously referred to, the present human rights code prohibits discrimination in employment on the grounds of sex. The present law has been construed by the Ontario Human Rights Commission and by boards of inquiry appointed by that commission to provide a substantial measure of protection against on the job sexual harassment. I believe, however, the legal protection should be more explicit, and I can therefore advise this House that will be one of the matters addressed in the new human rights code which I shall be introducing for first reading in the next 10 days.

The sixth point has to do with strategic evaluation of the various elements of our existing programs and the exploration of alternative approaches. The Ontario Manpower Commission, in co-operation with the Ontario region of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, is working towards the completion of a women's employment strategy report. I expect to receive that report and to present it to my colleagues within the next month or two. Judging from the work of the commission in its other undertakings, I have no doubt that the report will be a thorough and comprehensive analysis and evaluation of a broad range of topics, including methods to ease access for women into nontraditional jobs, such as skilled trades.

In the time available, I have been able to touch upon only the principal features of our various ways of approaching this critical subject. I hope my summary has indicated that we are actively and vigorously pursuing all the matters dealt with in Bill 157, as well as some others not explicitly dealt with in the bill. Therefore, while affirming our support for the general principles enunciated in the preamble of the bill, we cannot support its content.

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Speaker, at this point in time I am filled with a sense of humiliation and shame—not for myself but for the greater part of the human race in this province—because this government, by ministerial statement in a private member's hour, has indicated a veto of this bill.

I would like to point out a few of the things that have happened in the course of my lifetime in the battle to try to bring dignity to each individual in our society. I do not fight discrimination against women simply because I am a woman. I fight for the right of every individual to fulfil his or her God-given talents to the fullest extent of his or her ability. That is a principle which, unfortunately, this government does not understand.

I can tell the members my mother was, I think, the first woman building contractor in Canada. As a child, I remember her saying to me: "You know, it is strange. Any drunkard lying in the gutter can vote on how my tax dollars will be paid, will be served. I have no vote." That is the same mentality we have here all these years later.

We have a bill before us that I find sad, as I felt the equal pay for work of equal value bill was sad, simply because neither of them causes anybody to recognize the special skills of women. We are still dealing with that old business of trying to compare the woman to the male regardless of her skills. I had hoped that in my lifetime we might at least recognize individuals for their skills rather than this comparison route which denigrates women, and members know that.

This minister is prepared to stand in the House and tell us the great things the government is doing for women, yet he takes the same position as some of the other Tories did in committee, in talking about government employees, where parking lot attendants are male and switchboard operators are female. Their skills are greater; their classification and job designation require greater skills. He says the only answer for those women is to go and be parking lot attendants if they are going to get anything like equal pay from this government.

I say this to the author of the bill: Sadly, I do not think this bill takes us much further than that position. I recognize that with a government that believes, with the board of trade and the chamber of commerce and all these other prestigious groups, if you pat women on the head and say, "Be patient; all things will work together for good—"

Hon. Mr. Elgie: You sure haven't heard me.

Mrs. Campbell: I have not heard the minister say anything positive the other way.

What has the government done about the pay for parking lot attendants and switchboard operators? Not one thing. And it will not do anything, because it believes it has to keep this kind of gap still in existence. This is the government. It is not somebody down on Bay Street.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: That is not true.

Mrs. Campbell: Is the minister saying what I am saying is untrue? What has he done about it? He is the Minister of Labour; what has he done?

All I am saying is this: When a government is prepared to say to the majority of the human race in Ontario: "Look, children, we will look after you in the fullness of time," it is an insult to those women. The board of trade and the chamber of commerce have advocated patience to women; so does the minister, who is going to do more studies. I think women have been studied about as much as the native people and they have had about the same results from this government.

I regret my time is short to enter into this debate. I find this debate about the role of women and who and what they are is about the same kind of debate that took place in Britain when some stalwart—imagine—suggested that they should eliminate child labour. The same arguments as were used then are being used by this government to women today.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: No, the Liberals opposed it then.

Mrs. Campbell: Come off it.

Let me say this: All we need from this government is a statement and a law which says women are indeed people, their talents shall be recognized as talents and they shall be employed and paid accordingly.

I have not dwelt on the other matters in this bill, because I do not have time. Just once, I would love to be in the position where I could say to all of you, "Look, be patient, child; you will get your deserts some day."

I simply remind the minister that the law is on the side of women. They have been declared to be people. There has been no such declaration as far as he is concerned.

Interruption.

The Deputy Speaker: Order. I believe the visitors in the galleries have been advised that we cannot allow any demonstrations. I must remind the visitors again that we cannot allow any further demonstration.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, after that last comment of the member for St. George, I was going to say it is nice to have some people in the gallery, particularly with respect to this bill which New Democrats think is one of the most important bills to come before the Ontario Legislature, not just this year but over the course of the last decade.

The New Democratic Party has taken a strong commitment in relation to economic equality for women and we want to carry that commitment through. If we cannot get the government to carry it through, then we will change the government and put a government in office in this province that will ensure that economic equality for women is not just a slogan and not just a program, but a reality that affects all of the 4.5 million women in Ontario.

We are now the only party to have a women's critic, a women's spokesman, in the Ontario Legislature. He is the member for Windsor-Sandwich (Mr. Bounsall). I am sorry he cannot speak in the debate today and I am sorry that the member for Beaches-Woodbine and the member for Carleton East (Ms. Gigantes) and all of our other members cannot speak as well, because this is a bill that is important to all of us on the side of the New Democrats.

We have appointed a women's organizer in the party because we think it is important to reach out to the majority of the electors of the province who happen to be women. We have appointed a women's co-ordinator in the NDP caucus for the same reason. We are taking this question seriously. I wish the government would take the question seriously as well.

I want to tell members why we have brought the various measures of the economic equality bill forward in a package as we have done today. I want to tell about it by talking about a meeting I had a couple of weeks ago with a bunch of women at Seneca College who were training themselves for jobs where one doesn't traditionally find women. They hope their course in nontraditional occupations will help them play an equal role in the working world, but they know from bitter experience that it is an uphill battle.

The women there told me about the problems they ran into when they tried to get better-paid jobs. They were women who ranged in age from their late teens to their early 50s. Many were mothers; some had up to 20 years of work experience and some had almost none. But the problems they faced are all the same, and they are the same problems I have heard about from countless women from all across the province in all the years I have been in politics. Most of the group had been unemployed when they started that course at Seneca College. That is not unusual, because there are 141,000 women officially unemployed in Ontario, plus many more who have despaired of getting a decent job and dropped out of the labour force.

The jobs those women at Seneca had held had been mostly sales or clerical jobs. They had run into a brick wall when they tried to broaden their skills and move on up the ladder as their male co-workers did after a few months in entry-level jobs. I think of the women in British American Bank Note, a company with a factory in my riding of Ottawa

Centre. They had up to 20 years' experience and no promotion into the chain that allows them to become skilled printers. Men with a few years of high school who came on as janitors were automatically put into that apprenticeship very shortly thereafter.

Ms. Gigantes: And made more money too.

Mr. Cassidy: And made more money as well.

The women I talked to saw themselves being trapped in a lifetime of work in a job that men saw as just a dull but necessary start to a career. They told me that sometimes they go into a bank. If they are women, they learn a job in two or three months and stay there for 15 years. That is a reality in our province today.

The women in this group who had young children could not see how they could work if they could not get day care. They were worried about how to find proper day care if they took a factory job where there were shifts to be worked. The pay is decent but there is no day care after 5:30 at night. That is not a problem that just faces 40 women at Seneca College; almost half of the women in the province who have children under the age of six are in the labour force. That is 261,000 women with young children who need day care and many of them cannot get it.

They told me about the most insidious obstacle of all for women who want to be economic equals in this society: the social pressure on them to conform to traditional roles. They spoke of the guidance counsellor in grade school who tells a woman that she should be taking domestic science and not the course in shop in which she is really interested and of the electrical subcontractor who hires one of the women that I met as a trainee but then loses business as a result.

Those attitudes are not very surprising, because they are ratified and supported by this government. Frankly, I am ashamed of what the Minister of Labour had to say in defending the tawdry record of this government in looking after the interests of women in Ontario.

In the employer-sponsored training branch—and this minister has some input into that—there is a fellow who explained that only a fraction of one per cent of the people in this program are women because, he said, women are afraid of moving parts and equipment. That is ridiculous. He said, "It takes a particular kind of cat to survive on a shop floor," and he was bloody well determined that was not going to be a woman—only men.

The ministry's program had five women and 605 men in employer-sponsored training a year ago. Now it has 1,500 men and it has actually gone down to only four women in the program. Is that equal opportunity? That is a disgrace. That is why we think the government needs legislated answers to provide economic equality for women in Ontario. It is no good just relying on voluntary action. That has been the government's policy for far too many years. It has not worked in the past, and there is no indication it is going to work in the future either. The voluntary affirmative action program of which the government is so proud has resulted in affirmative action programs with only 160 employers after seven years. The agreements have no goals, they set no standard and they have no teeth.

We want an equal employment office—it is in the bill—to work with employers to develop affirmative action plans that will legally bind them to hire, train and promote women rather than meeting with a civil servant every once in a while and saying nice things about women. That equal employment office should start by lighting a fire under the provincial government, because the record of this government is shameful when it comes to equal opportunities and treating women on the basis of equality.

The government began an affirmative action program in 1973. It is such an abject failure that today two thirds of the women who work for the province earn less than $13,000 a year, and only five per cent earn more than $21,000 a year. I would ask any minister in the government whether they would be prepared to sustain a family on that kind of income.

It is no surprise either, when one considers that last year the government torpedoed the NDP bill introduced by the member for Windsor-Sandwich (Mr. Boun-sall) calling for equal pay for work of equal value. The shoddy thing about it was they took the former member for Carleton, Mr. Handleman, who they knew was going to retire a few weeks later, in the spring of this year, and used that member as the spokesperson for the government when they said, "Now is not the time to move on that vital piece of legislation." The performance of the government simply underlines the Conservative failure to provide anything approaching equal pay for work of equal value.

The member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell) mentioned a case I raised in the Legislature. Why is it that switchboard operators who need at least three more years of education and experience than the people who run parking lots in the government, but who are predominantly female, earned $38 a week less last year? Why is it that, since I asked that question of the Minister of Labour, the wage gap between them and parking lot attendants, who of course are all male, has widened to $46 a week? That is another example of how the government is failing to live up to whatever principles it happens to be putting forward.

The minister launched an advertising campaign. He hired 11 more civil servants to enforce the unenforceable equal pay provisions of the present Employment Standards Act, and so far this year he has won $72,000 in equal pay cases. This works out to four cents for every working woman in the province. I say to the government and the Minister of Labour, that is not good enough. It is not good enough even if it is an improvement over the $56,000 of a year ago. It is no wonder the average earnings of women are still 58 per cent of the average earnings of men in Ontario.

Why could we not be like France and Germany, countries where women's wages are rapidly catching up to the point where they are almost equal with the pay of men? Why can we not have that as our goal rather than constantly making women second-class citizens? Why can we not pass this bill and give women first-class citizenship in the economy of the province?

The government's record on day care is a record of cant and hypocrisy. In the last four years, 100,000 women have joined the labour force in Ontario. The number of subsidized day care spaces has gone up by only 5,000. We think there should be a right to day care in Ontario. We think it is a basic necessity if women are to have an equal role in our economy. Just about every municipal candidate elected in the province pledged a commitment to day care.

When will this government recognize the demand is out there and that women will not be able to participate as equals in the work force as long as somebody has to stay home to mind the kids? It will be the women who are forced to stay home. That is a reality unless we get decent day care and make it accessible to every woman and every family in Ontario.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. MacBeth): The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. Cassidy: I realize that. I just want to appeal to the government. They have blocked our full employment bill and our bill on protection of workers and job security. Why can't the government stop paying lip-service and help the New Democratic Party to make Bill 157 a reality in Ontario? It is something that has essentially been proposed by their own Ontario Status of Women Council. It is about time the government took that advice seriously and put principle ahead of partisan politics—

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. Cassidy:—and supported economic equality for women. It is about time that came in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr Speaker, I wonder if I could have some clarification of the amount of time that remains.

The Acting Speaker: The member for Kingston and the Islands has five minutes.

Hon. Mr. Norton: I shall have to abbreviate my remarks considerably.

First, I would like to join in the remarks of my colleague. I do not think any member of this House is in opposition to the principles embodied in this bill, with the exception of one specific principle that I would not be supportive of for very practical purposes. It seems to me the honourable members must recognize that the discipline of the responsibility to implement and execute policy and programs in this province really does charge one with the necessity to assess the reality of a given situation.

What is overlooked entirely in this bill, unfortunately, in respect to day care, is that if one were to choose to establish or enshrine a right, one also must move to establish a method of moving to achieve that immediately. I suggest to the honourable members opposite that we do not fail to recognize there is a need that is not being met at the moment. I have indicated that on numerous occasions. What I think is important, though, is to see the difference in the approach. We must be pragmatic and realistic.

I would suggest that within the next short period of time—over the next three weeks—I will be making a series of announcements in terms of the initiatives we have been working on and planning for over almost the past two years. This will have a significant impact upon day care in this province. It is unfortunate I am not in a position today to reveal to the honourable members what that is, but I will be shortly. I think the members will be surprised at how soon they learn, at least, the first indication.

This has been in the planning for some time; it is not a response. If it were simply reactive, I can assure the House I would have done it before now. I think it is also important we bear in mind that this province has done a better job in the provision of day care than any other jurisdiction in North America. Think for just one moment: there is in Ontario two thirds of all the day care spaces available in Canada. One third of the population is served by two thirds of the day care spaces available. That is only comparative. That has no absolute value, but it is nevertheless significant. I do not think one should ignore that when commenting upon what we have managed to achieve and what we are going to continue to achieve in this area in the province.

The rates of increase may not have met everyone's expectations over the last two or three years but, at a time when other jurisdictions were faced with absolute declines, we continued to have growing numbers of day care spaces available in this province. Honourable members and the people of this province will shortly see the unfolding of our new policy and its practical implementation in this province.

I think it is wrong to suggest the implementation of a right enshrined in legislation. Even if the member were in office, he could not meet it. To achieve what he is suggesting may well cost in the first year of implementation an additional $1 billion. He could not find it and I cannot find it.

We must be responsible and move in a phased way to achieve our objective. That is precisely what we plan to do.

Mr. Charlton: Mr. Speaker, I just want to wrap up very quickly. The minister pointed out very clearly the very limited nature of the legislation that is now in place. I only wish the minister could have spent more time with us during the hearings last January and February so he would have more clearly understood the inadequate nature of equal pay for substantially the same work. We had job after job after job described by person after person, all of them women, where they were deprived of a fair and equitable income for the work, the skill, the responsibility and the effort they put forward.

I was pleased to hear the minister say he did not think any member in this House opposed any of the principles in this bill. I remind the minister and all the members of the government party that to block this bill is a rejection of those principles. This is a debate on second reading on the principle of the bill.

The Acting Speaker: This matter will be voted on at a later time.

NUDE ENTERTAINMENT PLACES

Mr. Williams moved resolution 39:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government of Ontario should take further action to prevent the proliferation and indiscriminate location of restaurants, taverns and theatres that feature nude entertainment or nude waitresses or similar forms of inducement to customers and that, in particular:

1. The government of Ontario should introduce legislation that would authorize municipalities to pass bylaws prohibiting the establishment and operation in the municipality of these restaurants, taverns and theatres; and

2. The Attorney General should request the Minister of Justice for the government of Canada to introduce legislation strengthening the public morals provisions of the Criminal Code to facilitate prosecutions against the owners of these restaurants, taverns and theatres.

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the substance of the resolution has a familiar ring about it, and so it should. All members of this Legislature will recall that as recently as the spring of 1978 we engaged in a very lively debate revolving around Bill 49, an Act to amend the Municipal Act. That piece of legislation had a twofold purpose: to extend existing powers of municipalities over body rub parlours and to give them powers to pass bylaws to regulate and control adult entertainment parlours.

It is self-evident that in the early 1970s and the latter part of the 1960s, the business operations in our society that cater to erotic and sexual appetites or inclinations were very much on the rise. Because of that there was a public outcry that demanded government action. For this reason, therefore, Bill 49 came before this Legislature for debate and was enacted into law. That particular piece of legislation provided that bylaws may be passed by councils of all municipalities for licensing, regulating, governing, classifying and inspecting adult entertainment parlours or any class or classes thereof and for revoking or suspending any such licence and for limiting the number of such licences to be granted.

One might raise the question as to why it would seem necessary to debate this issue again at this time, so soon after the enactment of the legislation to which I have referred. I think the answer is obvious. First, if one looks at the federal government's involvement in this area through the Criminal Code, there seems to have been a marked degree of indifference by the federal authorities in endeavouring to tighten up the morality provisions of the Criminal Code to try to come to grips with these types of entertainment facilities.

Secondly, at the municipal level, until the enactment of the Municipal Amendment Act in 1978, municipalities did not have the legal power to enact bylaws to regulate or control the operation of either body-rub parlours or adult entertainment parlours.

The difficulty we have before us at this time is the gathering storm clouds we see on the horizon in the nature of the legal challenges that are being made to this existing legislation. While this government has to be given full credit for the initiatives it took in bringing in Bill 49 in 1978 and having it enacted into law, it appears that those in the industry who want to see a proliferation and unlimited operation of these types of entertainment facilities will go to all lengths to try to strike down our existing laws. While in the early 1970s the real attention seemed to be on body-rub parlours in the inner city—in Metro Toronto in particular—in 1980 the attention is being given to this unprecedented proliferation and indiscriminate location of adult entertainment parlours, not only in the suburbs of our large cities but in the small urban communities throughout the province.

I would like to give members a case in point. I refer to my own city of North York. There are no less than 21 applications pending at this time for restaurant and tavern licences with specific requests for provision of burlesque-type entertainment. One of these applications relates to a restaurant and tavern in the very heart of Oriole riding, located in a small plaza within yards of a neighbouring church and two high schools, one of which is the largest high school facility in North York. All these community facilities are, in turn, located within the centre of one of our finest residential communities.

School, I think he expressed the views of many of the teaching staff as well as the students when he questioned the propriety of having such a facility located in the heart of our residential community. Its very presence would reflect, I would suggest, on the integrity of our community. I give credit to people such as the Levines and the Campbells living on Silas Hill Drive in Willowdale and to Mrs. Lynne Crawford living on Goodview Road. These are people who have been concerned enough to bring their concerns to the local city council and their elected representatives at the local level. They have taken the initiative in obtaining petitions from people in the area who have also expressed dismay and concern about the proposed establishment of such facilities in the heart of their community.

The local alderman, Mrs. Betty Sutherland, because of these concerns and her own personal concerns, introduced a measure before North York council and the council in its wisdom enacted a bylaw which amended zoning bylaw 7625 in North York, which would limit the location of such adult entertainment parlours to areas zoned industrial, provided that such parlours are located at least 500 metres from residential areas. That bylaw was enacted in September of this year.

From what I have said up till now, it would sound as if at the municipal level and at the provincial level we have matters well in hand and under control. Unfortunately, this is not the case. That is primarily the reason why I am here today with this resolution before the Legislature. While the local bylaw was passed by North York, it has taken almost nine months to bring that legislation to fruition. At the staff level, considerable apprehension has been expressed with regard to the validity of such a local bylaw. Both the reports from the planning commissioner and from the city solicitor of North York questioned whether the type of bylaw that was eventually enacted by the council would stand up in the courts. They suggested that a zoning bylaw is to control land use and not to control morality. The city solicitor himself has expressed concern as to whether, if challenged in the courts, that bylaw would stand up.

There have been considerable reports written expressing concern at this. Now we find, over and above these concerns being expressed at the local level, the operators of these type of facilities have challenged our own section 368(b) in the courts. As we know, there are now two cases pending before the courts: one in the city of Toronto and another in the city of Hamilton. By reason of the fact that the decisions have yet to be handed down on those cases, I won't go into the merits.

I will simply point out for the record the basis on which our existing legislation is being challenged. The operators of the two facilities in question are questioning the vires of the legislation. In other words, they are asking for a declaration that our Municipal Act, as amended, is ultra vires the province of Ontario, being legislation in relation to criminal law as well as other relief. Of course, the Attorney General has responded and has intervened in this matter as of right, claiming that the position of the province is that the legislation is intra vires of the Legislature of the province of Ontario.

The fact is that our laws are being challenged. It appears to me that remedial action must be contemplated. If the courts should decide unfavourably with regard to the existing laws, I would suggest that immediate remedial legislation must be considered. The fact of the matter is that if, for whatever reason, these cases before the courts went in favour of the applicants, it would appear we would have to fall back on the Criminal Code as the sole basis for governing, controlling or prohibiting these types of establishments.

I would suggest that such an application could be favourably made to the federal authorities to provide this type of enlightened legislation. We do have existing legislation under the Criminal Code, section 190, which provides that they can delegate administrative authority to the province through the Lieutenant Governor in Council when it comes to gaming and lotteries. I see no reason why such a course of action could not be taken with regard to the control of adult entertainment parlours if the need was determined to be there.

I have pointed out the fact that there is a need to tighten up the existing legislation at the municipal level because the Municipal Act is being challenged and because the local bylaws that have been enacted or proposed are being questioned. It seems to me that if we do have to resort to the Criminal Code as the basis on which we can regulate and control, then we must move in the direction I have suggested.

With regard to the existing provisions of the Criminal Code, notwithstanding our success in maintaining the validity of our legislation in the courts, I think we could and should still go to the federal authorities and ask them to strengthen those provisions of the Criminal Code, which would give further and stronger clout to what we have done and are endeavouring to do here at the provincial level.

Section 170 of the Criminal Code, the means by which charges are laid against operators of adult entertainment parlours, deals with the attire of the performers, waiters or waitresses in restaurants. It is under that provision that charges can be laid. The difficulty is that there are two aspects of the Criminal Code, under section 170, dealing with nudity that could be improved upon. First and foremost, it is ludicrous that no proceeding shall be commenced under this section without the consent of the Attorney General. I think one can count on the fingers of one hand the number of provisions in the Criminal Code and in civil law where one has to get the consent of the Attorney General before he can lay an information. There are more serious crimes by far under the Criminal Code where one does not have to go to the Attorney General to get his permission to lay an information or a charge. It is handled in the normal process. Why here, where we have a minor crime by comparison, does one have to have the consent of the Attorney General?

Further, there is a difficulty under the existing section in that the charges can only be laid against the individual, who may be charged with nudity because of the nature of his attire or lack thereof. There is no provision in the existing section to lay the charge directly against the establishment, unless the person who is being charged with nudity is prepared to lay further charges against the owner or manager of the facility where he or she might be working.

As there is provision elsewhere in the Criminal Code, it seems to me there should be a reverse onus provision in the Criminal Code and this section in particular would assume that the owners, managers and operators of these facilities have the knowledge and have given the consent with regard to the adult entertainment that goes on within the establishment.

Here are two ways in which I think the Criminal Code could be tightened up and assist us in the province to try in a more meaningful and stronger way to regulate and control, if not prohibit, the proliferation and indiscriminate location of these adult entertainment parlours.

If we can't make progress in those particular areas, I suggest there is still a further course of action we might take. I have been referring to the initiatives of the Attorney General. I would now suggest there may be initiatives that can be taken through the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. I would point out that there was an adverse decision in the courts back in 1974 in the case of MacLean versus the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario. While the board endeavoured to prohibit such a facility from operating, it was decided by the courts that the regulations under the Liquor Licence Act did not specifically empower the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario to pass judgement upon entertainment offered in facilities of this nature. Specific provisions under section 45 also did not cover this particular point.

I would suggest that there may be room, through the regulatory process and through the Liquor Licence Act, by which one could consider bringing in regulations that would pertain to how persons employed in these licensed premises would dress. I am suggesting it could be done by regulation. It has proved successful in other jurisdictions in states in the United States. I understand it has in the states of California and New York.

It seems to me that provision could be made, if not totally to provide the board with the power to control the regulation of the type of entertainment in licensed establishments, at least most certainly to do it with regard to establishments that cater to minors, that is, the dining lounges and dining rooms. I would point out that the Ontario Hotel and Motel Association as well as the Ontario Food Services Association would endorse this type of regulation and control. It has been pointed out to me that of the 400 licensed establishments within Metropolitan Toronto, if there was an outright prohibition with regard to the dining lounges, it would reduce by about 70 per cent the number of facilities that could provide adult entertainment and limit that type of activity to the other hundred facilities that are licensed lounges and not dining lounges. As we know, it is to the licensed dining lounges that families will come to have meals and bring their children with them, while the licensed lounges are areas that are reserved for adult attendance only.

It would be a great step forward if this kind of regulatory enactment was considered. I am sure initiatives have to be taken; we have to be prepared for the problems that lie before us. I am sure the further initiatives of this government will ensure that there will be no further proliferation or inappropriate location of these facilities throughout the province.

Mr. Blundy: Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to speak on this resolution before us this afternoon. I believe in the spirit that is embodied in the resolution and the goal it is trying to achieve.

The resolution, in my opinion, is not going to accomplish very much. It is doing what this government does so often, that is, point to other levels of government to do what I consider might be work it does not want to do itself. The resolution gives authorization to municipalities to do more. It is pointing at the government of Canada, through the Minister of Justice to do more. I believe it is rather hypocritical to stand up and present a resolution of this nature on such a very important matter. The principle behind the resolution is one I endorse 100 per cent. But I do not like the government, through the member for Oriole (Mr. Williams), bringing in a resolution that is going to try to get other levels of government to do what I believe this government should try to do.

It is interesting to note that this afternoon this private members' period is being shared with the discussion of Bill 137. I know there are vast differences between this resolution and that bill but, in my view, the bill is talking about the economic wellbeing of women and affording economic opportunities to women, while this resolution is talking about trying to do something to prevent the continued and increased exploitation of women. Therefore, I think this resolution and the previous bill have some views in common. I think both the bill and the resolution before us now are trying to improve the position and prestige of women in our society.

The proliferation of these entertainment enterprises is going hand in hand with a substantial decrease in respect for the family, for the mother and so forth. That may be an ideological thing for many people, but I submit it is something that touches every one of us. Many of the problems today that are covered by Community and Social Services are with us because the family and women in our society do not have the same status they had years ago. I know it sounds old-fashioned, and it is hard to turn back the clock, but I do believe we should mention these points in our discussion of this resolution today.

What do I suggest we do about this type of entertainment in restaurants and taverns? I believe a great deal of it could be controlled by the government through its liquor licence board and through the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. I believe they could do a great deal to reduce the number of such establishments.

What about the municipalities? The member for Oriole has mentioned the locations in which these establishments are springing up. I think he has a good point in that respect. Here is a way the municipality can become involved through its zoning bylaws if it wants to do it, but it has to have the will to try to do it. I believe this government does not have the will or the guts to do what I think it could do to help prevent the continuation and proliferation of entertainment parlours that are being discussed today. The municipalities are going to have to be encouraged to have that desire and the guts to do it also, from the standpoint of the location, through their zoning bylaws and so forth. I believe some very good points have been made by the member for Oriole in respect to the fact we see now in our own municipalities where some of these entertainment parlours are being settled.

They should not be in residential areas or even where children would be passing by the street seeing the signs and pictures on the outside. Not only are they a nuisance, but it is a bad situation, and the municipalities should try to curtail it. The points the member has made about strengthening the public moral provisions of the Criminal Code are right on. I believe this is an area where we could certainly see some very great improvement. I would do everything to encourage that to be done at the federal level.

To sum up my few words in participating in this debate on the resolution, I abhor the proliferation of these kinds of parlours in our communities and residential areas. I would like to see them curtailed, but I say all three levels of government have a part to play in doing so. I do not think this government should give up its responsibility in this matter of trying to pass legislation in this House that will help control the proliferation of entertainment parlours of this nature. The government is not without blame. I will support anything it brings in that will help to decrease the incidence of these kinds of establishments in our municipality.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution. I want to speak to the members here about a particular problem I have had in my own constituency. It happens to be the Metro Theatre, which is located at Bloor and Manning.

As the member for Oriole says, it has been a disgrace and problem for people in my constituency. It is located in the middle of a residential family neighbourhood, despite the fact that it is on Bloor Street. The streets north and south of Bloor are residential family areas occupied by people with very traditional values, which I happen to share and respect. I think people have a right to have their values honoured and respected in their own neighbourhood.

We have had a problem particularly in Toronto city with strip joints. What we are talking about is how to deal with the phenomenon of a proliferation of strip joints, whether they are theatres, bars or whatever. Not too long ago there was a time when the main street in this city was virtually beyond the pale for people with families or children. They could not walk down Yonge Street because of the body-rub parlours and strip joints of all kinds and varieties. So there was an effort to clean up Yonge Street, and that was achieved. One of the consequences was the problem was not really solved but simply dispersed off Yonge Street and into the midst of residential neighbourhoods such as mine and the area of North York referred to by the member for Oriole.

Let me just say the Metro Theatre is a real blight in our community. It is close to a high school. It attracts teenagers who are underage. It is common knowledge that the age provisions are not followed. We have the additional problem of the customers of the Metro Theatre coming into the community and harassing women either before or after they go into the performance. It has become a real problem in our community. I have had numerous complaints and petitions from people in the community about this kind of harassment.

Having said that I share the concern and support the resolution, I want to continue in the vein of the member for Sarnia because this government is as much responsible for the problem as anybody else. I remember that when the member for Scarborough Centre (Mr. Drea) became Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations he shot his mouth off ad nauseam about how he was going to clean up the topless waitresses and how he was going to solve the problem of the strip joints by dealing with topless waitresses. As soon as he was appointed to the cabinet, what did he do? Well he shot his mouth off and shot his mouth off and eventually did absolutely nothing. What he should have done was brought in amendments to the Employment Standards Act. It is very simple. He should have advised his cabinet colleagues that the one way to deal seriously with the problem was to prohibit any employer from requiring a woman as a condition of employment as a waitress to be topless. That would have solved a lot of the problem. I am sure the member for Oriole knows that.

Let me speak again about the Metro Theatre. This place is operating in violation of a number of laws. As a matter of fact, it has had two convictions under the Criminal Code. The member for Oriole talks about the need for strengthening the Criminal Code. Here is a theatre that has had two convictions under the Criminal Code for indecent performance. What happens? These theatres are licensed under the authority of the Theatres Act of Ontario which is enforced by the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations through the censor board.

Remember Don Sims? Last spring after this theatre had been convicted twice for offences under the Criminal Code, Don Sims renewed its licence. This is the great protector of public morals and public decencies who is all hot to trot when it comes to artistic films, but when it comes to a purveyor of smut who is involved in violating the Criminal Code, he simply signs the paper and renews the licence. I ask, where is the initiative of the government in that respect? All I see is a fairly large degree of hypocrisy and shirking of responsibility.

Getting back to the member for Scarborough Centre, he did not amend the Employment Standards Act. In fact, after making all those bravura promises about what he was going to do to clean up the strip joints, he did absolutely nothing. In desperation, his cabinet colleagues brought in Bill 49, which simply dumped the responsibility on to the municipalities and made it virtually impossible to deal with the problem.

The member for Sarnia (Mr. Blundy) mentioned the reality that the problem could be dealt with under the authority of the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario. That is not being done either. The government hands out licences to the strip joint operators with great abandon. I do not see any initiatives coming from the government on trying to control the problem in that area.

Finally, there is the area of police enforcement. I do not know how many times we have been down to 14 Division—myself, members of the community, alone, separately, together—to try to get the police to enforce the existing provisions of the Criminal Code and to make sure that people living in the area are not harassed as they walk from their house up to Bloor Street to go shopping or to go to church. We cannot get consistent police enforcement. If the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry) was really concerned about this problem, in his capacity also as Solicitor General, he might have some words with police chiefs about ways of enforcing the existing laws.

I am not sure there is much more I want to say. I think it is a serious problem. Aside from the other concerns I mentioned, in terms of the assault on the values of people that deserve to be respected, I also see it as a form of blockbusting that is taking place in a number of communities. I do not have any doubt at all that the existence of strip joints in residential neighbourhoods, particularly in the inner city communities, is an excellent way to destabilize the residential neighbourhood and make it ripe for blockbusting developers to move in and begin the work of destroying family housing in favour of different kinds of development. I have no doubt at all that is part of the phenomenon we are dealing with.

I support the resolution and the measures spelled out in the resolution, but I also want this government to understand clearly it has a responsibility to deal with the problem that it cannot shirk off on to either the municipalities or the federal government. Again, to summarize, it has the authority under the Theatres Act. It has, through the influence of the Solicitor General, the capacity to speak to law enforcement officials about the enforcement of existing statutes. It has the authority to control under the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario. None of these things is being enforced with any degree of vigour or consistency whatsoever. I hope the House will support the member for Oriole's resolution in the hope it will bring this serious problem to the attention of cabinet and that we can have a more vigorous assault on what is a serious problem in many communities, particularly within Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to add my voice to those of my colleagues in support of this resolution and also to pay tribute to the member for Oriole (Mr. Williams) for bringing in this timely and commendable resolution.

This government and, I would venture to say, nearly all members of this assembly have supported the restriction of establishments which rely on nude entertainment to bring in patrons. It was just over two years ago when this House debated amendments to the Municipal Act. At that time, it was hoped the legislation would reduce the number of such establishments across Ontario but, one year later, there were still over 200 premises in Toronto alone which featured some form of nude entertainment. Earlier amendments went far in controlling adult entertainment parlours by closing down many of the body-rub parlours and sex shops. There still exists a number of other facilities which citizens of our municipalities wish to see restricted. It ought to be the responsibility of the local governments, which best know the immediate local concerns, to control the establishment of restaurants, taverns and theatres that feature nude entertainment. This applies not just to the major municipalities in our province but to a number of the smaller communities as well.

We witnessed with great shock and sorrow the impact the sex industry can have in the murder of Emanuel Jaques. This incident shook as large a community as Toronto. Can one imagine the effect it would have on a smaller community? This is what is happening. Certainly, crackdowns have removed some of the more questionable establishments from Toronto's downtown core, but many of them have moved. Instead of heading into the city centre, one can bump and grind in every Metro borough. Several of these relocated taverns and restaurants have been located close to residential sections or schools. Under the act, municipalities can regulate their location but cannot bar them from entry.

It is the community which, to a large extent, shapes the development of our citizens. Our citizens should be able to choose the kind of environment in which they wish to live. They should be able to regulate what type of business they wish their children to be exposed to. I am not suggesting this assembly attempt to legislate morality for this province, but what I would like to see is the ability of a community to determine its own pattern of development—in other words, local autonomy.

Having served as mayor and councillor in my own community for several years, I have a tremendous amount of respect for local councils and I know they are far better qualified than any other level of government to assess what is in the best interest of the people they represent. If they are mistaken, they are turfed out of office at the next election, and we have seen some of that happen in the last few days.

The real concern of this resolution, as I read it, is to allow municipalities a legal means of blocking establishments which a community may not want. A community could, if it so desired, prevent sex-oriented businesses not only from locating in the downtown core, but in the backstreets and residential neighbourhoods as well. Several municipalities have been fighting to keep these taverns and restaurants away from their neighbourhood backyards. Often they have not had the necessary clout to force them to move. I think it is a shame when a municipality, acting in its collective role, cannot decide what type of entertainment the community will support.

There are a number of legal points raised by this resolution but, in concert with the federal government and the municipal representatives, they are points which can be worked out. The Attorney General (Mr. McMurry) can approach the federal Minister of Justice to make changes to the Criminal Code which would facilitate action on the part of the Ontario communities.

We are aware that this is an area into which we enter only after a great deal of thought. It is not often that we in this assembly discuss our ability to constrain any segment of our society, but we have several questions with regard to this industry and its establishment across Ontario. The aggressive marketing of some of its supporters may not please members of our communities.

My principle here in supporting this resolution is that municipalities throughout this province should have a say in just how their communities will develop. At the very least it will give them the opportunity to bring better control to such establishments. No person in this province should be subjected to having these establishments thrust upon him if the community is opposed. The municipal representatives may best decide each community's need and aspiration.

In conclusion, I feel this is territory which the province, together with both municipalities and the federal government, can enter. Together we can help ensure communities which are safe and which are shaped by the individuals who live there.

Mr. Speaker: I have been prevailed upon. I had a choice between the members for Halton-Burlington (Mr. J. Reed), Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney) and Ottawa East (Mr. Roy).

Mr. Roy: It was a toss-up, Mr. Speaker. I used my great experience and, of course, my weight within caucus to override my colleagues. I used my seniority to get an opportunity to support this resolution.

I want to say, as my colleague the member for Sarnia (Mr. Blundy) said prior to me, that we are in support of anything that appears to be against sin, sex and that sort of thing and in support of the resolution as such.

It is with some trepidation that I look at some of the provisions within the resolution. I find it a bit surprising, considering the author of the resolution and knowing the respective jurisdictions of various governments, that he would put the emphasis on the municipalities to curtail the proliferation of such establishments. In my opinion, the provincial role to be played in this respect is of great importance, and it seems to me that is where it has to be played. It has to be played at the provincial level rather than trying to use municipal laws to curtail the abuses or infringements of the Criminal Code. I do not see that the Criminal Code has to be amended. In fact, the present Criminal Code, if it was only enforced, would probably severely curtail the proliferation of these establishments.

The other thing I find to be somewhat surprising in the resolution is that the member for Oriole—and I do not begrudge the fact he brought this in—should feel obliged to bring this resolution to the House at this time. It was only a few years ago when the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea) was sworn in that he gave a direct warning to the public, saying that those individuals participating in nude entertainment would be required to dress up. Through all the swearing in of the ministers at that time, the thing that made the headlines was the comment by the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. He said that from now on things in this province would not be as they were in the past and nude entertainers were going to have to clean up their act.

I find it somewhat cynical and disappointing that after the minister said this some two years ago, the member for Oriole should be obliged to bring in this resolution. Tacked on to the resolution should have been some serious condemnation of the shallowness of that threat and that promise of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. If the member felt the necessity of bringing forward such a resolution, it is because his colleague the minister did not do his job, and that speaks for itself.

I also find regrettable about the process that is going to take place here this afternoon that part of this resolution indicates that people are abusing certain individuals in society. It is an abuse of females to perpetrate the spread of this type of establishment. On the one hand, the government wants to prohibit that while, on the other hand, there is a bill coming up, respecting economic equality for women in Ontario, that it is going to block. The government is going to put a veto on that bill.

That is a cynical gesture on the part of government members, bringing forward this type of resolution and wanting the support of the Legislature for it. We will support it. At the same time, one of my colleagues brings forward an act respecting the economic equality of women in Ontario, but these people will not even allow this bill to come to a vote. The same people who will be supporting this resolution will be blocking this bill.

I look at my colleague from Ottawa South (Mr. Bennett) who is shaking his head. He does not understand it and neither do we. We think the government's approach to the process is cynical and lacks the seriousness that this type of legislation deserves. Some priorities those members have over there! They want to prohibit these establishments, yet they do not care sufficiently for the women of this province. Shame on them!

In closing, I want to say that if the member for Oriole is embarrassed this afternoon by the process that takes place, he should look around him at his colleagues. That is what is going on here.

Mr. Warner: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate on this resolution, this convoluted gobbledegook we have before us. If the member for Oriole was serious about this issue, which has a detrimental impact on our communities, why did he not first put it in the order of a bill and not a resolution? Why did he not specify some controls over these establishments in residential neighbourhoods?

If the member were really serious about the issue embodied in this gobbledegook, he would have specified that these places of nude entertainment not be allowed in residential communities. It is as simple as that, but he could not do that. Instead, he offers a poor apology for his government's lack of action. The government has had all kinds of opportunity through the Solicitor General, through the Theatres Act and through the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario, to close down disreputable operations, but cabinet ministers sit idly by and do nothing. Instead, they put the member up to this sorry excuse. He should be ashamed of himself, doing their dirty work for them, which will get him nowhere.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the standing order, I would like to indicate to the members of the House the business for the rest of this week and next week.

Tonight we will have the statement by the Treasurer and a reply from a representative of each of the opposition parties. Tomorrow we will deal first with third readings of bills on today's Order Paper and then, with the approval of the House, complete all the stages of Bill 181, concerning the evictions on Toronto Islands. Time permitting, we will complete consideration of Bill 169 and then Bill 168.

On Monday, November 17, the House will consider the estimates of the Ministry of Northern Affairs. On Tuesday, November 18 in the afternoon, we will have committee of the whole House on Bill 182, the special education bill. In the evening we will complete or continue Bill 182, if it is not completed in the afternoon. If there is any time and if they have not been completed on Friday, we will move to Bills 169 and 168.

On Wednesday four committees may meet in the morning: the select committee on plant shutdowns and employee adjustment, and the standing committees on general government, resources development and administration of justice. Three committees may meet in the afternoon: the select committee on plant shutdowns and employee adjustment and the standing committee on social development and general government.

On Thursday, November 20, we will have private members' ballot items 35 and 36 standing in the names of Mr. Stong and Mr. Dukszta. Next Thursday evening we will conclude the debate on the report of the select committee on constitutional reform. On Friday, November 21, the House will continue with the estimates of the Ministry of Northern Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: So honourable members will be aware, just before the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) begins speaking at eight o'clock, to avoid any confusion, the Treasurer wants to share copies of his statement with all members. Promptly at eight o'clock we will take a few moments to allow the pages to distribute those to the members. After that is completed, we will hear whatever it is the Treasurer has to say. That will be the procedure we will take at eight o'clock.

The House recessed at 5:56 p.m.

ATTENDANCE AT CONFERENCE

370. Mr. Bounsall: Will the Attorney General explain why an Ontario representative was not sent to participate, as invited, to the Ontario regional conference of the National Association of Women and the Law, held in Windsor, October 24 and 25, 1980, to discuss the association's concerns with the proposed constitutional package, especially inasmuch as the Deputy Attorney General of Saskatchewan, the federal special adviser on the status of women and family relations from the federal Department of Justice, and the counsel to the continuing committee of ministers on the constitution from the Attorney General's ministry of Manitoba, all attended and participated in this, the first women's conference on Women and the Constitution? (Tabled October 27, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Although representatives of the ministry have spoken to similar groups on the subject of family law and the hospitals for the years 1978, 1979, and the first nine months of 1980? (Tabled October 9, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: The following deaths of patients in psychiatric hospitals were investigated by coroners under section 9(2)(g) and (j) of the Coroners Act:

constitution, no invitation was received by the Ministry of the Attorney General to send a delegate to the Ontario regional conference of the National Association of Women and the Law.

HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION EXPENDITURES

372. Mr. Wildman: Will the Minister of Transportation and Communications table the following information; (1) the total cost to the provincial Treasury for the construction of the St. Joseph Island Bridge on Highway 548; (2) the total expenditure on highway construction and reconstruction projects, excluding the construction of the above-mentioned bridge, in the district of Algoma in each of the fiscal years 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977? (Tabled October 27, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Snow: (1) The total cost for the construction of the St. Joseph Island Bridge on Highway 548 was $2,353,611. (2) The total expenditure on highway construction and reconstruction projects in the district of Algoma, excluding the cost of the St. Joseph Island Bridge, is tabled below:

| Year | Expenditure  |
| 1967 | $ 5,236,741 |
| 1968 | 4,583,535    |
| 1969 | 5,381,247    |
| 1970 | 5,385,827    |
| 1971 | 3,534,264    |
| 1972 | 3,794,407    |
| 1973 | 3,855,404    |
| 1974 | 5,455,922    |
| 1975 | 14,582,107   |
| 1976 | 9,323,217    |
| 1977 | 7,906,950    |

373. Mr. Wildman: Will the Minister of Northern Affairs table the total expenditure figures for highway construction projects in the district of Algoma in the years 1978 and 1979? (Tabled October 27, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Bernier: The actual expenditures for highway construction in the district of Algoma for fiscal years 1978-79 and 1979-80 were $6,128,018 and $4,974,119 respectively.

OISE AFFILIATION

382. Mr. Isaacs: Are Ministry of Education or Ministry of Colleges and Universities officials involved in discussions between the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, the University of Toronto and York University concerning a possible change in the status of the affiliation agreement between OISE and U of T? Will the minister give an assurance that there will be no change in the status of the present OISE affiliation until there has at least been an opportunity for full and open public debate? (Tabled October 28, 1980.)

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Officials of neither the Ministry of Education nor the Ministry of Colleges and Universities are involved in discussions between the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education and the University of Toronto.

These two institutions signed a "Memorandum for Negotiations" for a new "Agreement of Affiliation," and it states that "these negotiations will conclude on or before March 15, 1981." If the institutions cannot agree by then on a new affiliation agreement "they will immediately inform the Minister of Colleges and Universities . . . of their inability to agree . . ."

There has been no request for participation by the ministries and because both institutions are autonomous, it would be inappropriate for me to become involved without an invitation from the institutions. I am confident that a new agreement can be reached.

Public debate on the future of the affiliation will take place both in the governing council of the University of Toronto and in the board of OISE.

FBA STUDENTS

383. Mr. R. F. Johnston: How many FBA recipients were enrolled in post-secondary educational institutions in Ontario in the school years 1978-79 and 1979-80, and how many have enrolled this fall? (Tabled October 28, 1980.)

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The Ministry of Colleges and Universities gathers statistics on enrolment only. No information on "income background" is requested from the students unless they submit applications for OSAP.

FRANCOPHONE ENUMERATION

385. Mr. Martel: Will the Minister of Education indicate the cost to the ministry of carrying out enumeration of the franco-phone community this fall for school boards? (Tabled October 29, 1980.)

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The following costs have been incurred to November 4, 1980, by the Ministry of Education in carrying out the identification of French-speaking electors for school boards:

Printing, including design, typesetting and newspaper notices, $24,444; distribution, postage and handling, $9,974; payment to enumerators, $24,960; processing returns, including statistical and clerical costs, $16,272; total, $75,650.

MUNICIPAL ENERGY FROM WASTE PROJECTS

386. Mr. Isaacs: For each of the energy from municipal waste projects listed in figure 6 (page 10) of Energy From Waste (Ministry of Energy, March 1980), will the ministry provide a progress report? Will the ministry include, where applicable, names of all eligible equipment suppliers and/or equipment suppliers with whom contracts have already been signed, either by the ministry or by other parties involved in the project? (Tabled October 30, 1980.)

See sessional paper 282.

INTERNATIONAL YEAR OF DISABLED PERSONS

387. Mr. Roy: Would the Premier give an accounting of funds and any other resources that will be allocated by the government of Ontario during the International Year of Disabled Persons? Which government ministries will be participating in disbursing these funds? How will these funds be put to use? What consultation, if any, has taken place with the handicapped community in developing priorities for spending during the International Year of Disabled Persons? (Tabled October 30, 1980.)

Hon. Mrs. Birch: The year 1981 is the International Year of Disabled Persons. The allocation process for the 1981-82 fiscal year, which includes IYDP projects, has not been completed.

An office of the provincial co-ordinator for the International Year of Disabled Persons has been established within the Secretariat for Social Development. The co-ordinator chairs an interministerial committee with representatives from 18 ministries, the Workmen's Compensation Board and the Civil Service Commission.

Consultations are ongoing between ministries and groups and individuals representing disabled people. The Ontario Advisory Council on the Physically Handicapped, which was set up five years ago to advise government, has representation from all regions of the province. The council has held six public forums to involve the broader community.

The IYDP co-ordinator consults with the Ontario Federation for the Physically Handicapped, a co-ordinating body of approximately 30 agencies and consumer groups. In addition, the Provincial Secretary for Social Development has met with prominent members of the disabled community at a series of dinners.

Ministries are now developing programs for the year. Announcements will be forthcoming by the Provincial Secretary for Social Development and the ministers concerned.

GOVERNMENT COMPUTER SERVICES

394. Mr. Van Horne: Will the Minister of Government Services indicate whether or not government computer services are leased to riding associations of government members for constituency mailings or fund-raising mailings? If they are used, what fee is charged for the service provided? (Tabled November 4, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: The Ministry of Government Services does not lease government computer services to riding associations of government members for constituency mailings or fund-raising mailings.

INTERIM ANSWERS

On question 376 by Mr. Breaugh, Hon. Mr. Timbrell provided the following answer: Due to the volume of Order Paper questions directed to the Ministry of Health, a response will be tabled on or about December 1, 1980.

On questions 377 to 379 by Mr. Breaugh, Hon. Mr. Timbrell provided the following interim answer: Due to the large amount of information requested in the above questions, it will not be possible to provide answers by November 7, 1980. A complete response will be tabled on or about December 1, 1980.

On question 384 by Mr. R. F. Johnston, Hon. Miss Stephenson provided the following interim answer: We require additional time to prepare our response to the above question. The answer will be ready for tabling on or about Thursday, November 20, 1980.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1980

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

SUPPLEMENTARY MEASURES

Mr. Speaker: We will allow a brief period of time for the pages to distribute the statement to be made by the Treasurer.

Pursuant to an order and the motion passed earlier, we will now revert to statements.

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, in my budget message in April, I said 1980 could well turn out to be a difficult year for the Ontario economy. I pointed out that our economic prospects are heavily influenced by federal policy and the performance of the United States economy. Slowing demand in the US and Ottawa's high interest rate policy threatened to undermine our economic stability.

The fiscal strategy for 1980-81 I adopted at that time called for a modest increase in the province's deficit and, consequently, a pause in our long-term deficit reduction plan. In the light of the economic situation, I did not wish the budget to be a drag on the economy and therefore I did not impose any increases in taxes.

But neither did I want to break with our policy of reducing the size of government to lessen inflationary pressures in the economy and free up resources for productive private sector investment. By maintaining a competitive and stable profit and taxation environment, we ensure these resources are put to use. This fiscal policy has been the cornerstone of our economic strategy for a number of years.

In my budget I introduced a number of selective measures to stimulate job creation and investment and I have since supplemented these actions. For example, in May the government provided a substantial interest relief program for farmers. My budget also provided new grants for pensioners that increase their purchasing power this year by almost $300 million.

I have continued to monitor closely developments in the economy. Prior to the federal budget, the short-term economic outlook had already deteriorated. That budget has, in fact, further worsened the outlook for Ontario. Therefore, I will be announcing tonight specific measures to stimulate immediately the provincial economy and improve Ontario's longer-term economic prospects.

On October 28, 1980, the federal government turned back the economic clock in the industrialized provinces of Canada. Mr. MacEachen's "energy budget" was seriously lacking in economic leadership and it completely ignored the dualistic nature of Canada's regional economies.

Interjections.

Hon. F. S. Miller: If I ever go back to schoolteaching I do not know what I am going to do; I am so used to the classroom talking.

At the present time, Canada has neither an agreed-upon energy pricing and supply package nor an economic strategy to take advantage of our opportunities. This situation can only further undermine the confidence of investors and could cost us dearly in the longer run in lost economic productivity and potential.

Unlike some in this Legislature, I was surprised and disappointed by Mr. MacEachen's budget. It is profoundly unbalanced in its priorities. It does set out a four-year deficit reduction plan, but it is far from clear that the fat will be cut from the federal bureaucracy. Its economic forecast implies sluggish economic performance for Canada's industrial heartland, but no measures are introduced to improve the outlook. It reinforces inflationary pressures, yet relies on a tired and outdated monetary policy that simply cannot come to grips with inflation. Above all, it does absolutely nothing to create jobs in the months ahead. In fact, it threatens existing jobs in this province. That is simply not good enough.

Ontario has always advocated strong federal leadership in economic matters. We will not, however, tolerate serious economic misdirection at the expense of the people of Ontario.

The most vital element of national economic leadership is the provision of long-term policy guidance and certainty. Unfortunately, the federal budget leaves many uncertainties. Even if the planned energy prices survive, they remain subject to unspecified future increases. The delays in megaprojects and threatened cutbacks in domestic oil supplies further add to uncertainty and aggravate our economic problems. Indexation of the personal income tax remains under the microscope. As well, the federal government intends to seek major savings in its commitments under existing fiscal arrangements in health, postsecondary education and community services.

8:10 p.m.

At this point, recent events force me to diverge from the printed text. Only yesterday the federal government officially announced its unilateral termination of the federal-provincial community services contribution program even though both levels of government are firmly committed to converting the existing program into a long-term arrangement. As a result of this action alone, Ontario will lose at least $86 million annually towards high-priority and fully planned water and sewage projects and other vital community services.

This thoughtless action clearly illustrates that we have a national government that tolerates high unemployment, stifling interest rates and a bloated federal bureaucracy while seeking savings at the expense of a clean environment and other social priorities. Its actions undermine our confidence in other cost-sharing commitments relating to health, post-secondary education, social services and social assistance.

We require a national economic plan. As part of this, the major energy projects must proceed and Ottawa must take firm action to shore up the sagging economy, create jobs and restore confidence. Let me repeat what I have stated on several occasions. The federal government has the fiscal capacity and the policy instruments to best undertake such action. It also has that responsibility. As a result of the clear abdication by Ottawa of its national economic leadership responsibility, we are faced with a justified call for economic leadership from elsewhere.

The government of Ontario is responding to this call with a $1-billion five-year economic recovery program which I am going to detail in a few minutes. Before so doing, I would first like to review the economic situation and outlook.

The federal budget threatens Ontario's short-term economic prospects. According to Mr. MacEachen's projections, Canada will experience a decline of one per cent in total output this year and an increase of only one per cent in 1981 before achieving substantially higher rates of growth in the 1982 to 1985 recovery period. While the federal outlook for 1981 is more pessimistic than many private-sector predictions, there is no doubt our economy will continue to operate well below potential. The federal budget certainly has increased the possibility of greater unemployment in Ontario in the months ahead.

There are certain aspects of the Ontario economy with which we can be very pleased—strong sectors of the economy where employment levels are being sustained or are even increasing and upon which strength we can build. Among them are the nonresidential construction, services, manufacturing of machinery, paper and allied products, food and beverages, all of which show little excess capacity. Investment is increasing at a substantial pace across a wide range of sectors. Statistics Canada's Mid-Year Private and Public Investment Survey indicates new manufacturing investment may be up by 44 per cent in Ontario this year.

However, some sectors, particularly consumer durables and those with high export content, are suffering because of the recession in the US and high interest rates. There have been significant layoffs in residential construction and in the motor vehicle assembly and parts industries. The major household appliance portion of the electrical products sector is performing much below capacity. Other important manufacturing industries showing high excess capacity are wood products, furniture and fixtures, and non-metallic minerals.

Notwithstanding weakness in some industries, Ontario's recent job creation performance has been impressive. In 1979, 161,000 new jobs were created following the generation of 133,000 in 1978.

Mr. M. Davidson: How many were laid off?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Those are the nets, my friend.

Although slowing in recent months, new job creation still amounted to a significant 85,000 over the 12-month period ending September 30. While our average year-over-year new job creation exceeds over 100,000 new jobs commitment, we are neither satisfied nor complacent. The bottom line is that the labour force growth has outstripped job creation. The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate has increased from 6.2 per cent in September 1979 to 6.7 per cent in September this year. In fact, over the first nine months of 1980, the unemployment rate has averaged 7.0 per cent, and that is unacceptably high in terms of economic hardship and lost potential.

I believe effective action can and should be taken to bolster demand in the weaker sectors of the economy. Our options in Ontario are limited because reductions in income taxes are not a viable mechanism for achieving immediate relief in specific sectors. However, in the past, reductions in retail sales tax have proved to be most effective. I am therefore proposing tonight to cut the retail sales tax to provide direct stimulus in a number of areas vitally important to the wellbeing of our economy.

The Ontario automotive industry is responsible directly and indirectly for one job in every six jobs in this province. As the honourable members are aware, this North American industry must resolve major structural difficulties and come to grips with vigorous foreign competition before we can be certain of improved prospects. This government has urged the federal government to seek a better deal for Canada under the auto pact. We have also provided incentives for industry to locate here, expand investment and engage in research and development. A large-scale review of the industry's prospects and problems is now under way to determine what more Ontario can do to secure the industry's longer-term future. In the meantime, however, we intend to take action to stimulate the industry.

In current circumstances, measures to stimulate demand for passenger automobiles would not provide a significant enough boost to domestic employment to justify the expenditure.

Mr. Breithaupt: It didn't last time either.

Hon. F. S. Miller: It was a different problem last time.

Many of the passenger cars purchased by Ontarians are produced in the US. Conversely, our production of passenger vehicles is predominantly exported to the US. As a result, only the recovery of demand in the US will generate substantial production and employment gains for Ontario producers of passenger cars.

This is not, however, the case with light trucks and vans. Sixty per cent of Canadian unit sales of these vehicles are domestically produced, the balance being produced in the US or offshore. All light trucks and vans produced in Canada are manufactured in Ontario. Consequently, stimulation of truck purchasers will result in a much smaller import leakage and, therefore, will have a stronger impact directly on vehicle production and indirectly on the many associated industries.

In Ontario, truck production over the first 10 months of this year was 24 per cent below last year's levels, and sales were down almost 25 per cent from January to September compared with the same period last year. Consequently, to provide support to this sector, I am implementing a rebate of retail sales tax paid of up to $700 on new light trucks and vans not exceeding 4,100 kilograms, approximately 9,000 pounds, in gross vehicle weight. This incentive will be of particular benefit to small businesses and many persons living in more remote or rural parts of Ontario. It will commence at midnight tonight and remain in effect until June 30, 1981.

Most truck purchases are made to replace similar older vehicles, particularly those in commercial use. Motor vehicles manufacturers have made great strides in improving the fuel efficiency of trucks and the new models will consume less fuel per mile than the older models they replace. As a result, this program will also assist energy conservation. I estimate the cost of this program at $38 million.

Unemployment rates in the construction industry have averaged 14 per cent over the first nine months of the year. At the present time demand is strong in industrial and commercial construction. In fact, there are some labour shortages in the finishing trades in the Toronto area where a $500-million to $600-million building boom is under way. Strikes in the industrial and commercial sectors have artificially boosted unemployment, but overall employment in these sectors is strong and is expected to remain firm through 1981.

The bulk of unemployed construction workers normally work in residential housing, small nonresidential buildings and renovations. For these workers the near-term outlook is not bright. I have decided to implement a measure designed to lower the cost of new residential construction and renovations to provide a boost to the building materials and construction industries.

I am proposing that the seven per cent retail sales tax be removed on many major building materials including lumber, roofing materials, kitchen cabinets, sinks, toilets and bathtubs. This exemption will be effective from midnight tonight to June 30, 1981, at an estimated cost of $94 million. I have chosen specific items to direct the benefits of this measure principally to residential construction. By focusing on specific items, the cost of the program will be contained and the exemption will be manageable for retailers.

This incentive will benefit individual consumers, builders and contractors. It will lower construction costs and encourage home and apartment owners to undertake renovations and remodelling. These activities are taking on increasing significance and, by stimulating them, it is hoped that persons previously employed in new home construction will find alternative employment for their skills. Also, this incentive should be of particular benefit in the redevelopment of inner core areas. The period of tax relief will coincide with a traditionally slow period in the Canadian construction industry, encouraging activity that might otherwise not have taken place.

The major household appliance industry is an important part of Canadian manufacturing. Because of the "big ticket" nature of household appliances, this industry has been hard hit by the recent period of high interest rates and economic slowdown. As well, the low level of housing starts has depressed demand for these products. In fact, appliance production was down 9.2 per cent in the first half of 1980 from last year's level. Sales of refrigerators and electric ranges in the first half of 1980 were down eight per cent from the same period last year.

To stimulate purchases of certain major household appliances, I propose to remove the seven per cent retail sales tax from new refrigerators, freezers, ranges, washers and dryers, effective midnight tonight. This retail sales tax exemption will apply to purchases made by June 30, 1981, and will cost $25 million in forgone revenues. The low leakage of demand to foreign products in this largely Ontario-based industry should result in a positive impact on inventories, production and employment. Most purchasers of new homes and many persons undertaking renovations buy new appliances, and I anticipate this measure will reinforce the incentive provided by the exemption for building materials.

The residential furniture industry, like the major household appliance industry, has also felt the impact of lower housing starts and higher interest rates. Household furniture store sales declined by 6.1 per cent during the first half of this year over the same period last year. Output levels in this sector are at only two thirds of their capacity.

This industry plays an important role in our economy. It is largely Canadian-sourced and directly employs a significant number of Ontarians. Therefore, effective midnight tonight, I propose to remove the seven per cent retail sales tax from new residential furniture purchases made until June 30, 1981. This action will provide $65 million in tax savings to consumers and will encourage increased Ontario production.

Members will recall the unsatisfactory situation in the hospitality industry in Ontario and in Canada only a few years ago. Low prices in many foreign destinations and a strong dollar resulted in huge deficits in Canada's balance of trade in travel. However, in the past two years, a lower exchange rate and considerable private investment in facilities have combined with a broad range of Ontario tax incentives to make Ontario an attractive and inexpensive travel alternative. Overseas visitors and North Americans alike are discovering the beauty of Ontario and the warmth of its people. The new $65-million downtown convention centre and the $108-million investment in phase one of the Wonderland complex at Maple will soon be major attractions for visitors.

Members will be familiar with many of our actions to assist this industry. The retail sales tax was removed from accommodation and American plan charges, kitchen equipment and hotel furnishings. The sales tax has also been removed from disposable items used in hotel rooms and from prepared meals priced at less than $6. Further assistance is available through corporate tax incentives and the tourism redevelopment incentive program.

This year's increases in tourism are gratifying and the industry's member companies have every reason to be optimistic. To ensure its continued growth, and to spur the development of improved facilities through new construction and refurbishing of existing infrastructure, I intend to continue needed support for this industry. I am therefore announcing my intention to extend the temporary exemptions for transient accommodations, furnishings and restaurant kitchen machinery and equipment, scheduled to expire next March 31, until December 31, 1981. The cost of this measure will be $38 million in 1981-82.

These retail sales tax cuts that I have announced amount in total to $260 million. Most of the benefits will be realized over the next eight months and will stimulate the economy during a difficult period. Specific details are contained in the appendix attached to my statement. My colleague the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Maeck), with your permission, will introduce a bill later this evening to give effect to these stimulative measures.

The actions I have announced to stimulate demand will assist the economy in the current business cycle. However, with the structural problems in our economy, other more profound measures are needed. I am accordingly proposing a five-part program to improve Ontario's economic prospects in the 1980s.

First, with the failure of the federal budget to address strategic economic and industrial issues—I like that line; I will read it over again: First, with the failure of the federal budget to address strategic economic and industrial issues, the province has commenced a complete review of our economic development programs, which total $2 billion in 1980-81.

Second, Ontario will provide $750 million for new initiatives in employment and regional development over the next five years.
8:30 p.m.

Third, a full review of tax incentives is under way to ensure they are cost effective and efficient and I am preparing to redirect such incentives if necessary.

Fourth, explicit initiatives will be brought forward to implement a tougher buy-Canadian public sector procurement policy.

Finally, Ontario will introduce specific measures beginning this quarter to advance high technology, world scale industrial development, research and investment in the province.

As I stated earlier, Ontario's basic economic strategy has been to promote an attractive investment, profit and tax environment within which the private sector can flourish. The creation of the employment development fund and its board in 1979 was designed to complement this overall policy with the provision of selective direct assistance to private industry. The board provided a valuable cabinet committee structure to ensure co-ordination of the government's program of direct assistance. It was Ontario's response to similar initiatives introduced by other North American jurisdictions.

The EDF will have secured private sector investment of over $3.5 billion by committing $300 million of direct assistance to Ontario industry, a leveraging of more than $11 of private investment for every taxpayer dollar invested. This will ensure the undertaking of new projects with a job creation potential of over 19,000. At the same time, the EDF assistance to the pulp and paper industry has helped to further the long-term job security of 20,000 mill workers and loggers in Ontario.

Mr. Sargent: Where are you going to get $3.5 billion?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Go to Dryden, go to Iroquois Falls and ask them how; they know it, Eddie. They know it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Just go to Owen Sound and ask the hotel operators what they think about the tax. Ask the hotel operators in Owen Sound.

Hon. F. S. Miller: The fund has assisted the development of employee skills training programs, urban transportation projects, mining exploration, small business and other industries.

The fund was intended as a short-term measure. Therefore, in keeping with the government's original commitment, we have reviewed this program. I am announcing tonight that the employment development fund will be sunsetted at the end of the current fiscal year.

Mr. Martel: It was so good you got rid of it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Just be patient.

Hon. F. S. Miller: Wait for the next shoe. Some carryover funding will be required in 1981-82 to finance outstanding commitments made by the EDF. Provision will also be made to continue certain ongoing programs which have been financed under the EDF umbrella. I am thinking of the Small Business Development Corporation legislation, the tourism redevelopment incentive program legislation, the mineral exploration program and so on. These particular programs will be transferred to the ministries that currently handle their administration.

The EDF program was successful in developing and co-ordinating Ontario's program of direct financial assistance to industry. It showed clearly the advantages of a cabinet committee to better focus and co-ordinate the government's total regional economic and employment activities. We have decided, therefore, to establish a new body called the Board of Industrial Leadership and Development—BILD.

Mr. Martel: BILD, that is a great slogan. That is really catchy. It grabs you.

Mr. S. Smith: Like bile.

Interjections.

Hon. F. S. Miller: It is the new spelling. Bile is what you fellows were getting listening to us talk about BILD.

Chaired by myself, the board will incorporate the present employment development ministers and certain other ministers as circumstances dictate. The board will consolidate and co-ordinate the government's total economic development budget.

I should mention that this substantial budget does not include the additional cost of incentives to saving and investment provided through the tax system. It will manage expenditures of up to $750 million in new initiatives for economic and regional development over five years and this will be in addition to the $165-million five-year program already announced by the Minister of Energy.

The board will review matters relating to federal-provincial consultation and co-operation in economic and employment development initiatives and ensure a comprehensive and cohesive industrial leadership program through which the government of Ontario can invest in the future of the people we serve.

I would like to emphasize that $360 million of the $1-billion economic recovery package is allocated to the period ending March 31, 1982. This amount comprises $260 million for the retail sales tax, $75 million for new structural initiatives to be determined, and $25 million on special initiatives in rural Ontario which I will now describe.

This government is committing $5 million in 1981-82 and $21 million in total over the next five years for programs for the rural counties of the central part of Ontario. Those are counties that our Liberal friends in the Department of Regional Economic Expansion would not include such as Peterborough, Haliburton—and Muskoka, I think, was one of them.

Mr. Breithaupt: Even Muskoka?

Hon. Mr. Davis: And some of you will write your weekly columns and say what a great thing it is. You will pretend you were members of the government.

Hon. F. S. Miller: It also applies to Grey and Haliburton and a few other places, at the strong urging of people such as the honourable members.

Members will recall a similar initiative was undertaken for the rural parts of eastern Ontario under the DREE agreement. The major focus will be in forestry with one half of the total funding being directed to increasing production of wood fibre from public and private lands. This action will help offset continued depletion of quality hardwood stands critical to the viability of local forest-related industries and will generate significant employment.

The other components of the package are: an intensive geological survey aimed at increasing mining investments; greater access for small business in rural Ontario to assistance from the Ontario Development Corporation, and increased funding for programs that assist tourist operators with the cost of upgrading their facilities.

Members will recall that on April 10, 1980, the Premier addressed the Legislature on the subject of rural electrical rates.

Specifically he requested the Minister of Energy (Mr. Welch) to obtain from Ontario Hydro concrete proposals to reduce the differential between electricity rates paid by rural residents and those paid by urban residents. He instructed that the proposals be made available by this fall so a new and more equitable—

Mr. Sargent: But you kept on the $7-billion deficit, didn't you?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Does the member not want these in his county of Grey?

He instructed that the proposals be made available this fall when a new and equitable rate structure might be introduced. At present, average rural rates are considerably higher than average municipal rates. This is primarily because of higher distribution costs experienced in less densely populated areas serviced directly by Ontario Hydro. Moreover, the trend has been for the differential to widen as the more densely populated portions of the rural areas have come increasingly into the service area of the municipal utilities, leaving even fewer people to share the costs of the rural system. This is clearly an inequitable situation.

As the electricity rate structure is quite complex, it will require some time to alter this structure. The government has decided, therefore, to instruct Hydro to eliminate the undue differential between rural and urban electrical rates by 1982.

Intejections.

Hon. F. S. Miller: Just listen for a second. However, in order to provide immediate relief to rural electricity users, the province will provide $20 million to Ontario Hydro during the 1981-82 fiscal year. These funds will enable Hydro to provide direct discounts to rural customers who at present pay excessive rates.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are going to assist the people in the rural areas, Brother Breithaupt, and that bothers you, I know.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. I am sure the people in Armstrong want to hear this.

Hon. F. S. Miller: I think the people in Armstrong will like what they hear, Mr. Speaker. On your behalf I will pass a word to the people in Armstrong who, I am sure, are watching.

Ontario's tax incentives are an integral part of the tax structure. Tax expenditures, as they are popularly called, are not directly equivalent to spending programs: a dollar given up by a tax incentive is not necessarily the same as a dollar given in a grant. Tax incentives are fundamentally important in establishing a competitive tax structure and achieving our economic goals. It is important that these incentives be closely examined in the context of the economy's structural difficulties to ensure they are cost effective and efficient. My ministry reviews our incentive programs on an ongoing basis. These reviews are carefully done and are instructive. However, I believe a more comprehensive analysis should now be undertaken and I have instructed staff to commence this review immediately.

I would like, in so far as possible, to concentrate our tax incentives more selectively in areas with the greatest promise and which offer the biggest potential economic gains. For example, I believe we should do more to encourage exports, import replacements, research and development and high technology industries such as aerospace, communications and microelectronics.

Mr. Cassidy: They are just slogans.

Hon. F. S. Miller: I am following the advice those gentlemen gave me yesterday. I rushed it into print last night, and held the press until then so he could say he affected this. It is exactly what he told me to do yesterday, is it not? It is right down the line, every bit of it. It is all on the record.

Mr. Cassidy: The Treasurer is five years behind the times. Where were you last year and the year before? I used to tell Darcy McKeough the same thing.

Hon. F. S. Miller: It's going to be very hard to tell me it isn't right.

Research and development is an activity supported by tax incentives, yet R and D spending in Canada is woefully insufficient to ensure this country the economic resilience associated with high levels of R and D activity. We are currently examining options for stimulating R and D, particularly to encourage both new Canadian investment and greater spending by multinational corporations. It may prove necessary to relate incentives to success in achieving certain threshold levels of spending. I want to make it clear I expect to see some improvement in this area.

I want to talk about a tougher buy-Canadian public sector procurement policy. Structural policies to strengthen the Ontario economy can be reinforced by an aggressive buy-Canadian public sector procurement policy. Buy-American regulations such as the Surface Transportation Assistance Act, Japanese domestic purchasing policies, the North Sea oil sourcing legislation, foreign government-sponsored marginal pricing, and growing provincial sourcing preferences that now threaten the Canadian common market—all of these are competitive realities that confront Ontario's "open door" procurement stance, with our strict adherence to competitive principles and an across-the-board 10 per cent preference for Canadian goods and services.

On the positive side, opportunities for Canadian participation in the upcoming resource projects have moved the federal government and Canadian industry to seek aggressively a better sourcing deal for Canadian business. Ontario has tested these waters, too. In the pulp and paper modernization program we have secured commitments from the companies to purchase equipment from Canadian sources where feasible.

The existing 10 per cent Canadian preference applies at the present time only to Ontario government ministries and not to public agencies such as school boards and hospitals, crown corporations and municipalities that receive provincial transfer payments. Ontario ministries alone currently spend $600 million annually, or 75 cents out of each purchasing dollar, on goods and services made in Canada; but more can be done.

Several initiatives will be undertaken to stimulate Canadian industries through a tougher public procurement policy. A procurement policy office will be set up to establish and implement effective policy guidelines, set industry target ratios for domestic content, monitor progress and develop further initiatives. The Canadian preference will be extended to all provincially funded agencies through these guidelines. The Canadian preference will also be extended to those industries receiving provincial development assistance through commitments in their corporate sourcing policies.

These steps will ensure a bigger role for Ontario and Canadian companies in supplying the needs of the public sector and in participating in private sector expansion.

To have maximum impact, the activities of the new Board of Industrial Leadership and Development and those at the procurement office, and the direction of tax initiatives and incentives will require close co-ordination and co-operation in federal-provincial actions. I will be addressing this issue when I and my colleague the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman) meet with the federal ministers of Finance and Industry, Trade and Commerce in Ottawa in the near future.

Since the mid-1970s, the economic situation has required the government to give a high priority to economic and employment development. Spending has been prudently managed and net cash requirements reduced in a balanced budget framework as a contribution to lessening inflationary pressures. Major tax increases have been avoided for the same reason. Significant incentives have been provided to promote investment and job creation. However, at no time has this strategy been allowed to hurt effective delivery of major social programs.

Over the period 1972-73 to 1980-81, combined spending on health and community and social services has increased faster than total budgetary spending excluding public debt interest. Ontario's support for the elderly and disadvantaged has increased considerably faster than total spending. New initiatives will be brought forward in recognition of the International Year of Disabled Persons.

Economies have been secured by cutting out waste. For the past four years, we have realized average annual gross savings of $400 million, mainly to finance in-year spending increases in the social field without adding to total spending. This year is no exception.

Funding of the Ministry of Health has been increased since the budget. Health expenditures now represent approximately 28 per cent of total government expenditures compared to 25.8 per cent prior to the imposition of restraint.

In April 1980 the government provided a 10 per cent rate increase for family benefits and general welfare assistance recipients at an annual cost of $54 million. Further increases with an annual cost of $49 million will be announced by my colleague the Minister of Community and Social Services (Mr. Norton). For this fiscal year, a further $1 million will be provided for day care. A more extensive program announcement for next year will also be forthcoming from the minister.

Unlike the Liberal government in Ottawa, we intend to respect social priorities and values while keeping our own fiscal and industrial priorities in clear focus. Let others tax those who can least afford it, let others acquiesce to inequity and economic injustice; this Conservative government, the government of the Honourable William G. Davis, will not.

I would like to talk about relief from home heating costs. The Liberal government in Ottawa has shown it is insensitive to the impact of rising energy prices on people with fixed and low incomes. Sudden increases in energy costs, staged or not, impact unfairly on these people. They need assistance to enable them, over time, to adjust their household budgets—budgets already strained by inflation—to the new realities.

The government of Ontario believes a temporary program of relief from sharp increases in home heating costs, one that is income-tested and of three years duration, should be implemented as soon as possible. Benefits should start being delivered no later than the first quarter of 1982, in respect of the heating season beginning next fall, when the new prices will start to hit the lowest income groups hard. I will be making specific proposals to the Minister of Finance for a shared cost program. I might add that we will pursue unilateral action should the federal government be unprepared to see the error and injustice of its ways.

As a result of my proposals tonight, net cash requirements for this fiscal year are now forecast at $1,059 million, or $110 million over budget. This deterioration is wholly accounted for by a revision to the revenue forecast—$33 million reported in the September 30 Ontario Finances and $77 million resulting from tax relief measures announced this evening. The balance of the net costs of the temporary incentives, $147 million, will fall in 1981-82.

I have made no change to the 1980-81 expenditure forecast at the present time. The Chairman of Management Board of Cabinet (Mr. McCague) assures me that, as in the past, maximum effort will be made to secure savings to offset the in-year increases we have allowed in priority areas.

The higher level of net cash requirements in 1980-81 and the flow over into 1981-82 are well within the capacity of the province to finance without resorting to public borrowing—unlike some other governments. Some would perhaps question our commitment to restoring the capacity to balance the budget. Well, we did achieve that capacity last year.

In view of the economic situation, we decided this year to allow a break in the pattern of regular reductions in the deficit. However, we have remained vigilant and prudent in our spending.

Mr. Peterson: You're flexible.

Hon. F. S. Miller: We have to be, my friend, because the economy is not a static thing. If we are not flexible—if we are as rigid as the member's federal friends—they cannot adjust to the realities of the day and we can.

Mr. Peterson: They don't listen to you.

Hon. Mr. Davis: You understand being static. You have been static all your life.

Hon. F. S. Miller: As a matter of fact, static is something I hear in my ears a lot trying to explain what happens.

Mr. Peterson: Sitting beside the Premier, you are just crazy.

Hon. F. S. Miller: With a resumption of reasonable economic growth, we will be able to lower our cash requirements once again.

As we have stated from the outset, the purpose of cutting the deficit is twofold: first, to reduce inflation, and second, to give the province control and flexibility to meet its priorities. We are now using this flexibility to invest heavily in Ontario's future. Surely that is the ultimate mission of compassionate and sensitive government during challenging times.

Pour résumer, M. le Président, on peut dire que notre programme de relance économique aura pour effet: d'aider des millions de contribuables, des milliers d'entreprises et plusieurs communautés négligées par le gouvernement du Canada; de faire preuve de ce leadership économique dont la carence au palier fédéral a des effets si lamentables; d'exercer à court terme un effet stimulant l'économie; de créer des emplois en Ontario; d'assurer une sage gestion économique de notre avenir.

D'engager de nouvelles ressources en vue d'une croissance et d'une prospérité continues; de réaffirmer notre appui aux priorités sociales, au développement régional et à la promotion des régions rurales de l'Ontario; d'investir intensivement dans les compétences de nos entrepreneurs et dans le potentiel industriel de notre province et de sa population; de fournir un cadre pour les investissements dans les industries faisant appel à une technologie avancée et pour les travaux de recherche et de mise au point d'importance si vitale pour l'avenir de l'Ontario.

Hon. F. S. Miller: Que cest que tu veux? Je l'ai fait dans votre circonscription l'autre jour, mon ami. J'ai trouvé qu'il n'y a personne qui va voter pour vous.

To summarize, Mr. Speaker, this economic recovery program will: assist millions of taxpayers, thousands of businesses and many communities ignored by the government of Canada; give economic leadership sadly lacking at the federal level; provide effective short-term stimulus to the economy; create employment in Ontario; ensure sound economic management for our future; commit new resources for continued growth and prosperity; reaffirm our support for social priorities, regional development and rural Ontario; invest heavily in the entrepreneurial skill and industrial potential of our province and her people; provide the framework for high technology investment, research and development so vital to Ontario's future.

Ontario is a part of a nation and a continent experiencing fundamental transition caused by international economic forces and energy policies beyond our control. Effective leadership from Ottawa could effect this transition in a fashion that profits all Canadians. That leadership is not forthcoming. We must assess our own priorities here in Ontario and defend our fundamental entrepreneurial values. We must advance Canadian ownership and Canadian technology. We must move now to invest in and secure our future—a future which, under the leadership of the Honourable William G. Davis, holds immense promise and opportunity for us all.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might have the permission of the House to introduce one bill relevant to the budget statement made by the Treasurer.

Mr. Speaker: Do we have consent?

Agreed.

INTRODUCTION OF BILL

RETAIL SALES TAX ACT

Hon. Mr. Maeck moved first reading of Bill 187, An Act to amend the Retail Sales Tax Act.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Peterson: Mr. Speaker, if that effort from the Treasurer deserves a standing ovation, those guys are going to be standing on top of their desks jumping through hoops when I am finished.

It was a real case of promise unfulfilled. I have never seen so much activity in this building today, scurrying around in great anticipation of the mini-budget to solve all the province's economic ills. I am going to get into it in substance in a minute, but I want to tell the House it is a hollow superficial document that may or may not apply in the next two, three and four years. There is very little of any substance to contribute to any economic logic now or in the immediate future.

I am constantly struck by the difference between the government's press releases and the substance of its actions. I am sure that difference was noticed tonight when the minister was reading it—the great $1-billion project to bring about economic recovery. I will prove it is less than we are spending now on economic development in this province. It is a fraud. It is a sham. He has fooled everybody.

I do not know, maybe it is a deliberate sabotage. Maybe a few of the people in the ministry went down to Treasury. Maybe this is the Treasurer's deliberate move to sabotage the Treasury because I notice some interesting play in this budget tonight about how the Treasurer wants to review all the economic programs that the Minister of Industry and Tourism is currently undertaking.

It is hollow and superficial and it is not going to work very well, I am going to put our alternatives to you, Mr. Speaker.

I always like to have a little text when I am speaking to heathens and tonight I have chosen a text from the Financial Post, which my friends opposite will read on occasion and my friends to the left probably do not understand at the best of times. On the timing of the mini-budget, our former departed friend Sidney Handleman said this: "Miller sees this as an opportunity to do what he was going to have done anyway for next spring, let's face it. The mini-budget could have a big impact on the by-election, especially if incentives for high technology industry concentrated in the Ottawa region are implemented."

Mr. Speaker, I can tell you the minister has disappointed poor old Sidney Handleman. He has disappointed us and I think he has disappointed every thoughtful observer. All this fuss today has amounted to nought. If he had read this as a quick statement in the House today it probably could have sneaked through, but he created such high expectations by his own hand that he deserves to suffer the slings and arrows for his failure to deliver on those expectations.

We understand as well as the minister does the politics of this event. I find it very amusing when he stands and regales us with the great leadership of William G. Davis. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, next week under Stuart Lyon Smith we are going to have another member in this House sitting on this side. The people of Carleton are going to see through this. Those guys are not even in the race, so do not despair. We are going to have another member next week and I look forward to that.

The reality is we are facing as dismal an economic circumstance in this province at this time as we have in recent history since the Depression. Unemployment is bad and real income is not keeping pace with inflation. I could go on and recite statistic after statistic. There are not many thoughtful observers in this province or in this country who could not see this coming; that is the tragedy.

We have made speeches and speeches from this side of the House. We have quoted every respectable economic authority in this country and this province and what we see today is no surprise. What we see has not caught us by surprise because we were arguing for the kind of substantive investment in wealth-creating instruments in this province that could have prevented the kinds of problems the government is attempting to respond to today.

The response is a superficial one. I cannot stand here and say I am against sales tax cuts because it is Christmas time and who is against Santa Claus? When we are dealing with a tax expenditure of $260 million, of which the minister is going to undertake a complete review, there are very creative ways to use that money. One of the things he could have done, the parsimonious chap, was to extend aid to the elderly, those people he disfranchised in his last budget. He could have spent $10 million doing that to help the poorest of our senior citizens. That is something serious he could have done.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Talk about misleading. Talk about fraud. The member is it.

Mr. Peterson: I have exercised the Minister of Education (Miss Stephenson) and I do not mean to do that.

Mr. Havrot: How did you get in the front bench?

Mr. Peterson: Whoever arranged that front bench did not have an aesthetically well-trained eye. I am just looking at the minister over there. They look for all the world like a tag team in an obscene mud wrestling match, sitting there together yelling, shouting and winking at each other.

I want to deal with this statement of the minister today as best as I can respond. I have chosen to go through it in the order that the Treasurer presented it tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate any effort you could make to keep the yelping down to a dull roar. I certainly expect some of it. When one inflicts pain, one expects some screaming and yelling, but it would probably be to their benefit to listen, at least to some extent.

I have heard the Treasurer on numerous occasions wail against the federal government for its lack of a national economic plan. That is hypocrisy in the extreme. There is no such thing as a provincial economic plan of any description and even some of the initiatives he alludes to in this document are so lacking in specificity or are going to take place so far in the future that he has contributed nothing here tonight to the sum total of knowledge in this province.

I understand the political intention of their trying to dissociate themselves from their federal friends in Ottawa, from the federal government. That is their prerogative and I don't deny them that, but they do it on such wrong grounds. This is no $1-billion, five-year economic recovery program. It just is not. The press releases are wrong. The whole description is wrong.

I am interested to read, even by the Treasurer's own prescription, on page four of his statement tonight he says, "Our economy will continue to operate well below potential." I assume that means even after his new economic initiatives here tonight because that is the way it reads. That is a pretty dismal kind of approach because I can tell him we decry very much the lack of ability to live up to our potential in this province—unemployed young people, the lack of skilled workers, the lack of apprenticeship programs. There are always allusions to it, always studies on it, always noise about it.

There is the Minister of Labour (Mr. Elgie) grunting and laughing over there. This failure is going to rest clearly on his shoulders and tonight, still again, there is no initiative. I can tell him the gravestone of that government is going to read, "We failed to do anything about skills training in this province." That is the biggest single failure. That is something over which they have complete constitutional jurisdiction. They can't blame that on the feds. That is their fault. They have the responsibility. They have the institutions. But they don't have the imagination and the guts to pursue it.

One federal study I read said there would be a shortage of 35,000 skilled workers in this province by the year 1985. We know it is coming. We also know the spinoff. We also know that every skilled worker creates employment for five or six other workers. We are talking, in total, of 150,000 or 200,000 workers—yet again rhetoric, yet again promises, yet again blame for the federal government, but no specific action. That is a glaring failure in this document.

The job creation figures here are again dismal, even after this economic stimulus, even after this $1 billion worth of expenditure whose method of deployment we have yet to see. Even there the job creation figures would be down something like 47 per cent this year, even with an expanding work force. That is a dismal admission of failure by this government.

I want to deal with their response, their action to solve the economic problem. They have pulled out the tried and true method of sales tax cuts. How many times have we tried them before? The quick fix, the short-term solution—neat, clean and easy to administer.

He can put a cutoff date on it and there is a cutoff date on this: June 30, 1981. I will guarantee something right now: The next provincial election will be some time before June 30, 1981, because that is when all this stuff runs out. It is so blatantly politically motivated, it is fraudulent.

I want to read something about sales tax cuts in general. The Conference Board in Canada found that the 1975 sales tax cut on cars in Ontario led to a decline in sales of cars in 1976. This conclusion is the same as the Jump and Wilson study we had. All we know, on the best evidence from the best authorities, is that sales tax cuts lead only to a change in the timing of the purchasing. Admittedly, sometimes there are reasons for changing the timing of the purchases, but again it is an attempt at a quick fix for political reasons that does nothing to solve the structural problems in the province. I find that deplorable.

In 1978 a study by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce found the sales tax cut on footwear, furniture and textiles in Quebec had a similar effect. All it did was change the timing. Being a politician, I understand as well as they do the necessity of good timing, particularly around election time, but we have done it so many times since 1975. We saw the biggest deficit ever in the history of this province in 1975, pre-election obviously, when we gave away all the money on first-time owners' grants and sales tax cuts for which we are still paying a price.

What we do when we get up into a tax expenditure of this type is just force future purchasers, future consumers, future taxpayers to pay for our consumption now. I am not saying there are not some justifications sometimes, but had we spent all that money over the past few years building the structural base, the sound foundation, the job training, the skills training on research and technology and that type of industrial infrastructure, we should not have to fool around with quick fixes and superficial cures today. Therein is the major failure of this government and of this document.

When we cut the sales tax on light trucks we are substituting about 40 per cent of those that will be imported from the United States and Japan and from other countries. To that extent about $15.3 million in forgone revenue will go to subsidize imported vehicles.

I was not able to determine the exact figure on building materials, because we were in the lockup, but again a lot of the $94 million going to cut the sales tax on building materials will go outside the province and outside the country. It is interesting that was all done on the pretext or rationalization of creating jobs. Admittedly a lot of people are involved in the renovation business and it will probably create some jobs, but if they want to take a fix for the economy of about $100 million, there are other ways to do that.

What about a wage subsidy program at this critical time? The government has the mechanism in place for a $1.25-an-hour wage subsidy. We have suggested before in the House programs such as a 20 per cent tax credit for new jobs created. When we want to direct the power and might of government to achieve a specific purpose, we have to be more creative than just cutting sales tax. We think we could have created more employment, which is what we want to do as the immediate short-term objective, by involving ourselves in a wage assistance program of some type. But again this is a quick fix with the appearance of great activity.

Mr. Williams: On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker: The television cameramen have found the dialogue so tedious they had to leave the room. I am wondering if we could have the television lights turned down to save the members' eyes.

Mr. Peterson: I would like to thank the member for Sleepy Hollow for his contribution. It is interesting that we are going to have a sales tax fix of $25 million on household appliances. Our studies on that say the market in Ontario is about $250 million a year. About half of that is produced outside our borders. Again, we are trying to stimulate employment. It is not necessarily the most effective way to achieve that aim.

Residential furniture is about the same. The market in Ontario is around $1 billion dollars, about half of which will be imported from outside our borders. A high percentage of the money we are talking about will assist production from external sources and isn't focused as well as it could be on creating employment in Ontario now.

It is interesting that the federal-sector task force report on the furniture industry a couple of years ago recommended a sales tax cut for that sector. Ontario's formal response to that report rejected the proposal as being of only temporary value with no long-term impact; that is a fact. It is interesting only in that they did not anticipate a by-election.

My colleague from Wentworth North (Mr. Cunningham) pointed out an interesting discrepancy tonight on removing the tax on household appliances. On page 28 an ineligible appliance is defined as an appliance designed for commercial use. Yet on page 30 the Treasurer includes for sales tax exemptions under the tourism sector kitchen equipment purchased for use in restaurants. I would just like to tell the Treasurer about that, as he may want to work this out and decide what is eligible and what isn't eligible before he brings in the legislation on this particular bill.

It is interesting also that his incentives for the tourism business, the $38 million, do not take place this year. It is an extension only of an existing program to the end of fiscal 1982. That, realistically, is the only initiative in this budget.

I want to point out some interesting figures on the way it has been calculated, and these are at the back of his little book. We have about four and a half months left in fiscal 1980-81 and there will be a net tax forgiveness or a tax expenditure of about $77 million in four and a half months. The major impact from these tax cuts comes next year when $147 million worth of tax expenditure will be achieved basically over a three-month period. The major stimulus is going to be in the 1981-82 fiscal year, not in this year, not over the tough winter we are facing right now, which is a very interesting way for the Treasurer to manipulate his figures.

Having left the sales tax cuts—and obviously our party will support them, but we will try to be as constructive as we can about alternative ways to use those moneys creatively to create the kinds of social and human objectives we want to create—I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that Ontario's program for industrial and economic development, BILD, the Board of Industrial and Leadership Development, as I gather it is called, or BUST, is not worth the paper it is written on tonight.

First, the Treasurer is going to have a complete review of our economic development program. That, of course, is our little friend at the end of the bench, the boy who would be Treasurer, as he is effectively known. The Treasurer is now going to relinquish it all to his colleague at the end of the bench, who is going to amuse himself. He says it totals $2 billion in 1980-81, which again is no new initiative.

There is going to be $750 million for new initiatives in employment and regional development over the next five years, not starting this year but next year. That is less than we are spending now, interestingly enough. There is to be a full review of tax incentives, which I will get to in a minute, which was my bill that was introduced in this House. I am glad they are finally getting around to it.

They are going to have a buy-Canadian sector, a complete policy lifted out of our industrial strategy, which I am happy on behalf of my colleagues to see. There are to be other specific measures, beginning this quarter, to advance high technology, world-scale industrial development, research and investment in this province. That is the end of the specificity. There are no more details. I am convinced that this Treasurer, that bureaucracy, has no bloody idea what it plans to do. They thought it would be a nice round figure, $750 million over a period of time. That is why they decided at this time of political crisis for them to introduce a program.

They are going to form an economic board, BILD, which is something like BED in Ottawa, something that they criticized very seriously. It is really no different from the employment development now. It is chaired by the Treasurer and it is going to have the Minister of Industry and Tourism on it. There is really no substantial change, not one initiative here.

He is going to spend up to $750 million over five years. Get that, Mr. Speaker: it is "up to," with no commitment of $750 million. What is interesting is he makes a specific promise. He said this year, being up to the end of 1982, he is going to spend $75 million for new structural initiatives to be determined, and $25 million in special initiatives for rural Ontario which he will now describe. That is his commitment. It is $100 million in new money to the end of 1982.

Over the last two years he has spent $300 million through the employment development fund on economic initiatives, which averages out to $150 million a year. His only commitment next year to the end of 1982 is to spend $100 million. That is why I said at the beginning, and I say to the House now, it is less—and I want the House to hear me—than he is doing now. That is the full commitment out of that Treasurer. That is why it is such a hollow proposal that he has brought to us tonight. It does not bear serious approval by any sophisticated observer of that document.

Of that $100 million, $20 million is not to encourage industrial development but to subsidize the rate differential between rural and urban hydro users. One could not really argue that is to create industrial development, it is to honour a political promise the Premier made when he was under pressure from a rural delegation a few months ago. They do not know what they are going to do about hydro rates so they are going to buy them off for the short term. That is the reality. In fact, it is a reduction from $150 million a year to a commitment of less than $100 million, more like $80 million a year. Still, we do not know what he is going to do with it.

We did know what he was going to do when he brought in the employment development fund. Some of us disagreed with various parts of it, and the way he did it, but at least we knew what he was going to do. We still do not know what he is going to do now. I defy you, Mr. Speaker, and I defy any other observer to tell me what he plans to do.

He is going to spend $5 million growing trees. I congratulate him. It is the old two-for-one proposal, I guess. He has promised that for years. I think it is a worthwhile expenditure of public funds and I congratulate him for it.

He is going to spend $20 million to sort out the differential on hydro rates. Again, as I said, that is to honour a political commitment of the Premier. One could not argue that is industrial development.

He goes on with a tax incentives policy. It is a most curious statement in this review by the Treasurer. He said: "My ministry reviews our incentive programs on an on-going basis. These reviews are carefully done and are instructive." Now get this: "However, I believe a more comprehensive analysis should now be undertaken, and I have instructed staff to commence this review immediately."

Either he is doing good work or he is not doing work. Obviously he is not doing good work. As I said earlier, my private member's bill passed in this House, yet his House leader has never called it forward for third reading. My bill said we should have published tax expenditure studies so we know exactly where every forgiven dollar is going and can analyse whether that is the best investment on behalf of the taxpayers of this province. I support that. I hope we see more than just words from him.

His buy-Canadian policy, as I told him before, it is a straight lift out of the quite brilliant industrial strategy published by my leader about a year and a half ago. I was proud to be associated with that. It is interesting that over the two or so years that it has been out it has stood up to the most rigorous kind of scrutiny. It has weathered well with age. It is as meaningful now as it was then. It is substantive. It is sound.

It is worth while and shows far more vision—from our limited research staff and the people who work with us—than what the minister's whole bloody bureaucracy could produce, or has produced at this point. That shows that if we can get our hooks on that bureaucracy to function the way we think it should function with new energy, new initiative and new political guts, we can turn it from the dispirited, disgruntled lot it is now working for the Treasurer, into a creative force for the betterment of the taxpayers of the province.

The most outrageous section I have here is one entitled, "Sensitivity to Social Priorities." My God, one would almost think the Treasurer had a heart by reading the titles to this. Then he goes on to say: "Let others tax those who can least afford it, let others acquiesce to inequity and economic injustice; this Conservative government, the government of the Honourable William G. Davis, will not." Noble words, noble words.

The Treasurer is the one who snookered the poor old people out of their rightful entitlement. The Treasurer is the one who did it all—all in the name of equity and fairness. The first thing we will do when we get into government is rectify that inequity he has created, again for his political gain. There is not a lot of money; it is only about $10 million. He could have afforded it with all these outrageous programs he has outlined.

The fiscal integrity of this province has been even further distorted. I do not believe that this Treasurer cares about a balanced budget. I think it is just rhetoric. He hauls it out to his right-wing friends at his right-wing meetings, if it serves his political purposes at any given time, because there has been a major perversion from that philosophy.

We are still paying almost $4.5 million a day in interest. We are up over $1 billion again in terms of budgetary deficit. Again, we are going to have to rape the pension fund and again defer our problems on to future generations of taxpayers. We are now over the $1-billion figure for the deficit; and this has been a major disappointment to us.

We would spend taxpayers' money on a number of things. We have three priorities in this party right now. The first one is to create wealth in this province by building the manufacturing base and to that end we have a number of specific proposals. Second, we would protect those people in society least able to protect themselves from the ravages of inflation and other economic policies. Third, we would cut out the unnecessary and stupid expenditures this government has made in a number of areas over the years. I refer to the hundreds of millions of dollars of land banked, to Minaki Lodge, to advertising of his ill-conceived programs—there are so many areas.

It is not as if those moneys are not there to be employed creatively, because we think they are, and we would do it without bringing on the major fiscal distortions that my friends to the left do not even understand or care about, because we do believe in fiscal responsibility. Within the budgetary context of Ontario we could do it. I can promise that.

But there has been failure to deal with skills training, with research and development, with a manufacturing base, with re-tooling, with developing indigenous industry in electronics, machine tools, food processing, communication and all those other areas that we have a natural structural advantage for. The failure to recognize we have a problem and to do anything about it is going to kill this government.

The formerly most respected treasury in this country had national clout and national power. When our Treasurers went to Ottawa, Ottawa listened. But the treasury has now been diminished under this Treasurer's authority—not only in Ottawa but here with the voters too. People understand that.

There is a widespread malaise in this province. There is deep economic insecurity. There is a deep disgruntlement with the government and its ability to manage the economic problems of this province. I have never felt more confident in my political career that people are looking for substantial and reasonable alternatives. This rules out my friends to the left and puts us clearly in the driver's seat today. It is not too far away that we are going to form the government; mark my words.

Our leader has brought creative leadership to this party and to the office of Her Majesty's loyal opposition. Members should just watch next spring after all these little programs of the government run out and we have an election. They should watch who is coming back to sit on that side of the House to bring some new vitality and energy to the economic growth of this province.

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Speaker, I will show a great deal of restraint and address my remarks to the Treasurer's mini-budget rather than to the remarks of the member for London Centre.

I would just say quickly, though, before I get too involved in the mini-budget, that it does take a lot of courage to stand up in this House as a Liberal following the federal Liberal budget of a couple of weeks ago and to criticize anybody's budget, let alone the Tories in Ontario. It does take a lot of courage.

As a matter of fact, I am surprised the member for London Centre did not just stand in his place and give us a eulogy of the Liberal budget so he will receive a formal welcome if he ever decides to move to Ottawa.

Mr. Roy: "Move aside, we are coming through," Floyd says.

Mr. Laughren: As a matter of fact, I will say it again: Move aside, we are coming through.

Mr. Bradley: Are you moving no confidence?

Mr. Laughren: Perhaps if the member will listen to my remarks he will understand exactly how this caucus feels about this budget. I will ask him to listen for a few moments.

This budget—sorry, "supplementary actions" I understand the Treasurer would prefer to have it called—these supplementary actions do not do anyone in Ontario any harm but they do not help those people who need it the most either. The same can be said for individuals as for the economy as a whole. It does not do the economy any harm to cut regressive taxes. As a matter of fact, it does it some good. It does not do any harm to individuals to cut taxes that should not be there in the first place. As a matter of fact, it does some good. But it does not solve the underlying problems in the Ontario economy. Naturally, we in this party understand there are some parts of these actions we must support and that indeed we would have implemented a long time ago.

This speech of the Treasurer's tonight was supposed to be a response to the federal budget of a couple of weeks ago. That is what the Treasurer told us. We agreed, and still do, that there is a need to respond to that federal Liberal budget, which was really more of an energy statement than a budget.

I understand, too, why the Treasurer wants to put as much distance as quickly as possible between his government and the Liberal government in Ottawa. We understand that. They have seemed to be too cosy for too long and it is time to put some distance between them. I am surprised they did not make the distance greater and do so at greater speed.

We agree with the Treasurer that the tax cuts are necessary at this time and that they not only will provide relief to taxpayers, because those were regressive, but will also provide a short-term stimulus to the Ontario economy.

The Treasurer one week ago yesterday at the opening of his Treasury estimates said his mini-budget was going to be a response to the cyclical problems of the Ontario economy. He used the term "cyclical problems". If the Treasurer really believes that Ontario's economic problems are cyclical, then I suppose one could say his statement tonight does something to address the cyclical problems, assuming of course that the cycle lasts between now and next spring.

We know we are not into those kinds of economic difficulties; the Treasurer will admit that. At one moment he is castigating the federal Liberal budget because it does not address itself to the structural problems of this country, and the next moment he is telling us he is going to bring supplementary actions in that will address themselves to the cyclical problems of the Ontario economy. Where is the consistency in that? I do not know of any two Ministers of Finance or Treasurer; who deserve each more than this Treasurer and his counterpart in Ottawa, MacEachen.

Hon. F. S. Miller: You have been nasty before, but this is going too far.

Mr. Laughren: The layoffs of thousands of workers this year are a result of the structural deformities in the Ontario economy. The Treasurer does not seem to understand that. A branch plant economy, one whose owners can repatriate at will—just ask the Minister of Industry and Tourism about what the owners of the branch plants in this province can do if they want to. In his profit centre booklet, he stated very clearly there are no restrictions on what they do with their capital. So what do the owners of the branch plants do? They shut down their plants and repatriate their capital, just as they are invited to do by the Minister of Industry and Tourism in that booklet.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Bob White asked for more branch plants.

Mr. Mackenzie: Why do you not stop being silly for once?

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Industry and Tourism is one of the causes of the structural deformities in this province by inviting ever more foreign control of the Ontario economy. That is what he is doing rather than understanding that one of the real problems with the Ontario economy is the fact that, for example, our exports are built, aside from autos, on fabricated materials and raw resources. That is not a good way to build an economy.

Our imports are manufactured goods. This country had a deficit of $17 billion last year, up $5 billion in one year, and the Minister of Industry and Tourism is doing nothing about that. All he seems to think is that if he gets out there and sells Ontario to the world our problems will go away. He is fooling none of us at all with his glossy document, his expensive packaging. That profit centre booklet was the Minister of Industry and Tourism in bound form; nothing more, nothing less. That is exactly the way he is—glossy, fast-talking and slick.

Mr. Mackenzie: All plastic.

Mr. Laughren: That was what that was, and that's the Minister of Industry and Tourism. He is the pink flamingo of the Tory cabinet.

Mr. Foulds: Seventeen-dollar pencil cases. That is what the minister puts out.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Bob White thinks it's great. He wants more foreign investment.

Mr. Laughren: No, no. Not true. The minister is thinking of the member for Sarnia (Mr. Blundy), who thinks there should be more branch plants in Ontario.

Not only are there structural problems, which have been there for some time, but also the government has sat idly by and not even monitored very carefully what is going on. It is not as though this is a new problem. We are held up to ransom when somebody like Ford says: "We will either build our plant in Windsor or some other place. We have grants from some other place; so you had better give it to us." We are held up for ransom in the pulp and paper industry where, and let me be very specific about this, the Treasurer told all of us those grants were absolutely necessary for us to remain competitive. That is how far the Treasurer and the Minister of Industry and Tourism and others in the government allowed the state of the pulp and paper industry to deteriorate before they moved in and did anything about it at all. They are the ones who sat back and watched the industrial machine called Ontario wind down and did nothing about it until it became a crisis situation. Then he says, "Look, we either have to do this or the thing goes down the pipe and the communities are threatened." That is some kind of economic stewardship for Ontario. He failed even to monitor the situation carefully.

This government will forever be slapping Band-Aids on the problems rather than practising preventive economic care. That is what it has failed to do. It is almost as though it was transposing the economic problems from the health care system where preventive care has virtually no role at all.

We in this party are eternal optimists. We are very optimistic about our confidence to turn the economy of Ontario around. We are not the purveyors of doom and gloom; they are the Tories themselves, not us. We happen to believe we can turn adversity into opportunity, but we know that to do that we must plan carefully and act courageously. We would be prepared to do that. We agree there is an element of risk whenever one does that but we think it simply must be done.

I would like to remind the Treasurer of a few things that we think should be done.

One reason we are so upset about the Treasurer's BILD program announced in his budget tonight—someone referred to it as a bilge program—is it is nothing but a delaying tactic to allow the Treasurer to sit idly by yet again and hope that the US economy improves, that we will get some slopover benefit and that things will pick up in this province. That is all he is trying to do with his BILD program. I will tell the Treasurer why I am so sure of that.

He says he is going to have the BILD program look at some specific sectors that need to be encouraged. We could give sector after sector that needs to be rebuilt. There needs to be no further identification of the sectors that are in trouble in Ontario: sectors that are high technology, sectors where we have a large degree of imports, sectors that are high technology and provide skilled jobs.

We know those. Those have already been identified and we have raised them with the Treasurer time and time again.

For example, the auto parts sector: We had a $4-billion deficit in auto parts last year, which we all look after in Ontario. Those are skilled jobs, high-technology jobs. Obviously they are imports. It would relieve a lot of the economic problems in the Windsor area if the Treasurer would Canadianize and rebuild that particular sector. It is a crucial sector, and the Treasurer should be doing something about it. He does nothing except complain to Ottawa that we are not getting our fair share.

How long will he say the problem is Ottawa's and not his own? He knows the problem will go on forever if he leaves it to those people in Ottawa to solve his problems in Ontario. They are preoccupied with repatriating the constitution rather than the economy. They are not going to worry about Ontario. When is the Treasurer going to wake up and realize that?

A second sector that needs to be rebuilt—just so I can get some of the work load off his BILD program—is the mining machinery sector. I know the Treasurer said in the estimates debate the other day that he understands mining machinery. He said he knew we were number one in the world in importing mining machinery, number two in the world in the consumption of mining machinery and number three in the world in the production of minerals. Imagine being number three in all the world in the production of minerals and number one in importing mining machinery.

What an outrageous situation, and yet the Treasurer does not a single thing about it. The Minister of Industry and Tourism put on a trade show in Sudbury where $40 million or $50 million worth of machinery was on display. That was his answer, just as the BILD program is the Treasurer's answer. It is a sham. It is like the old pea under the shell game, but there is no pea under the shell. We are just moving around empty shells. That is fraudulent.

If one looks at mining machinery, there is a regional development component there for northern Ontario if only the Treasurer would use it. There is a component of highly skilled jobs. It is a high-technology area. Ontario alone had imports last year of about $175 million. There is enormous job creation potential there in the mining machinery area. Think of what it would do for communities such as Sault Ste. Marie, North Bay and Sudbury. To make it worse, a month or so ago, Jarvis Clark, one of the big companies that produces mining machinery in North Bay, decided it was going to expand. They cannot handle all the orders, they have tremendous export orders as well; and what do they do? They expand in Burlington, not in northern Ontario. One reason they did is that there is no regional economic development plan into which they could plug to help develop northern Ontario. There is nothing there.

Regional development has to be a priority. There was a day when regional development was a priority of this government. There was a day when no budget would have been brought down without a special section for northern Ontario. There is not a word this time. They even talk about exploration and development in central Ontario, for heaven's sake.

Another area that has an enormous amount of potential is the whole question of these massive energy projects, most of them out west, that are going to be taking place in the next 10 years. The opportunity for us to provide the equipment and machinery is awesome.

A report by the Canadian Institute for Economic Policy stated there is going to be a total of $67 billion worth of machinery and equipment required between 1980 and 1990, in just 10 years. There is absolutely no reason why we should not have a part of that.

There are two major categories, and I would like to quote very briefly from that report; they are talking about two new categories: "Projects that are new to Canadian and global experience. These will include oil sands and heavy oil, where Canada is already a world leader, frontier and offshore field development and the more promising of the renewable energy technologies. These sectors provide opportunities to develop an indigenous technology base with export potential. Maximizing Canadian participation from the start in these new markets will be vastly preferable to letting these opportunities slip into other hands."

That is what is going to happen. Those will be opportunities we will lose as long as the Treasurer keeps laying down delaying tactics and smokescreens like BILD which will not address themselves immediately to the problems. They are not going to wait. Those projects are there now for the having but the Treasurer says he is going to develop a five-year plan. I never thought I would see the day when this Treasurer would talk about five-year plans.

Ontario has too much at stake. We cannot stand back and wait for Ottawa to develop a national investment strategy. That is what is needed so that we have a leverage with our resources to machinery. We have never had that. We never had it in Ontario, we never had it in this country at all; and that is what is necessary. Norway does it; Britain does it, very successfully; but not this country. I agree it should be a national policy, but we are not going to get it from those people in Ottawa. We are the industrial base; so we have to take the initiative here or we will lose it.

It is as simple as that. That is why I say we can turn our problems into tremendous opportunities and potential for developing this province. We are very optimistic about the future as long as we take action, but it is not going to happen on its own.

I know the Treasurer is very fond of the invisible hand out there in the marketplace, but that invisible hand is not doing what the Treasurer or any of us think it should do. We cannot wait for that invisible hand any more. It is a myth; it is a withered hand.

What I am trying to say to the Treasurer is that he cannot forever bemoan inaction on the part of the federal government. That is not an adequate action; it is downright dumb.

I get particularly offended at the Treasurer when he falls back on his free enterprise rhetoric. That is most offensive. One minute he is handing out grants to the private sector, and the next minute he is spewing forth his free enterprise rhetoric. It would be funny if it were not so irrelevant and if it were not so downright illogical. Most particularly, it would be funny if the Treasurer did not take it so seriously. It is not going to happen with the private sector; we have had all sorts of evidence of that.

I do not want to burden the Treasurer with too much statistics, but I want to give him a couple of examples of those energy investment potentials.

Between 1970 and 1980, a 10-year period, there has already been a lot of investment in energy-related fields, and there is going to be more. Statistics Canada is giving us figures every month of the year which tell us the problem, which lays it all out before us, and a person doesn't have to be an economist to read the tables.

I would like to tell the Treasurer about just one area, imports, and what happened to imports of energy-related equipment between 1970 and 1980; for hydraulic turbines and parts, imports went from $2 million to $30 million; gas turbines, from $10 million to $26 million; well-drilling machinery, from $39 million to $300 million; petroleum and gas field production equipment, from $11 million to $96 million; valves, from $44 million to $101 million; fittings, from $33 million to $120 million; zirconium alloys, from $3.6 million to $13 million; diesel and semidiesel engines and parts, from $25 million to $133 million; and construction equipment, from $167 million to $721 million.

That is what happened with import increases on machinery and equipment that we could be supplying for our energy projects. Ontario could be supplying a lot of that but, oh no, the Treasurer stands back and thinks it is all going to be solved, and he lays down yet another smokescreen.

I am just saying we have the economic muscle and the political muscle in this province to do something about it. All we have lacked till now, and still lack, is the political will to get in there and mix it up and do something about it, and that is what the Treasurer has failed to do.

I heard the Treasurer read in his statement tonight, for example, that manufacturing investment intentions are up 44 per cent in 1980. Perhaps he will stop using that figure and, rather than talking about intentions, start talking about what is really happening. Manufacturing output is down seven per cent in 1980, and it is forecast to be down another one point something per cent in 1981. I will not tell the Treasurer which road is paved with good intentions, but the real world tells us that manufacturing output is down this year and is going to be down again next year; the Treasurer should stop using intention figures which really are not applicable.

I know that the Treasurer and the Minister of Industry and Tourism are very fond of talking about creating jobs in manufacturing, but there have been at least 10 times as many layoffs in Ontario this year as there have been jobs created. That is a sad commentary on what is going on in the province.

I have outlined just a few sectors that we could take a look at, and I did not even talk about housing. We have a real problem in rental accommodation and we have high unemployment in the residential construction trades. There is a beautiful tie-in there. But as long as the government stands back and does not do anything about that either, we are not going to solve that problem. I know the Treasurer is cutting the tax on building materials. I have no quarrel with that; I think that is a good suggestion. But it is not going to address itself directly to the rental accommodation problem in places like Metro Toronto, where we are flirting with a one per cent vacancy rate, which is virtually none. I can see the pressures coming from that side to remove rent review, using the spurious argument that rent review is causing the problem of supply for rental accommodation. What total nonsense that is. Why do they think we had rent review in the first place? There was no rent review when the shortage first occurred; so why are they blaming it now? It is total nonsense.

There are a number of serious gaps in this mini-budget tonight. One of them that fascinated me ties in with the new Board of Industrial Leadership and Development; I refer to the Treasurer's statement that he is going to cancel the employment development fund program. I can recall how over the last two years the Treasurer bragged and boasted about how EDF was the cornerstone of their economic development program in Ontario. Every time we would say, "You are not doing enough," they would say, "We have the EDF program." That is what they told us. Only a week ago, in my leadoff, I was asking the Treasurer in his estimates about EDF grants. He could not say enough good things about them, how they had saved the pulp and paper industry and how they had stimulated the auto sector. Tonight he pulls the rug on it.

Is there no consistency in the Treasurer at all? One has to wonder what happened. Was it the Lakehead report? Did the Lakehead report shake him up? Is that why he said there are too many questions here? Was it his free-enterprise philosophy that said we should not be giving out these grants? We do not know, do we? Was it the feeling, as expressed in that report, that those who need it were not getting it?

The cancellation of the sales tax on building materials is something of which we approve. This party would be much happier, however, if the Treasurer had made a commitment to nonprofit housing and co-op housing where there is a tremendous opportunity to take some of the pressures off rental accommodation in places like Metro Toronto. That is where the thrust should be. Once again, it would create jobs and relieve some of the high unemployment in the residential building trades, professions and jobs. As I say, it would also take the pressure off rental accommodation.

The Treasurer used some rather strange language when he talked about protecting people on low incomes. He said: "Unlike the Liberal government in Ottawa, we intend to respect social priorities and values while keeping our own fiscal industrial priorities in clear focus. Let others tax those who can least afford it, let others acquiesce to inequity and economic injustice."

That is pretty hard to swallow, coming from a government that has taxed people in this province more heavily than any other province in Canada. Personal taxes in Ontario are higher than in any other province. If we add together provincial income tax and Ontario health insurance plan payments and subtract from that tax rebates and credits, we end up with Ontario being the highest-taxed province in all of Canada for people in low- and middle-income brackets—not the high-income people, but low- and middle-income brackets. That is assuming a constant property tax in every province. There is no doubt but that we are over-taxed. When the Treasurer says that and, at the same time, refuses to do anything for people who need help the most, it really is hypocritical. The same day the Minister of Labour stands in his place and says he is not going to raise the minimum wage.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I didn't say that.

Mr. Laughren: Yes, he did. We have gone 22 months now with no increase in the minimum wage, and the Minister of Labour would make no commitment today.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I didn't say that.

Mr. Laughren: Did he make a commitment today to raise the minimum wage? No. He made no commitment.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Don't distort it.

Mr. Laughren: Make it now. Here is the opportunity.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Carry on. I didn't say that today, and the member knows it.

Mr. Laughren: Yes, I will carry on. It is an absolute disgrace for Ontario to have the lowest minimum wage in all Canada. There is simply no excuse for that. This budget provides no direct relief for low-income people. At the same time as we have the lowest minimum wage, we have the heaviest tax burden on low- and middle-income people. Put all those things together and it makes the Treasurer's words ring pretty hollow. That is simply not playing according to the rules.

I searched through the budget document for a statement on day care. There has been an enormous amount of pressure applied to the government throughout Metro Toronto and other communities to provide adequate day care in Ontario. If my memory serves me correctly, the number of places required in Metro Toronto just to ease the most critical burden was 1,400, and then a compromise was worked out by the Metro chairman for 500 places for Metro Toronto alone. What the Treasurer has said tonight is that he is going to provide 500 extra places for all of Ontario.

It is interesting that we get from this government no policies at all to provide any kind of economic justice for women, no commitment to equal pay for work of equal value, no commitment to day care, no real affirmative action program on the part of the government, none.

Is it not interesting that when this party introduced three bills tied in with economic rights, the government blocked them. One dealt with full employment and the government blocked it; they would not even let it come to a vote. When we dealt with pension rights and job security, the government blocked it and would not even let it come to a vote. Today, when we tried to bring in a bill that would provide a modicum of economic justice for women, the government blocked it and would not let that come for a vote either. What kind of commitment is that to economic justice? When I see the Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mrs. Birch) standing there to block a bill like that, it makes me wonder about the priorities over there.

The Treasurer has done this province an injustice with his failure to provide an adequate number of day care places in the province, and that is a very serious injustice. I believe women now constitute about 40 per cent of the work force in the province, and the government does not seem to have woken up to that. They do not seem to understand the kind of needs and pressures that puts on people; so they dawdle on and throw $1 million to day care when the demand is so much greater.

It is not as though there were not opportunities to raise more money. Some of our programs we talk about cost money. Most of the ones I have talked about tonight would create wealth so that we could get on with the business of distributing it in a more equitable manner. We believe very strongly that a government has to create wealth before it can distribute it. What this government fails to understand is that, unless they get busy and start creating the wealth by rebuilding those sectors, we are not going to be able to redistribute it fairly.

It is no wonder the government has all these pressures on social services and educational services, because the Treasurer will not do anything about creating the wealth that is necessary. The Conservative backbenchers sitting there in their grey splendour would have a much easier life and would get along much better with their constituents if they could convince the Treasurer of what is needed. We need meaningful job creation projects out there that would create wealth and ease the burden on all those social, health and educational services that have been cut back. The Treasurer can talk all he likes about not cutting back, but there have been very serious cutbacks in social, health and educational services.

One of the areas I hope the Treasurer will think about—there is no mention of it in his budget—is the whole question of interest rates. Right now, interest rates on mortgages are, I believe, about two per cent higher than they were a year ago at this time and there are predictions that they are going to go higher. Surely the government should have a mechanism to monitor defaults and foreclosures.

We presented a package to the government last spring which could relieve the problem. It would have cost around $20 million I believe, and it was income-related. It was a sensible program, it was not particularly expensive, and it would solve the most pressing problems. The Treasurer should take another look at our proposals, because he may have to implement those in the not-too-distant future.

Another area that bothers me about this budget is that there is nothing at all in it for northern Ontario. I said earlier there was a day when no Treasurer would have brought in a budget that did not make some concessions to northern Ontario, that did not recognize the particular problems that are faced in northern Ontario. This budget does not talk about freight rates which cause problems in northern Ontario; it does not talk about further processing of minerals in northern Ontario; it does not talk about the opportunities for mining machinery investment in northern Ontario; it does not talk about the whole problem of iron development in northern Ontario.

There is nothing at all about the north. There was a day when no Tory government would have dared to do that. But lately the Treasurer seems to think the north is just fine and he does not need to pay any attention to it. That is simply not right. Not only that, but also there is still no food terminal for Timmins.

Mr. Foulds: Alan Pope should resign.

Mr. Laughren: The member for Cochrane South (Hon. Mr. Pope) is the minister without a food terminal. I want to see him on television and radio in Timmins explaining why there is still no food terminal in Timmins. He promised one in 1977. He said, "You elect me and there will be a food terminal." Here we are, heading for 1981, and there is still no food terminal in Timmins. We know what happened. He complained loudly from the back benches, and the Premier said, "Come here, Alan."

Mr. Hennessy: He gave him a cabinet post.

Mr. Laughren: He gave him a cabinet post. Exactly. The member for Fort William (Mr. Hennessy) understands how it works. The Premier said: "Come here, Alan. You are in the cabinet now; so shut up." That is exactly what happened.

Mr. Foulds: And that is what Alan Pope has done.

Mr. Laughren: That is right: I hope the people in Timmins start writing letters to him saying: "Where is that food terminal that was going to distribute goods more efficiently in northeastern Ontario? Timmins needs a food terminal." I have not heard a word from the member for Cochrane South.

I have talked about the food terminal and about northern Ontario, mentioning specific cities, but I am serious when I say there was a day when this government would not dare to bring in a budget that did not deal with regional development. When they were talking about southwestern Ontario, there was enormous potential in southwestern Ontario with the auto parts industry and food processing. There is opportunity all over this province, but the Treasurer does not see it as a regional development problem. I have been here nine years, but it is only in the last couple of years—as a matter of fact, since the member for Muskoka (Mr. F. S. Miller) became Treasurer—that we have stopped hearing about regional development and about northern Ontario.

Mr. Makarchuk: Or eastern Ontario.

Mr. Laughren: Or eastern Ontario; thank you.

Mr. Sterling: Have you ever heard of the Eastern Ontario Development Corporation?

Mr. Laughren: I just talked about eastern Ontario, but I never hear the Treasurer. If the Treasurer were serious about economic development in eastern Ontario, he would have made a specific commitment here tonight to develop the Ottawa area as the Silicone Valley of the north so we can have a high-technology electronic area in this province second to none.

Mr. Sterling: He has already made a commitment.

Mr. Laughren: No. He made no commitment to regional economic development at all. All the Treasurer did was lay down a delaying tactic. That is all he did, and the member for Carleton-Granville (Mr. Sterling) knows it.

Mr. Foulds: And that member swallowed it.

Mr. Laughren: There is another area I am surprised the Treasurer made no mention of at all. It has to do with farming machinery and implements. It is incredible in this province we did not have a reduction or elimination in the sales tax on farm machinery and equipment.

Mr. Makarchuk: Right on.

Mr. Laughren: That inspired suggestion came from the member for Brantford. He is not being parochial. He understands the needs of all of Ontario.

In another area, it would not have cost very much money but it would have been a very nice gesture if the Treasurer had raised the exemption for sales tax on footwear. It stands at $30 now. It should be raised to at least $50, when one considers the price particularly of outer footwear for the winter. The sales tax should be removed on that.

In conclusion, we welcome the tax cuts for their short-term value. The sales taxes were regressive to start with and this will provide a short-term stimulus. I guess the BILD program is this government's admission that planning may be necessary. I am amazed that the Treasurer is the one who brought in this statement on the BILD program. I have no illusions whatsoever but that it is a delaying tactic. The only delaying tactic he knew he could get away with was something that addressed itself to long-term structural problems in Ontario; so he called it a BILD program.

He knows he will have to take no specific action at all until after next spring, when the election will be behind us. We know that and we understand the cynicism of that act. It is also an indication that the Treasurer's faith in the private sector is somewhat diminished. There was a day when he would not have touched that. As I said earlier, we regard this budget as one that does not do anyone any harm, but it sure does not help the people and the parts of the economy that need it the most.

TELEVISION CAMERAS

Mr. Martel: On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker: This is the second occasion on which the television cameras have come into this Legislature. In fact, they allow the government side with all its pomp to present to the people of Ontario the government's position on the economy. The second that occurs and is delivered, they then shut the cameras down when the critics for the Liberal Party and my party are responding, whether it be in the appropriate budget time or a week later, and those responses are not delivered to the people of Ontario.

It is time this House said to the media, "You damned well do it for all three or you do not do it for any." I am getting increasingly frustrated at the television people, whom we allow in here. It is a privilege for them to be in this Legislature, as a result of the Morrow report in 1975 and 1976, which you helped to bring about as Speaker in this Legislature. But the bias shown by the media and the disrespect they show to the two opposition parties are unacceptable any longer.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you, in conjunction with the House leaders, to ensure that it does not occur again. If they are not prepared to televise my critic and the Liberal critic, in addition to the Treasurer, then they are out on this occasion as far as I am concerned. I will do everything I know to obstruct them, because this will not go on again as long as I am here. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to make sure there is some fairness to all political parties in the presentation of the budget and the responses; otherwise it is for nought. I ask that you take this matter into consideration immediately.

Mr. Speaker: I want to remind the honourable member that the guidelines that were laid down to allow the electronic media in here were done on the basis of the Speaker's ad hoc committee that was set up many years ago before I assumed the duties I now hold. I want to remind the member that I am a servant of the House. If the House wishes to take the kind of action that you think appropriate, it is up to the House to direct the Speaker as to what action that should be

Mr. Martel: I would ask the government House leader to respond. I think it is incumbent upon the government House leader to indicate to this Legislature that he is in agreement that, if we are going to have the Treasurer televised—and I have no objection to it—it is incumbent on the media to give the same opportunity to the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party. Otherwise, there is a bias that is unacceptable as far as I am concerned. I hope the government House leader will agree that we have to expand the coverage of what goes on in the Legislature so people of this province understand what is going on.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I think the wisest thing to do would be for you to convene at your convenience a meeting of this ad hoc committee so we could talk about this. I do not disagree with the criticisms of the member, but I do not think we should take any hasty action to remove television cameras tonight. Quite frankly, I was surprised when I saw them in here tonight. I do not recall being made aware that the cameras were going to be in here tonight for this particular statement.

There is a normal procedure for cameras to be provided during question period and any other time. The special cameras are here. I do not know under what agreements they are here. Perhaps we should have a meeting and talk about that again. I think we did talk about television in a very good way and set some good ground rules for the Confederation debate. Perhaps we should get that committee together again and take a look at this and see what can be done.

Mr. Breaugh: Mr. Speaker, next Thursday morning the members' services committee and the procedural affairs committee are attempting to hold a joint meeting. Both committees have matters relating to the television coverage of proceedings in this House on their agendas.

It is my understanding that there had been agreement reached previously on how the cameras would enter the House and how they would function and precedents were set about the kind of coverage that would go on during the coverage of the Confederation debate. I did notice this evening the precedent that was set in terms of the kind of shots that would be taken, the precedent that was so carefully laid down during the Confederation debate, was not followed this evening.

It would be our pleasure for those two committees to serve in an advisory capacity to the House and perhaps to make a report to the House if that would be the wish.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, just before you respond, perhaps I could ask you, who did give permission for the special lights and the camera positions to be put in?

The point made by the government House leader is valid, that by agreement television can come in any time they want, turn the lights on any time they want and take pictures of whatever they want, but this stuff of course works a special hardship on the members who are here.

If they are going to go to all this elaborate trouble, they should televise all participants. I remember, when this first started, that was what was done. The idea was that the budget of the province would be televised and the full hour-long responses of both opposition parties would be televised. No matter how excellent the response—the member for York South (Mr. MacDonald) remembers just how excellent they were—I can say that there is a certain feature of diminishing returns associated with it, because the only letters I got about my response were giving me hell for pre-empting The Edge of Night. There are intrinsic problems here which even the committees meeting together might not be able to solve.

Mr. Speaker: To answer directly the question raised by the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon), I was not asked directly whether permission would be given for the extra lighting or the two camera placements, one behind the government benches and one behind the opposition benches. I was notified by the Sergeant at Arms earlier today that they were being installed and that they had talked to the director of administration, who normally monitors the camera positions in keeping with the guidelines that were laid down by the ad hoc committee on radio and television.

I appreciate the sentiments expressed by all members who have spoken. I was aware that there was to be a joint meeting of the standing committees on procedural affairs and members' services. We have a file on that in the Speaker's office. It will be made available to the chairmen of those two committees so it may assist them in their deliberations.

Perhaps, rather than convening the ad hoc committee, we could await the findings or any recommendations that might come forward from the joint committee that the member for Oshawa referred to earlier. I make the commitment to co-operate in any way possible.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, we had a member who wished a late show.

Mr. Speaker: By agreement of both parties, that was deferred until next Thursday.

The House adjourned at 10:26 p.m.

ACID RAIN

Prayers.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

PLANT CLOSURES AND TERMINATION ENTITLEMENTS

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, this morning I shall be introducing for first reading An Act to amend the Employment Standards Act.

In my statement on plant closures and layoffs on October 14, I announced the government's intention to amend this legislation to provide for employer participation in adjustment committees and for the protection of employees' fringe benefits. While joint labour-management adjustment committees in most cases have proven successful in assisting displaced employees find employment, some employers have refused to participate in them. A further problem is the fact that employees affected by plant closures can lose fringe benefits if an employer elects to close operations without giving the required notice and pays wages in lieu of notice.

The bill contains three substantive elements in response to these concerns. First, it empowers the minister to require employers to participate in and contribute to the funding of committees to facilitate the employment of employees who are being terminated. Second, it clarifies that employers' contributions to benefit plans must be maintained during the notice period.

Third, it requires that employers who terminate employees without notice must continue to make contributions to benefit plans during the period for which notice should have been given. It also provides that employees are deemed to have worked during the period for which notice should have been given to ensure they will be entitled to the benefits.

I believe these amendments provide more equitable treatment and effective adjustment provisions for workers affected by plant closures.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Today, Mr. Speaker, the honourable members will find in their post boxes copies of the Ministry of the Environment's new publication, The Case Against Acid Rain.

This is a report on acid rain which clearly summarizes and describes (1) the nature and magnitude of acidic precipitation in North America, (2) the extent to which we know Ontario is affected, (3) the programs we now have in place to meet the challenge and (4) most important, the commitment to action which will be required both here and in the United States to curb acidic rain pollution in our countries.

This new, graphically illustrated booklet is intended to meet the high demand for information about acid rain. My ministry is distributing this report widely without charge to anglers', hunters' and cottagers' associations, to conservation groups, to the business and manufacturing sectors, to scientists, schools and universities and to news media throughout Canada and in many areas of the United States as well.

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC LEGISLATION

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I have three statements I would like to make this morning.

First, I would like to take some time to outline several amendments to the Highway Traffic Act and the regulations I will be introducing in a bill later this morning. While a number are basically housekeeping items, three are rather important, and I would like to describe them in more detail. Specifically, they cover medical standards, registration reciprocity and the regulation of safety equipment on vehicles carrying physically disabled persons.

Let me begin with the amendments that will allow a degree of flexibility in applying medical standards to classified drivers' licences. As the members are aware, my ministry has been approached by a number of individuals and organizations concerning the existing medical standards for drivers under the classified driver licensing system.

In a number of instances, the ministry has been criticized because it is felt our standards cause undue hardship to certain individuals, or deny drivers the right to appeal when a licence is downgraded for medical reasons. In most cases, the arguments focus on the inflexibility of current regulations which prevent any consideration for professional drivers who have ceased to meet the medical standards, forcing them to look for other means of employment, despite good driving records.

Currently, classified driver licensing systems are used in eight of the 10 provinces. Like theirs, our system was devised with the intent to maintain a high level of driver skill and safety.

Medical standards were based on the guidelines published by the Canadian Medical Association, and were part and parcel of the package. With minor variations in procedure, all provinces adhere closely to these medical standards.

When classified driver licences were introduced in 1977, a grandfather provision was included to permit many individuals who did not meet the medical standards to continue driving provided their condition did not deteriorate further. That was regulation 906/76, section 12(2).

The medical standards were not meant to cause undue hardship, and I believe they have been applied by my officials in a fair and equitable manner. But, as I noted a few moments ago, my ministry has been approached by various individuals, as well as interested organizations, primarily on the basis of economic hardship.

Honourable members will appreciate that the standards intended to ensure the safety of our highways cannot directly take into account loss of livelihood to individual drivers. However, I can appreciate the potential need for some greater flexibility in individual cases where it can be demonstrated the medical condition is stable and does not constitute a hazard to the public.

I would agree in principle that there are experienced drivers in the higher licence classification—drivers whose licences have been downgraded because they no longer meet all the medical standards who should have an opportunity to make representations to the registrar of motor vehicles and, if necessary, to have a hearing before the Licence Suspension Appeal Board.

Nevertheless, I continue to have reservations about any system that would allow the waiving of existing medical standards for drivers directly responsible for the carriage of school children or the general public in large or small buses.

In some cases, however, the needs of these drivers may be met by continuing to allow them to drive trucks where these vehicles were included in their previous licences. As a result, I intend to introduce amendments that will provide for a degree of flexibility to the medical standards for classified drivers without affecting existing standards.

What we have in mind includes amendments that will allow the ministry to waive any medical standard excepting vision, in licence classes A and D for drivers who (a) hold or have held a valid A, B, C or D driver's licence, (b) first submit a certificate from a medical specialist to the effect that their medical condition is stable and compatible with professional driving duties and (c) satisfy the registrar as to their fitness with regard to driving experience, medical risk, personal insight and responsibility in adapting to their medical condition.

The Highway Traffic Act will also be amended to allow the Licence Suspension Appeal Board to hear appeals arising out of medical downgrading decisions by the registrar. May I note that, if the House sees fit to pass this amendment during this fall session, I anticipate the necessary regulatory and administrative changes can be made in time to introduce the new procedures very early in 1981.

Mr. Foulds: Bring in the bill today.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I will. It is here.

Mr. Foulds: Terrific.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Just wait a minute; I have said that. Listen.

Mr. Speaker, I believe these changes will give my ministry the flexibility to respond to improvements in medical diagnosis, treatment and technology consistent with the basic Canada-wide medical standards.

I would like to mention the amendments necessary for us to administer the Canadian Agreement of Vehicle Registration, known as CAVR, an agreement signed at the October 2 meeting of the Council of Ministers responsible for Transportation and Highway Safety.

As you, sir, and the members are aware, Ontario has been committed to this reciprocity agreement since receiving the recommendations of the select committee of the Ontario Legislature on the highway transportation of goods in 1977. Ontario and the other provinces have been working on this agreement for the past three years. Six provinces, including Ontario, have now committed themselves to trying to meet the target implementation date of April 1, 1981. Therefore, I am now introducing the necessary amendments to make it possible to administer this agreement here in Ontario.

By way of partial explanation, the CAVR will make it possible for a trucker or bus operator to travel from coast to coast on one licence plate and, in most cases, be assessed fees on the mileages travelled in member provinces. Mileage prorated vehicles will require a registration plate from only one jurisdiction and can travel through other jurisdictions on the basis of a "CAVR cab card." The amendments will cover the implementation and regulation of the CAVR cab cards and provide the necessary means of ensuring us of the accuracy of the mileage records. They are essential if we are to meet our commitment to this agreement.

I am sure this reciprocity agreement will be highly effective if we are to promote the smooth and efficient movement of people and goods across provincial boundaries.

Finally, I would like to mention another amendment, which will enable us to prescribe the use of safety devices, particularly on vehicles carrying physically disabled passengers, thus enabling us to enhance the safest possible operation of these vehicles.

Applause.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I get very nervous when I get applause from that corner of the House.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, as you may note, the federal government has enacted legislation to cover the movement and handling of dangerous goods in Canada. Entitled the Transportation of Dangerous Goods Act, it applies to all federally regulated modes of transport, including railways, airlines, ships, interprovincial trucking, manufacturers of dangerous goods, shippers, consignees, warehousemen and so on.

The federal legislation is not intended, however, to provide for the regulation of intraprovincial highway transport, a well-established area of provincial jurisdiction falling within the purview of my ministry. I am therefore pleased to announce today the introduction of a bill designed to promote the safe transportation of dangerous goods in all vehicles using all provincial highways.

In drafting the Dangerous Goods Transportation Act we have taken great pains to ensure it is consistent with federal legislation governing the transportation of dangerous goods to maintain uniformity right across this country. Briefly stated, the bill prohibits the transportation of dangerous materials on provincial highways in any vehicle that does not comply with the prescribed safety regulations outlined in the federal law, including the regulations regarding the packaging and placarding of vehicles.

Once enacted, this provincial legislation will be strictly enforced by duly authorized highway carrier inspectors of the Ministry of Transportation and Communications, doubtlessly with the support and co-operation of the Ontario Provincial Police. To ensure compliance, we have set some pretty hefty fines for carriers who break the law. Every person who contravenes the act will be liable to a fine of up to $50,000 for a first offence and to a fine of up to $100,000 for each subsequent offence. In this way our legislation will provide for the safe and efficient movement of dangerous goods, regardless of origin, on all provincial highways in the interests of Ontario residents.

UTDC LEGISLATION

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, members of this House are no doubt aware of the success that the Urban Transportation Development Corporation has recently had in developing, at its new test track and research facility near Kingston, one of the most advanced intermediate capacity transit systems in North America, if not in the world.

Mr. Nixon: I thought Kraus-Maffei was the best in the world.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is high-technology Ontario industry.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, if the Premier and the former Leader of the Opposition would carry on their conversation some place else, I could get on with the statement.

I anticipate that UTDC will have the opportunity within the next year to bid on the construction of similar ICT systems in one or more of the major centres of the United States and Canada. The short bill I will be introducing later this morning is intended to deal with two technical difficulties which must be addressed prior to any bidding. The first, in section 2 of this bill, makes it clear that UTDC is not an agent of Her Majesty at common law, nor a crown agency within the meaning of the Crown Agency Act. This intention was originally expressed by the Legislature in similar language contained in the Ontario Transportation Development Corporation Act. It was not carried over when the business and affairs of that corporation were assumed by UTDC, a company incorporated under the Canada Business Corporations Act.

The second provision authorizes the province to guarantee the performance of the Urban Transportation Development Corporation in complying with the terms of any contract of indemnity given by UTDC in obtaining bonding in connection with a bid, performance bonding contract or warranty of the corporation. Without this assurance by the province, the corporation would be unable to obtain bonding and therefore would not be able to bid on any major transit contracts.

Given the very significant industrial and economic benefits that success on such major bids will have for Ontario, I am sure all members will join in support of this bill.

TVONTARIO ANNIVERSARY

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, later this morning I will join with you and other members of the Legislature at a ceremony in the St. Lawrence lounge to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Ontario Educational Communications Authority.

I am sure the acting leader of the Liberal Party will be the first one over there today, knowing his traditional enthusiastic support for that great organization.

Mr. Nixon: I regret to say that was my idea. You take a good idea and wreck it every time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will give the member credit for a lot of things which these days he wants to ignore. I am delighted to do that. I have always been generous.

Mr. Nixon: I was even the father of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Sure, I will give him credit for that too. I will give him credit for that and the Peterborough manifesto.

Mr. Foulds: Why do you interrupt yourself so often?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not know. I learned that from the member.

Some members will recall that while I was Minister of Education I introduced a bill that took educational television from the Department of Education and placed it in an arm's-length position within an autonomous corporation, which was supported incidentally by all members at the time.

Within its purposely broad terms of reference, TVOntario's educational programs in English and French extend beyond the classroom into the home. Working within the curriculum guidelines of the Ministry of Education, TVOntario presents programs used by most of our schools. The success of programs for preschoolers is well known, and evening programs now draw an unduplicated audience of 1.75 million each week.

Because it is a mass medium, educational television is relatively inexpensive. Our educational television service—the entire operation of TVOntario—consumes about one quarter of one per cent of Ontario's public education dollar. I am able to say that, through its sales and co-production activities, TVOntario increasingly supplements its budget. This year it expects to sell about $2 million worth of programs in Canada, to the United States, and to other parts of the world.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Why don't you cover northern Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, it is coming.

Mr. T. P. Reid: It's coming. It's a second coming.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am delighted to know the member is interested in having it. Some of his colleagues are interested and some are not. He should get his brother off—

Mr. T. P. Reid: It's not my brother's fault; it's the Premier's fault.

Hon. Mr. Davis: They do not have it at all in Hawaii. When the member was in Hawaii, did he see how much TV they had for educational purposes? None.

TVOntario has a greater sales volume of television programs than has the CBC. TVOntario sells more to obtain revenue than that great public network owned by the taxpayers of Canada.

There were some concerns when educational television broadcasting began in Ontario just 10 years ago. Now we are moving into a new era of educational technology which is creating new concerns—a technology that incorporates satellite transmission, teletext systems, mini-computers, videodisc. Ironically, but perhaps not surprisingly, our children often feel more at ease with these developments than many of their teachers do. TVOntario, through its own experiments and work with the new technologies, as well as through its description programs, continues to be innovative in its presentation of learning opportunities.

Those members who watch TVOntario's programs will appreciate the breadth of interests that are covered: programs to help us understand differences—different ethnic origins, different intelligences, different backgrounds and families, different ages—programs that have to do with the arts as well as the sciences and technologies.

A synopsis of 10 years of these programs presented in 10 minutes—to expedite the activities of members of the House—will be featured at the event in the St. Lawrence lounge. Some of TVOntario's personalities will be pleased to welcome them, including Ran Ide, to whom I wish to pay tribute for his work as OECA's first chairman. I know the member for Fort William will be delighted to share in that, knowing full well where Mr. Ide gained a great deal of his experience. I hope on this occasion we may all feel proud of the success of this educational enterprise.

TORONTO DISTRICT HEATING CORPORATION LEGISLATION

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I have a couple of statements in regard to bills I will be introducing. The first concerns the Toronto District Heating Corporation Act.

I am pleased to be able to tell the House that a consensus has been reached by all parties involved in the Toronto steam heating system, and it is my privilege to introduce today the Toronto District Heating Corporation Act. The proposed legislation enables the participants to make contractual arrangements which will allow the integration of the heating systems of Queen's Park, the University of Toronto, the Hospital Steam Corporation and the Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission's steam division.

The integration of these four existing steam systems, which was initiated by the city of Toronto, will have the following beneficial results: It will improve air quality by significantly reducing the operations of the Toronto Hydro-Electric System's Pearl Street plant, which has an environmental control order against it for not complying with air pollution regulations pursuant to the Environmental Protection Act.

It will improve the security of supply for customers, including hospitals and the commercial users because, if one plant breaks down, the others can pick up the shortfall. It will allow more flexibility in using cheaper or more available fuel, for example, coal, gas, oil or garbage.

It will create a sufficient load demand to justify the economics of a refuse-fired steam plant. The plant will reduce the amount of gas and fuel oil currently being consumed by the four heating plants by about 40 per cent. The burning of garbage could save 418,000 barrels of oil per year—enough energy to heat 1,400 homes.

The refuse-fired plant could dispose of 25 per cent of Metropolitan Toronto's municipally collected garbage; 490,000 metric tons of garbage could be burned at the Hearn plant, for instance, or 380,000 metric tons per year at the proposed Cherry Street plant. The Hearn plant could also generate electricity as well as heat in a process called cogeneration.

Mr. J. Reed: You discovered that too. It is done everywhere else on the face of the earth.

Hon. Mr. Wells: We are doing it. This legislation is a credit to all those who have participated in the consultation process over the years. To give members some idea of the breadth and comprehensiveness of this consultation, let me briefly list the players who have been a party to this bill: Four hospital boards of governors, the Canadian Union of Operating Engineers, the University of Toronto, the Toronto Hydro-Electric Commissioners representing 36 downtown customers, the International Union of Operating Engineers, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the Ontario government ministries of Government Services, Revenue, Treasury, Health, Energy, Environment, Attorney General and Intergovernmental Affairs, the city of Toronto, Metropolitan Toronto and Consumers' Gas Company.

Consultations with the unions have resulted in revisions to this legislation which will allow for the continuation of three separate collective agreements. This will ensure that no employee is in a worse position because of the integration of the steam systems. Let me emphasize that many have set aside their own program and policy interests so that the greater provincial good, which shall be afforded by integration, might be achieved. I thank all the parties for their great sacrifices of time and effort, which are today making the introduction of this legislation possible.

MUNICIPAL LEGISLATION

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I will also be introducing today amendments to the Municipal Act.

This bill, which will amend the Municipal Act, will do so by adding a number of new powers, by removing many archaic bylaw provisions, by substituting a few general provisions for many very specific ones, by removing status distinctions in passing by-laws and by relocating a number of sections.

Among the new provisions is a change to the provisions for filling vacancies on local councils. When a vacancy occurs after March 31 in an election year and at least 45 days before nomination day, a council will be required to fill the vacancy by appointment within 45 days.

An example of a power which the bill would remove on the grounds that it is archaic is that which allows a mayor to commit habitual drunkards to an institution for their reclamation and cure with or without hard labour.

The main new general power proposed in the bill is an expansion of the existing grants provisions to allow municipalities to provide grants in aid for any purpose considered by the council to be in the interests of the municipality. This would replace many specific grants-in-aid provisions now in the act.

A number of changes in the bill will allow all local municipalities to have the powers that now are available to municipalities of particular status or population. An example of this type of change is to allow all local municipalities to establish taxi stands. At present townships do not have this power.

The bill also proposes to relocate a number of provisions to place them with or near to similar provisions in the present act.

ACCESS TO LEGISLATIVE BUILDING

Mr. Speaker: Yesterday the member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. M. N. Davison) rose on a point of privilege with respect to an incident which took place when he was questioned by a member of the Ontario Government Protective Service as he entered the Legislative Building.

For the information of all members, section 93(2) of the Legislative Assembly Act provides that the Speaker shall establish guidelines for the security of the legislative chamber and other parts of the Legislative Building that are under his control.

These guidelines, which were established in December 1975 by my predecessor and have been reviewed from time to time by the Board of Internal Economy, authorize the protective service to request identification from any individual seeking access to the building and to examine any parcels, briefcases, et cetera. For the information of the House, I am advised that it has been necessary in recent months for the protective service to recruit a number of new personnel to replace those who have left to seek employment elsewhere.

Under these circumstances, I think it is understandable that a recently appointed officer might not yet recognize every member. I have, however, written to the superintendent of the Ontario Provincial Police in the security branch, who administers the protective service. I have requested that he ensure that, in addition to being vigilant, members of the protective service should exercise wise judgement in pursuing their duties and refrain from making personal comments which can only serve to further complicate delicate relationships.

I would also request that all honourable members appreciate some of the real difficulties which confront members of the Ontario Government Protective Service in carrying out their duties and assist wherever possible to make their jobs a little bit easier.

RURAL ELECTRICAL RATES

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Treasurer relating to the part of his statement last night that was supposed to fulfil the commitment made by the Premier (Mr. Davis) to equalize rural and urban hydro rates.

Will the Treasurer explain why it was not the policy of the government to stop the 11.2 per cent increase that is going to be imposed on the rural hydro ratepayers as of January 1, particularly since that 11.2 per cent will raise the rural rates by something more than $57 million? Will he compare that increase, which is to take place in January, with the $20 million he is indicating will begin to be paid after April 1981, and agree with me that he is not moving towards changing the inequities, but is allowing them to continue?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, the setting of the rates in Ontario Hydro has always been on the basis of Hydro's recovering its costs, as I understand. We are not interfering with that basic procedure, but we did say that by 1982 they should resolve this complex problem. It is complex. The $20 million we have allocated to reduce the differential is for an immediate start on that process while the rate structures are worked out by Hydro and the Ministry of Energy. I think the Minister of Energy (Mr. Welch), when he returns, would be best able to explain the current rate figures.

Mr. Nixon: Since we as farmers in Ontario now pay the highest rates in Canada west of New Brunswick, where they make their electricity out of oil, and we see other jurisdictions where equality has been achieved and in this jurisdiction the friend and former campaign manager of the Premier is running the corporation, why cannot the three of them get together and solve this problem without making it simply a political football, as they intend to do?

The minister announced it seven months ago and he announced it again last night. We are not going to get any money until April, and he will announce it again in the budget in the spring if we have one. Why can he not accomplish equity in this instance simply by passing a law that is going to require Ontario Hydro to do this for the benefit of the farmers in this province?

Hon. F. S. Miller: There are many ways in which we try to help the farmers of this province apart from this specific one. I hope the honourable member will agree with that. We have instructed Hydro to have that inequitable rate differential solved by 1982.

If one starts looking at the various rates charged in rural sections of the province, they vary considerably. Therefore, we have to look at the problem in some detail, and that is being tackled.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker, I will put my question to the Treasurer, but I hope the Premier will listen. When he made the request last April or May that we should move to investigate this thing, the differential amounted to $32 million. That is the old differential. Hydro's proposed reform of its rate structure, on which I put questions to the Premier and the Minister of Energy a week or so ago, proposes to add another $24 million to that differential.

How does the Treasurer think that $20 million is going to cope with an old differential of $32 million and Hydro's proposed additional differential of $24 million added to the rural costs?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I still argue that $20 million credited directly to the rural residential users will be a very useful assistance program while the details are worked out.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, since the credit the minister is talking about, if it is divided among the 770,000 rural customers, will amount to about $25 a family for the year, it is certainly something that is welcome as far as a Christmas gift is concerned, except that people will have to wait to get it in the year following April 1981, how can the government establish a policy by edict of the Premier and permit an 11.2 per cent increase to come on January 1 which is going to further exacerbate the inequity?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, the honourable member knows that the hydroelectric power content in Ontario is about 30 per cent of the total amount we make and the balance is made from fuel plants. The costs of these fuels are changing very dramatically because of forces beyond our control.

Hydro has continued to maintain a policy of breaking even. Therefore, there have been requirements to adjust rates on an annual basis.

Mr. McKessock: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that Ontario Hydro feels the extra cost charged to rural customers is for distribution costs, does the minister not feel that if these high power lines that go from the Bruce plant down to the cities were charged as distribution costs for urban dwellers instead of as capital costs, there would be no difference in the distribution costs between urban and rural residents?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, it is very much like trying to apportion the cost of snowploughing a road. The honourable member and I live in a part of the province where there are often two or three homes per mile of road. Therefore, the cost of ploughing the road is high. In Toronto and most urban municipalities there are many users per mile of line, and the costs for maintenance of those lines are very high. As we have absorbed the more developed parts of some communities into the urban structure, it has left even more load on the rural structures. We have said the time has come to equalize that and we are doing it.

ENERGY TAX REBATES

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put another question to the Treasurer on another section of his statement last night on page 20, under the heading "Relief for Home Heating Costs." Actually, what drew it to my attention was his gratuitous comment about another government which "is insensitive to the impact of rising energy prices on people with fixed and low incomes." The question has to do with the sensitivity of the minister to those people with fixed and low incomes.

Why is his announced program to assist in heating costs going to begin its payout in the spring of 1982? What is the point of announcing that in a special budget last night when it is going to be of no significance to the people he is referring to, those with fixed and low incomes, until the spring of 1982, even though energy costs have already gone up well beyond the ability of these people on low and fixed incomes to pay?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I sense that the member's many years in this House are making him cynical. I just have that feeling.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Does the Treasurer have a response?

Hon. F. S. Miller: You notice I have been standing by very quietly, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I want you to say something. I don't want you just to stand there.

Hon. F. S. Miller: They do, too, Mr. Speaker.

The issue is twofold. First, we feel that federal, provincial and national co-operation is needed for a program that is affordable and fairly apportioned to governments. Do not forget, a great chunk of the increase in the costs of home heating oil, the great part of it, will now be going to governments. They should use that, first and foremost, to cushion the shock of the price increases which become greater and greater for the home owner in the next three years, as my friend Mr. Crosbie did last year. I recommended him for it at the time.

First of all, we will be talking to Mr. MacEachen and our fellow finance ministers, hoping to gain their support for a national program. Second, it needs to be income tested and, therefore, is best put on the income tax form. The earliest possible time to have that done is for the spring of 1982.

Mr. Nixon: Returning again to the minister's concern for people on fixed and low incomes, why is it he could not bring himself to adjust the inequity he introduced in his previous budget, giving the grant to the 95,000 senior citizen pensioners who had their tax grant assistance removed from them to the extent of $110 each? How can he criticize one government for insensitivity to the old and people on fixed incomes when, with the other hand, he has taken $110 away from each one of 95,000 pensioners?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Again, my honourable friend is not totally accurate with his figures. He conveniently forgets we increased Gains for a number of these 95,000. That was $120 a year. The fact is we targeted our program for need. Those who had income needs got it; those who had tax needs got it. It was much more precise than our previous program, something I believe the member has even criticized me for in the past. "Make it more specific," he said. I did.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister tell the House whether he has a group of people working in his ministry devising promises that can be put into future budget statements with reference to years in the distant future?

Can he explain why people on low incomes are promised jam yesterday, jam tomorrow but never jam today, or more specifically, why this energy tax rebate promised by the minister is a vague, shadowy kind of promise not to take place until 1982, if the government is still around, but to provide no relief right now? Will the minister explain why the entire budget has that same shadowy kind of consistency where promises are made as far as five years in the future, but delivery right now in terms of jobs or relief for people on low incomes is inadequate?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I disagree that it is shadowy. I think we were very specific. I find the honourable member's ability to criticize me when I project five years into the future quite inconsistent, because he has been criticizing me for not projecting five years into the future. We are now doing it; we are giving the honourable members some figures; we are co-ordinating our economic thrusts; we are putting them into a committee chaired by the Treasurer, bringing together many of the programs of economic development in the province totalling about $2 billion a year. We are going to be reviewing our tax expenditures; we are going to make a better use of our dollars. Then the honourable member tells me I am not doing the right thing.

Mr. J. Reed: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The Treasurer has chosen to turn most of the carriages into pumpkins on July 1 of next year and he extends the home heating program to people on fixed and low incomes for three years and proposes to terminate it after three years. Is the minister not aware that the projected increases in the cost of heating oil will continue beyond the three-year period? What happens at the end of three years when this program of largess, designed for whatever it is supposed to be designed for, comes to an end?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, one of the things we point out is that we are trying to cushion the shock to allow people to have time to adjust. I have great confidence in the managerial ability of the average Canadian family, given time to adjust to new conditions. When you suddenly dump a new cost on a family already spending all its income, you have left no place for it to get money except by getting into debt. We therefore suggest they need an adjustment period and during that adjustment period, I would suggest, they will reorder their priorities in many cases so that at the end of that period of time they will have an adjusted family budget.

Mr. Laughren: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Why did the Treasurer take the approach of reducing the sales tax on specific sectors? While it does put more money into the economy in terms of people's discretionary income, at the same time, if someone is going to save $35 on the purchase of a $500 refrigerator, for example, they obviously must have that $500 to start with to make the original purchase. Why did the Treasurer not take an approach that would put some money directly into the hands of low-income families in this province, for example, by a reduction in OHIP premiums or an increase in the Gains allowance?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, my honourable colleague would have to admit that low-income people do not pay OHIP premiums under our system. The most effective mechanism for short-term stimulus has been proven to be the sales tax route where the savings elements are high.

Mr. Peterson: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: On the matter of relief of home heating costs, the Treasurer says in his statement, "I will be making specific proposals to the Minister of Finance." What are those specific proposals?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, as I said in my comment, I will be making them to the Minister of Finance.

10:50 a.m.

STRATFORD FESTIVAL

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question for the Premier. The bungling of the Stratford Festival board of directors has precipitated not only an artistic crisis in the festival but also an economic crisis. It is going to cost about $30 million in revenues and 500 or 600 jobs in the Stratford area this summer if the boycott of Equity which has been precipitated by the board is carried through. In view of this, would the Premier say what steps the government now intends to take in order to seek to resolve this crisis which is both artistic and economic?

Mr. Peterson: Would the Premier consider Frank as our artistic director of the Stratford Festival?

Hon. F. S. Miller: I am a choreographer by nature.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, but I think it might be a great spot for the member. That would save him having to make a decision.

Mr. Speaker, I would be delighted to answer that question but I think the minister responsible for art, culture, recreation and many things in this province might more appropriately answer it for the leader of the New Democratic Party. The minister is in his seat. I am sure he would be delighted to answer that question.

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, I believe that question is entirely premature. Negotiations are just starting today, not only with the Ontario Arts Council and with Stratford but also with the Canadian Actors' Equity Association and so forth. So for us now to draw conclusions implicitly to questions like that I think is entirely too premature. But as the member for Ottawa Centre has indicated, this is a question that has not only artistic but also economic implications. We will keep an eye on it and keep reporting to this House. It is too premature to try to answer to anything today.

Mr. Cassidy: Could the minister not have a greater sense of urgency about what is happening there and what that means, not just for the economy of an important region in southwestern Ontario, but for the whole province? The Stratford Festival has been a premier tourist attraction for people from the United States and as far away as Europe and Japan.

Is the minister not aware that the boycott by Equity, precipitated by the Stratford Festival board, is in force immediately? That means the actors and other theatre people affected are immediately going to be looking for other engagements and making other commitments which will keep them out of Stratford if a resolution is arrived at in a month or two.

Is the minister also aware that the Canada Council is now not in a position to consider Stratford's application for funding for the 1981 year because the signatures on the submission that was made last month by the four artistic directors can no longer be considered to be valid because those artistic directors are no longer with Stratford? Their position is in doubt because of the hiring of Mr. Dexter and because of the fact that severance terms are being offered to those four artistic directors.

Mr. Speaker: The question has been asked.

Mr. Cassidy: Could the minister not take this as a matter of greater urgency? What is he going to do before the entire Stratford Festival, which has been an important part of our lives for 28 years, descends into a shambles?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: As I indicated earlier, these questions are, at this moment, still premature. The Ontario Arts Council, which is our agency working with Stratford in this, is very concerned about the situation. They issued a statement today and, Mr. Speaker, with your permission I will read one paragraph:

"The Ontario Arts Council initiated inquiries on Tuesday, November 11, the minute they knew about it, within hours of the announcement of the dismissal of the Canadian director, and the appointment of Mr. John Dexter. After numerous informal contacts and discussions, the Ontario Arts Council requested that representatives of the Stratford Festival board meet with the executive committee of the Ontario Arts Council on Wednesday, November 19, at which time it is expected that answers to a number of pressing questions will be forthcoming.

"In addition, the Ontario Arts Council was in communication with Equity in light of their recent announcement of a boycott at Stratford by the Canadian actors."

So I feel the Ontario Arts Council, the Canada Council, my counterpart in Ottawa and my ministry are all aware this is a serious situation. But we must simply take this step by step. It is urgent and we are going to treat it as such.

Mr. Cassidy: The issue which has precipitated the crisis at Stratford is the decision of the board to once again pass over Canadian talent in the artistic direction of the festival. The Stratford Festival board has, for almost all of its 20 years, hired foreigners as the artistic directors of the festival. In view of this, will the government insist at least this time that artistic direction be in the hands of Canadians, since that is also a means by which this dispute, this crisis, can be resolved very quickly?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, again I must say it would be premature for me to stand here in this place at this hour and say we are going to insist on specific situations such as this. Let us give both the Canada Council and the Ontario Arts Council and Stratford and the Equity people some time to negotiate and then we will see where we need to go from there. We will do what needs to be done when the time comes to do it.

AUTO INDUSTRY LAYOFFS

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question I would like to direct to the Premier about the layoffs in the auto industry that are recurring now in Windsor.

This week 6,000 workers at Chrysler are told they are going on layoff next week because the production of those gas guzzlers they make down there is exceeding the demand for them. There are also indications that Chrysler intends to expand its K car production in the United States at its St. Louis plant and to transfer production of the larger cars that are now made in St. Louis to Windsor, instead of expanding K car production in Canada.

Since the Premier said in June he was optimistic the Big Four auto makers would give Canada a fair share of production of the new fuel-efficient cars, can the Premier say what he now intends to do in order to ensure that Chrysler builds K cars in Canada rather than building cars for which there is obviously a very declining market?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, of course there is a concern here with respect to Chrysler and the other auto companies in terms of the market conditions this year. From my perspective I think it is rather premature to be determining, in fact, what the market conditions are going to be—

Mr. Cassidy: Everything is premature.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Listen, I know exactly what is happening in Windsor. I think it is fair to state that the government, through the Ministry of Industry and Tourism, communicated last June, and has since, the desire on the part of this government—and I would hope the government of Canada—to have a growing percentage of the more fuel-efficient vehicles in this country.

For instance, my recollection is that GM has made a commitment that some of that production will, in fact, take place in Oshawa. The member for Oshawa (Mr. Breaugh) is nodding his head, and it is great to have him in agreement on a Friday morning. The situation with Chrysler is not as final or committed as it is with GM. We intend, I hope along with the government of Canada, to be pursuing it with them.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the Premier said in June he was optimistic that we would get a fair share of these cars, is the Premier aware that the other problem with Chrysler Canada is the fact the company has an inadequate sourcing of parts and production of parts here in Canada? I have here the invoices that document the systematic stripping of the Chrysler engine plant which was closed in August and where the equipment and machinery is now being shipped out to the United States and to the Chrysler subsidiary in Mexico.

Since this disposal of the equipment in a plant which we were told was going to be mothballed endangered the perspective use of the plant for either a V6 engine or for a diesel facility such as the one Massey-Ferguson has been discussing with the Ministry of Industry and Tourism, will the government step in and make Chrysler stop stripping the assets from that engine plant in Windsor until a future use can be found for the plant here in Canada that would create jobs for Canadians?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think the term "stripping the assets" is not totally accurate. It is my understanding, and it is only an understanding, that certain equipment was being moved out of that particular plant, and this was known to the members.

Interjection.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is not news. Some of the NDP members asked us about that last June. That is not new information. We knew this was in the process of taking place.

Mr. Mancini: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker—and I want to assure the Premier that I drive a Chrysler, not a Peugeot—

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of order, I don't know who drives a Peugeot. I drive a Chrysler.

Mr. Mancini: We wish to welcome the leader of the third party to the Chrysler drivers.

Mr. Mancini: I would like to ask the Premier if he is going to involve himself with the federal Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce in the renegotiation of some parts of the auto pact to ensure that Windsor gets a fair share of automobile production in many sectors of the industry and not only in the large car sector.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the government will be involved, and has been. I think that will be very evident to the honourable member when he sees what has been accomplished. Certainly there are discussions with the federal minister, Mr. Gray. Of course, the member is much closer to him than I am, geographically and philosophically, and I assume he is making his views known as well.

I can say to the honourable member, not only is Windsor of concern and of interest, but any alteration of the auto pact must, of course, take into account the needs of American Motors in the great city of Brampton.

Mr. Bounsall: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Has the Premier or the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman) had any talks at all with Chrysler about producing in Canada—and making it an international vehicle—their very good safety car, which they have had on the books for six or seven years, as a means of getting fully into the production of a car in Ontario and in Canada that would really have a sales market?

Secondly, as the Premier has stated he knows so much about the Windsor situation, he must know last night's budget with its $700 maximum rebate for a van purchase is not really going to materially help the employment situation in Windsor. What will the Premier do for Windsor in terms of meaningful public works programs this winter and support for all those social service agencies whose needs have gone up tremendously and whose budgets have to be cut?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think the first part of the supplementary was in fact a supplementary. The second part of the question was really a new question.

In answer to the first part of the question, there have been rather wide-ranging discussions with Chrysler, in which I have not taken part, related to this "safety car." In answer to the second part of the question, this government has always assisted those people who have genuine needs and will continue to do so.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise the leader of the New Democratic Party that the Chrysler car is not a gas guzzler and, according to all statistics, it is equal to, if not better than, all other makes.

I have a supplementary to the Premier: Is the Premier aware that Chrysler produces two-door models in Canada, and since family cars have a tendency to be four-door models and station wagons, we should stress to the company they should be making a family car?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to hear the honourable member support Chrysler products. I have been driving one for more years than the leader of the New Democratic Party, who has become a recent convert.

Mr. Nixon: When was the last time you bought one?

Hon. Mr. Davis: As a matter of fact, my wife has, but I have not. I will make the point to Chrysler that the honourable member suggests families find it easier to get into four-door cars than two-door cars.

Mr. Peterson: Particularly if they have a weight problem.

Hon. Mr. Davis: On a point of personal privilege, I want to say that I have never felt the member for Essex North has had a weight problem. The member for London Centre may think so, but I do not.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Peterson: Mr. Speaker, a question to the Treasurer: Now that he has had at least 12 hours to reflect on the statement he read last night, is the Treasurer prepared to stand up and admit his commitment to so-called structural reform or structural investment in the economy is less than it was under the old employment development fund program? In that he budgeted $300 million over two years, averaging $150 million a year, yet the extent of his commitment to the end of 1982, according to his own figures, is only $100 million, of which $20 million is going to equalize rural hydro rates. So his only real commitment in terms of structural reform is about $80 million, substantially less than he was spending in the last two years.

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I tried to explain, even on the radio program the member and I shared this morning, that certain elements of the employment development fund that were becoming programmatic as time went on were being incorporated into the budgets of ministries. These programs have been quite successful. They no longer needed the individual decision-making approach of the employment development board.

They were better handled by a program within a ministry of government, such as the Ministry of Industry and Tourism, the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. We have a small business development corporation handled by the Ministry of Revenue. We have the program for mineral resource exploration handled by Natural Resources. We have the tourism redevelopment program handled by Industry and Tourism. They are now becoming parts of programs and those moneys continue to flow.

Mr. Peterson: Given the carryover of some of these programs, the new initiatives in new investment in productive capacity in this province is less than it was under the old program. Even though the board has been renamed the Board of Industrial Leadership and Development, BILD or bust or whatever, as opposed to EDF, it is less and there is no substantial change of any type whatsoever in this specious document that was presented last night, is there not?

Hon. F. S. Miller: I think an important factor has been missed and that is the review of the moneys already being spent in the co-ordination of activities. A lot of people have criticized—I believe the member has when he has talked about it—Treasury's role in these matters. What I am saying is the Treasury role as a co-ordinator of economic activity with the power to look at existing programs was strengthened in the board called BILD. We had a different name for it earlier. It was going to be called BRED but we did not think that one would work out so well.

Mr. T. P. Reid: When the minister looked in the mirror he knew that was impossible too.

Hon. F. S. Miller: I do not spell quite the same way as the member does. The fact remains, I would argue we are going to be making much more efficient use of some of the $2 billion currently being spent by ministries that are economically related, as well as adding more moneys to the program.

Mr. Laughren: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In reference to the BILD program which the Treasurer is so proud of, perhaps the Treasurer could tell us why he needed that delaying tactic called BILD, which really puts off any decisions on rebuilding key sectors until another year at least and he may not even be there to make those decisions?

Perhaps the Treasurer could tell us why he needs that kind of delay, that kind of time, to understand that a key sector such as mining machinery needs to be rebuilt? We have all the information there. Statistics Canada provides us with information monthly on how bad it is.

Does the Treasurer not agree it would be better to look at a sector such as mining machinery where imports are high, where there is a large deficit, where jobs are skilled and where there is a high component of regional development, in the development of the mining machinery complex in northern Ontario?

Why did the Treasurer not take a sector and make a firm commitment to put a substantial amount of investment into that sector to rebuild it so we can have key sectors rebuilt for the future?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, that is exactly the kind of thing we expect to do. I do not know where the member gets the idea of a delay of a year. That is precisely one of the sectors I am going to look at.

HOSPITAL EMERGENCY SERVICES

Mr. Mackenzie: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Health. In view of the minister's often strident defence of his responsibility to health care in Ontario, will he explain to this House the inadequacy of the treatment afforded one Mary Ann Thomson, 22 years of age, in my riding, who on October 15 had part of her right thumb sliced off in a meat slicing machine in the establishment where she worked? She had her hand bandaged, the piece of thumb was packed on ice and she was sent to Hamilton General Hospital where they took details of the accident.

She was left on a stretcher from 2:20 p.m. to 4:40 p.m. before she was finally moved to a surgical room. At 5:45 p.m. they finally had a doctor there who ordered the piece of the thumb thrown out because it should have been packed in salt on arrival at the hospital. They did not have adequate surgical supplies and they draped her hand in a doctor's green gown when they were cleaning it up before the operation. A number of other pieces of equipment were inadequate for the operation.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the individual case nor with the other quarter of a million a day that go through the health care system. I will have to have my staff contact Dr. Noonan, the executive director of the hospital, to ascertain any further facts in the case and get an answer to the honourable member's question. That is all I can do at this time.

Mr. Mackenzie: Can I also ask the minister whether or not he will take the responsibility in this House for the inadequacy of the treatment that his policies are causing for people in this province?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: With respect, if the honourable member is prepared to give me the personal credit for every miracle which is performed on a daily basis in the health care system, then I might entertain his question. It is a stupid question.

DREE ASSISTANCE

Mr. G. E. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Treasurer. As a result of the recent meetings with the federal officials, can the Treasurer indicate any progress in having the benefits for regional development under the Department of Regional Economic Expansion program extended to include the northern part of Simcoe county, the district of Muskoka and the northern parts of, I understand, Grey county as well?

Hon. F. S. Miller: Mr. Speaker, the honourable member mentioned one area that certainly attracted my attention in his comments when he got to Muskoka. On Wednesday night, I believe it was, several ministers from Ontario met with several federal ministers under the chairmanship of Mr. De Bane to discuss DREE programs. I was not present for a number of reasons. I think the Minister of Northern Affairs (Mr. Bernier) was there, and I believe the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Brunelle) was there also, so they could probably bring the member more up to date on the actual events. I understood it was a good meeting but that any attempt by us to have these counties included that was felt were in some trouble still fell on deaf ears.

One of the reasons I brought in the rural Ontario program was just that. We made several pleas to DREE to include counties such as Grey, Bruce, Simcoe North, Haliburton, Victoria, Muskoka in the kind of assistance programs that were available through DREE for eastern Ontario. When we failed, we thought the second-best approach was to have Ontario design a program for those counties and that is what I announced in the budget.

Mr. G. E. Smith: Will there be any further meetings with the federal ministries for ongoing negotiations to attempt to bring this about?

Hon. F. S. Miller: We will continue to meet with the federal ministers because we do that at least once a year, and recently it has been twice in the last three or four months. I am not optimistic that they are willing to concede there was a need to help those areas. I think we had a fair amount of support from both sides of the House on our representations for those counties but it did not seem to succeed.

SUSPENSION OF DOCTOR

Mr. Conway: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Health. It concerns the latest report of the discipline committee of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario and in particular the judgement against Dr. Eric August Deernsted of the Ottawa area.

The discipline committee found the said doctor guilty of two counts of professional misconduct. The first was that he falsified a record in respect to the examination or treatment of his patient in a discharge summary which portrayed a completely misleading picture of the patient's clinical condition. The second professional misconduct involved sexual impropriety in that this doctor began a course of conduct with a married, ill, female patient which culminated in an intimate sexual relationship. I believe those to be very serious violations of professional conduct.

Is the minister aware that the college, through the discipline committee, meted out the penalty of 30 days' suspension? Would the minister, having regard to his responsibility to protect the public interest in so far as the health discipline legislation is concerned, not agree with me that this is a pitifully inadequate response by this self-governing regulator with respect to the charges involved?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, first of all, just to complete the record—so it does not sound too much like As the World Turns—the doctor in question married the lady in question, just to complete the member's description of events.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Is that new health policy? Called preventive medicine is it?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: No. If the member would like me to counsel him on that at some point in time, I would be glad to, or maybe the member for Renfrew North.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, a 30-day suspension is not an inconsiderable penalty in terms of the maintenance of a practice of medicine and the maintenance of a reputation. In fact, even the very finding of guilt by the discipline committee and the publication of that, I suggest to the member, is a serious matter in the maintenance of an ongoing career in medicine.

Second, there was a lay person—my understanding is there always is a lay person appointed by the government sitting on the discipline committee—who was involved in this particular decision.

Third, the government does not have the authority under the legislation to intervene in a particular judgement. From time to time I do take up with the college some of its decisions, and I must say I find on the whole the college is very thorough in its investigations and goes to a great deal of difficulty to attempt to arrive at just decisions.

One of the aspects of this case that does concern me is this question of the falsification of hospital records, and I have directed my staff to look into the matter to see if further action on our part with respect to the Public Hospitals Act is warranted.

Mr. Conway: I could not disagree more with what I think is a perfectly outrageous beginning to the minister's answer. The fact that this particular doctor married this particular patient after these violations is of no real consequence to me at all, and I think it is just a totally unacceptable response from the minister.

Is the minister aware, given what he said at the end of his answer about the falsification of medical records, that the involved third party, the Queensway-Carleton Hospital, and in particular the director of the medical staff there, is not yet aware of precisely what transpired at that hearing that had such a direct effect on his hospital? Does the minister not think the time has come that some formal mechanism be struck for the College of Physicians and Surgeons to directly involve third parties like hospitals so that they will not be left, as the Queensway-Carleton is in this instance, completely in the dark as to why this particular doctor's licence is being suspended and how they might be on guard to monitor the kind of outrageous conduct that led to the suspension in the first place?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, I could be wrong and I will check this, but I believe that either of the parties to a disciplinary matter has the right to call before the disciplinary committee, to offer their advice and/or information, whomsoever they please, so the involvement of third parties—and again I will confirm this—is part of the process.

Secondly, I did not start my answer to be good, but rather to complete the background which the member was giving. I think we are dealing with some very complicated interpersonal relationships. I want to put those in perspective. I want to deal with the professional question and I want to deal with the hospital question.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of the Environment. Will the minister advise the House and the people of Ontario today that South Cayuga is no longer under consideration as a possible site for a liquid industrial waste disposal facility?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Isaacs: Does the minister not recall that he asked James F. MacLaren Limited, an independent consultant, to identify the best possible areas for locating these facilities? Given that MacLaren reported very specifically that South Cayuga was not even minimally acceptable, does the minister not agree that his intervention and direction to MacLaren to study South Cayuga and other sites that are politically embarrassing to that government has seriously jeopardized the independence, the impartiality and the public trust in the MacLaren study? Will the minister withdraw his political interference today so that public trust in the independence of MacLaren can be restored before he makes his announcement on November 25?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: There are about four answers of no to that, but I would only add that I think it is of paramount importance that the ministry, and myself as well, should ask the MacLaren people—it is a very comprehensive study—to look at land that is owned by the government. I am sure if we did not do so we would be criticized. I have no intention of taking the advice of the member opposite.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister indicate to this House the cost of the study that is taking place at the present time?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: About $425,000.

LAND SEVERANCE

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the member for Huron-Middlesex asked me a question: "Can the minister explain why an order in council was issued on his advice on July 31, 1980, to grant a severance on agricultural land in Vespra township?" He went on in his statement to ask, "If the minister felt so compelled to support this severance, why did he not do so at the hearing before the Ontario Municipal Board?" I note the honourable member is here now and I do have the order in council here.

On the severance in question, Mr. George Atkinson operates a large dairy farm in Vespra township with several full-time farm helpers. Mr. Atkinson applied to the Vespra committee of adjustment for a severance for farm help. The committee approved the severance. The township council appealed this to the OMB.

To accommodate his hired workers, the petitioner proposed to construct two dwellings and to hire someone, perhaps the wife of one of the workers, to provide the services his wife at present provides. For this purpose, Mr. Atkinson needs to sever a parcel of land having a 100-foot frontage and a 200-foot depth from a total parcel of 45 acres. The lot to be severed fronts on a township road and is adjacent to the community of Crown Hill in the township of Vespra.

The committee of adjustment of the township of Vespra granted the petitioner's application for severance. I have a copy of this decision if the member wishes it. There was no opposition placed before the committee of adjustment. No written submissions were received by the committee in opposition to Mr. Atkinson's severance.

The following persons and agencies received notice of Mr. Atkinson's application: (a) the clerk of the township of Vespra; (b) the issuer of building permits for the township; (c) the secretary of the Vespra Planning Board; (d) the clerk of the county of Simcoe, and (e) the central county health unit. None of these persons or agencies appeared or gave any written submission of any nature whatsoever. There was no opposition.

Some time later an appeal was taken by the township of Vespra against the decision of the committee granting Mr. Atkinson's severance. The township gave no reason for this appeal. At the OMB hearing, the only grounds for the appeal advanced by the township were that Mr. Atkinson's proposal did not fall within one of the specific exemptions enumerated in the official plan.

The uncontradicted evidence of the OMB hearing was that the subject lands are the poorest of the lands owned by Mr. Atkinson. The lands are generally wet, and attempts to tile-drain the lands have been unsuccessful. After several unsuccessful attempts to grow crops, Mr. Atkinson allowed the lands to revert to pasture. This evidence as to the agricultural capability of the land was uncontradicted at the hearing of the OMB and no argument was placed against it.

The evidence before the board was that the lot the petitioner proposes to sever is located just west of Highway 93, fronting on a township road known as Side Road 15. There are a number of residences, and I will get that, Mr. Speaker, because I did mention that earlier in my remarks.

The evidence again was uncontradicted that the proposed lot would fall within the community of Crown Hill. Again if there is a request for it, I will give the plan. The official plan for the Vespra planning area referred to above provides that wherever farm animal operations are to be carried out, the agricultural code of practice and the food land guidelines should be followed.

Mr. Dale Toombs, government representative and Simcoe county field officer with the food land development branch of the ministry, applied minimum distance separation formula number one to the subject lands and found that the proposed lot met the minimum distance separation criteria established by the code. He found the distance between the proposed lot and the closest livestock operation was more than adequate to avoid any potential environmental conflict between the two.

Mr. Toombs's evidence was uncontradicted. He stated the prevailing government policy in respect to the petitioner's application is found in the food land guidelines. He stated the particular policies enunciated in the guidelines and applicable to the subject land were as follows—

Mr. Cassidy: Is this important?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, it is important that the honourable members—

Mr. Cassidy: It is an abuse of the private members' time.

Mr. Speaker: Order. It is important. The honourable minister has taken six minutes and 30 seconds, which I am going to add to the question period. It is just a question of how long the minister persists because I intend to add to the question period. I would suggest that in future if the minister organizes his material a little better, it would allow for a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I thank you, but this is pertinent information. The honourable member made serious charges about my staff. They should be answered in an appropriate way.

To continue: The general policy relating to the preservation of good agricultural land subject to some exceptions; the provision of severances for the establishment of accommodation for full-time farm help.

Mr. Toombs stated that in this instance the prevailing policy, that is the policy of greatest relevance, is found in section 4A.20 of the guidelines. This section relates to farm-related severances. The relevant subsection of section 4A.20—I could read that, but I will not at this time.

The only thing I add is that this operation milks about 80 cows. They ship thoroughbred stock all over the world. There is a farmer and two sons with six full-time helpers. The farmer's wife provides lodging and boarding for this help, but her health has got to the point that they decided they would have to contract this work out to the wife of one of the employees of the farm. That is the reason for the severance.

I have no problems and no reservations with the decision of cabinet. Our action was in keeping with all the policies and for the good of the farm people of this province.

Mr. Speaker: The answer took eight minutes, so we will add another five to the question period.

Mr. Riddell: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Would the Minister of Agriculture and Food ask the Premier (Mr. Davis) for a copy of the letter that was sent to him by the clerk-treasurer of Vespra township? It would indicate that what he has told us this morning is rubbish. Would the Minister of Agriculture and Food not also agree that the granting of that severance was in contravention of the township official plan and the zoning bylaw and that it flies in the face of his own food land guidelines? What is the purpose of a municipality going to the trouble of drawing up official plans and zoning bylaws to meet the requirements laid down by this government if cabinet can overturn them all?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I have certainly read the letter to our Premier, a letter that our Premier will respond to. Early in my statement I responded that the official plan did carry a clause that farm-related severances should be in keeping with our code of practice and food land guidelines. This severance is certainly in keeping with them all the way.

Mr. Riddell: Read the letter.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member should go up and have a look at it.

Mr. Riddell: I have the letter. I want the minister to read it. There was never any stronger language than that laid out to him in that letter.

NIAGARA RIVER POLLUTION

Mr. Kerrio: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. Will the minister comment on the statement by the United States chairman of the International Joint Commission who stated he does not know how government can allow SCA Chemical Services Limited to put more waste in the Niagara River when there are apparent violations there now? Is this not a concern the Deputy Premier (Mr. Welch) stated months ago when he told a private citizens' meeting in Niagara Falls, New York, that not another drop should go into that river? Now, in this morning's paper, we have the chairman of the IJC making those comments. How does the minister react to that?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I think I have reacted, not only this morning but some time ago. I went to see the governor. He was unable to see me. Therefore, I saw the commissioner of New York state. We had a very long visit in the capital of New York, Albany. There is no doubt in his mind about my concern about the Niagara River.

I am not going to be a phoney in this situation and start to make idle comments. I will not do that. I think the honourable member knows me well enough to know I will not do that. The member knows my concern, and it is as genuine as it can possibly be. But I do not think the story ends with just saying, "We do not want another drop to go in there." We do have an industry that needs treatment facilities.

I will tell the member this, there has never been a commitment more dear to me. When we have the facilities we are going to have in this province, the best in the world, and we now have the best waybill system on the continent—

Interjection.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Yes, that is true—then we will scream from the highest mountain, "You follow our lead." We are going to be in that position, there is no doubt about it. I want to scream loud and clear, but I want to do it from a position where there is clear leadership. That will be established in this province in 1982.

Mr. Kerrio: Supplementary: Will the minister accelerate the testing at Walker Brothers now to be certain as to what is in those drums so we can clear the air? My concern is that if we do not clean up that matter immediately, I want some reassurance from the minister that those liquid wastes will not go into the river. I am very concerned that the solidification process should go into place, and I would like the minister to take the initiative now and not just wait. Let us clear up that matter at Walker Brothers. Will he accelerate that process?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I am sorry to say the member is way behind. We have done that.

Mr. Kerrio: We do not have the evidence yet.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Whoa, whoa, whoa. I must tell the member we have done that. We do not have the results. I told the House yesterday we are taking all those and sampling them. We happen to have the best lab facilities in North America to be able to do it. Think about that for a moment. No one can test the drums as thoroughly as we can here in this province.

Mr. Kerrio: When do you get the results?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: We said we would do it.

Mr. Swart: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: How can the minister say he is accelerating the testing in Walker Brothers Quarries when he knows there are hundreds of drums and to date he has unearthed only nine of them? That is going to take three or four years at that rate.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I am sorry to say the member is absolutely incorrect. Again that is not true.

AID TO PENSIONERS

Ms. Bryden: Mr. Speaker, I have a two-part question of the Minister of Revenue. Does he know that his ad informing seniors that the ministry's office is located at 77 Bloor Street West instead of Queen's Park appeared on the business page of the Toronto Star on November 1? Does he think a majority of seniors are likely to read the business page?

Secondly, has he checked the reception desk downstairs since the ad appeared to see how many seniors are still coming to Queen's Park for information and is there any service at the reception desk to provide them with phone calls to the ministry or application forms?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I have no control over the newspapers as to where they are going to put the ads when we ask them to advertise. I would agree with the member that if it were on the financial page, perhaps some of the senior citizens would not see it. I do not have control over the Globe and Mail or the Toronto Star to tell them where they are going to put ads. I have to accept that when an ad is placed, they decide the layout of the paper, not I.

As far as the desk downstairs is concerned, it is my understanding the people at the desk do call the ministry office if someone appears there, so I think that is being looked after.

Ms. Bryden: Supplementary: I am sure the minister is aware one can ask for the section of the paper where one wants the ad put but that appears not to have been done. I would like to ask the minister, since there are 820,000 old age pensioners who received application forms and, according to his figures, only 540,000 have sent in application forms and only 54,000 are in nursing homes and so on, is he following up on the more than 200,000 seniors who have not responded and who may lose out on this tax relief simply because they cannot understand the forms or cannot get through on the telephone for assistance?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: The figure of 820,000 is the total number of seniors in Ontario. Not all of them were mailed application forms. A family received one application form, not two. That is taken from the old age supplement files. The 820,000 figure comes from the fact we sent out a retail sales tax grant of $50. Each senior citizen received that without application.

There were, in effect, 540,000 applications sent out. Those were the ones dealing with families. In other words, if there were a man and wife living together, they got one application. That is why it was reduced from 820,000 to 540,000. All the people eligible for the property tax grants whom we are aware of have received the applications, with the exception of those who may be landed immigrants, who must come to us if we do not have a file on them. All the rest of them have received their applications.

Mr. Cunningham: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister be surprised that the reason for the ad appearing in the business section of the Globe and Mail would be that this has the highest line rate in the Globe and Mail, thereby enabling the ad agency to make an even greater commission?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: The last ad put in was not a planned ad, as was the rest of the program. It was an addition to the advertising program at the request, as a matter of fact, of some members of the NDP. We had to accept the space we could get on such short notice. I wanted to get the ads in to explain some of the difficulties the ministry was having and to get in the address requested, so people would be able to get to the proper office rather than the Queen's Park address. It was an additional ad to the regular advertising program and we had to accept the space available to us on short notice.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. Swart: Mr. Speaker, on November 6 I asked a question of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott). He stated he would reply on November 7. He did not reply that day. I raised a question of privilege and he gave a commitment to this House that he would reply shortly. This issue is distinct from what we are discussing this week because it concerns another property, but it is a revelation of ministry negligence and Walker's violation, once again, of environmental law. Would you bring to the attention of the minister that his answer is long overdue?

Mr. Speaker: I am sure he heard that.

ACCESS TO LEGISLATIVE BUILDING

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of privilege to thank you for your prompt response to the point I raised yesterday. I very much appreciate your having written to the superintendent of the Ontario Provincial Police securities branch, which administers the Ontario Government Protective Service.

However, I remain quite concerned about what I view to be the patently ludicrous interpretation placed on your security guidelines by Acting Senior Supervisor Watts yesterday. I would ask that you refer this matter to the standing committee on procedural affairs for consideration and advice.

Mr. Speaker: No. It is really not a concern of the procedural affairs committee. It is the responsibility of the Speaker and the Board of Internal Economy.

Mr. M. N. Davison: I think we ought to do something about that.

Mr. Speaker: We are monitoring it and I am quite sure things are proceeding as they should.

IDENTIFICATION OF MEMBER

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I rise to correct the record and it is a breach of my privilege as well, in a sense—the problem of names and party affiliations. On November 6 I made a speech in the constitution debate in which I attacked the Premier savagely from time to time. Yet in the “Speakers in this Issue” record at the end of it, I am put down as “Johnston, R. F., Scarborough West, PC.” That hurts a good deal, Mr. Speaker, and it has happened several times. I have to rise to say, please do not confuse me. There is no Progressive Conservative who spoke out against the Premier as I did that night.

Mr. Speaker: I can see the editor of debates got that comment. It will be corrected.

TORONTO ISLANDS ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moved second reading of Bill 181, An Act to stay the Execution of Certain Writs of Possession issued in respect of Certain Premises on Toronto Islands.

Mr. Speaker: Does the minister have an opening comment?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I think I made the comments that were necessary yesterday. I would just like to reiterate to the House that the necessity of this bill was caused by the fact that the Ontario Court of Appeal found on October 27 that the writs of possession which Metropolitan Toronto had asked for against the residents on Toronto Island were valid and servable and the sheriff has taken steps to serve those writs. In fact, he would be enforcing them on November 17.

In the interval, as I stated yesterday and as members of this House knew, we did appoint, under the authority of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, a one-man commissioner, Barry Swadron, QC, who has been holding a very full, thorough and, I think, very good inquiry into this whole matter. He has had a number of presentations. They tell me well over 100 presentations have been made to him. He has listened to many of the experts in both—

Mr. Nixon: Is that necessarily a good thing?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Certainly it is a good thing. He has moved around and held his hearings both in the suburbs and in downtown Toronto and has listened to the concerns of people all over this area in regard to what the future uses of Ward's and Algonquin islands should be.

He has just about finished the formal part of his work and he has to sit down and write his report. It will probably be available some time in December. Therefore, it would be ludicrous to think that some action should be taken in so far as these warrants are concerned at this time when this very full report and its recommendations will be available to all of us, and I hope will form the basis for a permanent solution to this very pressing matter.

I fully acknowledge the sheriff had no other choice because the writs were asked for by Metropolitan Toronto. We asked Metropolitan Toronto not to have those writs enforced and they could have relieved us of the necessity of passing this bill by saying they would not ask the sheriff to enforce the writs. Of course, that would have enabled him to hold up any action. That was not forthcoming, so we are asked to take this kind of action.

The date that was picked is—I think I used the words—stupid and inhumane. I regret that many people thought—and have spoken to me since about this—I was referring to them when I used those remarks. Actually I was referring to the date. It was a stupid and inhumane date.

To suggest that people should be evicted in the cold weather, six weeks before Christmas, certainly would not be the kind of thing that any member of this Legislature would believe should happen. I would hope it is not the kind of thing that any member of council of the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto would really expect should happen, regardless of their feelings on this matter. To think that people should be evicted on that particular date, I think, is ludicrous. Anyway, one can even argue on humanitarian grounds that something should be done to make sure there are no evictions at this particular time.

It has also been suggested to me from time to time that we are meddling in an area where we should not be meddling. I would suggest to the House that the mass eviction of anywhere from 250 to 500 people in any community in any part of this province would necessitate this Legislature somehow being involved. I really answer that charge that is made to us by saying that if this kind of mass eviction were to occur anywhere in the province, I am sure we would somehow be involved in it.

I do not in any way countenance the fact or the argument, or give any credence to the argument, that we should not be involved in this, because I think we are involved in many areas, particularly when the whole resolution of this problem concerns an act of this Legislature which could or would have to be amended. Therefore, of necessity we must be involved in the problem and, in fact, by amendment in 1956 we started the whole trend towards having the island as a Metro park, so we were involved back then and we are legitimately involved now.

Mr. Nixon: The government? Or Scarborough?

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, the government. The government in 1956 amended the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act at the request of Metro and the city of Toronto to change the ownership of the island from Toronto to Metro for the purpose of creating a park, so at that particular time the Legislature was involved and had to be involved. That section is the one that is in there and that is the section that still provides that the island should become a Metro park. The only way that can be changed is by us changing that section.

Since it is an act of this Legislature, we properly are involved. That is why I really reject the idea that somehow we should never be involved in this at all, because we were involved and we probably will continue to be involved.

I do not want to take any more time on my opening statement, other than to say that the events surrounding this are well known. What we have here today is a simple bill to stay the execution of the writs until next July, which will allow the Swadron commission to report and will allow all of us to study that report. It is hoped that out of that report will come some resolution to the problem.

I would say at this time I hope that all who receive the report will read it, and not reject it out of hand without reading it. I hope the members of the Metropolitan Toronto council will read that report and will read it with an open mind rather than, as I have heard some of them do already, predeciding what is going to be in there and prejudging the report. That would be a tragedy, because I think Mr. Swadron is taking a lot of time, based on the evidence presented to him, to come up with some solutions and to give some historic background that perhaps has not been presented before. I hope that report will be considered on its merits and the only way it can be considered on its merits is for us not to interfere with anybody at this time. That is what this bill does.

I might also say, for those who are concerned that it might somehow cause more legal battles concerning the writs, that the law officers of the crown inform us it is not interfering with the writs, in that the writs will still be valid after July 1, 1981. We are not setting up a process whereby more legal manoeuvres can occur after that. It is merely stalling the execution of those writs for the reasons we have just stated. I would hope it will be supported by all members of this House.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the minister has been guilty of a certain degree of brinkmanship in bringing forward this bill. It has been obvious for three weeks that the bill would be necessary, and here it is before the House for three readings on the very day before the execution of the writs. I know the minister has had a certain amount of difficulty, perhaps with his own colleagues, in this connection because I think it has been made clear in public statements that both the Liberals and the New Democrats not only have been expecting the bill, but in fact have been demanding it.

We would agree with the statement, if not the tone of the minister's comments, that it would be a ridiculous thing indeed if the island residents were dispossessed in the middle of November. We are also aware that this matter has gone on for many months—in fact years—and whether we like it or not the final decision of what is going to happen on the island is going to be made in this House.

I sense the minister, in his emphasis on the importance of the Swadron commission and the investigation coming under the direction of Barry Swadron, has made his own decision and that is that he will do whatever the commissioner recommends. He is advising us so sincerely—and he does that very well—not to prejudge the commissioner's report, but I suppose the fate of the island community has already been judged by almost all members of this House.

We have listened to the argument put forward by the member for St. Andrew-St. Patrick (Mr. Grossman) in a most impassioned way. As a matter of fact, he has convinced me of the correctness of his position. I do not expect to see the House or the government itself move in a way to allow the dispossession of the present residents on the island.

I visited the island in the presence of many thousands of Torontonians at the great CHIN picnic. It is always representative of at least three political parties and a couple of others that are not really there except in spirit. It is always a great event. I remember even as a boy going to Centre Island, riding the merry-go-round and grabbing the brass ring. That is something all of us have heard of, but I think I am the only one who ever did it. It was the last piece of good luck I ever had. After having had such a long ride, I think I was then promptly sick, but that is another matter.

I do believe, however, that parks on the island are a great thing and necessary for the metropolitan area. I do believe that in the areas that are available for them, the metropolitan area has an extensive area for recreation, yacht clubs and other facilities. I think it is a marvellous thing for the benefit of this community, something that would lead me to think even more highly of Metropolitan Toronto as a place to live than I do now. I most sincerely love this city.

I do not, however, feel it is necessary to kick everybody off the two islands, Ward's and Algonquin. If the Legislature votes to do that eventually, I will be very surprised.

The minister has gone to some lengths in his opening remarks to fend off any criticism of interference in local affairs, indicating it was an amendment by this House that established the concept of a park in the first instance. I suppose we are all very sensitive about this intrusion into local affairs but, in spite of that sensitivity, I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, the final decision on what happens on the island is going to be made in this House and not elsewhere.

I know the minister feels he has a special persuasive power in dealing with the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto, but for some reason that well-known persuasiveness is not effective with the present chairman. The chairman is adamant that the decisions of Metro must stand and any interference from outside is unwarranted and to be opposed at all costs. He was even prepared to instruct the sheriff to go forward with the dispossession.

I presume since the minister was criticized for using immoderate language with regard to the sheriff—and he says he was not referring to the sheriff as being stupid and inhumane—then he must apply that criticism to the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto. I see the minister shaking his head. He does not want to call anybody stupid and inhumane. I know what a kind man the minister is and how unflappable he is. We can only assume then that some of his advisers have put these adjectives in his mind and in his mouth and probably he has discussed this matter with them already.

I suppose a person in politics who, like the minister is upwardly mobile, must be very careful indeed as to what sort of advice he gets from those people who are thinking only of his own benefit. They want to be helpful, but sometimes in their very helpfulness they can be injurious. It is a lesson I learned myself far too late, but perhaps the minister with his well-known moderation and good humour, which I have seen break down only on rare occasions and then perhaps only by misunderstanding, still has time. He must be careful to see that in the months that lie ahead he is not led into this ridiculous trap whereby upwardly mobile politicians fall into the hands of managers who can do nothing but harm them.

I could embark on a longer treatise on this, but I know the minister was very embarrassed. In using the words "stupid" and "inhumane" he certainly got our attention, but he has been busy ever since denying they apply to anybody. As a matter of fact, he said they applied to the day, that it was a stupid and inhumane day, so I suppose that is all right. We know he really meant the chairman of the council of Metropolitan Toronto, because he is the person who has been intransigent in this matter.

Hon. Mr. Crossman: I have been looking for some answers like that. I need some answers to teach me some moderation.

Mr. Nixon: You have ripped off the Treasury. Why don't you look at the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs? There are a couple of good plums sitting there who are looking for a winner.

Mr. Speaker, I will accept your instruction to proceed. I simply say it is unpalatable for us in this House to be dealing with matters which, by our previous action, we have given to the municipalities—the lower-tier municipalities have been involved to some degree—especially the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto. Now that we do not like its actions, we are prepared to draw back and instruct it otherwise.

I am glad the minister has abandoned the concepts of Bill 5. I guess it was a week or 10 days ago when there was a mild little flurry from the minister, once again considerably out of character. He got up and harangued the people in the opposition for their bad judgement in not supporting the principle of Bill 5. If Bill 5 comes forward in any other form, even as a recommendation from Barry Swadron, it will not be supported on this side either.

We do not want to prejudice what Mr. Swadron recommends, but if his recommendation is to take each property as the owner or occupant moves away or dies and have it transferred to the jurisdiction of Metropolitan Toronto to be torn down, which is the minister's solution to this, we will not support it whether it comes from Swadron, John Robarts or any of the other Tory gurus who are going to be involved in this solution. The Tories can't agree among themselves, either on the front bench or involving the lesser Tories who get more money working in unelected capacities in the Metro government.

We really cannot help the members opposite to come to a conclusion among themselves. In the past we have suggested they retire to one of those back rooms at the Albany Club and come to some solution that would be, I should not say saleable, but acceptable, and they have failed miserably.

Bill 5 is not the solution now and it never will be. I hope the minister is listening to me as he peruses that piece of paper so carefully, because I hope the last we will hear of Bill 5 was that little flurry he gave us in the House 10 days ago.

This bill puts the whole thing on ice until next July. We know that is a good date. The provincial election will be over and the new government—it may be a new government made up of new Tories, although I predict and expect otherwise—can look at it. Certainly we feel on this side that the island community should be maintained, and if it requires an amendment to the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, so be it.

Unpalatable though we may think this is, the disposition of this matter lies in this House. Even in July, supposing there isn't an election and we are here in our same situation, God forbid, it will once again be debated here and the government of the day, finally, when pushed to extremes—if it is Tory—will move another bill that will postpone it again.

12:10 p.m.

I sincerely hope the Swadron report will be a moderate report. I presume it will be moderate, knowing Mr. Swadron's reputation, but will allow for a continuation of the island community. I have been consistent in my support of that concept.

That was why, when the Minister of Industry and Tourism made a strong statement in his more callow years about playing hardball in this connection—being fresh from saving Doctors Hospital from extermination—and undertook to sway the views of cabinet in support of the island community, frankly, I admired what he did. I thought probably the salvation of the Doctors Hospital was sort of an inside drop ball, but this one seems really to be a battle.

The fact that this bill is so late in coming forward means the minister and the administration of Ontario have had difficulties we do not understand. Presumably they have been able to walk over the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto because he likes his job. He may have even threatened not to run for the Legislature, or to run for the Liberals or something like that, unless the government did what he wanted, but the minister has even been able to overcome threats like that.

I feel the problems the minister has may be in cabinet council or with caucus at large. Frankly, I resent a little bit the way he has left the House hanging on the introduction of this bill. He was critical of our attitude on Bill 5, but he had no reasonable alternative until Bill 181, a Band-Aid measure, was presented to us today for three readings and royal assent all at once.

Mr. Rotenberg: We had one reading yesterday.

Mr. Nixon: Two readings and royal assent or, let us say, three references in this chamber. I have no hesitation in supporting it and I express to you, Mr. Speaker, my view that in the long run the chamber will vote to maintain the island community.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I rise to fondly give the speech I was going to give every time the other bill kept coming up, but I am not going to give it because it was at least an hour and a half in length and gave the full history of the island.

I think this Bill 181 should be described as the better-late-than-never bill. I come at it with mixed emotions as much as did the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk who just spoke. I am pleased to see it has come through. Obviously we are in favour of it and obviously we are going to support it, because it never needed to be done in the way it has been done. There is a certain amount of anger in me that it has come up in the way it has.

It is brinkmanship, waiting until the future of the island is hanging over the cliff and then the government seems to pluck it out and save it in the Perils of Pauline style with a train coming down the track. In point of fact, this government has been an accomplice in tying the islanders down on that track, and it controls the purse strings of the engineer who is bringing the train down the track.

The government had the ability to stop this thing long ago and did not have to try to build an unnatural and unfair suspense about the fate of these islanders as has been done. It is a singular sign of the failure of power on those front benches of the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry), the Minister of Industry and Tourism and the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs that they had all this problem in getting this thing together and getting it before us at this date. The problems in the government caucus must be extreme, I would say.

I would have thought it would have been far better from the beginning to have come forward with a bill that was not Bill 5 after the minister saw it was unacceptable to us. Many months ago, when he set up the Swadron commission, it would have been better to have done that with an act, and to have said in that act he was setting up this commission which would report back to this House because we are involved and it is our responsibility. We would then debate it and make a decision on it. That would have been far better than the kind of approach the minister has taken to this date.

I am not going to go into the reasons we support the islanders. They have laid out that case well and we have laid out that case well; there is no need to do that again. I want to raise two items. One is that anybody in this Legislature who would not say we have an obligation to protect that community with its history, a community with roots, a community that does not need to be taken over for park land, is crazy and is out of step with the people of Metropolitan Toronto. The other is that those people who claim they cannot interfere in municipal business because Metro council brought forward the suggestion are also working on a fallacious interpretation.

Surely what we have is a community of 650,000—or whatever the city of Toronto is now—very strongly wanting to preserve one of its communities, and, in my view, an indirectly elected, unaccountable council overriding those wishes and being supported by this government. If this is not enough reason for the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs to change the format of election of Metro council, I do not know what is.

I appeared before the good Tory lawyer, Mr. Swadron; I do not know whether any of the rest of the members did. I did not see too many names I recognized on the list of people who had appeared. I was pleased with the hearing he gave me. I am convinced the report he is going to come forward with is going to have some interesting recommendations we should all look at. I would like to have a commitment from the minister today, in view of the fact that I am going to support unequivocally what he is bringing forward, that we will have a chance to discuss this in the Legislature when it comes forward.

I would like to hear the minister, when he wraps up, indicate whether we are going to have a chance to talk about Swadron here in the Legislature, because I feel we should. We are in the ball game; it is in our court. He has taken that on today, he has accepted that responsibility; now let him bring in the Legislature to discuss the results.

I would just say that the timing of the bill, the date for the end of June, was an interesting one. It seems to tie into the budget timetable of the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman). I guess we know that ties in not just with good weather and the humanity of not evicting the people at this point, but also with the timing of a prospective election. No doubt one of the things going on in the minds of caucus members over there is that, by passing this bill, the minister is not going to have to deal with the solution to the Swadron suggestions, when they come forward, until after an election.

I am giving the minister notice we are going to expect him to come through with his recommendations to do with Swadron well before an election. We will give the minister a month or month and a half to look over Swadron. But by goodness, in January, February or whenever this House comes back—immediately this House comes back—we want the minister's recommendations on what is going to happen to the islanders. Do not leave it until June 30; do not play with those people again.

The minister has given himself enough time to come through with his recommendations, bring them before this House, have us debate them and pass through a long-term solution for those people. I place squarely on the shoulders of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs the mess we are in now in terms of passing this thing in one day.

I believe his speech 10 days ago, or whenever it was, when he talked about there being three options, was a false political speech which used these people unfairly. When one speaks of inhumanity, I feel that was inherent in what he was doing. Those first two options were not options. Metro could not move. There was not going to be another Metro council meeting. The Metro chairman could not act unilaterally and the minister knew that.

Option one had no relevance at all and yet he threw it out again as one of the possibilities and played games with it. Then the minister came back with Bill 5. He knew it was not acceptable to the opposition here; he knew it was not acceptable to the islanders. It was not even acceptable to Robert Bundy of Metro Parks and Property who made a presentation to the Swadron commission saying that any kind of attrition or slow death bill was unacceptable. The minister knew that was not an option, so why did he play politics with it and then get the rednecks in his caucus, whom he was having trouble controlling, inflamed? That is what happened; that is why they got their backs up and why he had trouble getting this thing through. It was totally unnecessary to mess around with them in that way.

I want the minister to tell us today whether he is going to ask the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry) to look into the sheriff's office in terms of what it tried to do with Toronto Hydro and Consumers' Gas. I understand the sheriff's office had to act in sending out the eviction notices, which it had obviously sent out before, but did it have to go to Toronto Hydro and say: "We want you to participate with us. We want you to drive your truck in behind us and as we close down the house we are going to ask you to shut the hydro off. Then we will have the parks truck in right after that and they will hammer the place up and it will be closed"? Surely that was going further than the sheriff's office had to go. Asking for confidential lists of people who were receiving services from Consumers' Gas and Toronto Hydro was unnecessary.

I think the Attorney General should look into that as it was a totally unnecessary kind of provocative act by the sheriff's office. If the sheriff's office is under the control of the Ministry of the Attorney General, I see no reason why he could not have at least slapped their wrists for that kind of action.

There are a few things I would like to say to the minister before I can support the bill. I want to assure him we will not support Bill 5 if it comes back, and I don't expect it will come back. I expect the Swadron commission report to contain a number of items the islanders have already asked for. I expect him to say the land should be left in public ownership. I expect him to say something about a 25-year lease, much as they have given to the yacht club on the islands. I will be very surprised if he does not come through with a review of that. I do not doubt that he will say those buildings have to be raised to a certain standard. That is totally acceptable to the islanders and totally acceptable to any rational person on this side of the House as well, and there are many of us.

The final item on the islanders' position which I spoke about when I spoke with Swadron is that the homes and leases should be done on a nonprofit basis. If it can be done on a co-operative basis, even better. I think you are going to see suggestions like that come through from Swadron. An attrition type of bill is not going to be acceptable to us at all.

I also want to be sure we have a debate in the House on the Swadron commission report and I want assurance from the minister that he is not going to wait until June 30 to bring forward a solution to the island problems for the long term. I would like to hear from the minister on those three things before the debate is concluded. Thank you.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to take the time of the House to repeat the kinds of messages I have given in this House previously, nor to repeat the message I delivered in my presentation to the Swadron commission. Suffice to say something members opposite want to forget, I am gratified that all members of this House are supportive of the proposition that the islands matter should be referred to an impartial, careful study which is being conducted by Mr. Swadron. Like other members who have spoken, I am quite satisfied the Swadron commission is being conducted in that kind of sensible and impartial fashion and I look forward to a balanced recommendation flowing from it.

The kind of balanced recommendation I think anyone looking at it objectively will present is well known to members of this House because my position has been as clear and as historical as anyone else in the assembly can claim. I want to make the point that my colleagues who have joined in our attempts to prevent too expeditious and too hasty action being taken on this matter are all concerned about being sure there is fairness adopted in whatever stance we take.

It is a little harder to deal with when we have two councils with some claim to authority dramatically disagreeing on what should happen there. My goal has always been to accomplish one simple thing. I cannot pretend it is not a goal to retain a community there. It is a goal I am proud of and one for which I have always fought.

Secondly, I have always believed an impartial, fair hearing, devoid of the kind of political posturing that frankly city council has seen and frankly Metro council has seen and frankly this assembly has seen, is what is necessary to get a sensible resolution to the matter. I think that is what we are going to see coming out of the Swadron commission and to that end I take some pride in the fact that as a member for a particular and unique community I am able to stand here as part of a government that has taken steps to ensure a fair hearing of those issues.

I must be honest and say that I take some personal pride in the fact I have carried this fight forward on behalf of a particular neighbourhood and community in my riding that has never voted for me nor, as I indicated to the Swadron commission, do I expect ever will vote for me. Those who attest political motives to me should have a look at the results of the polls over on the islands. That is not going to change, regardless of the outcome of the Swadron commission, though I certainly wish it would. It happens to be something I believe in in terms of the principle.

I am also, as one of those charged with executive duties in the government of Ontario, concerned about and have to be aware of the responsibilities we bear to the councils involved and those who have been given certain responsibilities by us to manage over the past 20 or 25 years. It is a little harder to work out the solutions in government and a little easier to posture when one is not. It is a little harder to work out a solution and fight for a principle when those who will benefit from the principle I am fighting for in this case will continue to provide no support and, in fact, vote against me.

None the less, I take some pride, as I guess I have in other matters in my riding that I have fought for, in the fact that we are able to stand here today and see the islanders still there and in place two years after the courts have ruled that the writs are valid and that they could be evicted.

With those short remarks, I am hoping the House will join us in at least giving the Swadron commission the opportunity to complete its hearings and all of us a chance to read that impartial and objective analysis and act upon it. I am pleased to join our House leader and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs in supporting this legislation.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I want to speak just briefly to this particular bill and indicate that we are going to support the bill, as our House leader indicated earlier.

Obviously, it is long overdue and there was no need to have to wait until the eleventh hour to bring in this bill to stay the various writs. It is shown or seen as a death-bed repentance on behalf of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs who has in the final hours been able to convince some of his colleagues in the cabinet that they should at least do something before those writs are issued on Monday.

I think it is quite clear to everyone in Metropolitan Toronto, if not in Ontario, that there is overwhelming support for the community to be retained on the islands. A survey done some short time ago by some very able people from Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, called Attitude Of Metropolitan Toronto Residents Towards the Toronto Island Community, reveals that about 78 per cent of Metro residents support the retention of the island community. Only six per cent of Metro residents feel the community should be removed.

In other words, there are a number of people there who do not have any strong opinion on it, but an overwhelming support, 78 per cent as shown in that survey, indicates that it wants to retain the island community as it is at present. They do not want this inch-by-inch decaying or inch-by-inch taking down of that particular community, as was recommended in Bill 5, which obviously the government will have to withdraw once the Swadron report is introduced in the Legislature.

I want to comment briefly on the meddling that this Legislature is accused of by interfering with the island community. As we know, when various organizations or various groups or municipalities get grants from the province they do not accuse the province of meddling in their affairs. They are always anxious to have those particular grants and do not feel it is meddling when they accept money from the provincial government for various purposes. However, the government is sometimes accused of meddling in those affairs when it passes legislation that whatever that organization is does not agree with.

It reminds me of the case where I met with a number of people. I suppose they could be classified as small-c conservatives. They said: "Look, we do not want any more government regulations. We have too much government now and we do not want any more government." The second item of that agenda was, "Yes, we need higher tariffs to protect our manufacturing goods." They did not want any more government, yet they wanted more government interference in the protection of manufactured goods in the province and the country. It depends on which side of the issue one is on and what serves one's purposes at the time.

I think the province is on the right track by bringing in Bill 181 to stay the various writs. It would be my hope, and I am sure the hope of all members of this Legislature, that when the Swadron report does come in it is going to recommend the continuation of that community to give them a long lease on life.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to participate in this debate because the brinkmanship of the government has brought us to a kind of latter-day Perils of Pauline four days prior to the eviction being exercised by the writs of possession. That is far too close. I do not like that kind of brinkmanship which has characterized the government's handling of the island issue for far too long. None the less, we welcome the fact that the government has agreed to have a stay of execution by means of this legislation until the Swadron report can be published and, I hope, debated in the Legislature and action taken.

I hope very much, as my colleague from Scarborough West has already indicated, the action that will be taken by the government will be public and will be in place prior to the election taking place—if it takes place in the spring, as now seems likely. I do not think this should be used as a political football any more. The future of the island community should be guaranteed. Whatever workable kinds of solutions are proposed by the Swadron report, or can be developed on the basis of it, should be in place. We should no longer have empty promises from the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman), and we should no longer have politicians having to fight over that issue.

One reason I say that is that New Democrats would be fighting for a community like the island anywhere in the province. We have shown that by the kind of actions we have taken in the past with respect to other communities as well. Whether it is the miners up in Atikokan, the people affected by the closing of the Moose Mountain mine in Capreol, the auto workers in Windsor, the people in Mechanicsville and Centretown in my riding of Ottawa Centre, or the workers in small bush communities who worked in the woods for Boise Cascade until they were affected by that company's unfair labour practices, we have fought for people across the province and we are fighting for people on the island as well.

The second thing is that the island is a symbolic issue about the kind of communities we are going to have, not just in Toronto but everywhere across the province. I speak as a former islander. Some people know that in 1973 and 1974 I brought my family down here and we lived on Toronto Island for a year. It was one of the happiest years we have spent as a family in my entire married life. It was and is a community that is warm, friendly, co-operative and outgoing, a community that believes in self-help, a community that has demonstrated by the determination and doggedness of their fight for survival the kinds of resources there are in a small group of people when they have created that kind of community entity.

I asked myself, is that not the kind of community life I would like to have here, living in Toronto or in my home in Ottawa? Is that not the kind of life we all look for? Do we not all have a bit of a hankering for the village and small-town life that some of us experienced as youngsters and perhaps do not have right now? I'm thinking of places where there was an intimate relationship, where you knew the person who ran the shop or where your great-aunt lived down the street or where you were involved with other people in that community. Is this not what planners have been getting at for the last 35 years—the creation of urban villages where people would be able to interrelate on a face-to-face basis and not just be faceless and nameless blobs who pass like ships in the night?

Is not the existence of the island community—perhaps this is where the symbolism comes in—kind of an affront to those forces in our society which support the Conservative Party, those forces in business and commerce which would like everybody to be atomized, to be living in a little box, in a little shell, in a little apartment, to have no interrelationship with people up and down the hall or the street or around the corner, to have no interrelationship with their fellow workers on the job, and therefore to be powerless against the forces of big business, of multinational corporations, against the forces of advertising and other people who try to make everything in human life something where you consume, you buy, buy, buy and you work, work, work, rather than ever having a community life where you can simply enjoy, savour and take pleasure in the growth of children, as I still do in the case of the young children who were born five and six years ago when I lived on Toronto Island, and take pleasure in contact with people of different generations, as people do on the island where people from eight months to 80 years live side by side and interrelate together?

Is a community like the island not worth preserving as well, when we consider that if Hydro were intending to put a dam in Ontario and the Friends of the Earth pointed out that the dam was going to flood a unique ecological area with some unique flora or fauna that were not duplicated elsewhere in the province, the chances are everybody's hearts would go out and we would say, "No, that has got to be preserved; do the dam in a different way"?

When we have a unique piece of human ecology, a community like no other community in all of Canada and probably like no other community in all of North America, and when Conservatives like Paul Godfrey and his buddies on Metro council come along and ruthlessly move to stamp that out, then I think something unique like that should be preserved.

At a time when we are increasingly confronting the problems of the energy crisis, should we not have some lessons to learn from a community that has no cars and survives without them? Should we not have some lessons to learn from a community where people live cheek by jowl on lots 40 or 50 feet by 40 or 50 feet at a density that is almost unheard of in most of our urbanized areas with low-rise housing, and yet manage to survive as well as the islanders do? Are there not a lot of lessons there?

I am glad the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs agrees with me, that his colleagues in the Conservative caucus have been brought to agree with him as well, and that this particular bill is now in place. It is still only temporary and we need a long-term solution. I am very concerned over the fact that this whole episode would not have had to occur if, on the one hand, we had not had the machinations of Paul Godfrey and his friends and if, on the other hand, we had not had a structure of two-tier government in Metropolitan Toronto which so inadequately responds to the very clear, determined and declared will, not just of the people of Toronto, but of the vast majority of people in Metropolitan Toronto as well.

This government has delayed for so long on the restructuring of Metro government that it has helped to create the problem. The two-tier structure where Metro had control over the parks was an inadequate one when it was the people of Toronto, first and foremost, who wanted to preserve the island community. If Paul Godfrey had to be elected somewhere within Metropolitan Toronto to qualify for nomination to the post of Metro chairman, then the islanders and the people who feel with them would have been able to go out and talk face to face to the constituents of Paul Godfrey and seek their support. I predict that, if the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto six or eight years ago had had a chairman who was an elected official and not just an appointed official, we would not have had this island problem we have today.

Mr. Rotenberg: That is total nonsense.

Mr. Cassidy: It is not total nonsense. The member for Wilson Heights says it is total nonsense. He should know perfectly well that, if Paul Godfrey had come under scrutiny of the people of Metropolitan Toronto in any corner of this area, the island matter would not have continued to be what amounted to a vendetta against the islanders. I say as well that, if Paul Godfrey and his Conservative friends had any commitment to preserving communities the way we have in the New Democratic Party, this would not have been an issue and a long-term solution to the island matter would have been found long before now.

What Godfrey and his friends seem to be saying is that because the decision was made back in the 1950s we have to continue with blinkers as though nothing has changed and as though people's perceptions of how communities should exist and how the city should exist have not changed at all.

We have thrown out the idea of block-busting. We have thrown out the idea of massive skyscrapers to house everybody in Metropolitan Toronto, Ottawa or our other cities. We have changed our views about the way a community like that on the islands could interrelate when it is in a park-like setting. We have grown to appreciate that, if it were not for the islanders, the Toronto Island would probably be closed to the public for six, seven or even eight months of the year and would be totally inaccessible. That would be done by Paul Godfrey in the name of economy or something like that.

I want to close by reiterating what my colleague from Scarborough West has said. When the Swadron report comes down, it must be available for debate in this House. There must be a commitment from the government to consult with the islanders, the city, Metro and other interested parties. There must be a commitment to have a resolution that will ensure the long-term survival of the island community and to have that resolution in place before we go into a provincial election campaign.

If we do not have it, we will know this bill was just another in a series of sham actions by this government and was not really dedicated to protecting the island community. It will be an election issue. I pray to God the government will accept that it should not be an election issue and that the islanders' future should be sorted out and guaranteed before the election campaign comes.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, just to conclude this debate quickly, there is no sham intended, nor can that charge be made against this piece of legislation. I outlined exactly why it is being introduced.

Mr. Cassidy: Nor against the minister; I quite acknowledge that.

Hon. Mr. Wells: All right. The Swadron report will be brought in and discussed. We will have to decide how it will be discussed when we have the report. It is not normal for this House to debate reports made by royal commissions except when, on various occasions, we put it on the Order Paper and call it for discussion. I think we should wait and see the report before deciding if that is the vehicle we want to take. If it is necessary, it can be discussed, but I think we should wait and see the report. Of course, this House will have ample opportunity to discuss the report in the estimates of the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs as it always discusses many things.

The kinds of remarks that were attributed to the three options I put forward a few weeks ago, remarks that these were strictly a political smokescreen et cetera, I feel were completely unfounded. All the options have within them a degree of achievability and they cannot be ruled out of hand immediately. The suggestion that they were strictly a political smokescreen should not have been put forward. It is not a viable thing.

Bill 5 is still a piece of legislation that is supported by a number of people.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: The islanders don't support it.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The New Democratic Party and the Liberal Party do not support it. Some of the islanders do not support it; some do. As I recall, the Toronto Star suggests that it is the solution to the island situation. That is one group of people—I will still use the term "group"—who feel that is an option. What I recall saying then was that if the House wished to pass that bill it would be one way of stopping the writs from being served immediately.

It was also within the power of the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto to call Metro council together if he wished, or if a number of people on Metro council wished, and to ask that the writs not be served. It cannot be said that was a frivolous suggestion.

The third suggestion is the one we are acting upon today. We had three alternatives, all of which could have prevented the islanders from being evicted at this time. We have now opted for the third one, but I resent the fact that people said the others were some kind of shim-sham or political opportunism that really had no validity to them. I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, they all have validity to them, and it just happens the third one is now the practical one we can put into effect.

We can now pass this bill, I hope, since all parties in this House have indicated support. We can pass the bill and then await the Swadron commission report, and all of us can look at that. I hope from it will come the basis for a permanent solution.

Motion agreed to.

Third reading also agreed to on motion.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I am informed that His Honour is awaiting a call to come into the House.

12:50 p.m.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario entered the chamber of the Legislative Assembly and took his seat upon the throne.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

MINISTRY RESTRUCTURING

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the House today of a number of organizational changes that will be introduced shortly to my ministry's head office organization.

Honourable members will recall that two years ago I announced the first phase of a major ministry restructuring. That first phase included establishment of two major delivery divisions: children's services and adults' services. It also included the designation of four regional offices for each of the divisions, and a network of area and local offices with reporting relationships to their respective regional centres.

Those initial steps were taken to create an organization at both the regional and area levels that possessed a greater degree of decision making through increased delegation of authority. As a result of those changes, we have been able to develop a field structure that is more sensitive to local and regional needs and priorities, and an organization that possesses the capability to work closely with our partners in the social services field.

While that phase of our reorganization is complete, we must move now to improve and to increase the corporate capacity and effectiveness of the ministry. In essence, we intend to introduce an organization at head office and at the regional level that: (1) builds upon the strengths of the existing organization; (2) retains a focal point for continued momentum and stewardship of the children's services division and adult services division initiatives; (3) provides a structure where the advocacy voices on behalf of children and adults can have clear and separate points of access to the ministry; (4) furthers the decentralization of operations decision making to the field and strengthens the capacity of the area office to provide leadership to service delivery activities, and

(5) improves the ministry's mid-term and long-term planning and policy harmonization.

I would now like to describe briefly the new head office and regional structure, its objectives and its senior staff.

Effective January 1, 1981, there will be three divisions: children's and adults' operations; children's and adults' policy and program development, and finance and administration.

The children's and adults' operations division will consolidate delivery of all ministry programs—in other words, the current programs and service to children and adults, including income maintenance and institutional care. Continued decentralization and increased delegation of authority will be achieved by the appointment of one regional director for each of the northern, southeastern and southwestern regions. In the short term, due to its complexity, the central region will be headed by two directors, one for children's programs and the other for adults' services. The existing area offices for children's and adults' services will be retained.

I am pleased to announce that Peter Barnes has accepted the position of assistant deputy minister of this new division. I am also pleased to announce that the policy and program development division will be headed by the associate deputy minister, Judge George Thomson, who, as members are aware, is currently responsible for the children's services programs. That division will bring together the policy development and related program functions from throughout the ministry. In this way, the overall planning process will take on a clear, corporate thrust within the context of the family.

When the children's services division was established in 1977, it was agreed that an organization focal point was needed to consolidate programs and carry out a comprehensive policy review. This focal point is being maintained within George Thomson's division by the establishment of an executive co-ordinator of children's policy. This position will be responsible for the stewardship of children's programs and the continued development of initiatives such as the omnibus legislation. The current finance and administration division will not change substantially as a result of this restructuring.

I would like to announce two other senior staff appointments at this time. John Anderson has accepted the position of senior adviser to the minister. In that capacity, in addition to working closely with the minister on policy and operational matters, Mr. Anderson will be responsible on behalf of the minister and the deputy minister for high-level liaison with special interest groups and service users and will undertake special inquiries and issue resolutions as critical matters arise. Glen Heagle has agreed to accept a new position, that of executive co-ordinator for federal-provincial relations. In that role, Mr. Heagle will undertake a review with our counterparts in Ottawa of cost sharing and constitutional social policy issues.

I am confident that the changes I am announcing will result in an even greater capacity to design, develop and deliver programs and services. I am equally confident that there will be no adverse impact on program delivery during the implementation of these changes.

INCREASE IN SOCIAL ASSISTANCE

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise the House and the public of changes to income maintenance programs of my ministry, which will come into effect in January and February 1981.

I am pleased to say that cabinet, as announced in the recent statements of the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller), has approved an additional annual expenditure of approximately $49 million to increase by seven per cent the allowances being paid to family benefits recipients and to those who receive general welfare assistance. The increases in allowances to recipients under the family benefits program will be reflected in the cheques issued at the end of January 1981. Increases to general welfare recipients will be shown in the cheques issued at the beginning of February 1981.

The increased allowances will benefit approximately 115,000 recipients of family benefits and 70,000 general welfare recipients. The last increase was an overall 10 per cent, which took effect in April and May of this year. I would like to point out that this is an interim adjustment to compensate for inflation effects. I must stress that this is not to be interpreted as the basic rate adjustment for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

There are a number of other related changes, which I will address briefly. Benefits for about 1,200 people under the work incentives program will be increased from between $25 and $65 per month, depending on family size. The maximum amount of the handicapped children's benefits will be increased by $25, from $175 to $200 per month. Also, the earned-income level at which benefit reduction starts has been raised by $2,000, from $22,000 to $24,000.

The exemptions on part-time earnings will be increased from between $15 and $40 a month for recipients of family benefits. Assets ceilings for family benefits clients will be increased from between 60 and 150 per cent, depending on family size and client type being served. For example, assets ceilings for a mother with two children will increase from the current level of $2,800 to $5,500 in January 1981.

Municipalities throughout the province will be permitted to make comparable adjustments to the needs test and assets exemption under the homemakers' and nurses' services program. The phase-out benefits for persons going from family benefits allowance to full-time employment will be increased by $25, from $225 to $250.

I am also pleased to announce another step in our continuing efforts to assist the handicapped in making the transition from institutional to community living as easily as possible. As of January 1981, we are implementing a discharge allowance of up to $337 for persons leaving institutions to take up residence in the community.

I have had fact sheets prepared showing some examples of these changes, which will be distributed to the members opposite and other interested persons. I believe they are appended to the statement as circulated.

CONSTRUCTION LIEN LEGISLATION

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure today of tabling a discussion paper on the draft Construction Lien Act. This discussion paper will be of great interest to all those concerned with the construction industry of this province.

The purpose of the discussion paper is to propose a replacement to Ontario's 107-year-old Mechanics' Lien Act. The suggested replacement—the draft Construction Lien Act—is the product of considerable discussion between officials of my ministry and the various segments of the construction industry: owners, developers, financial institutions, architects, engineers, contractors and labour unions.

Construction lien legislation is vitally important to Ontario's construction industry. Its objective is to protect the thousands of tradesmen, labourers and small contracting businesses who provide their services to improve the property of others. The draft Construction Lien Act contained in the discussion paper is intended to deal with a number of problems that have prevented the existing Mechanics' Lien Act from achieving this objective.

For example, the existing act requires an owner to retain a portion of the contract price payable to the general contractor. This holdback is to be used to pay lien claims of subcontractors, tradesmen and workmen involved in the project. However, very often these persons find the owner has spent the money he was required to retain as a holdback; there is no money available, therefore, to satisfy the claims of the lien claimants.

Although the act gives constructors a right to enforce their claim against the owner's property, this right will often be subordinate to the claims of mortgagees. If the value of the mortgage, including accrued interest, exceeds the value of the premises, then the right of the lien claimant against the premises is illusory. For this reason, the discussion paper proposes that the holdback on major projects be paid into a joint trust account, thereby ensuring the money will be available if needed.

Although it is proposed that the home owners be bound by the draft Construction Lien Act, there are a number of provisions in the draft act that would reduce the impact of the lien legislation on consumer home improvements. For example, the requirement to pay the holdback into a joint trust account, which I just mentioned, does not apply where the value of the work to be done is less than $150,000. It would not apply therefore to a home owner who was paving his driveway or installing a swimming pool.

The draft act also proposes reducing the amount of the holdback from 15 per cent to 10 per cent of the contract price. Thus, even if a home owner did not retain the required holdback, his maximum liability would be reduced to 10 per cent of the contract price.

The draft Construction Lien Act contained in the discussion paper addresses a large number of other problems with the existing legislation. Many of these problems result from the language of the existing act, much of which is simply incomprehensible to those who must rely on it. The ambiguities of the existing legislation often result in huge sums of money being tied up in litigation, which in turn can cause serious difficulties for the people involved in a construction project.

The pervasive language problems of the existing legislation have been a major concern in preparing the draft Construction Lien Act. The draft act completely restructures and rewrites the lien legislation with a view to making it more comprehensible and accessible. Because of the complicated nature of the relations with which it must deal, any statute pertaining to construction liens is bound to be complex. However, a complex subject need not be incomprehensible. One major objective behind the preparation of the draft act has been the desire to produce a more straightforward, comprehensible piece of legislation, written in a style as simple as the subject will allow.

With the release of the discussion paper, I look forward to a period of active public discussion on the subject. I hope the various segments of the construction industry will offer suggestions as to how the draft Construction Lien Act can be improved and made more practical. The draft act is intended to serve as a model for discussion; I would like to emphasize it is not engraved in stone.

In addition, I will be establishing an advisory committee of experts in the field of construction liens who collectively will appreciate the lien legislation from the perspectives of all segments of the industry. The advisory committee will be meeting together to review the draft Construction Lien Act and making recommendations based on their personal experience and legal expertise. They will also be reviewing the comments and suggestions received from the public and will be making recommendations based on those submissions.

It is my sincere hope that the discussion paper I am tabling today will be the basis upon which the construction industry and the government, working together, will be able to devise for Ontario the best possible construction lien legislation.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

ATTENDANCE OF MINISTERS

Mr. S. Smith: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I realize there is not much you can do about this, but of 25 ministers who respond to questions, leaving out the chief government whip, a grand total of nine have deigned to show up today—here is number 10—which I would think brings the respect they have for this House into some perspective. I am not sure if there is anything you can do about that.

Mr. Speaker: No.

ORAL QUESTIONS

ECONOMIC EQUALITY FOR WOMEN

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I will direct a question to the Minister of Labour. Perhaps he is aware of the matter of two Waterloo co-operative program students, equal in experience, although possibly the woman among the two had better qualifications for the job, who were offered different salaries in applying to the Office of the Premier. I would ask him particularly if he recalls that about $430,000 has now been paid for an advertising campaign across Ontario that says in essence, "Paying a woman less than a man for doing substantially the same work is not just unfair, it is illegal."

Does the minister remember that ad and can he tell us, therefore, what investigation he is going to be doing of the Office of the Premier, where a differential in salary was offered, with the male being offered considerably more than the woman in this case, although any examination of the credentials would seem to indicate either equal experience or greater qualifications on the part of the woman? What investigation is the minister going to be doing, keeping in mind precisely that not only is it unfair, it is illegal?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, let there be no doubt that this is the position of this government: it is illegal and it is unfair.

It is with some degree of regret I point out that, as usual, without exploring beyond the story, the Leader of the Opposition has chosen to pick this up without investigating it himself or having someone else do it. I have already taken the opportunity of personally asking for a report on it. I think it is fair to say, at the very least and probably the very best, one could call it inaccurate sensationalism.

There is absolutely no doubt as to what happened, if I may state for the record the exact incident that took place. The present students on the staff in the Premier's office are paid approximately $200 if they are third-year students and $225 per week if they are fourth-year students. The particular man who was interviewed was told the salary ranges and he said he had been making considerably more than that at a previous co-op job he had, namely about $350. He was told he could not expect to receive anything in that range; it would be at least $100 less than that.

Somehow, in spite of the fact that the reporter was told the facts, that inaccuracy has been sustained by the question the member puts to me now and it is not true.

Mr. S. Smith: Supplementary: If the government wishes to continue its running battle with the Globe and Mail, it should feel entirely free to do so. Is the minister aware that when we called the director of placement services at the University of Waterloo, he admitted very clearly on the telephone that Mr. Ferdinand, who conducted the interviews for the Office of the Premier, did, in his words, "make an unfortunate mistake"?

Given that the Premier's office has been hiring co-op students from Waterloo for about four years, such a mistake in setting salary ranges is scarcely credible, and given the fact that this problem still exists in the Premier's office, will the minister admit now that his advertising campaign is rather ineffectual and a change in the laws of Ontario is exactly what is required to change this problem?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: No, I will not admit that the campaign has been ineffective. As a matter of fact, we have had more complaints and closed more cases in a period of six months than any other province has even started to look at.

Let me say to the member that equal pay for substantially the same work in this province is being enforced both on the basis of specific complaints and by way of audit. Let me also tell the member that just because he says it, does not make it right. The records show the Premier's office hires people on the basis of their qualifications and ability, and the story was wrong.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the minister's unqualified defence of the decision—

Hon. Mr. Elgie: No defence, just the facts.

Mr. Cassidy: In view of the minister's citing of the facts, is the minister aware that the decision to spend $485,000 to advertise this toothless equal pay law that we have in Ontario right now has so far this year resulted in only 122 awards, and in awards amounting to $72,000 or about four cents for every working woman in Ontario? Does that not really indicate that no amount of advertising can substitute for an effective law to give equal pay for work of equal value?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I can only thoroughly disagree with the statement that any teeth are missing from the act. If there are teeth missing, we had better take the leader of the third party's teeth out and check them.

I have to say that the number of complaints and the number of audits being carried out cannot be matched by any other government. I would say to the member that he may want to look only at the amount of money that is recovered but I look at the number of cases that are dealt with and future inequities that are dealt with.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, since the minister has still not said whether he is going to investigate this matter, I take it the minister is quite satisfied simply to have asked—

Mr. Rotenberg: He told the member. Why doesn't the member listen?

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, it is very difficult to speak above the rattling and yapping and nattering that come from the back row over there.

Mr. Speaker: Try to ignore it.

Interjections.

Mr. S. Smith: I will ask the minister, is he going to send one of his famous investigators to investigate this, or is he satisfied just to take the side given to him by a person in the Premier's office without personally talking to the students themselves to confirm their side of the story? Will he be investigating?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I have no problem in asking one of the investigators to look at this, but let me say, Mr. Speaker, I look on myself as a reasonable investigator and I have investigated. It is not true.

ACID RAIN

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Energy. He is undoubtedly aware that the second report on long-range transport of air pollution has come out indicating that the number of Ontario lakes killed by acid rain may already exceed 4,000, which is an almost thirtyfold increase over the number of lakes we knew about last year at this time.

Is the minister aware that Ontario Hydro's fossil fuel generating stations accounted for 30 per cent of Ontario's sulphur dioxide emissions? In light of the fact that recent discussions have taken place between the Deputy Minister of the Environment and Ontario Hydro, would the Minister of Energy finally, after repeated questioning, tell this House exactly what control orders he expects will be placed by the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) on the Hydro facilities in order to curb sulphur dioxide and nitrous oxide emissions?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, obviously I have some interest in the question but, as the question is put, the Leader of the Opposition is asking me to respond to what might be the activities of my colleague the Minister of the Environment. I do remind the Leader of the Opposition that this question was put to my colleague two or three weeks ago, as I recall, and he assured the House at that time that he had the matter in hand and we could expect some statement from him before too long in that regard.

I would point out that the figures in the article that the member refers to are based upon computer modelling and not necessarily upon actual fact in so far as the overall report is concerned. A great many of the initiatives with respect to acid rain have been taken on this side of the border and not on the other.

Certainly Ontario Hydro, if I could speak for it, is very cognizant of the importance and, as I reported to the House in response to a question on this subject some weeks ago, I have been expecting a report from the officials of Ontario Hydro as to what steps they might be able to take in order to help curb this particular rate of emission. Once I have that information, I will be glad to share it with the House. I will draw the concern of the Leader of the Opposition to the attention of my colleague when he returns, with respect to the responsibilities that are his.

Mr. S. Smith: Supplementary: Why is it that the Minister of Energy is always having to wait for other people? Why does he have to say that the Minister of the Environment will tell him what the plans are, or that Ontario Hydro might make a report to him?

May I ask the minister whether he intends to tell Hydro that they are going to have to clean up their act? At present, Nanticoke generating station alone in 1981-82 will be putting out, apparently, 727 short tons a day of sulphur dioxide; the way the trend is moving, Hydro will be putting out about 70 per cent of what Inco is going to be putting out. Is it not time that he, as Minister of Energy, spoke to the people at Hydro and instructed them to clean up their act, instead of being like some of the reticent corporations, waiting for the other minister to tell him what he has to do?

Hon. Mr. Welch: I am glad to have the supplementary because I did not want to create the impression that I was unmindful of the responsibilities that are mine to account to the House for the activities of the Hydro corporation.

We have asked the Hydro officials to take a very serious look at this matter and to come up with some proposals to reduce the rate of these toxic emissions. I think that, in all fairness, I should await their report. Once I have it, we will be quite prepared to take what action is considered practicable and in the interests of the environment and, indeed, of the health of the people to be affected.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The minister has qualified his answer in so many ways that it is impossible to know whether any effective measures will be taken to curb the sulphur dioxide emissions and their consequences in acid rain coming from Hydro. Could the minister explain why it is that in the constituency newsletter of the member for Simcoe Centre (Mr. G. Taylor) the problem is seen so much more simply that he reported to his constituents this fall that all governments on both sides of the border are committed to bringing the acid rain under control by 1982? Are we to take it, then, that this government is not committed to bringing the acid rain under control by 1982? Did the member for Simcoe Centre have it wrong?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I would rather be judged on what I finally do, rather than on speculation in advance of the decision. I do not apologize for that position. I would rather be taking some decisions based on some technical advice and then be judged on them, rather than engaging in speculative questions all this time and attempting to figure things out.

2:30 p.m.

TOMATO PROCESSING

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question to the minister responsible for promoting the sales of Ontario farm products. In this plain brown envelope are Ontario hothouse tomatoes; they come from the Niagara Peninsula, as a matter of fact. They really are excellent. I commend them to everybody on the government side.

Can the minister explain why Ontario hothouse tomatoes as magnificent as these ones here, which have been coming to market for the last two months, have been kept off the shelves of supermarkets in the Loblaws chain and have been appearing only irregularly in other supermarkets across the province, and why consumers as a consequence have had no choice in many cases but to buy imported tomatoes?

Mr. MacDonald: Say you don't know, Lorne.

Mr. Breaugh: Just admit you don't know.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: No. I would not say that.

Mr. Speaker, the honourable member who has brought this forth is well aware that we are promoting the sale of Ontario products at every opportunity. Wherever one goes, one sees our symbol of Ontario products. If he will give me the name of these tomatoes that he claims are kept off the shelf and where they come from, I will be glad to check into it.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the growers of hothouse tomatoes have had to sell some of their product at distress prices, and one of the major reasons is their being shut out of the shelves of Loblaws and other supermarkets, and since the imported product is being sold up to the price of the Canadian product in the supermarkets, even though the wholesale price is lower, can the minister say what the point is of this practice of supermarkets, if it is not just to give inflated profits to the supermarkets and no benefit to the consumers?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: The honourable member has brought out his concern now. He is as well aware as I am that the embargo is not high enough to protect our Ontario producers. That is the problem, and he is as well aware of it as I am.

Mr. Swart: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister not aware that a few years ago a private member of this Legislature wrote to Dominion Stores and asked them, concerning this problem, why they were not displaying the hothouse tomatoes in Ontario? Mr. Ivor Crimp, the vice-president of Dominion, wrote back saying: "We should have had them prominently displayed, properly marked and been active in our marketing effort concerning them. The public should have a chance to make their choice"? Does the minister not think that principle should apply today, and will he table in this House any correspondence he has had with the major supermarkets asking that they give prominent display to tomatoes grown in this province?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of tabling any communications that the honourable member has mentioned. The people of this province have had their opportunities to buy Ontario products.

Mr. Cassidy: Not at Loblaws.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: I have told the honourable members, if they will supply me with the names of farmers and greenhouse operators who are not able to get their tomatoes on the shelves, we will look into it and do something about it.

Mr. Cassidy: The minister is asking us to serve as his policemen, Mr. Speaker. I suggest the minister should do that himself.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I am just asking the member to give me the evidence he is speaking about, which he is not ready to produce.

Mr. Cassidy: We will bring it here. The government should do its job.

DUO-MATIC PLANT CLOSURE

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question for the Minister of Labour. Is the Minister of Labour aware of yet another plant closing that has taken place, this one being the Duo-Matic facility in Waterford, where 100 workers will have lost their jobs by December 31? Is the minister aware that not only do these workers not qualify for severance pay but also they will not receive any pension benefits? Since Waterford is in the vicinity of Brantford, where the major layoffs in the farm equipment industry have taken place, they also face a bleak future in terms of finding alternative employment.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I am aware that the Duo-Matic company, which manufactures oil furnaces, has announced there is a reduction in the market for their product and they will be closing down. The staff had some preliminary meetings with them and Mr. Joyce, my special adviser with regard to plant closings, has indicated this will be a case in which he will take a personal involvement. He is meeting with the parties either later this week or the beginning of next week.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the switch from oil to gas has been encouraged by public policy for several years and by what is clearly happening in terms of the relative prices of oil and gas, and when jobs are on the line at Duo-Matic and other companies making oil furnace equipment across the province, can the minister explain why there has not been a plan of rationalization in place to anticipate these shutdowns and to ensure a transfer or conversion to gas furnace or similar types of production where new jobs could be created? Why should the workers have to suffer layoffs with no secure future because of a lack of anticipation or planning by this government?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, rather than disagree with the member, I would think those would be the very questions Mr. Joyce will be putting to the company.

Mr. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does the minister recall receiving a letter from me about the shutdown of that plant and might I expect an answer from him?

Will he also explain to the House whether there has been a grant to that company to assist in its expansion, particularly since it has been taken over by new management? If there has been public money put in to assist in the expansion, can we be assured that at least part of that expansion will be kept in Waterford to maintain the employment where it is?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the member's letter to me, and I recall sending a response several days ago. If he has not received it, he knows who to blame. They are up near yer Ottawa somewhere. That is what Charlie Farquharson would say: "Somewhere near yer Ottawa."

I am personally not aware whether there has been any Ontario Development Corporation money or any other grants or loans to the company, but I will be glad to ask the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman).

Mr. Makarchuk: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister indicate at this time what actions his ministry is taking to provide alternative employment for the people in that area?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, if the member means what assistance will be given to workers to obtain alternative employment, he knows very well that the bill I have before the House would require companies to co-operate in the establishment of manpower adjustment committees where they are not set up voluntarily. Clearly, what we are aiming at is to make sure the mechanisms are in place to help workers find alternative employment.

PAYMENTS TO CONSULTING FIRMS

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet, in regard to a question I had on the Order Paper that was replied to on October 23.

Can the minister explain the fact that, in 407 cases, consultants came back to the government to ask for further money over and above the contract they had agreed to and that had been tendered? Other people lost out because of the tendered price, yet on 407 different occasions in one year the successful contractors came back and got an extension and an expansion of their contracts of an average of $10,000 over and above what they had bid originally. How does the minister justify that? Does that not make a mockery of his whole tendering system?

Hon. Mr. McCague: No, it does not, Mr. Speaker. It was not money asked over and above what they agreed to do it for. It was extension of contracts.

Mr. T. P. Reid: I am not sure what an extension of contract means. Is the minister saying his civil servants and cabinet board did not know what they required when they originally put these matters out for bids? He is doing a disservice to the whole tendering process and to all those people who have lost out. Some of these people are low-balling on their bid and then coming back to an easy government to get an increase in their contracts. It is not simply a matter of an extension of contract. If it is, the civil servants and the people in management board are irresponsible in not knowing what they require in the first place.

Hon. Mr. McCague: We have just heard the honourable member's opinion of what goes on, and it is entirely incorrect. He knows the work tendered for is specific. It is what the ministry thinks it needs at a particular time. He knows other items are often discovered that need to be studied further. Most of the consulting engineers, management consultants and technical people have set schedules for charges. It is only logical that the people who do the first half of the work or the first two thirds of the work should carry on. It is not as the member says at all. I think the tendering maintains the integrity of the system.

Mr. T. P. Reid: But you don't pay any attention to it.

Hon. Mr. McCague: We certainly do. They tender for the work we expect to have done at that precise time and, if there is an extension of the contract, the same is done for all people in the business. It is a fair system and I think the honourable member knows that.

Mr. Makarchuk: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that in the standing committee on public accounts it was evident from the provincial auditor's report that none of this procedure the minister outlined is going on and that what happens is the people submit the bills and he pays them, is he going to re-examine that policy or operation of his government to ensure we are getting value for the money they are spending?

Hon. Mr. McCague: Mr. Speaker, we are getting value for the money we spend. It is not as automatic as just submitting an extra bill and having it paid. There is an extension granted by the ministry for the extra work it asks to be done.

HERITAGE LANGUAGES PROGRAM

Mr. Duksza: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Education on the heritage languages program. The minister is aware it recently came out with a study of the cultural retention of Italian-Canadian youth. It had two major recommendations: (1) that the heritage languages program should be part of the school day so as to strengthen them, and (2) that there should be an Italian immersion program for children of Italian origin. This particular thing is supported by almost all ethnic groups, and specifically by the multicultural ethnic liaison committee to the board of education and the Polish Canadian Congress—

Mr. Speaker: Is there a question there some place?

Mr. Duksza: Yes. The question is, what is the minister's proposed course of action on what appears to be a very popular course suggested by almost all ethnic groups?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, the honourable member is, I know, referring to a study that was funded as a summer works project for several university students by the federal government. That study apparently has been reported to a group related to the heritage languages program. We do not have a copy of the study at this point—

Mr. Wildman: He has.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The Ministry of Education does not have one, I should like you to know, Mr. Speaker. A copy has not been delivered to us.

Mr. Duksza: The minister could read the Globe and Mail; it was mentioned there.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I read the newspaper. I should like to see the study itself, and I think it would be appropriate that I read the study in its entirety rather than simply a newspaper report.

I am aware that there is a recommendation related to the inclusion in an integral way of the heritage languages program into the educational program of the school system of Ontario. I am sure the honourable member knows that a large number of boards, at least those boards with very large attendances in heritage language programs, already include heritage language programs as part of an extended school day, and the educational program is taking place throughout the school day in many of those schools.

I am also very much aware that about 50 per cent of the students involved in that kind of program are involved in the Italian heritage language program, which seems to be the main thrust of the newspaper report I read; but I would certainly like to read the whole study before making any comment.

Mr. Duksza: I asked the minister very specifically not to talk of extended programs after the school day which are already in existence, because they treat the heritage language program as secondary and the students as second-class citizens. What I am asking is whether she would consider treating it as a part of the day, and she has obfuscated on the answer. She knows perfectly well there have been several attempts—I have a specific question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I am glad to hear that.

Mr. Duksza: I have a proposal. As the minister knows, on Thursday we will be debating a private member's bill introduced by me which deals with bilingual education and specifically with those two points plus an additional point. I want to ask the minister whether she is again going to get her colleagues to guillotine the project, as she did two years ago, or will she support it this time? Excuse me; is my English clear enough for the minister?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It was a little difficult, Mr. Speaker. I am not sure that there was any guillotining two years ago, but I shall be most interested to hear the member's arguments in support of that case.

DIABETIC DRIVERS

Mr. Cunningham: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Labour. Is the minister aware that Brewers' Warehousing Company has implemented a policy requiring all its employees to have a class D driver's licence in the event they should have to drive one of their trucks? Is the minister aware that the import of such a regulation is that no diabetic in Ontario would be hired by that company?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: No, Mr. Speaker, I was not aware of the announced change, if it occurred, nor was I aware of the implications. I do know that the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Snow) announced some revisions to that legislation at the end of last week, but I do not know whether they apply to that class of licence. I will be glad to look into it.

Mr. Cunningham: In the event that the proposed legislation does not apply to these people, and in view of the fact that at any time only 20 per cent of the employees of Brewers' Warehousing would ever be required to drive a truck, will the minister use whatever power he may have to take it upon himself to discuss this matter with the president of Brewers' Warehousing to see that a fairer and more equitable approach is taken for the hundreds of thousands of people in Ontario who are diabetic?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I have a particular interest in that area of concern as well. Because of having been a physician, I am well aware that simply because one has diabetes does not mean one should be excluded from driving a car. I happen to know a good hockey player right now who does very well playing hockey. I will be pleased to discuss it with my colleague the Minister of Transportation and Communications.

WHITE MOTOR CORPORATION

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. Can the minister indicate what is happening at White Motor Corporation in Brantford and whether it is possible that the plant may be closed? If so, has the minister received any notice to that effect and does he know whether proper procedures will be followed in terms of severance to the employees?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: No, Mr. Speaker, I have received no notice from the company indicating it will be closing at this time.

Mr. Makarchuk: In that case, will the minister find out what is happening in that situation and let the employees know some time in the very near future what exactly is going on there?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I will be glad to have the employees' adjustment service look into it.

CHRYSLER RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CENTRE

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. Since the Ministry of Industry and Tourism has made an agreement with Chrysler to build a research and development centre in Windsor, can the minister tell us what plans he has for supplying staff for the research and development department?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I was aware there was an agreement that, if Chrysler Canada's fortunes were good at the end of 1981 or the beginning of 1982, the agreement with regard to contribution of funds for an R and D centre would be forthcoming. I am not certain at this stage if the minister has reached the point where he feels the obligation will be fulfilled; so I am not aware of any discussions that have gone on with regard to technology and training of people.

Mr. Mancini: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that the Ontario government is going to put up substantial moneys for that research and development centre, is the minister going to bring it to the attention of Chrysler Corporation, before the government spends those millions of dollars, that they are going to fail this year in meeting their sales-to-production ratio in Canada and therefore are not living up to the auto pact?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to bring that question to the attention of the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman).

CHEMICAL STORAGE

Mr. Breaugh: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General concerning a fire at Robson-Lang Leathers Limited in Oshawa. Is the ministry now contemplating some kind of regulation that would make mandatory a listing of chemicals that are stored in an old plant like the tannery in Oshawa so that at least when the local fire department goes to put out a fire it has some idea of what it is dealing with and does not face unknown explosions as they did in that fire?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the details of that fire. I think the suggestion implicit in the question seems to make some degree of sense. I am not sure how practical it is from an administrative standpoint, but I am quite prepared to explore the member's useful suggestion and report back to the House.

Mr. Breaugh: Is there any requirement now, as there is on the transportation of hazardous materials, to post a listing of the chemicals that are stored in a building such as the tannery? Is there any current regulation that might be readily applied to that kind of situation?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I do not believe there is, but I will confirm that.

Mr. B. Newman: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I suggest to the minister that he also consider a standard colour coding approach to the storage of these dangerous chemicals? Also, will he consider a regulation that they be stored only in specified places in the establishment and not left in multiple spaces throughout a facility?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I will look into that suggestion, Mr. Speaker.

FINES OPTION PROGRAM

Mr. Bradley: I have a question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker, regarding the fines option program. As the Attorney General is aware, a fines option program is one where a person is given the option of $300 or 30 days in jail and he has an opportunity to work that off in some form of community work. Will he not agree that in such a circumstance the convicted person is clearly not a danger to society, nor is the offence one that would warrant incarceration? Would it not be better if such a person had the option to work off his fine in a service to the community when he cannot afford to pay the actual fine? This option is now available, I believe, in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am familiar to some extent with the legislation, certainly in Saskatchewan although I am not sure about Alberta's. We are reviewing this program in some depth right now, and we will have something to say about it in the not-too-distant future in so far as Ontario is concerned.

Mr. Bradley: I am sure the minister would agree with me, because he has so stated in his estimates. He is certainly familiar with the estimates of the other ministries in the justice field. Will he not agree that the cost of keeping these people in jail is such that the short-term sentence where a person cannot pay the fine is not desirable? Will he not agree the legal problem that has arisen concerning the federal Criminal Code is not really an obstacle, since in Saskatchewan the federal government apparently has cooperated to the extent that it is prepared to implement that kind of program at the federal level as well?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I am not suggesting there are any constitutional impediments. I certainly made it very clear during the debate on the Provincial Offences Act that it was not in the public interest to put the taxpayers to the expense related to jail sentences where people cannot pay fines. I do not think it is a wise expenditure of public funds. We made it very clear we should be exploring all of these options in relation to incarceration when a person has been given a fine.

We think that when a fine has been imposed, incarceration for failure to pay the fine should be the last possible alternative. I am simply agreeing with the honourable member that this is something we are going to continue to pursue. It was certainly very much the philosophy of the provincial offences legislation.

CONDOMINIUM ONTARIO

Mr. Philip: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Has the minister read the recent article written for The Condominium newspaper by his former staff member, Irv Kumer? In it, that lawyer stated: "Condominium Ontario does not seem to be able to provide the kind of direct advice and information on specific questions that form the reason for creating it in the first place. They are so obsessed with disclaiming liability for advice they give and so hesitant to provide any advice that would really be helpful that the whole operation as presently constituted probably is not worth the effort."

Has the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations seen the comments attributed to his colleague, the member for Durham West (Mr. Ashe), in which he takes the New Democratic Party position that Condominium Ontario is a major problem and should be replaced by a registrar of condominiums? In the light of such criticism from his own ranks, will the minister tell the House whether his government will continue to finance this body after December 31, since it is fairly clear that the court case concerning the levy to finance Condo Ontario will not be completed this fall?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, there are three questions there. First of all, I draw to the honourable member's attention that some action was taken by the Law Society of Upper Canada concerning the giving of advice. If Mr. Kumer does not know what happened when he was urging people to give advice and what the reaction of the Law Society of Upper Canada was, I am rather surprised.

Second, I think the member has a private bill, and if he does not some other NDP member has, to put in a registrar. So that is a matter of opinion.

Third, the entire question of the thrust of Condominium Ontario and its future role, particularly in regard to some of the things the member has asked, will be the subject of a meeting between Condominium Ontario and myself some time later this month or within the next few days. I will gladly report back to the House concerning that meeting.

Mr. Philip: Has the minister reviewed the proposed changes, which I understand the new president of Condominium Ontario, Dr. Peter Donnelly, has submitted to him? After this meeting with Condo Ontario, can the minister inform the Legislature whether his officials or those of Condo Ontario will have costed these new proposals and what position the minister is taking on these proposals? Will he also give a guarantee to this Legislature that Condo Ontario will provide to the public regular financial statements of its spending, a practice that was not followed under the former president, Mr. Batchelor, whom the minister appointed?

Hon. Mr. Drea: I thought I had answered that question the first time around; I presume the member had it written down and had to read it. I do not understand the business about the financial statements but, if the member wants to elaborate in a note to me, I will be glad to look into it.

I draw the attention of the House to the fact that Condominium Ontario is not an arm of the government. Condominium Ontario operates at arm's length. The member who asked this has been in several disputes and has lost every one of them in this House, demanding that the government provide financial statements or mailing lists or other things. If he will tell me in writing what he wants, I will do my best to get it for him.

BURLINGTON GAS EXPLOSION

Mr. Speaker: The same minister has the answer to another question asked previously.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, on November 13 the member for St. Catharines (Mr. Bradley) asked a number of questions arising out of a gas explosion that destroyed a home in Burlington. Investigation of this accident being conducted by the staff of the technical standards division of my ministry has not been concluded. We received the Ontario Research Foundation's report on November 4 and it is being analysed carefully.

I would point out that the report was provided to us as a matter of courtesy. The primary objective of the Ontario Research Foundation test was to provide data on AMP T-fitting for litigation purposes. Because of this litigation I do not think it appropriate to comment on the contents of the report. However, I can say the report did not conclude that the plastic T-joint had separated from the pipeline supplying gas to the house. That fact was established by our own on-site investigation on September 16.

The honourable member asked whether it was correct that 30 per cent of these fittings, which he said were tested by the Consumers' Gas Company's Chatham laboratory, had failed to meet pressure specifications and that AMP of Canada Limited, which he identified as the manufacturer, now makes fittings to higher specifications.

In reply, I would point out that Consumers' Gas Company does not have a laboratory in Chatham, nor did it make any such findings at its Toronto laboratory. Union Gas, which does have a laboratory in Chatham, did not make any such findings either. Further I am advised that AMP of Canada Limited is the distributor, and not the manufacturer, of these fittings.

The suggestion that new fittings are now being designed to meet higher specifications is misleading. The Canadian Standards Association standard for these fittings has not changed during the period we are talking about. In the light of advances in plastic technology, changes were made to the material and the body of the fitting in 1977. The designed strength of the fitting, before and after the change, has met the CSA standard. We have no information to indicate there is an urgent or unusual problem with the old or new style fitting. Indeed because of its flexibility and absence of corrosion, a plastic system provides additional safety when compared with the more rigid steel system.

Immediately following the accident, Union Gas stepped up the frequency of its gas leakage service. Although some small leaks have been found, there have been no further discoveries of line separation. Some of these installations are over landfill sites which may be more prone to leakage as a result of stresses caused by settlement of the fill in such sites. I understand Union Gas is directing special attention to these locations.

Our investigation in the matter is continuing.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TIES

Mr. Mancini: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs. Is the minister aware that, during last week's municipal election, a tie occurred in one of the municipalities I represent and that the Municipal Act calls for a judge to do a recount? However, if the tie vote is maintained, the person to hold office must be chosen by a draw from a hat. Does the minister not believe it is time to review the Municipal Act to assure we have proper legislation to break these ties in a proper manner in order that the people may be best served?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I might say, Mr. Speaker, there is an amendment to the Municipal Act at present on the Order Paper. It does not cover this but deals with archaic sections of the act. We are consistently going through the act to update any sections that seem irrelevant or not up to date. I suggest my friend think about this whole matter a little more. It is easy to criticize that as a tie-breaking mechanism but to come up with something more acceptable is perhaps not as easy.

As the member knows, in our case the returning officer casts the deciding ballot. Maybe the municipal clerk should cast the deciding ballot, but I would suggest to the member that many of the clerks would rather have it this way than be left with that responsibility. In fact, they might like to have an unofficial draw first before they legally cast the deciding ballot.

It is difficult but, fortunately, we have very few ties in this province. Let us wait and see what the recount brings forward in that case.

Mr. Mancini: We should be concerned not only about this specific election but also about the general principle of the matter. Does the minister not think it is an important matter for a person to make decisions for the next two years and to affect peoples' lives? Does he not think a better system should be devised, other than having a person's name drawn from a hat?

Mr. Speaker: That is the same as the first question.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I just want to say I do not view that method of settling it with alarm. If, after a recount, the people of a given municipality have voted in exactly in the same numbers for each of two candidates, obviously it is an absolute split down the middle and some way has to be found to solve that. Putting the names in a hat and drawing the winner seems to me to be just as equitable a way of settling it as any.

PARTICIPATION HOUSE

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services. Is the minister aware that negotiations at Participation House in Hamilton resumed today and broke off quickly after management refused to budge one cent from the position it held at the beginning of negotiations?

As the taxpayers and charitable donors of this province have invested almost 100 per cent of the capital and operating costs of Participation House and its programs, will he now place Participation House under temporary trusteeship so that the residents can be returned to their home and the investment which has been placed there by the taxpayers and donors can be saved from an apparently intransigent management?

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, I must tell the honourable member that I have not yet received that information from my staff. I am sure by the time I get back to my office following question period it will be there.

The only thing I can say at this point is that I will review the most up-to-date information available to me and see whether there is any way in which I can appropriately act so as not to interfere with the present negotiations, or at least with the free collective bargaining process, and yet be of some assistance to that organization.

Mr. Isaacs: As the minister had previously indicated that he believed there might be some room for solution of this protracted dispute, will he, if management still refuses to move, at very least open the books of Participation House to the scrutiny of the members of this House and the public so that we may determine for ourselves whether Participation House management is simply playing games or whether it is that his ministry is not providing them with enough money?

Hon. Mr. Norton: I can only interpret that suggestion to mean that, if I am not prepared to interfere in the free collective bargaining process, then the honourable members opposite are. I am not sure I would give that undertaking.

NORFOLK TEACHERS' DISPUTE

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question to put to the Minister of Education about the continuing strike in Norfolk.

Now that a new school board has been elected but cannot function until the first week of December, and since the mediator has yet to come up with any positive results, at least as far as is publicly known, can the minister indicate what steps she may be contemplating to bring this matter to a successful conclusion, since the young people have been out of school for seven weeks?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that there are some discussions going on right at the present time in that situation. I am relatively hopeful, because it would appear there are some routes to a successful completion of the dispute; I believe those are being explored.

Mr. Nixon: Since the minister said exactly that when the question was first put six weeks ago, is there any indication that she could give to the members of the House, particularly the members from the area, that these discussions are more hopeful than they were a month or more ago?

The students are missing a good deal of school and the parents are coming to the elected members from the area in some desperation. The fact that there is no pressure put to bear on this House, the fact that it is not a strike in downtown Toronto so nobody here gives a damn about it, is getting to be a matter of grave concern for me and the people in the area.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk may believe that, but I have to tell him that there are a large number of people who give a damn about this strike.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, there are: You, me and maybe one other, the member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. G. I. Miller).

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Oh, no. There are several more than that as well.

Mr. Ruston: You didn't care about Windsor.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I beg your pardon; about Windsor?

Mr. S. Smith: You need a pardon about Windsor.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Well, I do not have to beg Windsor's pardon about Windsor, but the Leader of the Opposition has to beg Sault Ste. Marie's pardon about Sault Ste. Marie and the rest of northern Ontario.

It is perfectly obvious, as a result of some meetings that were held about 10 days to two weeks ago, at which time we met with representatives of the parents, the community and representatives of the students, and what the Education Relations Commission did as well, that there has been some pressure brought to bear where it is more important; that, of course, is in the local community. What is happening is that we are having some communications from individuals who are involved on either one side or the other and who believe there is a route now to finding a solution to this problem. We had not had that kind of indication before.

INVESTMENT COMPANIES' FAILURE

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Speaker, I would like to get a response from the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations to a suggestion I would like to put about the Re-Mor and Astra matter.

In order for the Legislature to be able to explore and, we hope, to untangle the web of Re-Mor and Astra involvement, will the minister support—and I offer this suggestion in all good faith—a referral of this matter to a legislative committee for consideration?

3:10 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Drea: I will not, Mr. Speaker, on the grounds that it would virtually destroy the litigation or, at the very least, it would run head on into the litigation that now exists in the situation in two regards: first, the class action or the group action accusing the registrar of mortgage brokers of negligence and, second, the question concerning the rights of creditors to have the Re-Mor funds extricated from the Astra bankruptcy now under way.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Would the minister care to explain to the House the effect on his ministry's actions and decisions in this case caused by the involvement of a Mr. Matt Dymond, a former minister of the crown in Ontario, with Mr. Carlo Montemurro, who was behind the Astra and Re-Mor ripoffs? Will the minister explain the effects of the close relationship between these two men?

Hon. Mr. Drea: I do not know who has any kind of a relationship with anybody. It has never had any impact upon me, and I will tell him—

Mr. Breugh: You are so lonely a man, Frank.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Well, he is asking if somebody was doing something; so let us not be so cute. I say to the honourable member, if he is suggesting that somebody influenced me or somebody within my ministry—

Mr. M. N. Davison: The minister has to explain his action in some way.

Hon. Mr. Drea: If the member wants to stand up right now and say that somebody influenced me, he can be my guest, but I would ask him to remember what is going to happen to him afterwards.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I do not really understand how a member can ask a question like that if he is not prepared to bring forward some evidence or material. I personally know of no relationships with anybody involved in this matter.

Mr. Breithaupt: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: With respect to the Re-Mor matter, may I take the opportunity to ask the minister if he is able, as he promised last Thursday, to table today the application for the Re-Mor mortgage brokerage licence and the other items I had asked for, since that all ties into this overall theme?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, the reply is in consultation with the Ministry of the Attorney General; it will be tomorrow. In one of the replies, I said as soon as possible, Monday or Tuesday.

FIRE SAFETY

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Solicitor General. What is the status of the Ontario provincial fire code at the present time and whose ministry will enforce it?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, we will be introducing legislation. Generally, as far as the regulations pertaining to fire safety and those matters are concerned, they will be the responsibility of the fire marshal's office.

FRENCH-LANGUAGE ADVISORY COMMITTEES

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Education. How many voters did she find of the French-speaking electors for the French-language advisory committee across Ontario for the $75,650 she spent on her feeble enumeration technique, and how much would it have cost if she had simply added the questions to the enumeration forms for the various areas where they would have applied?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, as the honourable member knows, what was carried out was not an enumeration. It was a method of attempting to assist the French-language advisory committees to identify on a broader base those who might be interested in participating in the election of French-language advisory committee members. Those elections are not part of the municipal elections, which are enumerated properly for the election of trustees and members of local government.

Members of the French-language advisory committees are neither members of the board of school trustees nor of local government. Therefore, what we did was to attempt to help that group to identify more clearly those francophone individuals within their jurisdictions who might be interested in participating in the French-language advisory committee elections.

That exercise is now being completed. When the final figures have been tallied, I will certainly ask permission of the five francophone groups, with which I had discussions and with which I made a pact I would never use this information as any kind of statistical base, to permit me to provide that information to the member.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Does the minister believe or does she not believe that there should be full enumeration for the FLACs? She has made a distinction. Have they a right or not to have full enumeration so that they know whom they are electing.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is my understanding that enumeration is carried out for purposes of municipal elections to those bodies in which there is full participation of all citizens. Since the French-language advisory committee, although established under law, is not what one would consider to be a municipal body, I do not know whether it should be a part of the enumeration.

RIGHT-TO-FARM LEGISLATION

Mr. McKessock: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Can the minister tell me what stage his right-to-farm legislation is at and when we can expect it to be introduced into the House?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, shortly after the throne speech last year we took this up with the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. My staff and the staff of the federation were working together. About a month ago the federation came back and reported to me that they had a proposal but they were not yet ready to present it to me. They want to present it to the annual meeting of the federation next week. That is where it is at.

PETITION

KU KLUX KLAN

Mr. Warner: Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which reads as follows: We, the undersigned, petition the Lieutenant Governor and Legislative Assembly of Ontario to ensure public protection against the Ku Klux Klan, an organization which has clearly violated our human rights legislation and hate literature laws. We petition for an immediate prosecution under the Criminal Code in an effort to end the activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Ontario."

The petition is signed by 38 citizens from the good borough of Scarborough.

MOTION

COMMITTEE SITTING

Hon. Mr. Wells moved that the select committee on Ontario Hydro affairs be authorized to sit on Thursday, November 20, from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Motion agreed to.

INTRODUCTION OF BILL

MORTGAGE PAYMENTS MORATORIUM ACT

Mr. Makarchuk moved first reading of Bill 196, An Act to provide for a Moratorium on Mortgage Payments for Persons affected by an Interruption of Employment.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Makarchuk: The purpose of the bill, Mr. Speaker, is to provide for a moratorium on payment of principal and interest amounts secured by mortgages on the residences of persons who suffer an interruption of employment arising from a legal strike, lockout or layoff. The bill also protects the mortgagor from mortgage default proceedings during the moratorium period.

3:20 p.m.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS ON NOTICE PAPER

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I wish to table the answers to questions 388 to 391, 393, 396 and 397 standing on the Notice Paper. (See appendix, page 4363.)

ORDERS OF THE DAY

House in committee of supply.

ESTIMATES, MINISTRY OF NORTHERN AFFAIRS

On vote 701, ministry administration program:

Mr. Bolan: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister whether it is his intention to table the answers to questions I asked of him in the opening statement when we commenced the estimates of the Ministry of Northern Affairs?

Are you finished?

Mr. Martel: No.

Mr. Bolan: Carry on.

Mr. Martel: Thank you.

Mr. Bolan: Are you?

Mr. Martel: Go ahead.

Mr. Bolan: Thank you.

Mr. MacDonald: Are you running the House?

Mr. Bolan: I don't know; I am starting to wonder who is. Do you want to carry on your conversation?

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Bolan: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask if the minister has answers to the questions I asked of him when we started the estimates? I asked him the following questions: What is the total advertising budget for the Ministry of Northern Affairs and its agencies, boards and commissions for the fiscal year? What was the comparable advertising budget for the previous year? What advertising agencies are employed? Are tenders let for the account? Will the minister also provide a copy of the material used in all the promotions, such as brochures, radio and television scripts, direct mailing and any other promotional material?

I asked those questions some three weeks ago. The minister has had three weeks to get the answers. I presume he has them now. If he does not have them now, do I have his undertaking that they will be provided to us between now and the time the estimates are finished?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I believe that question is on the Order Paper, and we are preparing a reply to it.

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Chairman, when we adjourned last, I was asking some questions of the minister with regard to the relationship of his ministry to other ministries of the government. Since he has delineated that his ministry is a co-ordinating ministry, I would like to pursue that a little with some specific examples.

It is rather difficult to deal with this in one way, because when one writes to the minister about a specific problem in northern Ontario he is often wont to refer one to another minister. For instance, there is the position taken by this minister with regard to the question of Ontario health insurance plan coverage for transfers by doctors of patients from northern Ontario to larger centres in the north, to southern Ontario, or in some cases in the northwest, to Manitoba. When I contacted him, he said he was sympathetic, but he referred me to the Minister of Health (Mr. Timbrell).

I understand the Minister of Health has a liaison committee on the air ambulance service; they are talking about it and they may be coming up with something. But I would like to know what role, if any, this ministry has in advising the Minister of Health and trying to persuade him to accept the resolution I have on the Order Paper which would provide OHIP coverage for those kinds of transfers.

In the same vein, I would be interested to find out what the minister's position is with regard to the proposals now being made for a telemedicine program by the Port Arthur General Hospital and by a Dr. Barrett, who is a radiologist in Toronto. I understand Dr. Barrett has met with the minister and with the Speaker, I believe, to discuss his proposals. He has also met with me. It is somewhat similar to what is in operation now in northwestern Quebec; James Bay, I believe, has a similar hookup to Montreal hospitals.

I would be interested to find out what role this minister has in influencing health policy for northern Ontario. I know the minister does announce programs with regard to health policy, such as the bursary program for professionals to be attracted to the north. But, besides announcing policies that have been decided in the Ministry of Health, what role does this minister have in actually influencing the development of policy and, in particular, the questions of OHIP transfers and the telemedicine proposal?

In a similar vein, can the minister indicate what is happening with the proposals made in Espanola, in the riding of my colleague the member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Lane), for an integrated facility involving nursing home care—residential care, extended care or whatever it is called—as well as senior citizens' housing? This is a very good concept and one with which I think his ministry is involved in a committee. Can he give me some indication of what stage it is at and what his ministry's role is in it?

Can he also say what, if anything, his ministry is doing about the mixup we have between the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Community and Social Services with regard to a similar, although not as large, pilot project that is now in operation in Hornepayne for residential care for the elderly and disabled? This is the kind of concept, I am sure the minister will agree, that we need to expand in the small communities in northern Ontario, since it enables the elderly and the disabled to remain in their own communities, rather than being transported great distances to facilities in larger centres. I will be interested to hear his comments on his responsibilities in that area.

In relation to the Ministry of Industry and Tourism, I hope the minister can clarify a controversy that has developed as a result of statements made by his colleague the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman) on October 22, when the estimates of his ministry were being debated by the resources development committee. During that debate, he indicated that further decisions by the provincial government on provision of funding for infrastructure for the proposed King Mountain project in my riding would await the completion of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion agreement on tourism for northern Ontario.

Subsequent to those statements becoming public, the president of the development firm, a Mr. Frank Rush, characterized the statement of the minister's colleague as "bull." I believe that was the word he used; it was on the front page of the Sault Ste. Marie Star.

He said the DREE agreement might have some bearing—but very little, if any—on the proposals, and he had to have a decision on provincial involvement by December 31. Also, the Assistant Deputy Minister of Regional Economic Expansion in Ottawa said that, although they were interested in the King Mountain project, the agreement on tourism for northern Ontario between the province and the federal government was not nearly rich enough to be able to provide any significant contribution to the King Mountain project. My colleague the member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Ramsay) said that as far as he was aware there was no real relationship between the negotiations with DREE and the King Mountain project.

Frankly, it is inconceivable to me that a minister responsible for tourism—even in a Tory government—would not know about the relationship between the negotiations on a tourism agreement with DREE and a major project in northern Ontario. But that appears to be the case.

Is the Minister of Northern Affairs the so-called lead minister in the negotiations with DREE, and can he clear up the contradictions that have been raised by the statements of his colleagues? Maybe he can also tell us in general terms what is the relationship between the Ministry of Northern Affairs and the Ministry of Industry and Tourism with regard to tourist developments in northern Ontario, because obviously the Minister of Industry and Tourism does not know what he is talking about.

I will not prolong this, but in every estimate we have had on this ministry I have raised the question of the relationship between this ministry and the Ministry of Transportation and Communications. We will be talking about northern roads on a specific vote; so I will not prolong it. But it seems to me rather interesting that the minister could state in Sudbury last Thursday that the bypass between Highway 144, the Timmins highway, and Highway 17 at Sudbury is on schedule and will be completed in 1981. Whereas, on exactly the same day, the member for Sudbury East (Mr. Martel) received a letter from the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Snow), who said this project would be completed by 1982 at the earliest. The minister said 1981, and the Minister of Transportation and Communications said 1982.

Who is deciding when these projects are going to be complete? Who is responsible? Can the ministers get their act together? What is the relationship between them? I understand they are supposed to set the overall priorities. MTC is supposed to make recommendations to help make those priorities, and then the minister is supposed to appropriate the moneys and turn it over to MTC to carry out the program he sets. But, obviously, the two ministers are not on the same wavelength with regard to the bypass from Highways 144 to 17. They are at least a year apart. It is interesting the minister would say something one day and the very same day a letter would be received from the Minister of Transportation and Communications saying something very different.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: You have not been briefed well enough.

Mr. Wildman: I can get the letter the member for Sudbury East received. He would be quite willing to send it down. I would read it. I do not want to prolong it, but I understand Mr. Tom Davies, the mayor of Walden, is quite upset about this discrepancy and is very concerned about the whole contradiction. So here we have another contradiction—in this case the contradiction between the two ministers.

I would also like to refer to two other matters the minister raised in his leadoff statement. As a matter of fact, he then criticized me for not raising them in my leadoff. One was the Hornepayne town centre project. The minister may know that a week ago Saturday I was at the opening of one portion of it, although they have not got permission yet for occupancy; there is some problem with the fire marshal. At any rate, I understand his ministry has announced a further contribution to the project in the range of something like $300,000, and another $100,000 from CN, to complete it. Can he indicate what the final capital cost will be? I understand of that $300,000 approximately $100,000 is a commitment to assist with operating costs over the first two years—$60,000 the first year and $40,000 the second year—because there is a projected deficit.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Generous, eh?

Mr. Wildman: Yes, I welcome the assistance. One thing I am concerned about, though, is what happens after the first two years? If there is a projected deficit and the ministry is going to provide $60,000 the first year and $40,000 the second year, what happens the third year? I know that may sound like looking a gift-horse in the mouth, but I am concerned about the future and what it means in terms of the finances of the community.

As the minister may know, Hornepayne is in a serious financial situation; that is why his ministry has largely contributed, as well as the fact that he wants to see the centre go ahead. There is some concern about the curling rink and the airport, and a rather serious concern about Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the use of funds that were appropriated for a certain matter. I understand the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs is involved with that and is going into Hornepayne in the last couple of weeks of November to try to straighten out the finances of the municipality. In that case, I would like to find out the minister's relationship with the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs on the future of Hornepayne.

The minister also raised the matter of Missanabie and pointed to that as an example of how his ministry responds to the concerns of small communities, and how they co-ordinate all the other agencies, in this case, the Ministry of Natural Resources, the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs and so on. But the one thing he ignored was the fact that the pipe that was purchased more than a year ago by this ministry to extend the water line on an emergency basis to provide a water supply for the community is still sitting in a pile in Missanabie.

How anyone could point to that as a great achievement, I fail to understand—an expenditure of something like $30,000, and the project is not complete. Now the Ministry of Northern Affairs is refusing to go ahead with any further work, saying it committed itself only to providing a water supply for the community for one winter and, since that winter is now over and nobody went without water, it fulfilled its commitment. Frankly, it is pure luck. They did not resolve the technical problem. It cost a lot more than they expected, and they were not willing to provide the extra moneys that were required.

I understand that the local residents of the community have said they want to apply through the Ontario Municipal Board to become an improvement district. I understand it is the position of both the Minister of Northern Affairs and the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs (Mr. Wells) that they would rather the community would go the route of a local services board. The community has rejected that, largely because it anticipates that the Renabie Mine will be reopening this summer. The president of the company has indicated it will be reopening and employing between 80 and 100 people. They wish to be an improvement district, they hope with their boundaries including that property, so they will have a tax base and they will be able to resolve some of their problems through being able to levy taxes.

The Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs, I understand on the advice of the Ministry of Northern Affairs, raised some objections with the OMB to holding that hearing. They said they were studying it and they wished it to be postponed. In fact, they were not studying it; they just did not want it to be held. When I phoned them and asked if they could give me copies of their study, they had to admit they had not done any study. But I understand they are now prepared to withdraw their objections to going ahead with the hearing, and I hope the OMB will schedule a hearing and decide whether Missanabie should be an improvement district. Whatever is decided, I hope we can move to resolving the problems.

If I were minister, I would hardly point to Missanabie as a great example of a response by this ministry to the problems of a small community. To purchase pipe, and then not even to install it after a full year, to commit oneself to improving a water system and after a year not to have even cleaned out the tank, is hardly an example of swift action by this ministry to respond to the needs of a community. We are just lucky it was not a harder winter last year, or we would have had major problems.

Interestingly, as the minister may be aware, there is a serious attempt to resolve difficulties and to provide amenities and services to one other riding in my community; that is, White River. The local major employer, Abitibi-Price, is co-operating. As a matter of fact, Abitibi-Price has hired a consulting firm, called Robb Ogilvie Associates, which has brought together the local community, not only the municipal officials but also private citizens, local service clubs and representatives of a number of ministries, including the Ministry of Northern Affairs, the Ministry of Culture and Recreation, and so on. They are working together to bring about a number of changes in White River—one being the building and financing of a recreation centre—looking into the housing problem and the problem of other amenities and services, to try to make it a more attractive community to new employees coming in, so they will stay there.

3:40 p.m.

My only question for this minister is why they had to hire a private consultant. Why is his ministry not doing the very same sort of thing? That is what he is supposed to be doing; at least that is what he tells us. Why is his ministry not coming in and taking hold of the reins and bringing all those various local groups and ministry officials together to bring about developments, as is being done in White River, but in this case is being done largely by the private sector?

I am not too concerned about Abitibi-Price having to pay Robb Ogilvie, but did they have to do it that way? Why did the Ministry of Northern Affairs not take hold of the whole issue? The point is, they only went to Robb Ogilvie after they got nowhere for years in trying to bring about the developments they are looking at.

If one looks at an example, the recreation centre is a 10-year ongoing matter that was not being pushed until they brought someone in—to use the minister's own arguments, "What you need is the impetus of someone who can bring all the groups together and co-ordinate them and put some initiative there." Frankly, in an ironic way the experience of White River is an example of what the minister claims is necessary for small communities in northern Ontario. What is so ironic about it is that his ministry is not doing it; it is a private consultant.

Last, I would like to raise a concern about French-language services. The minister knows I sent him a letter this fall asking him how the government would be implementing the commitment made by the Premier (Mr. Davis) at the first ministers' conference to provide French-language services in areas where numbers warrant. I was referring especially to social services and to services to children. I received a reply from the minister in which he said: "As you know, some of my colleagues in cabinet have announced French-language policy for their ministries with specific measures for the improvement of francophone services throughout northern Ontario. More recently my colleague the Honourable Keith Norton, Minister of Community and Social Services, reaffirmed a French-language services policy for his ministry."

I wonder what kind of consultation went on between whoever wrote this letter for the minister and the Ministry of Community and Social Services. The Minister of Community and Social Services did, in fact, announce French-language services for children—a $400,000 fund for northern Ontario—but he specifically excluded Algoma, of which fact the Minister of Northern Affairs seems to be unaware.

As a matter of fact, he goes on to say: "I have been advised that the social services representatives servicing that area all work out of the office at 55 Broadway Avenue in Wawa. This office is staffed full-time by a fully bilingual clerical receptionist who provides services to general welfare assistance, family benefits, children's aid and probation and after-care workers located in Wawa."

Hip, hip, hurrah! We have a clerk who is bilingual in Wawa. The Wawa office serves an area from White River to Hornepayne—about 120 miles in one direction—to Missanabie—about 70 to 75 miles in the other direction. I would like to know if this clerk travels with the social workers who go to serve those areas? Especially, does she travel with the social worker who goes to Dubreuilville, which is approximately 55 miles from Wawa and whose social worker does not speak French? As the minister knows since he has visited that community, 95 per cent of the people in Dubreuilville are francophones, and a large majority of them are unilingual French-speaking. A clerk in an office in Wawa hardly serves French-language people in northern Algoma.

I would like to know what kind of advice this minister gives to the Minister of Community and Social Services and what kind of advice he gets from that ministry. Obviously, whoever phoned the Ministry of Community and Social Services to get some assistance to answer this letter—because I am sure that is how it went—was not informed they had excluded Algoma when they made their announcement of a $400,000 fund for French-language services to children in northern Ontario.

What I am really asking is, does this ministry get involved in policy development for serving the north? Or does it simply phone them up and say: "We have a request for something? Can you tell us what to reply?" I would appreciate if the minister could respond.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, if I might respond to the member, I must say I am pleased he is taking an interest in his own particular area. I sensed a lack of appreciation for what has been accomplished in many areas of his riding.

I am glad I have on the record all those great things we have been doing in the riding of Algoma. I am sure before the estimates are concluded he will come around to seeing the magnificent improvements and accomplishments that this government and certainly this ministry have made in his particular riding, in spite of the member for Algoma.

Mr. Wildman: There has been more money spent in my riding since 1975 than in the 10 years prior to that.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That is right. Why doesn't the member say that? Why doesn't he tell the people?

Mr. Wildman: It is because I have raised these matters here.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Those things have been done in spite of the member. I am glad he has realized that we are doing things in the north.

The member was talking about our coordinating responsibilities as a northern ministry. As he is very much aware, we are not a line ministry per se; that is, we do not have the technical engineers to design a highway or to do field work with respect to the development of a new highway, nor do we have the engineers or the experts to plan and develop a sewer and water system.

That is not our role. Our role is to coordinate and to answer to the special and unique needs of northern Ontario. Where we identify those special, unique needs, we lean on the other ministries and work very closely with them to get a program in place that will satisfy the needs of northern Ontario. In many instances, that requires extra funds, which we have been given to do these things. We have a fund that can accomplish those requirements. A typical example is sewer and water projects. The member is very familiar with the problems we have with sewer and water projects in northern Ontario. Not only do we work very closely with the Ministry of the Environment in many instances in topping up what it gives in normal grants, but also we top up to make it possible for a municipality to carry out its responsibilities. In many instances, that municipality does not have a taxation base to carry it under the normal program.

We go a step further than that. We look at a particular area: Belle Vallee is a good example. Belle Vallee is a small community with a very high water table. The cost of putting in a conventional sewer system in that community would have been astronomical and would have been completely out of reach of that small community. They were anxious to have a system in place they could afford and one that the government could afford to support and pay for from our point of view. We did come up with an idea and a plan. That is being implemented right now and the system is being constructed. In fact, I think it should be completed relatively soon. It is a low-pressure sewage system, the first of its kind in northern Ontario, at Belle Vallee. I think I have the figures on that particular program. I should put them on the record, because I know they will be of interest to the members.

In case the honourable members are not aware of where Belle Vallee is, it is about 20 kilometres northeast of New Liskeard. The system consists of a two-compartment septic tank and a pump in each home, connected by a pipe to a two-cell lagoon on the outskirts of the community. Belle Vallee, as I pointed out, is in an extremely flat area, and a conventional gravity feed system would have required very deep trenches to maintain the sewage flow in the pipes. The low-pressure system is simple to operate and maintain and requires only that the pipe be below the frost line. We contributed about $270,000 for that particular project, and the community will pay the balance of $74,230. That is an example of what we do in a very special way. Not only did we co-ordinate it with the other ministry, but also we assisted in the funding.

Another example, with regard to sewer and water projects, is at Serpent River. The member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Lane), my parliamentary assistant, came to me with the very special problems that Serpent River had as a small community on a plastic pipe system. They said to us: "We do not want a massive steel pipe system, buried eight or 10 feet in the ground. We have been operating for 25 years with a good, reliable plastic pipe system. Would you supplement that and improve upon it?" We said, "Fine, if that is what you want and it will work." We brought in the Ministry of the Environment. We had some lengthy discussions with them. Obviously, the engineers are not taken with this type of a development. It is, I suppose, a little removed from what they have been used to or what their practice is, because—

Mr. Wildman: What about the fire marshal? Did he like it?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: This is what the people wanted, and I think we have to answer to the people's needs, their requirements and what they can pay for. We have a system going in there and I think that will be well on its way before the year is out; the honourable member has nodded. So we have two specific examples as to how we co-ordinate in the sewer and water area.

The Ministry of Transportation and Communications is another with which we work very closely; we get a tremendous amount of co-operation. One matter alone about which we have been leaning on MTC is that of getting them to change their attitude to paved shoulders; that is moving ahead. As you move across northern Ontario, particularly on Highway 17, you will see that the new requests of northern Ontario are being answered; for example, more paved shoulders. They went into a very excellent program of putting in passing lanes. Now, in many areas, they are finding that they can put in paved shoulders, an eight-foot paved shoulder, for about the same cost as they could put in a truck passing lane. We are looking at that as a new thrust in northern Ontario. Granted, it will not apply in southern Ontario, but again it is part of our thrust and part of our efforts to answer specific northern Ontario needs in a co-ordinated way.

The honourable member asked what involvement we have with the Ministry of Health in a co-ordinating role. He mentioned a few, such as bursary program. We identified very quickly the need to come up with some special programs to encourage doctors, dentists, physiotherapists and other specialists to move into northern Ontario. We went right to the heart of the problem and assisted the medical students on a two-year basis, with up to $5,000 a year for the last two years, on the express understanding that they will go to northern Ontario. This is a Northern Affairs thrust, one we are paying for through the budget of the Ministry of Northern Affairs, and one on which you are asked to vote today.

Medical clinics—the honourable member knows our new thrust in medical clinics. Again, this is in co-operation with the Ministry of Health, because they have to approve it, they are the line people, the experts in that particular field but we identify the special need in northern Ontario. So we came up with a program by which we would assist those municipalities wanting to develop a medical clinic so that they could attract a doctor or a dentist. We would assist with up to two thirds of the cost, and it varies; it is not a flat two thirds, but up to two thirds of the capital cost paid on the express understanding that the doctors using the clinic would pay the ongoing local rent, which they have all accepted.

There is the dental program, the mobile dental clinics that we established in northern Ontario, again in co-operation and co-ordination with the Ministry of Health. There is the air ambulance system on which we are working very closely with the Ministry of Health right now.

Mr. Wildman: What about OHIP?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That is part of the whole package, one part in which we have had a thrust. Certainly, I do not want to make any announcement here of what is going to happen. The line ministry does have that responsibility. But I can assure the honourable member that we have the thrust, that we have the input, and that we meet regularly. Our staff members from the minister, the deputy minister, and the assistant deputy minister down to our directors, are in constant contact with their counterparts in other ministries to get that northern Ontario thrust into their decision-making process, and the system is really working.

About the telemedic issue, to which the honourable member referred, my assistant deputy ministers are meeting with the officials of that group to see how they and we as a ministry can assist in the delivery of that system. I was very interested in his proposal. He indicated to me that much of it would be in the private sector—there is no question about that—but he certainly wanted to get the support of this government and this ministry. We are very interested in that as a way to meet the needs of northern Ontario, and I know my colleague the Minister of Health shares my view in that field.

The honourable member spoke about the integrated senior citizens' unit at Espanola. I want to place on the record my personal congratulations to the member for Algoma-Manitoulin, my parliamentary assistant. It was his idea. He brought the thing forward and has pursued it relentlessly through the various levels of government. He sold the idea locally and that is most important. He sold it to the private sector—there will be involvement of the private sector.

Dr. Fergal Nolan of my ministry is part of that overall group which is working with the various other ministries. I understand the Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mrs. Birch) is doing the steering of this program and we can expect something relatively soon on the status of that facility. I think it will be a forerunner.

Mr. Wildman: Hornepayne too?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, I think that is an excellent program. In fact, I met with the director just a couple of days ago and he went to some length to assure me the facility they have in Hornepayne adjacent to the Hornepayne Hospital is in fairly good condition. I think he is spending another $20,000 this year fixing up the roof or doing the skirting around the bottom of it. But he thinks he is there for another three, four or five years before he needs any major capital expenditure. He was very pleased; they are well set up; and he was very complimentary to this government for what we have done in that field. I am looking forward to the day when we can turn the sod in Espanola for that new and exciting facility, which will bring together three different levels of service to the senior citizens in that area. I can assure you many communities in northern Ontario will be watching what transpires there.

Another area where we are in a co-ordinating role with the Ministry of Energy is the Shell Woodex plant up at Hearst. That plant and that idea have been around for some considerable time, but it was not until the Ministry of Northern Affairs got involved to bring the sewer and water facilities to the plant that it really took off. We are working very closely with the Ministry of Energy and with the private sector in making these things happen. So while we may not be the line ministry making all these announcements, we are behind the scenes pressing the right buttons so that they do happen.

Speaking about a co-ordinating role, I think one of the other members asked about the policy analysis branch of my ministry. He asked just what their responsibility was and is. There is a small group in my ministry located here in Toronto and it monitors on behalf of my ministry what goes in all the other cabinet committees and in management board, in addition to cabinet. So they know what is going on in the Justice policy field; they monitor what is coming forward in the Social Development policy field and the Resources Development policy field; they know what is going on in management board, which I try to keep on top of.

So it is a massive job. It is not like an ordinary ministry where you are just involved with one section of cabinet. This is a unique situation where my ministry is involved in all those. It takes a tremendous amount of effort keeping on top of the issues on an ongoing day-to-day basis to see what is brought forward. Then, of course, we initiate things that we want to see happen and that is all put into the system. It is a very complex and very interesting ministry, indeed, that sees and makes sure things really happen.

The member for Algoma mentioned King Mountain and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion proposal. I think he is aware this government is very sympathetic to the DREE proposal. I, along with my colleague from Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Ramsay), made an extensive flight over the possible location of the facility. It is a different and exciting area. The potential is unlimited as it relates to that type of year-round facility just north of Sault Ste. Marie. The member attached it to the DREE proposal and he is quite right in doing that.

It was discussed last week in a general way. The Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman), who was the chairman at the Ottawa meeting, made it a pointed thrust with regard to destination facilities in northern Ontario, King Mountain being one of them. We are anxious to start talking and get moving on a massive tourism package. We are not looking at a small package; we are looking at a package of about $100 million. King Mountain could fit quite easily into that package if we are successful.

Mr. Wildman: Are you going to be able to make an announcement on your attitude towards involvement with King Mountain whether or not the DREE proposal is reached before the end of the year?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I would not be making an announcement with regard to King Mountain. I am sure my colleague the Minister of Industry and Tourism will.

Mr. Wildman: Is he the lead minister in negotiations?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, his would be the lead ministry in that field.

We will certainly be supporting him as he goes on with DREE and as he moves ahead because we are very interested and we are giving him all the help and assistance we can from our field. That is in the works. Following our meeting in Ottawa, I would have to admit I am not excited about the quick acceptance of a tourism package of that size.

Mr. Wildman: They said it would take four months.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I would like to see it happen in four months. That is more optimistic than I would be, but we all have our feelings and assumptions.

The honourable member made some reference to the development of a bypass and Highway 144. We will call it the north-south bypass in Sudbury. I think he did get some direction from the member for Sudbury (Mr. Germa). I regret he did not get all the facts right or all the information because he is a little twisted around. He said this would be completed in 1982 and somebody else said 1981. It is not going to be completed then; it is just going to be started. The land acquisition is complete and the design work and environmental studies are nearly complete. I said this in Sudbury last Thursday.

Mr. Wildman: You said 1981 and slowed it to 1982.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, there has been no mention of dates at all. I wrote the regional chairman. It is in the planned project of the Ministry of Transportation and Communications. When we took it over, it was in 1982. It is still in 1982. I hope we can advance that period but I am not sure. I do not know what the funding will be for next year. I do know from my many visits to the Sudbury area there is anxiety to get on with it. We are as anxious as anybody else. I said in Sudbury that is a government commitment and it will be lived up to. I do not know what the fuss is all about. I suspect it might have been before a certain day—November 10. That might have stirred things up to get a little publicity.

As far as we are concerned nothing has changed. I hope the funding will be there to get on with it and, if we get some extra funding I would like to see some kind of start in 1981, but I cannot at this time make any firm commitment that will happen. Nevertheless, I am sympathetic to that.

The member made reference to Hornepayne and I was pleased he recognized the generous assistance we are giving to that municipality. I want to compliment my own staff in the Ministry of Northern Affairs for their negotiations with Canadian National Railways in coming up with $100,000 from the CNR towards that medical centre, which will cost about $300,000. The normal contribution is two to one, as I mentioned earlier in my remarks. We will put up $200,000 capital.

I might say that they were extremely co-operative and our dealings with them have been exceptionally good. It was very heart-warming to see them respond in a very positive way in answer, of course, to the need of that municipality and they put their dollars on the line.

As the member correctly pointed out, we will be assisting in the operation for the next two years. The projections are that after that it will carry itself so there won't be a large burden on the community and we look forward to that. I think the development of the Hornepayne town centre complex is unique in the government. I don't know of any other facility—I would ask the honourable members to look around and see if that has ever been carried on, not only with the private sector but with all levels of government.

I suppose you might say the Ministry of Northern Affairs is starting to become very adept and very able in that particular effort, because we saw it happen with the development of Ontario North Now, where not only the various levels and various ministries of the government became involved with their expertise and our financial commitment, but the private sector and the municipalities also became involved. Our co-ordinating role is really there; it is very real; it is very positive and it is very easy to identify and the results are starting to flow from it.

The honourable member made some comment about Missanabie. I would have to say to the honourable member at the outset that I just wonder where he would have gone if Northern Affairs hadn't been around to answer to that particular need at Missanabie, because—

Mr. Wildman: I went to every ministry in the government.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That is exactly right, but who responded? Our ministry responded as quickly as possible. We came up with the funds that were required. Granted, the water level didn't drop as low as most people had anticipated so that the projected water problem did not develop, but nevertheless we were there. We had purchased the particular pipe to which the honourable member made reference; the pipe is there and I would have to say to the member there could be a little more self help in Missanabie by the people.

I think you will agree with me that we offered the local services board an excellent route they could have used but they chose not to, for some reasons of which I am not aware. It would have been a first step had they gone into the local services board because the CPR did not want to deal with anybody who did not have a legal identity. I think it is fair to say they were willing to turn over the water system to a legal body, and until they form some form of a responsible group it is very difficult to deal with them.

Nevertheless, our interest, our concerns for Missanabie have not diminished; we will be there when they need us. I say that to you in all sincerity, because that is our responsibility. The local staff were there, johnny-on-the-spot when they were needed in answer to their particular needs. It was a very unique situation, one that you wouldn't have answered as you correctly point out, by another ministry. You might even say it is a little ad hocish, but nevertheless it answers the needs of the special problems of northern Ontario.

The honourable member made some reference to the delivery of French services. As I pointed out in my recent correspondence to him, we have a number of staff where numbers warrant, as he correctly pointed out, to deliver services in the French language right across northern Ontario. When we identify a problem we make those feelings known to other ministries, which we have done and will continue to do because we do think this government is committed to provide those services in a French-language program where numbers warrant. We have a number of our people located in the Sault Ste. Marie and the Wawa areas who are very fluent in the French language, so I feel very comfortable from a ministry point of view that we can deliver the services right across northern Ontario where numbers warrant, where people warrant.

Obviously, in the town of Kenora or even in Sioux Lookout, there really is no need, but there is a need in Timmins and Hearst and Iroquois Falls and Sturgeon Falls, and other areas, and our staff—

Mr. Wildman: And Dubreuilville?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: And Dubreuilville, yes, we will certainly follow up on that.

Mr. Chairman, I think that pretty well winds up the response to comments the honourable members made. I would like to take just a moment to send over to the honourable members—

Mr. Wildman: More tomatoes?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No. I think before we wound up last session we talked about peat and my visit to Ireland.

Many of us talk about peat as an energy source or as a product that could be used in a horticultural sense, but a lot of us have not seen what it is. I have in my hand raw peat. This is very similar to what is in northern Ontario. As you know, we have identified something like 67 locations in northern Ontario with an estimated resource in the amount of about 30 billion tons of peat. In the next few years we will see a lot of interest being focused on this particular source of energy.

4:10 p.m.

In my left hand I have a sample of a briquette. This is just an end off the briquettes that are made in Ireland. All that is taken out is the water content. It is mixed in a very general way. There are 16 different layers in the natural peat that is taken off the field. These are all blended and then put into a dryer where 85 per cent of the moisture is taken off. It is then compressed. It is very valuable as a fuel for fireplaces in Ireland. It is very low in ash and very low in the pollution count in  $\text{SO}_2$ . I will pass these over to the members so they can look at them as a matter of interest.

Mr. Bolan: What about the heat from it?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: The British thermal unit content is very comparable. In fact, our research in Ontario indicates that it equals that of soft coal or lignite, so the potential is very real and positive.

Vote 701 agreed to.

On vote 702, project development and community relations program:

Mr. Wildman: I have a short question. Every month I receive the ministry's newspaper in which the minister explains all the things that are being done in northern Ontario by his ministry. The latest one is for October. In it were all the pictures of the northern affairs officers across northern Ontario. It is interesting that a couple of people in my riding are also on the mailing list of the Unorganized Communities Association of Northern Ontario East. They received the October edition from the Ministry of Northern Affairs from UCANO. I was wondering who paid for that mailing. Was it the Ministry of Northern Affairs or was it UCANO? Could the minister explain what the reason was for having UCANO send out the ministry newsletter as well as its own community relations department news brief?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I am pleased the member has recognized that particular edition of our regular monthly ministry newspaper, because in that edition we are honouring the tenth anniversary of the northern affairs branch. I am pleased to say I will be going to Sault Ste. Marie tomorrow where all the northern affairs officers are meeting to extend to them my congratulations and honour those who have been with us for that 10-year period. It will be a very pleasant event indeed.

As the member knows, the northern affairs officers are unique to northern Ontario and are accepted. The service is hailed as a major breakthrough for the delivery of government information and services in the 29 communities and areas we serve across northern Ontario.

Regarding the question the honourable member has directed to me in connection with the mailing of that paper by the Unorganized Communities Association of Northern Ontario, we do fund UCANO. I think it is $25,000 a year for the northeast, or maybe it's more than that now. We provide about $27,000 or $28,000 a year to each of UCANO East and UCANO West. I would expect that since those are so freely distributed across northern Ontario they just took it upon themselves to mail them to their membership, knowing they would be interested.

We look after our own mailing, and if they choose to give further distribution to it that pleases me tremendously. I think it is a good newspaper. It is well put together. It is very informative; and it does a good job of informing not only my ministry but the public as well.

Mr. Wildman: There seems to be some concern underneath the gallery about the minister's reply, so maybe he can straighten it out with his staff.

I noticed in the picture of the northern affairs officers, there are quite a few of them who are in my riding. It is rather a large riding, but of course not as large as the minister's. There is a new northern affairs officer in Iroquois Falls. His name is Gerald Violette.

I want to add my congratulations to Mr. Violette on his appointment. I am surprised, though, that the minister did not at least leave him in Gogama so he could continue to serve the interests of the people in that community. I hope if there was any contribution for this mailing from the ministry that the minister could provide me with that information. I have no objection to it.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased the honourable member has recognized the appointment of Gerald Violette to the Northern Affairs staff. As we all know, he was very active and very vocal and led UCANO East for a number of years. He did an excellent job on behalf of the unorganized communities.

I think it is fair to say that with his background—I believe he was teaching for a while—he has a broad knowledge of northern Ontario. With his involvement in UCANO he has become very familiar with the many programs of this government and of this ministry.

Another appointment I would like to recognize is that of Jane Greer. She has just moved—today I believe—to Marathon. She's a young girl from Sioux Lookout who has come through the ranks. We do not confine our appointments to the male of the species; we mix them up and try to get as many women as possible in areas where they show an interest. Jane will take up the position in Marathon and I know she will do a great job, as will Gerry.

Vote 702 agreed to.

On vote 703, northern communities assistance program; item 1, community priorities:

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Chairman, I have some questions. First, though, I need some direction. I wonder if it is in order to raise questions with regard to funding for medical centres under item 1. Is that all right?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes.

Mr. Wildman: Could the minister give us some indication of what his ministry's policy is with regard to the funding of medical centres? I know he mentioned it earlier.

I know the ministry has provided a grant for the Cobalt medical centre in the range of $13,000 for renovations to the municipally-owned building. I understand the ministry has also provided $30,700 for the purchase of equipment for a dental clinic on a shared cost basis with the community of Chapleau. I understand Chapleau is under serious financial constraints and is having difficulties right now. That assistance was probably very useful, but could the minister give us some indication of whether there is an overall policy on funding by his ministry either to pay the full cost or to pay a portion of the cost of the development of medical or dental clinics in small communities in the north, or were these special grants?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We moved into the area of assistance to smaller communities in the development of medical centres following our own staff observations and following requests from the smaller municipalities and the Minister of Health. They could see this as a real need.

In our initial reviews, we found each community was different. As an example, Geraldton had a facility already built but needed $20,000 to put in certain equipment. That is all it required. The building was there. They said: "That is all we need. We need the $20,000, because we have run out the full length of our commitment." It had difficulty generating those further funds, so we assisted.

In Nakina, they had a different system. They went out and prevailed upon the local timber company to provide them with a trailer. We assisted that community by coming forward and completing that trailer, which is now a medical clinic.

What we said was we would assist up to two thirds of the total cost as to the type of facility, size and all the configurations and everything they require once that had been approved by the Ministry of Health and once we had an opportunity to look at their financial capability, but we did not want to be fixed firmly to a two-to-one type of assistance program. Where the municipalities could do more for themselves, with some encouragement from us, we would ask them to do a little more. It is not a fixed two-to-one basis.

Many municipalities, of course, are coming forward and saying, "Look, we need two thirds of the financial assistance." We are working closely with them on an individual basis. Red Lake has now received two-to-one assistance; Chapleau received two-to-one; I think Rainy River received two-to-one; and Manitowadge is receiving two-to-one. A lot of them will flesh out but before we do that we do not want to lock ourselves into a firm, fixed locked-in policy. We look at each request individually in co-operation and co-ordination with the Ministry of Health. We look at the financial capability of the community, then work out a formula it can carry.

Mr. Wildman: Could the minister give us some indication of how much money has actually been spent by the ministry for renovation or construction of medical and dental clinics and how much it is anticipated will be spent in the next year?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I don't have those total figures here but I will make a commitment to get all those totals for you.

Mr. Wildman: In that regard I also would like the minister, if he could, to expand on the ministry's position with regard to the dental clinic and the renovation of the medical clinic in Dubreuilville. I appreciate assistance is being provided to Hornepayne.

One of the major problems we have had in Dubreuilville is it is very difficult to get professional staff who can speak French to move to an area. The local community and the Algoma district health council has suggested one of the ways to make it more attractive for a French-speaking professional to move to the Wawa-Dubreuilville area would be a major renovation of the medical clinic and the addition of a dental clinic.

After some effort we did obtain a nurse practitioner for Dubreuilville who is fluently bilingual and is doing a very good job. But I think he would agree that with some capital expenditure it might make it a more serviceable facility, and make it easier for the doctor who comes in on a rotating basis. Also, it might make it more attractive for a dentist who might want to come in on a rotating basis.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We would certainly entertain a request from that municipality for upgrading the present facilities.

Mr. Wildman: I have already talked to Ed Belfry.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Good. I know the positive response by him. Again, the Ministry of Health is involved and with their concurrence, of course, we would sit down and work something out with that municipality, as we have done in Geraldton and other communities. As you correctly point out, one has to have the right type of atmosphere. The work place has to be something a doctor can be proud to work in, where he can do his best and provide the services people are entitled to.

I might say at this point that some municipalities have come forward with requests for the purchase of homes for doctors. They say, "Now you have provided or helped us to provide a good medical clinic, but we still cannot attract a doctor because we do not have a decent home for him." Our response up to this time has been that our priority across northern Ontario would be the development of medical clinics. We have only a limited amount of funds. If they will bear with us we would like to answer all the requests for medical clinics first, then the next time around, if that requirement is still there, we would have a look at it. But we have encouraged municipalities to go into long-term mortgages and loans from banks and Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation and develop those homes for doctors themselves. The doctors would surely pay the ongoing rent.

Mr. Philip: Are you suggesting that doctors should live in public housing?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: It is not public housing. I do not think they are looking for public housing at all. They are looking for decent housing that will add to the comfort of their jobs in northern Ontario. The doctors I have spoken to are not looking for any handouts or giveaways. They say: "Give me a home. I will pay the going rent." We have made that known to the various municipalities. I just make that as a point.

Getting back to the appointment of Gerry Violette, it has been properly pointed out to me that Gerry did compete. It was a province-wide competition. I just want to put that on the record, make it clear and precise that he did compete with other aspirants for that job. When we have an opening for a northern affairs officer, the applications flow in from literally every other department of government and from many people in the private sector, because it is a unique job, a very satisfying job. As we celebrate our tenth anniversary, I am particularly pleased that many of the originals are still around, which shows me it is a very satisfying career. I am looking forward to tomorrow night, as I said earlier.

Mr. Bolan: Following along on the lines of health services, I brought to the ministry's attention the plight of the people of Thorne, some 40 miles from North Bay, who are having some difficulty in obtaining medical services for that community. I pointed out that everything had been set in motion to have a doctor attend in Thorne. This was co-ordinated through St. Joseph's Hospital. The only problem we had was where the services would be rendered. I am wondering if the minister has anything to report at this time, in view of the fact that it was brought to his attention three weeks ago.

I am informed by the local northern affairs officer that the minister is looking at the question of bringing in a portable to the Thorne area; in fact, the site has already been located. I am just wondering if you have anything more concrete to report to us at this time.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I did have some information on Thorne and I have misplaced it. I have asked my staff to see if they can dig it up again.

Mr. Bolan: Perhaps the minister will come to over the next while and inform us.

4:30 p.m.

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Chairman, I would also like to raise under this vote the question of ongoing operating costs of various facilities whose construction this ministry assists in funding.

We have talked briefly about Hornepayne and the commitment made by the ministry which I understand has to be confirmed by the municipality's accepting it at a meeting with Mr. Aiken on November 20. The ministry has committed itself to $100,000 in operating costs over two years if there is a deficit. I understand one of the main reasons there is possibly going to be a deficit is the recreation facility in the complex, the swimming pool largely. I understand the original agreement signed by the developer was that if there was a deficit over the first five years, the developer would pay towards it. This is now supplementing that agreement.

That is a welcome suggestion by the ministry. It relates to a problem I brought to the minister's attention in September with regard to recreational facilities that have been built in small communities, not only in the north but all across Ontario by the Ministry of Culture and Recreation, often with Wintario funds, Community Recreation Centres Act grants and so on.

I use as an example the plight of the recreation facility in Searchmont, which is just north of Sault Ste. Marie. It is a very small community which has been running a deficit for some time and which has a large loan with the bank. The bank has threatened to foreclose, although I am not sure what the bank would do with it if it did foreclose. The minister's staff were quite concerned—I will emphasize that—about the problem and were willing to look at it. After some consultation, I think, with the Ministry of Culture and Recreation and also with his own staff who attended a meeting I also attended in Searchmont, the minister wrote back to me and said in a letter dated September 24: "You will appreciate the difficulties encountered by the Searchmont club are not unique but are common to many centres in northern and southern Ontario. Although I appreciate fully the nature of this predicament, I must regretfully inform you that my ministry is unable to assist with the funding." Then he goes on to suggest that perhaps the Ministry of Culture and Recreation would be able to provide some assistance.

That was quite a statement because—and I don't think I am reading too much into it—basically what the minister is saying is that for many, or at least a significant number of small communities, not only in northern Ontario but also in southern Ontario, that have built recreational facilities with moneys they have obtained from the Ministry of Culture and Recreation and are now in financial trouble in trying to operate those facilities, perhaps the Ministry of Culture and Recreation would be able to do something about it.

I am sure the minister is aware that the Ministry of Culture and Recreation does not have any program for providing operational funds. That is one reason why his ministry has become involved in such an intimate way with the operation of the Hornepayne town centre. I followed up his suggestion, though, and got in touch with the Minister of Culture and Recreation. I got a rather interesting response, which raises the question, that I pointed to in the previous vote of the relationship between this ministry and other ministries of the government.

This is a letter dated October 17 from the Minister of Culture and Recreation (Mr. Baetz) in which he states: "In answer to your question, I am quite unaware of any small community in the province which is experiencing financial difficulties as a direct result of receiving capital funding from my ministry. All applicants for a capital grant are required to examine the operating cost implications of their proposed facility development, and the applicants must indicate to the ministry their ability and willingness to support these costs."

He indicates what assistance is given by the ministry in those calculations. Further, he says: "My ministry review of its capital programs does, however, examine the increase in operating costs created by capital construction or expansion. Staff are at present devising criteria and guidelines for a new capital program," and so on.

In other words, he is in the process, as we all know, of changing his capital program so that there will not be communities in trouble as a result of building a facility which might be too large for them to be able to operate economically and to be able to pay for. But it seems to me—and maybe I am wrong—that this is again an example of a direct contradiction between what this minister says and what one of his colleagues said about the same thing.

How is it that this ministry believes the Searchmont situation is not unique, that many centres in both northern and southern Ontario are experiencing financial difficulties in operating centres built with government assistance, but the Ministry of Culture and Recreation, the line ministry responsible for these facilities, does not know of any small community in the province in this situation?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I suppose one could play on words, but as the honourable member has pointed out, the Minister of Culture and Recreation, to my knowledge, is looking at the problem. There is no doubt in my mind that the capital construction program of Wintario was stopped temporarily. I suppose the primary reason was because of the backlog of commitments that had to be caught up until they were examined. But it is of concern, and I am sure it is of concern to my colleague, with regard to the operation of these massive recreational facilities.

It does not stop at the ones that are funded by this government. Certainly, the Canada Games project—and I had the opportunity of touring those facilities that are well into construction now in Thunder Bay. The question I asked was, “Who is going to pay the ongoing operational cost of these facilities in Thunder Bay?” It was quietly whispered in my ear that the overall operating costs would be in excess of $80,000 a year, that we may be able to pick up through a user fee charge $300,000 or $400,000, but there is going to be a shortfall of $400,000 or $500,000 a year. It is giving them some concern.

I think that is the concern we were trying to express in our letter to the member for Algoma. It is a concern because sometimes the one-shot capital construction dollars flow quite easily. Then, when municipalities are anxious to get a facility in place and get to use it, the ongoing costs are pushed down the road again to be dealt with later. They will have to deal with them because it is their responsibility.

As an example, the town of Geraldton wanted to develop a very elaborate recreational centre. Our staff sat down with the municipality, went over the plans they had and changed the direction considerably, so that the town went out and bought a building off the rack, so to speak, rather than getting a custom-built facility that would accelerate the cost tremendously.

Here again is an example of how we can get involved, work very closely with a municipality and pare down their overall capital cost, which would be reflected in a lower operating cost down the road. We are concerned about it. It is something that the municipality in its own way should be responsible for and be concerned with, because it has that local responsibility to make sure it can carry it. We cannot just keep passing on the responsibility to other levels of government. We make it very clear to them when they are moving ahead with these facilities. Even with the medical centres, we tell them to make sure they look at the ongoing operational costs because they are of concern to us and to them too.

Mr. Wildman: I appreciate that the Minister of Culture and Recreation is involved and has been for some time with the revision of these criteria. I hope in future a very small community will not get involved with a centre that is perhaps a little too elaborate. I hope they will build centres scaled more to their ability to pay the operating costs but still provide them with a recreational facility they will be able to use and that will be good for the community. I hope that will resolve problems in the future.

Frankly, I agree with the minister's position. I do not agree with the Minister of Culture and Recreation. There are a number of small communities that are in trouble or may be in the future. The revision of his criteria for future capital expenditures is not going to help those communities. I would urge this minister to put some pressure on his colleague to try to look at the problem in a more realistic way.

The problem we have now is that communities and the ministry, in good faith, got involved in some facilities that were perhaps a little too elaborate. Maybe they need to be bailed out. I suppose the ministry is concerned that if it does this it will set a precedent—that in future, communities that build new facilities will say, “They gave operating expenses to such and such a community; therefore we should get them too.”

Perhaps it could be done by saying that facilities built prior to a certain date, and where there are really serious financial problems, might be given some kind of financial assistance. Perhaps the Ministry of Northern Affairs could get involved in that as well in small communities in the north.

We know many of the small communities, especially in unorganized areas like Searchmont, have very little ability to raise operating costs except by contributions. They are doing that, but sometimes it is just out of range for them. I would urge the minister to persuade his colleague to take another look at trying to resolve these problems.

Mr. Bolan: Mr. Minister, I would like to set the stage for a meeting which will take place on December 10 or 11 between officials of the city of North Bay, yourself and the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott). I believe the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Maeck) is also going to be there in his capacity as the member for the riding adjoining Nipissing.

One of the problems that will be discussed is that of the extension of the sewage treatment plant at North Bay. I have corresponded with you on the matter and I am sure you are familiar with it. However, I would like to take this opportunity to review it and see if you have any response at this time.

Basically what happened is that some years ago—I believe it was in 1970—the Ministry of the Environment and the city of North Bay entered into an agreement whereby the ministry would build the sewage treatment plant. Prior to the plant being built, discussions took place as to the size of the plant. The city said it needed something that could handle approximately 12 million gallons a day. Ministry officials said it should be six million. The views of the ministry officials prevailed and the smaller-sized plant was built.

There was also a proviso in the agreement to the effect that the ministry would entertain further submissions by the city for an extension of the sewage treatment plant, again to be built by the Ministry of the Environment, if that was its policy at the time. We had this grey area that crept into it and it has been the interpretation of that policy that is the subject matter of—I will not call it a confrontation—the differences of opinion that have arisen.

Some two years ago, if not before that, the Ministry of Housing put a freeze on approvals of all plans of subdivision for the city of North Bay until such time as the sewage treatment plant was extended to meet the growing requirements. This meant, of course, all kinds of delays for individuals and developers who had plans for the growth of the city. Finally, a meeting was arranged between city officials and the Ministry of the Environment. I believe it was a year ago, perhaps a bit longer. I attended that meeting and basically by that time what had happened is the ministry policy had changed and instead of the ministry coming in and building the plant as well as maintaining it and providing the personnel for it, the policy was that the plant would have to be built or expanded by the city.

There was a system of grants which were set up that would fall into place to assist the city in the construction of the plant. The problem is that the original expense of the expansion was something to the tune of about $12 million. This has been revised and I believe it is now down to about $8 million.

The fact of the matter is that in spite of the freeze which the Ministry of Housing put on, they did release a number of lots and they did release or approve some plans so that more lots were thrown on the market. In view of the other projects which, as you know, the city has in mind, such as the industrial park which this ministry was very much involved in and to which the government of Ontario contributed 50 per cent of the funds—and I may say that aside from the Marshall Avenue interchange which I am told now is being resolved—

Hon. Mr. Bernier: By whom?

Mr. Bolan: By both parties. That is the last word I have on it.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: You must have been talking to Jean-Jacques Blais.

Mr. Bolan: I understand there was a meeting last Wednesday in Ottawa with Mr. Brunelle. I don't know if you were there or not. Were you?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, I was.

Mr. Bolan: In any event, that is another topic altogether. It was not resolved?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No.

Mr. Bolan: I am told that it will be. They are waiting for other things to happen before that takes place.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: In the fullness of time.

Mr. Bolan: In the fullness of time, yes. I hope the province's treatment of the problem of the expansion of the sewage treatment plant will not be in the fullness of time but rather will be shortly.

In any event, as you know there are some major plans going on in North Bay for expansion, because North Bay, if anything, certainly can be described as a definite growth area in northeastern Ontario and you could look upon it as a future distribution centre for northeastern Ontario and northwestern Quebec. The amount which is generated from that area for northwestern Quebec is quite large and a big flow of dollars and of demands for services and goods comes from northeastern Ontario.

In view of these expansion programs which are growing and in view of the progress which is made with the industrial park, I would like to know from the minister just what his position is with respect to the funding of the extension of the sewage treatment plant at North Bay.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, as the honourable member is very much aware and as he indicated, that was a project that was taken on by the Ministry of the Environment. The Ministry of Northern Affairs has not been involved in the funding of the treatment plant. We will await the outcome of the December 10 meeting. I believe your new mayor is coming down with some senior officials from North Bay, so I would be reluctant to even comment on our involvement at this time. I have to say I do not know all the details and I will be briefed prior to that meeting, of course. I think, in all fairness, you will have to wait until we get through the discussions.

The Ministry of the Environment, of course, would be the lead line ministry in that particular responsibility, so if you will bear with me, we will wait until that particular meeting and I can get some more facts.

I cannot help but comment on the Marshall Avenue overpass. Since the honourable member mentioned it, I know he will want me to comment on it because an opportunity never goes by without him being pleased to see what development is going on in North Bay that is being shared 50 per cent by this province and 50 per cent by the federal government.

I remember the honourable member standing in his place and pleading with me to get together with the then Treasurer of the province, Mr. Darcy McKeough, to sign that subsidiary agreement for $14 million. I agreed to it. The member for Algoma well remembers how we moved ahead and negotiated with the federal government. We wanted a $14-million package which would take in the Marshall Avenue overpass and look after all the requirements of the industrial park that is going to mean so much to the future of North Bay.

The industrial commissioner has done a fantastic job. If there is a community that has shown what can be done with a dynamic, industrial development committee, foresight and an industrial development program, it is North Bay. It has excelled in that. It is a leader in northern Ontario when it comes to attracting small industries to its borders. Nevertheless, I was prevailed upon and pressured to do everything I could. I was hammered down, believe me, at a meeting in North Bay attended by the Chamber of Commerce of North Bay and the honourable member. He said to me: "Go for a smaller package. Do not go for the $14-million package. Go for a $10-million package."

Mr. Bolan: You and Jean-Jacques Blais.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, Jean-Jacques Blais was saying that because he had the $10 million. He had $5 million and the province was going to put up $5 million. I said: "Look, we are so close; let us wait. We can get $7 million from each. The province is willing to put up its $7 million." We had the $7 million at that time. I am sure if the member had to do it all over again he would agree with me we should have hung in there tighter. It would have been only a matter of weeks.

The federal government was on the verge of an election. Let us be honest. Jean-Jacques Blais wanted to get re-elected. He wanted that particular project to move ahead and he prevailed upon the Treasurer to go for a $10-million package. So we are right back to square one where we are now fighting for that $4 million. I think North Bay was shortchanged. I really do. In all honesty, we should have hung in there, with all due respect to some of those community leaders and the chamber of commerce. Now the fight is going to be a very tough and difficult one because moneys are that much tighter today than they were at that particular time. Nevertheless, we will await the outcome of that meeting on December 10 with the North Bay officials and the honourable member to see where we can assist, if we can assist. I am very sympathetic to the desires of North Bay and the need to get on with industrial development. Of course, with that, goes the treatment plant at North Bay.

Mr. Bolan: Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the opportunity of setting my part of the record straight, if I may. Naturally, a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. I have used that expression before with respect to this funding. It only stands to reason to take the $10 million, and we will get the other $4 million somehow.

Ontario is responsible for all of that, because in 1976 there was an agreement hammered out between the federal and provincial governments for about $10 million. I saw the agreement myself, because I was on city council at that time. I met with my predecessor, Dick Smith, and other members of council. There it was in black and white: $10 million for the city of North Bay from the provincial and federal governments. It did provide that $2 million of that was for the Marshall Avenue interchange. But Ontario reneged on its end of the deal in signing the agreement at that time. It kept putting it off.

In the meantime, this is what happened. The Ministry of Transportation and Communications went ahead with a four-lane highway, which is coming into North Bay and which is a good project. As a result of that four-lane highway they changed their criteria for the Marshall Avenue interchange. It now calls for an overpass over the railway and for all those other things which were not needed back in 1976 when the original agreement was hammered out.

Again I will say I would do the same thing over again. The project is on course, I might add. There was a $1-million contract let out just the other day for more sewage system expansion. The contract for the extension of Chippewa Avenue will probably be let next year. It is all on stream and all falling into place. The $4 million is going to be paid eventually. I feel it will definitely be 50-50 between the province and the federal government.

As I say, the Ministry of Transportation and Communications has changed its criteria for the interchange, which triggered this additional $2 million. It is not $4 million we are looking at really; $2 million would have been required in any event for the Marshall Avenue interchange. It is the change in design and the change in criteria. That is my part of the record. It has been going on for three years.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: It all boils down to the fact that you are $4 million short.

Item 1 agreed to.

On item 2, isolated communities:

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Chairman, I'm looking at the figures for this item. If I look at the estimates for 1978-79, it was $630,000, but actually only $195,998 was spent. The estimate for 1979-80 was $500,000 and the estimate for 1980-81 is $800,000. If it is in order, I would like the minister to explain why the low amount was spent in 1978-79. Can he also give us some indication of how much has been spent of the 1979-80 estimate so far?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I think 1978-79 was basically the start of the program. I do not think the message really got out to the unorganized areas that this assistance was available to them in order to get them to make applications. That slowed up the flow of money in that particular year. In 1979-80, we had a total of $500,000 and we spent $489,500. We just about used up all the funds there.

I think the increase in the requirement this year flowed from the establishment of the local services boards. I think we will have a more sophisticated group out in the unorganized areas that will be fully familiar with and aware how this program works and how it can work for them. We expect an increase in applications. This is the reason we have asked for your support for additional funds in this particular vote.

Mr. Wildman: What the minister is saying is that the funds allocated for this year's program have almost all been expended. If there are applications in the few months between now and the end of March, let's say, for fire protection equipment under the isolated communities assistance fund, the equipment will not be able to be provided until after the beginning of the next fiscal year. Is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We are into the 1980-81 year. I was referring to the 1979-80 figure. There is no problem this year. There are still funds available.

Mr. Wildman: Could the minister indicate how much has been expended of that $800,000?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Of the 1980-81 amount, that figure is $677,000. We are moving right ahead.

Mr. Bolan: On the question of the local services boards. I am looking at the attached chart in the estimates which shows the number of meetings which were held, et cetera. It has been a year since the act was passed and I am wondering if you are experiencing any difficulties with respect to the development of the boards. What is the feeling out there? What is the feeling with the people who are having the informational meetings? Is there progress being made once the initial meeting is held?

It has been a year since the act was passed, and Lord knows, we discussed it until everybody was blue in the face. I have noticed you have some results here. I believe you had an election in Hudson and Foleyet. Would you have expected the others to be so far behind before implementation or what? I do not know. I am just asking the question. Is there a reason for the delay in the implementation of the local services boards beginning with their informational meetings which took place after that?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We looked at a period of about three months from the time the organizational meetings were being brought together. Bringing a new piece of legislation like this forward—printing the material alone in both languages took us a considerable amount of time. Then, of course, we had to train our northern affairs officers because they are the front-line people who actually go out to communities and help them organize. We even made the posters for them. They could put in the names, times and places for their organizational meetings.

But normally we look at about a three-month period. We are having some minor difficulty with regard to boundaries. Inter-governmental Affairs has rightly requested the right to comment on the boundaries that are established by the local people because it wants to know about acting with an organized municipality. That is one minor situation we are developing and it is working fairly well.

Now we have the first two local services boards. The honourable member has correctly pointed out that Hudson, the greatest little community in the northwest, was the first local services board to be established in the northwest. As I said in Foleyet on Thursday last, Hudson and Foleyet are unique because they are the first in the world to have local services boards. That is pretty different.

Mr. Bolan: Why are there not more though?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: They are going to start to go now. We have 20 to move along very quickly. I wish the honourable member would have been with me both at Hudson and Foleyet to see the enthusiasm and the pride that those people have. They packed the hall.

We had a special swearing-in ceremony for them. The people elected to the board are given a special certificate and we identified both of those communities with a special scroll honouring the event because we have a piece of legislation here that is unique to northern Ontario. There is nothing like it on the North American continent or anywhere in the world. They were very pleased and proud of that. The pride of making their decisions and knowing where they can go and where they want to go was very real at both of those meetings.

So we have two in place now. There are a number that will fall in place after these have been sworn in. We are looking at about 20 that will be fully operational, we hope by the end of the year or early in 1981.

Among the smaller groups of population there is some concern. They want to see how the other ones are working before they move in. That is understandable. But as I pointed out to them, it is permissive legislation which is unique in this House. We allowed the people to opt in or opt out and the fear they may have is not as great as maybe they anticipate.

I am personally very pleased. I made it a point to bring to the attention of the people in Hudson and Foleyet that the piece of legislation we brought to this Legislature and had passed after hours of debate was so good that all political parties took credit for it. I think you would agree with me on that. You all want to be associated with that piece of legislation. I know you do. As you go around northern Ontario you say to yourselves, "I was part of that piece of legislation." It is different. It is something the people of northern Ontario brought together themselves. The unorganized communities brought it together, the Unorganized Communities Association of Northern Ontario East and UCANO West and the 30-odd meetings my staff had in the unorganized communities of northern Ontario.

The staff of Northern Affairs deserves a lot of credit, as do the communities themselves and UCANO East and UCANO West. I want to express my appreciation again to members on both sides of the House for their support in the excellent piece of legislation we are now seeing put into place and becoming operational and functional as we thought it would.

I do not, at this point, after a year of examination by the unorganized communities, see where we need any amendments. You will recall I said that if, after a couple of years, we saw some glaring mistakes I was prepared to bring the bill back and have some amendments. At this time I have not seen any areas where we need amendments. I think that is a credit to all members of this Legislature.

Mr. Bolan: That is what I was going to ask the minister, whether, now the act has been in operation for one year, he sees any areas where amendments would be required, particularly to deal with the very small communities that are looking at forming a local service board.

These are distinct types of communities and that is what is unique about northern Ontario. A community like Foleyet is larger than another community. Do you find the requirements of the act lend themselves to the smaller community as well as to the larger community which seeks an LSB? Do the provisions of the act apply as well with respect to the arranging of the meetings, the numbers that are required and the number of people on the board? I can see in a small area there is a shortage of manpower. There are only so many people who are prepared to undertake this onerous work. I am just wondering if you see anything happening there so that a really small community may not be getting as full a benefit of the act as a larger community.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: These issues have not surfaced as yet. As I pointed out, we are just getting into it. It has been a year since the bill was passed. We have had lots of time to study it. They have accepted the five-man boards and the annual election of those board members. They love the secret ballot and they like the 50-50 arrangement.

At Hudson and Foleyet, we asked them to submit a global budget. They did that. They looked at their requirements for the next year and took a global figure which our staff carefully went over with them. We then provided them with 50 per cent of that budget. If they came up with a budget of, say, $10,000, we would be responsible for $5,000 at the end of the year. To get them started, we give them an advance. We gave them 50 per cent of our normal assistance. The balance of our grant would come after the audit. They were appreciative of that. We wanted to show our desire and sincerity, saying: "Look here, this is what we meant. We are putting up dollar for dollar to show you we mean business. Here is our 50 per cent of the grant in advance." This is very unusual.

I think one has to respond to those small communities in that way because $2,500 or $3,000 in a small community is a lot of money when it is put out and used for services. They now have that kind of encouragement. When I gave the cheque to the people in Foleyet for $3,000 on Thursday night, they realized this ministry and this government meant business. We were out to help them as much as we could and we were showing that sincerity with the delivery of those funds at the start of the first part of their fiscal year.

Mr. Bolan: I have one more question on this. Have you had any complaints on the method of service by mail to the voters or to those to whom notice is sent out that consideration is being given to the formation of a local services board in that area? We discussed that at some length and I suggested it be done by registered mail. I believe that failed, and I would just like to know if there were any complaints from anyone on that.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: If I recall correctly, the honourable member did make the suggestion that we have a mailing list and that registered mail be used to advise all the voters in that particular area. I think he modified that after giving it some further thought, knowing of the expense and, of course, the effectiveness of the postal system.

I think he would review that request totally now if he had to do it over again.

No, I have not heard of anything along those lines that would cause me to change my position with respect to notices. The northern affairs officers make a point of making sure the area being serviced by the local services boards is very broadly notified through posters. We have come up with a very attractive poster, where we just put the place and the time. The information is given and in a small community the word gets out pretty fast. We have not encountered any problems along the line that the member was fearful of at that particular time, but we have monitored it very carefully.

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the minister could tell us how many officials he has working specifically on the local services board applications and processing? I understand in the northeastern regional office Mr. Peter Merritt, whom I have met on a number of occasions, is in charge, and I suppose he has a counterpart in the northwestern regional office. I was wondering if the minister believes that one person in each regional office is sufficient to process and carry through the whole procedure for the applications after the initial meetings with the local northern affairs officers. There seems to be some holdup once the initial application is made. The minister himself said it takes about three months. I wonder if, as well as telling us how many people he has working on it and whether he thinks that is sufficient, he could explain the reason for the delay of three months before there is a decision on whether a board will be set up?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I have been advised that we have, as the member has correctly pointed out, two full-time people looking after the local services boards, in the northeast, Peter Merritt, and in the northwest Stu Evert. Of course, they have the backup support of other branches of our ministry, including the legal staff. As I pointed out in my earlier remarks, those applications are sent to Inter-governmental Affairs, particularly as they relate to the boundaries. So we have to wait until that ministry has a chance to comment on them. At this time, we do not see any necessity to build up that staff. We may be concentrating more of our resources in the initial stages in getting applications resolved, but with the co-operation and the assistance of northern affairs officers as they move around, they are flowing. If we run into any snags, I can assure you we will get some extra resources and keep the program moving, because I think it is essential we do that.

Mr. Wildman: Could the minister also indicate whether it is a requirement of the ministry to have the local community, when they are applying for assistance under the isolated communities assistance fund, also to apply for a local services board? In other words, if they are looking for capital assistance or firefighting equipment, for instance, and the question arises as to maintenance and funding for maintenance, is it necessary for them to form a local services board or could a group somehow incorporate itself in another way and apply for assistance under the isolated communities assistance fund, and then look after the maintenance on its own without getting the matching funds through a local services board?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We kept the isolated communities assistance fund in place and, as you have already noticed, we have added to it this year for that very reason. No, there is no requirement that a community must form a local services board to apply for an ICAF grant. There is no connection at all. We want to make it very clear that if that nucleus of people have the desire and they can show to us they are a cohesive group, that they have some resources and they have a self-help motivation, then the ICAF fund is still available to them. They can form a community action group if they so wish. But it is still there in place and it has no connection with the local services board. But a local services board can apply for an ICAF grant, over and above their operational costs for the services they administer.

Mr. Wildman: Has the ministry run into the problem of different groups in the same vicinity which are interested in different services both applying to form local services boards? In other words, have you had a situation where one group might be interested in water supply—getting some assistance to maintain a water system—but in the same vicinity another group is interested in providing fire protection—and it has applied to form a local services board and also applies under ICAF for fire protection equipment? If you have run into that problem, what process are you going through to resolve it?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: It is obvious the member for Algoma is very familiar with the Unorganized Communities Association of Northern Ontario, and I think he is referring to the politics that develop within a small community. He is quite right. There are little groups that have a certain desire to do something for the field of recreation; another group is totally centred on a water supply, another group is wrapped up with having a fire department. I am not saying it is a problem, but it is there, it is real, and we do not discount it. The best way to resolve it, of course, is at an open public gathering. We have to point out to them the benefits of a co-operative, co-ordinated approach to either services. After they have seen the benefits that can flow, particularly with the incentive of the dollar-for-dollar assistance program, they come together.

I know in my own home town of Hudson, I was with the chamber of commerce for a number of years. The chamber there has been responsible for the development and the funding of the town fire truck so they had a bit of a bank account built up. The new chairman of the local services board said they should pass it over to them because the board would use it in the delivery of firefighting service and would provide the fire department with all the things it needed, and then the board could get a dollar-for-dollar grant. That is correct, because it is there, it was used as part of their original funding mechanism, so now it will be in one pot.

It is an issue that the northern affairs officers deal with very delicately, because the pride is built up, say, in the community hall, in the curling rink or in the skating rink—even in the street lights. You could get a couple of people who are solely dedicated to having their community really lit up and take pride in that. They cherish, they protect and they guard their accomplishments. So it is a little bit of working closely with the people and pointing out to them the benefits that will flow from it. But you are quite right in pointing this matter out. We are making the northern affairs officers aware of it. They were always aware, of course, but we ask them to work closely with the local people and point out to them the benefits that flow from an LSB.

Mr. Wildman: Have you developed any policy or do you have to look at it simply on a case-by-case basis about this possible problem of having two actual formal applications for local services boards within a very small area? Again, that is not exactly the same area. However, you might even have that situation where there is one group applying for a local services board to provide a particular service in covering the whole of an unorganized township, while some other group in a small community in that township that is interested in another service for its own particular area is applying for a local services board. If you do get two applications like that, what is your policy? What do you do about it?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: There is no specific example I can relate to in this particular situation. As I said earlier, the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs looks at the boundaries that are being established by a local services board. Our own staff look at those boundaries and, in their opinion, examine what that particular group can service. What do they want to service? Do they want to service street lights? Do they want to provide garbage collection and fire protection? We may go to the fire marshal's office for his advice.

When we do that, we can pretty well sort it out. We bring both groups together and say: "This is what the people in the field think. This is the area that can be serviced with the services you require. In our opinion, this is the route to go." With the art of discussion, putting all the cards on the table, so to speak, and bringing them into our confidence as to how best they can operate as a self-help program, I feel confident we can work it out.

Getting back to the town of Hudson, it chose just to go with a fire department, recreation program and street lighting. I was very interested in having them take over the water system because I happen to be very much involved with the water system at Hudson. However, I could not talk them into taking over the water system at this time. They see that as something down the road in two or three years. Their argument is, and I suppose it is a valid one: "We want to get the local services board going. We want to get it functional and gain some experience before we take too big a bite. Leave the water out of it for the time being. Hopefully as we get more experience and knowledge and build up our administrative strength, we will look at the water system." I think that is a very responsible kind of thinking.

Mr. Wildman: Since the minister could not think of a particular example, I will give him two examples. The community of Searchmont in my riding, which I mentioned before, has a fire department that has been in operation for some time. They got some equipment on their own before the isolated communities assistance fund came in. They got some assistance from ICAF when it did come in. They have applied for further assistance because the equipment they have, which is secondhand, is not adequate to provide the fire protection they require.

As a matter of fact, it is over a year ago now that that community applied for a truck to replace the truck that carries only a 300-gallon capacity and is inadequate. I got a call from the fire chief or the head of the committee about it last week. I was wondering if I could ask you why it has taken since January of last year for them to hear anything about it. I am asking you that now and using that as an example.

They also had the problem of the community centre. They had these two groups that hoped to get assistance and wanted to put their two services into operation. The Ministry of Northern Affairs was successful in bringing those two groups together. Although there was some trepidation on the part of some people, they decided to work together and to say, "We have these two committees, the recreation hall committee and the fire protection committee. They can both be subcommittees of one local services board and we will make an application for a local services board." You have received that application. In that sense, the ministry was successful in doing what the minister indicated.

In the township of Aweres, however, we have a group that is attempting to set up a fire brigade and to get fire protection equipment. It is interested in providing protection for the whole of the unorganized township. However, within that township there is another small group, a subdivision group basically, that has a problem with maintenance of its water system, which is a communal water system. They have made an application for a local services board for their own little area to provide their water supply. I believe both of those applications have been forwarded to the ministry through Peter Merritt, and I guess have been processed.

My question, which maybe I should not be putting on the record, is: Does Northern Affairs have the same kind of concern that has been expressed to me unofficially by the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs about having two applications for different services within a similar area? If you do share that concern, can you tell me what you are hoping to do about it?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I wasn't aware of that particular situation, Mr. Chairman, but I think it is fair to say that in some of the applications, the actual organizational meeting may not take place as quickly as one group or the other group may wish. I think we have found in a couple of cases that if we just take a little more time and let the people talk among themselves, sometimes those groups will come together. It has happened that where we went into an information meeting, we have had two different groups sitting in the hall, obviously both on different wavelengths and both determined to be the inspiration of the leaders with regard to the local services board.

Once we have disseminated all the information, a northern affairs officer will then go back in and talk to the various groups. As we discussed during the development of that piece of legislation, really it was a consensus we wanted. We wanted a strong feeling, because it was a self-help type of thrust, so it is obvious, if we are going to go ahead with a structure, that we have to have the support or at least the consensus of some support from a majority of the people.

It is fair to say that in some of these smaller communities there are objections. Some people don't want to change and they have made their views known, but they are very much in the minority. Just the odd one has that fear and sometimes they are not fully informed; they have a lack of knowledge as to what it will do for them in the way of costs. That is a big thing in an organized area. They see a horrendous structure, they see tax being imposed upon them without getting into the real operation of the local services board, but once that has been done, in the largest percentage of the cases, those fears are dispelled.

It is the art of persuasion, I guess, that we use and will continue to use until we find a better system, but obviously we can't have two LSBs overlapping each other; that would be impossible. We hope common sense will prevail and they will get together and do the best for the area that they can.

Mr. Bolan: Mr. Chairman, dealing once again with the question of extension of services to the northern communities, I am sure the House would like to know that as a result of vigorous and persistent pressure by myself and by other members of both opposition parties with respect to the extension of ETV in Ontario, the Minister of Culture and Recreation (Mr. Baetz) today announced from North Bay the extension of the services to service the ridings of Nipissing and Parry Sound as well as part of Muskoka, so I am sure you would like to hear that.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I must put on the record along with what the honourable member from North Bay has put on the record, the fact that the member for Parry Sound (Mr. Maeck) was most supportive, most vocal, as was, of course, the Minister of Northern Affairs in making sure that ETV is brought to that great part of northern Ontario. We still have a few blank spots up there that we are looking at very carefully, and certainly as funds become available we will continue to apply pressure. I know I have the support of my northern cabinet colleagues to extend that excellent service in northern Ontario into all parts of northern Ontario.
5:30 p.m.

Mr. Conway: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to be able to participate in this particular estimates discussion as a bona fide northern Ontario member. I have to tell the minister, according to the Office of the Assembly, my mileage rate is now adjusted to take into consideration northern circumstances, so I appreciate that status being conferred on me.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We must have that checked.

Mr. Ashe: Is it a $10 licence fee?

Mr. Conway: That is one of the subjects I will parenthetically refer to in a moment. I want to draw to the minister's attention, under vote 703, isolated communities activity.

In my constituency there is a portion of the southeastern Nipissing district. The areas are divided into one organized municipality area township and some unorganized townships in which approximately 600 to 800 people reside. One of those hamlets is called Madawaska. For some time now the people there have been engaged, through the local fire department, in the business of trying to arrange for the raising of sufficient funds to construct a building in which their fire engine might be located.

My friend the member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Lane) will well remember a sunny day some months ago when he brought that fine new vehicle into town.

Mr. Wildman: Did he drive it in?

Mr. Conway: The member for Algoma-Manitoulin, as I recall, did not drive the vehicle into town but it did arrive with a very considerable fanfare.

Mr. Wildman: Lights and siren going?

Mr. Conway: Exactly. My friend from Algoma has it down to a T. It was, none the less, appreciated because, as the minister knows, those kinds of services in isolated communities are particularly important.

To the problem at hand: the community found itself in the possession of a very good vehicle, but with some financial constraint in terms of raising funds to house it properly. They have preceded the local Murchison and Lyell fire department in building not only a firehall but also an associated library. They have done, I think, an excellent job in raising funds, and they are continuing that process.

As of this weekend—and I had the opportunity to visit that community just 36 hours ago—the construction had pretty well been completed as far as the contract work was involved, although a substantial amount of volunteer labour had yet to be applied. The minister will know, because I have written to him and heard from him not too long ago in this matter. I was wondering if he could advise me today as to whether there would be favourable consideration given to a request by the Murchison and Lyell fire department for some financial assistance with respect to the construction and related costs. It will not be a great amount of money in the overall scheme of things.

I want to reiterate my earlier comments in saying the local volunteer fire department has done an extremely good job. Mr. Mervin Dupuis and his group have been very active over a number of months now in raising funds, but given the fact not more than 300 to 400 people live in that hamlet they do have a very restricted base from which to draw. They, I know, would be very appreciative of any assistance the minister might provide, recognizing that he has done a considerably good service in making the vehicle available. It seems to me it would make very good sense to provide some funds to assist in that particular project.

While I am on my feet—I think this is parenthetical but I always imagined it to be directly under the vote—the people of that particular isolated community wonder why, in terms of tax benefits, they continue to be discriminated against in so far as what I call the Mac tax cut of 1976 is involved. Perhaps I should call it the Mac-McKeough tax cut which gave the $10 licence fee to the people of northern Ontario with some flexibility.

The good people of Madawaska, Whitney, Stonecliffe and that northern portion of Renfrew county would feel I was being remiss in the defence of their isolated circumstances if I did not draw to the attention of the Minister of Northern Affairs again today their very earnest desire to have favourable consideration given to the inclusion under that benefit of all of the district of Nipissing and that northerly portion of the county of Renfrew. It is an important matter for those people. They see it as more than a symbolic gesture.

I know the minister appreciates the isolated circumstances of some of these communities. I notice, for example, under this particular vote there is reference to Kaa in terms of an isolated community. There are people who live near that isolated lumber camp—which is essentially what it is—who still pay a southern Ontario rate, though to procure the licence they go to Mattawa where everyone else gets the special benefit.

I realize drawing a line is always difficult. I would make myself available to the minister, in public or in private, to assist in what I think is a responsible arbitration of that sensitive and difficult matter.

I would like to draw out from the minister at this time, recognizing winter snows have already fallen in the great community of Madawaska, whether we can expect, on behalf of that volunteer fire association, any direct financial assistance in the coming weeks for that public work—the firehall and library—and secondly, whether he might pronounce on government policy as it relates to a favourable consideration for all the district of Nipissing and the northerly sections of the great county of Renfrew with respect to the Mac-McKeough licence tax cut.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: If I could comment on the remarks of the member for Renfrew North, I appreciate his desire to have a portion of his affluent riding belong to northern Ontario. I hope the people in northern Ontario, and my friend from Algoma, are listening.

We so often hear in northern Ontario: “If I only belonged to southern Ontario. That’s where all the goodies and all the benefits really are and we’re always shortchanged in northern Ontario.” To have the situation reversed and have an eastern Ontario riding wanting to be part of northern Ontario is a message I am going to take right across northern Ontario. It’s a real twist.

I regret I cannot give the honourable member any encouragement that we would change our present administrative border, our north-south line, as it relates to the licence fee. I believe it goes across the northern part of Algonquin Park. That has basically been established as our area of responsibility.

From the point of view of a moral responsibility we have looked at the needs of Madawaska with respect to that fire truck. I want to make it clear that, while we did that, it didn't mean they were part of northern Ontario or part of our administrative area.

I want to go one step further. In view of the fact we have given them a fire truck, I think it's only fair we assist them with the facility that houses that fire truck. We have a $40,000 investment there and I am prepared to have my staff take a close look at that and to work with the people in that community.

I don't think I can go any further than that. I don't want it to be spelled out as a commitment that they are part of northern Ontario or part of our administrative responsibility, but only that we have a unique situation. As the member correctly points out, the border areas are always the grey areas. They are always difficult areas to deal with. No matter what program one comes up with, one puts a dividing line on it. There are always people on one side of the street who get services that people on the other side of the street do not.

It is very difficult. We do believe in maintaining that northern boundary, so to speak. It has been in place now for three or four years and seems to be working fairly well. It is fairly definitive. That buffer zone of Algonquin Park does assist. To alleviate some of your concerns and certainly to protect what is a public investment in Madawaska, I am going to ask my staff to go down and meet with your people in that community and work out some financial assistance program.

Mr. Conway: Mr. Chairman, if I might, I want to add a couple of points. Let me say at the outset I thank the minister for that assurance because, to be sure, the people involved in that volunteer fire department will be gratified to know the minister is giving the matter serious and, hopefully, favourable consideration. I want to make myself available to his staff. I reiterate it is not a great deal of money. In fact, a relatively small amount of money will probably solve the immediate concern.

I want to tell the minister that if any of his staff are working on this, I would be delighted to assist because I do have quite a deep, personal involvement with that community. I would be quite happy to do anything I can to assist in the consideration and, hopefully, favourable execution of some assistance in that respect.

With the Minister of Education (Miss Stephenson) present, I want to draw to the attention of the Minister of Northern Affairs some of the anomalies that strike at the heart of local residents with respect to this line. I also draw them to the attention of my friend from Algoma who was brought into this by the minister in his remarks. People who live in the Nipissing district find themselves considered for many other things as part of northern Ontario, as of course they should be. They just wonder, "Why, in terms of this benefit, are we suddenly not included?" because it is quite properly a benefit that is extended to northern Ontario.

There are a couple of isolated communities that find themselves in the district of Nipissing, which is part of northern Ontario. Again, we are not talking about a great number of people. We are talking altogether probably of an additional 1,500 people, if we include all the district of Nipissing. If it were a city of 25,000 or 40,000 people anchored in there, then it would probably be a different matter. But we are talking about a relatively few people who in many other respects receive their benefits from northern Ontario.

The added frustration of that, and the one I have with respect to this kind of demarcation, is that in my research—and it has been very tentative and cursory—I have noted that this government has not one but at least five or six lines of demarcation. In the presence of my good friend the Minister of Education, the Minister of Northern Affairs will be happy to know that the town of Arnprior in the far southeastern section of Renfrew county, but 40 miles from the national capital, for at least one program under this Ontario government is considered northern and gets a grant from Education for that purpose. In my own home town of Pembroke, there is consideration of the central and northern portion—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: We looked at the entire area.

Mr. Conway: That is right, the minister is quite correct. For the young travellers' grant under the Ministry of Education, all of the county of Renfrew is considered northern. I am certainly not lamenting that fact at all. But I want to stand in my place and tell you that as a lifelong resident of Renfrew county I have never for a moment considered Arnprior—the Prior—as northern. As my friend, who is formerly from Richmond, will well know, it is not considered with Gogama and Moosonee and other places as main street northern Ontario but, none the less, under a particular departmental program—a grant in this instance—Arnprior is ostensibly northern Ontario.

My home community of Pembroke is considered northern for the Ministry of Government Services. There are at least, as I say, a half dozen different governmental lines of demarcation which involve my electoral district, both in Nipissing and Renfrew. This is a confusion and difficulty I would invite the minister with the able and, I am sure, ready assistance of the Minister of Education to work towards resolving.

I would certainly like to see a single line of demarcation that does take into consideration the favourable inclusion of some of the northerly sections of the county of Renfrew. Certainly it has never been my position that the entire county should be included. That would just not be realistic in light of the inclusion of what I believe to be most of the counties in eastern Ontario.

There are small isolated communities up Highway 17 in the Mattawa area that go to Mattawa as their service base—isolated communities like Deux-Rivieres. They go to Mattawa to get their licence plates and find out they have to pay a southern Ontario rate when their condition is exactly that of Mattawa and Cavan township and other places. Similarly with Madawaska and Whitney.

My plea really is for a systematic approach to that demarcation. I wonder if it could be regularized in such a way that there was one line and if there could be favourable consideration to the most northerly portions of the county of Renfrew. That is really all I ask. I draw to the minister's attention again those kinds of local anomalies that really irk people who live in a district of northern Ontario and find themselves, however few in numbers, unable to get a benefit which is as important to them as is the Mac-McKeough licence tax cut.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: If I could respond briefly, I recognize the communities that the honourable member identified. Arnprior—and I believe Fitzroy Harbour is in your riding?

Mr. Conway: That is Carleton.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Oh, that is interesting because I was a resident of Fitzroy Harbour years ago. As a matter of information I am sure you will be pleased to know that my father worked on the dam at Fitzroy Harbour as a steel helmet diver. I made a point of visiting that community about two years ago looking for some people who were there when the construction was going on. I could not find anybody. I was very young at that time, but we always considered Fitzroy Harbour, which is not very far from Arnprior, as being southern Ontario.

In fact, those of us who live in northern Ontario really think North Bay is in southern Ontario. I think the member from North Bay would agree with me. Parry Sound is southern Ontario. Sudbury is the borderline; really that is the entrance to northern Ontario. So you get all these anomalies the member was speaking about—these grey areas that are very difficult to deal with.

But we have a number of demarcation lines, as the member referred to them. Each ministry that delivers different services would obviously have a different need for a different demarcation line.

I think the line we have established north of Algonquin Park is a very reasonable one—one that gives us the buffer zone of Algonquin Park. It doesn't create too much of a problem. I realize 1,500 people are upset; they feel they are being shortchanged. It is one of the problems we have in setting up a region area division. I hope we can try to lessen that impact as much as possible and we will certainly do that with assistance for the firehall.

Mr. Wildman: I listened with interest to the exchange between my colleague from Renfrew North and the Minister of Northern Affairs. I would certainly hope the member was not suggesting the benefit the students of Arnprior get should somehow be removed by setting up one demarcation line. Two relatives of mine, great-aunts who live in Arnprior, spent their whole lives in the education system and would be very unhappy that the students of Arnprior might somehow lose the benefit they are now experiencing. The young travellers' program is a very good program in bringing students from more distant places. However, I must admit I was somewhat surprised to find out that Arnprior was included in the visit to Queen's Park.

Mr. Conway: The honourable member may rest assured that was not my intention.

Mr. Wildman: I am sure it wasn't.

I welcomed the comments of the minister with regard to the member's request for him to look at the possibility of assistance for a firehall to the small community in Nipissing in his riding. I would hope that if the minister is prepared to look at that seriously, that he will look at the application that has been made by Hawk Junction which—there's no question—is in northern Ontario and has applied for assistance for the construction of a firehall to house the fire truck that the minister himself delivered to Hawk a few years ago. We had a good afternoon. I think they presented the minister with a silver or golden fire hat.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I still have it.

Mr. Wildman: You still have it? It was a beautiful symbol of all that is right with fire protection in northern Ontario. I just got a plaque out of that but I appreciated the plaque. It is in my office. I would hope that the minister would look carefully at the application made by the fire brigade in Hawk Junction for assistance to build their firehall because, as the minister knows, the Algoma Central Railroad made a commitment at the time the fire truck was presented to Hawk Junction to provide housing for the truck. They are still able to use that, although I think the ACR would like them to move into another facility and the fire brigade themselves would like to move as well because the location that is being provided by the railway is not the best.

I have a letter the minister sent me dated October 24 in which he said the ministry is reviewing the application by Hawk Junction for isolated communities assistance and that he hoped he could provide a response in the near future. I would hope the future is now and that the minister could provide us with a response and also respond specifically to why it has taken so long for Searchmont to get a response to its application for more adequate fire protection equipment, since the representative of the fire marshal's office, Merv Neidrauer stated in January 1980 that they should get it.

It looked as if they were going to get it, and yet the fire brigade there has not heard anything from the Ministry of Northern Affairs since January 1980. I would hope the applications made by Aweres township for assistance and the application that is going to be made in Goulais will not somehow hold up what has been an ongoing discussion since January 1980 for Searchmont.

Certainly there is no question those other communities need fire protection, and I am glad the ministry has changed its criteria, its guidelines, so that it now is possible for those two communities, Aweres township and Goulais River, to apply for protection as did Batchawana under that program. I want to emphasize that it has been some time since Searchmont heard what is happening and I would hope the minister could respond in relation to those two applications.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I do appreciate the honourable member's concern with regard to those small communities. The Hawk Junction application, as I pointed out to him, is being reviewed.

I think the whole thrust of those applications is to make sure there is a local involvement, because in an unorganized community if there isn't the dedication to a project so that there is some ongoing responsibility, we lose the whole thrust. I don't think it is our intention to go out and hand out fire trucks or to hand out all types of financial assistance for projects because one person or two persons applied. We would like to get the feeling of consensus. We ask, "What is your contribution? We will help you, but help yourself a little bit and we will top it off." This is what we have been doing. I can assure the member that we will resolve those problems as quickly as we can.

I think it is fair to say we have had some delays with respect to the delivery of fire equipment. The fire marshal has, in his wisdom, made some modification to the equipment and rightly so. I think they have come a long way in the last three or four years in designing equipment that really fits the needs of the unorganized communities, in which up to that time—let's be honest—there was some reluctance to go into that field because we all thought of big tankers and big hydrants and all this type of thing and ladders that would go up four or five storeys. That was not required in northern Ontario.

We have come a long way and it is the support of the field staff of the fire marshal's office, in co-operation with our staff and the unorganized communities, that has changed that thinking. So we are getting modifications and improvements to the equipment itself.

I can assure the members we will expedite those applications as quickly as we can, because we are getting to that time of the year when that equipment should be in place—there is just no question about it—and I will personally take an interest and make sure those are looked after.

Mr. Wildman: In the last couple of moments, Mr. Chairman, I would just say to the minister I appreciate and support his comments about the need for local involvement and local commitment. There is no question in the case of Searchmont that there have been serious efforts on the part of the local community to provide for its own fire protection. As I said, it originally got its equipment before the program was in place. Also, the community of Hawk Junction has obtained grants or assistance from the local private sector to purchase materials for its building. So there has been an attempt on its part as well to provide assistance for erecting the building on its own.

The community of Goulais River is meeting this evening with Peter Merritt from the minister's northeastern region and with representatives from the fire marshal's office to talk about the formation of a local fire brigade there, and how it might go about applying for equipment under next year's program. As the minister is probably also aware, Aweres township, after all the controversy between him and myself about it, is now considered by the ministry to be possibly eligible. It has organized a committee and is working, I think, very carefully and cautiously in making certain that it does have the numbers of people locally interested and involved, and a location available for the construction of a hall. So its application can be seen to be one that can be approved by the ministry when it finally is decided.

This program is a needed one that, I think, despite the comments sometimes made about the minister or his parliamentary assistant, about the delivery of fire trucks with sirens blaring and lights flashing—the jokes that are sometimes made about that—all of us recognize as one that is necessary, as something that had to be. It really was brought in even before this ministry was created, when the Ministry of Natural Resources initially got involved with isolated communities assistance, and I am glad it has now continued and grown under the Ministry of Northern Affairs.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS
ON NOTICE PAPER

BAIL PROGRAMS

388. Mr. Warner: 1. Will the Attorney General advise the House when clear, publicly available guidelines for justices of the peace regarding who is acceptable as a surety will be available? 2. Will the Attorney General require reasons for the rejection of a surety in writing from the justice of the peace? 3. When will the Attorney General allow an appeal procedure regarding the rejecting of a surety? What form will the appeal procedure encompass? 4. When will the duty counsel be available on a regular basis for estreatment court? 5. Will the Attorney General enter into a co-operative agreement with the Ministry of Correctional Services to ensure joint planning and funding on bail programs? 6. What is the Attorney General's policy on access to remand prisoners? 7. When will the government's system of justice return to the presumption of innocence as the basis for a policy on remands? 8. Will the Attorney General, in co-operation with the Ministry of Correctional Services, establish ground rules and procedures for a system of bail hostels where needed? Will the Attorney General table the guidelines? (Tabled October 31, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: 1. It is not my intention to propose guidelines for justices of the peace with respect to the acceptability of sureties. As I have said before, I consider it extremely difficult, if not possibly undesirable, to attempt to lay down a set of guidelines which might serve as appropriate benchmarks for the acceptance of a surety by a justice of the peace, as there are so many varying circumstances. A very real danger exists that by defining certain items that must be considered undue emphasis will be placed upon them. The type of factors that the justice of the peace may want to take into account in deciding whether or not a particular individual is a suitable surety, may include the following:

Roots of the prospective surety in the community; his general character and reputation; whether or not there is any suggestion that he acted or has acted with the co-accused in a joint criminal venture; his or her ability to control the accused and to ensure that the accused lives up to the terms of his recognizance including his attendance at trial; age of the surety; whether or not the surety is acting under duress; financial resources of the surety; employment record of the surety; length of time the surety has known the accused; whether or not the surety is surety for any other person; whether or not the surety appears to be in the business of providing bail; whether or not the surety intends to remain within the jurisdiction until the trial is over; whether or not the surety understands clearly the obligation placed upon him; and so on.

I am sure I could easily add many more factors to this list, but the one thing that is clear is that any list could never be exhaustive. It would moreover be potentially misleading for any such a partial list to be promulgated as having any sort of official sanction. It is an obvious principle of our law that a judicial officer, be he a justice of the peace or a provincial court judge, must exercise his discretion judicially; failure to do so may give rise to a prerogative remedy if the officer either exceeds his jurisdiction, or if he refuses to address his mind to the issues before him. Moreover, it is surely no easier to lay down rules or guidelines as to who may or may not be acceptable as a surety than it is to lay out all the circumstances under which a justice of the peace may or may not be satisfied whether to release an accused from custody.

There is no express provision in the Criminal Code for requiring any sort of qualification for proposed sureties. It would be unreasonable to suppose that a justice of the peace is bound to accept as a surety every person put forward by an accused. When one examines the Criminal Code, it provides no guidance on the question of the sufficiency of any surety. The Ouimet committee that drafted the amendments to the Criminal Code, commonly referred to as the Bail Reform Act, felt that the exercise of the justice's discretion as to the sufficiency of a surety should not be controlled by detailed regulation, nor is it capable of being so controlled. The committee also felt that it should not be controlled by administrative direction, issued either by law enforcement officers or officials concerned with the administration of justice. This position is one with which I have no quarrel. Justices of the peace undergo periodic training, and this is one area which I am assured by the Chief Judge of the Provincial Court, His Honour F. C. Hayes, will continue to be stressed during their educational programs.

2. The approval of sureties is part and parcel of the judicial interim release process, as laid down in Part XIV of the Criminal Code. It is, once again, a judicial function of the justice of the peace, and assuming that I as Attorney General have the power to do so, it would not be appropriate to require justices of the peace to provide written reasons for their decision in this area. An order for release subject to certain conditions is subject to review, as laid out in section 457(5) of the Criminal Code. Any changes in this area will, of course, have to be made by the Parliament of Canada.

3. As I have noted above, the appeal procedure is already in place in the Criminal Code. An accused may always seek a review of the justice's decision made during the judicial interim release process. Section 457(5) of the Criminal Code sets out in detail how this is to be done. The province would not be able to set up a similar procedure because this is a matter that falls within federal jurisdiction.

4. I do not feel it is essential to have duty counsel at estreatment court. Many sureties come to court already having retained counsel, and those who do not are always given the opportunity to seek counsel or apply for legal aid. If an adjournment is requested by a surety to seek counsel or apply for legal aid, it is almost never refused. I am informed that in fact this situation very rarely arises. If a surety wishes further time to fulfil his/her obligations as a surety (in other words, to locate the accused and turn him over to the authorities), here again, further time is always allowed. Estreatment court is a court of equity and in a sense does not operate on the adversary system. Apart from advising sureties as to how to apply for legal aid, the duty counsel would have little or no function. However, I will discuss the matter with the director of legal aid and seek his opinion as to the necessity and practicality of having a duty counsel in estreatment court.

5. I am unclear as to the point of this question. I do not consider it desirable for the Ministry of the Attorney General to be involved in either the planning or funding of any bail projects. It is my understanding that the Ministry of Correctional Services is at present funding and planning a bail project which has to do with the provision of funds to obtain living accommodation for persons on bail who require a home address. Our ministry is providing the Ministry of Correctional Services with advice and assistance when required, and other than that I do not feel that our ministry should be further involved with this project.

6. This ministry does not formulate policy in regard to access to remand prisoners. The policy of who is allowed to visit prisoners, remand or otherwise, and when, is set by the Ministry of Correctional Services. However, I am informed that the policy in regard to remand prisoners is more liberal than for those serving sentences, and counsel, of course, may have access to their clients at all times.

7. I feel that your question is somewhat unclear. However, I assume that you refer to the decision to grant or deny bail rather than to remand. I should point out that the presumption of innocence is an evidentiary burden at trial only. The burden of proof at a show cause hearing depends on the particular provision of the Criminal Code under consideration. While the onus of showing why an accused should be detained in most instances rests on the crown, in certain specified circumstances the Parliament of Canada has seen fit to reverse this onus. There are only two reasons for the requiring of a detention order or conditional release. The first (primary) reason is to ensure the attendance of the accused in court for his trial. The second (secondary) is to ensure that the public is protected, having regard to the substantial likelihood that an accused may, if released from custody, commit a further criminal offence or interfere with the administration of justice. Although one of the areas into which inquiries may be made is the probability that the accused has committed the crime charged, the justice of the peace does not determine the guilt or innocence of the accused, he merely determines whether in fact the accused is a suitable candidate for bail. These procedures, being part of the Criminal Code, fall under federal legislative jurisdiction.

8. This is a matter which falls within the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Correctional Services only. It is not desirable that the Ministry of the Attorney General should become involved in the setting up of bail hostels. I understand that the Ministry of Correctional Services is presently funding a project along such lines. Again, we are willing to provide advice and counsel as required.

FAMILY LAW COMMISSIONERS

389. Mr. Warner: Will the Attorney General advise the House how family law commissioners of the Supreme Court of Ontario are appointed; to whom are they responsible; what, if any, age limitations exist for appointees; and to whom would complaints regarding their conduct and reports be directed? (Tabled November 3, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Family law commissioners are appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council upon the recommendation of the Attorney General.

Pursuant to section 19(1) of the Divorce Act and rule 803a of the Rules of Practice, upon a reference by a judge of the High Court, the family law commissioner holds a hearing and makes a report in respect to custody and maintenance pursuant to the Divorce Act. Pursuant to sections 71, 72, 75 and 97 of the Judicature Act, with the consent of counsel and upon reference by a judge of the High Court, a family law commissioner may act as an official referee to hold a hearing and make a report in respect of division of property, support or custody under the Family Law Reform Act. The reports of the commissioner are subject to confirmation by the referring judge. In addition, family law commissioners conduct pre-trials with a view to narrowing and, if possible, resolving the issues in dispute between the parties.

Family law commissioners are officers of the court and are therefore responsible to the Attorney General.

There are no age limitations for appointees.

As mentioned above, the reports of the family law commissioners are subject to confirmation by a judge. If counsel are not satisfied with the report of the commissioner, they may argue the matter before the Supreme Court judge who heard the case. If still not satisfied, an appeal from the judge's decision confirming the report may be taken to the divisional court.

TEACHERS' PENSIONS

390. Mr. Van Horne: Will the Minister of Education indicate whether or not section 3 and section 20(3) of the Teachers' Superannuation Act, 1975, permit the Teachers' Superannuation Commission to designate part of a teacher's salary in 1975 as a retirement gratuity and, further, decide that this portion should not be recognized for superannuation purposes? Will the minister also indicate whether or not these same sections would allow the Teachers' Superannuation Commission to decide that the teacher has been paid too much pension in each of the five years since his retirement, that he must pay back the overpayment, and that his future pension payments will reflect the retroactive decision of the commission to discount part of his 1975 salary for pension purposes? (Tabled November 3, 1980.)

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Section 3 of the Teachers' Superannuation Act indicates that "it is the duty of the commission to administer this act, and in so doing it shall determine the right of every applicant to receive an allowance or a refund and the amount thereof." Since the amount of a pension is affected by three things, the age of the person at the time of retirement, the number of years of credit in the fund at retirement and the average salary over the best seven years of service, the commission does have the right to determine what payment of money to the teacher constitutes salary for pension purposes in the same way as Revenue Canada has the right to determine, subject to ratification by the courts, as to what is salary for income tax purposes.

Each year the commission issues instructions to employers as to what amounts are subject to a deduction for pension purposes and what amounts are not subject to such a deduction. A pension is computed on the basic salary paid to a teacher and it is not meant that a person's salary should be artificially increased in the last seven years so that the pension paid would reflect other than the basic salary. For this reason the commission has excluded special payments in the determination of salary for pension purposes. One of these special payments has been a retirement gratuity.

When it was determined that boards had not always adhered to these instructions, the commission did check the pension calculation for the last five years in an attempt to find out whether or not abnormally high payments were reported as salary. Where such payments were apparent, a check was made with the boards concerned to see why the salaries had been inflated. If the salary reported was based on retirement gratuities the pensions were recalculated and the overpayments requested.

It is the opinion of the commission's solicitor that overpayments of pensions should be returned to the commission in the same way as are underpayments to the pensioner. The underpayments are made in a lump sum whereas the overpayments are collected over a period of time so that there is not an undue hardship on the pensioner.

OPP RADAR UNITS

391. Mr. Van Horne: How accurate are nonstatic radar machines that are used by the Ontario Provincial Police? Will the Solicitor General check and report on the radar unit used by officer 5673, of unit 0310, at 9:06 a.m. on October 13, 1980? (Tabled November 3, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: The MDR 1 radar unit is accurate to within 0.05 per cent.

The radar set used by officer 5673 at 9:06 a.m. on October 13 was purchased new in May of 1979. At 8.30 a.m. on October 13 the unit was checked for accuracy prior to the constable proceeding on patrol. It was working properly.

TROUT IMPORTS

393. Mr. Van Horne: Will the Minister of Natural Resources indicate what amount of trout fish was imported into Ontario during the calendar years 1978, 1979? (Tabled November 4, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Auld: The preponderance of trout imported into Ontario are frozen, hatchery-reared rainbow trout from Denmark, Japan, Uruguay and the United States.

1,644,000 lb and 1,756,000 lb were imported in 1978 and 1979 respectively. There were also some importations from Nova Scotia and Manitoba in these two years.

No figures are available for the import of wild trout, although quantities are thought to be small. No live trout or eggs were imported into Ontario during 1978 or 1979, primarily due to stringent federal fish health regulations aimed at preventing the importation of diseased fish.

FOREST CUTTING PRACTICES

396. Mr. T. P. Reid: Would the Ministry of Natural Resources table the number of timber companies that were charged under section 21 of regulation 159, RRO 1970 of the Crown Timber Act in regard to wasteful cutting practices in 1979-80 and the current year? Please provide the names of the companies, the amount of the fine, and the reason for the charge. (Tabled November 4, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Auld: A table has been prepared showing the licensees who have been charged under the Crown Timber Act in regard to wasteful cutting practices in 1979-80 and the current year to date.

* With reference to the answer to question 156 tabled on May 27, 1980, it should be noted that the reason for the charge in this instance should have been for unauthorized cutting only.

FOREST CLEAR-CUTTING

397. Mr. T. P. Reid: Would the Minister of Natural Resources provide the size of the three largest forest clear-cuts within the licensed areas of: 1. Boise Cascade Limited. 2. Great Lakes Forest Products Limited. 3. Abitibi Paper Company Limited. 4. Kimberly-Clark of Canada Limited. 5. Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company Limited? Please provide the location of these clear-cuts, when they were cut, who approved the clear-cuts, the extent of any artificial or natural regeneration on the sites? (Tabled November 4, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Auld: The annual compilation of areas of clear-cut does not record the size of each individual cutover, separately. To provide the requested information on the three largest clear-cuts, their location, when they were cut, and the extent of their regeneration would require a special, detailed study of approximately two man-years' duration. Approval of annual plans for cutting operations to be undertaken by a licensee is made at the district level.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

UNIVERSITY STUDY

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, in recent months, several meetings have been held with the members and representatives of Executive Heads of Ontario Universities to discuss the future role of the universities in Ontario.

The future holds many challenges and opportunities for universities here and around the world. As we approach a period of protracted decline in the traditional university population, aged 18 to 24, there is great uncertainty about enrolment. On the other hand, one can see many opportunities for the universities to contribute to society through research, community services in responding to rising skill requirements in the labour force and in meeting the needs of nontraditional client groups.

Last Friday, November 14, the Premier (Mr. Davis) and I met with representatives of Executive Heads of Ontario Universities. They presented a brief entitled, The Situation of Ontario Universities. This was prepared in response to the Premier's request for their view on future direction for Ontario universities.

In its brief, the executive heads suggested there should be a study of the role of Ontario universities and of the relationship between the universities, the Council of Ontario Universities, the Ontario Council on University Affairs and the government.

I am pleased to report that the government has agreed to this suggestion and that a broadly based committee will be struck to study the role of the universities in Ontario. Within the next few days I will inform the House about the terms of reference of the study and the makeup of this committee.

TVONTARIO

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, several days ago I told this House I was actively considering the expansion of the outstanding service of TVOntario. This afternoon it is my pleasure to inform honourable members that, beginning immediately, we are undertaking a major extension of the TVOntario network into the Parry Sound-Nipissing district, the Timmins area and the Grey-Bruce area.

Mr. Sargent: Hurrah. Where were you this morning? You didn't come to Owen Sound this morning.

Hon. Mr. Baetz: I was up in Owen Sound this morning.

TVOntario is applying for licences from the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission. We are negotiating for land in Parry Sound and Grey-Bruce. We are negotiating co-site arrangements with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Timmins. If everything goes according to plan, TVOntario's full service off air should be available in the three areas in about 14 months.

In total, the network expansion into these areas will raise by approximately 271,000 the number of people who will be able to receive all of TVOntario's programming directly off air. In Parry Sound-Nipissing, 75,000 will be added to the service; in Timmins, 64,000; in Grey-Bruce, 132,000.

Mr. Sargent: That is more like it.

Hon. Mr. Baetz: It is very good, Eddie.

In the Timmins district, the range of the signal will be Driftwood in the north, Matachewan in the south, east to Matheson and just short of Palomar in the west. The North Bay signal will reach viewers north to Martin River, Melissa in the south, Mattawa in the east and west to Sudbury. The Owen Sound signal will reach people living in Lions Head in the north, Palmerston and Wingham in the south, east to Thornbury and west to Kincardine, including Chester and Hanover.

I would point out that a very large majority of these people live in rural areas which are not served by cable today and which do not appear likely to be served by cable in the near future. In other words, if they were not able to get TVOntario off air they would likely not be able to get it at all.

I estimate that the capital cost of all this important activity will be approximately $3.5 million—$1,245,000 in Parry Sound-Nipissing; $1,015,000 in Timmins and $1,150,000 in Grey-Bruce. Using today's technology, the expansion will mean an increase in annual operating costs of about $700,000. This operating money will come from tax-generated revenues. The capital financing will come from the proceeds of the Lottario lottery.

As honourable members know, the Ontario Lottery Corporation Act dedicates Lottario proceeds to cultural and recreational activities and facilities. This is the very first Lottario allocation that has been made. Frankly, I cannot think of a more useful way to spend the money. I would emphasize that only the one-time capital investment in this extension is coming from lottery proceeds. We will not be depending on lottery proceeds for the continuing operation of the new facilities.

I had the pleasure of visiting the three new TVOntario areas yesterday and this morning. Members will not be surprised when I tell them that the news of TV-Ontario's expansion was greeted with tremendous enthusiasm. They will not be surprised because they know the service is an excellent one that a lot of people want. We decided to go into these three new areas at the same time because each of them was able to claim similar priority.

I know members on all sides of the House represent regions which equally want to receive TVOntario's signal off air. I can tell them here today that nobody, but nobody, is being ignored. For the moment, however, the three areas I have announced today represent the most compelling cases for immediate expansion. Each has shown unusually active interest in getting TVOntario's signal. Each has a substantial rural population that cannot be reached by cable and each has a regular VHF channel open. As honourable members know, this type of channel is the easiest for people to receive in their homes and offers the widest conventional coverage at the lowest cost.

I know all members will want to join with me in celebrating this major expansion of the TVOntario network on the occasion of TVOntario's tenth birthday. I think the expansion is a great birthday present for both TVO and the people of Ontario.

Mr. Sargent: Can the minister tell us why we are the last one to get it and why it took five years?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: You are taking time off the question period, are you, Mr. Speaker?
2:10 p.m.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, as members may recall, in January of this year I appointed Professor Paul C. Weiler as my special adviser to undertake a comprehensive study of Ontario's workers' compensation system and to make recommendations on possible changes to existing substantive and administrative arrangements. At the same time, I tabled a discussion paper which suggested areas of possible reform.

I have distributed to each member, and will be tabling later today, the first of two reports of Professor Weiler. The first report deals with four main issues: The philosophy of workers' compensation, the structure of benefits, financing arrangements and the decision-making process from primary claims through final appeals. I hope members will agree, when they have had an opportunity to study this first report, that it is one of the most significant and constructive contributions to the analysis of this critical topic ever made. I do not wish to embarrass the author, Mr. Weiler, who is with us in the gallery today, but it is in my view an extraordinarily perceptive and compelling piece of work.

I would like to say a word or two about the process which Mr. Weiler has followed. As the report indicates, he has met and conferred with virtually every person or organization with an interest in workers' compensation in Ontario, including members of both opposition parties. In addition to consultations with officials and experts in Ontario, in other provinces and in the United States, he received more than 50 written briefs and held over 75 meetings. The emphasis throughout was on informality and the free and candid expression of facts, opinions and insights by persons and organizations with interest in and knowledge of the topic. As he says in his report, this was deliberately not a public inquisition on how the Workmen's Compensation Board handled specific cases in the past. Rather, it was an informal yet detailed probing aimed at recommending solutions to real and pressing problems which, in the author's view, require early attention. I think this first report fully justifies the informal investigative approach which has been followed.

While I wish to refer briefly to some of the key recommendations contained in the report, I do so with a word of caution. There are hazards in attempting to evaluate individual recommendations in the abstract without the benefit of the analysis and reasoning upon which those recommendations are based. Moreover, the recommendations are presented as a package and the totality of the package, with its internal balance, should be considered as a whole.

With these caveats, let me turn to the highlights of the report. As to total disability, temporary or permanent, Mr. Weiler would replace the existing formula—that is, 75 per cent of the pre-accident gross earnings—with a new one, namely, 90 per cent of pre-accident net disposable income up to an earning ceiling of 250 per cent or $40,000 at current levels of the average industrial wage. In addition, he proposes that an injured worker should have necessary fringe benefits maintained during periods of disability; that workers' compensation should be integrated with other systems of income maintenance and that compensation should ensure against loss of normal retirement income.

As to fatal injuries, he recommends that all surviving spouses receive a lump sum equal to the income ceiling of the program. In addition, those surviving spouses and children who are dependent in the true sense of the term as defined in the report, should receive a pension related to the pre-accident net disposable income of the deceased worker.

As to permanent partial disability, the report recommends that all permanently disabled workers—and that means total or partial—should receive a lump sum payment determined by the degree of physical impairment and the age of the worker at the time of the injury. In addition, compensation should be paid to replace 90 per cent of the net disposable income actually lost by the worker as a result of the injury, that is, 90 per cent of the difference between pre-accident and post-accident net disposable income. Recommendations are also made to encourage disabled workers to return to suitable available employment and to encourage employers to make such alternative employment available.

As to inflation adjustments, Mr. Weiler recommends that income ceilings and other criteria for current compensation claims should be determined in relation to the average industrial wage, so that the amounts payable for future claims will adjust automatically to wage inflation, while the assessments of employer payrolls will generate the necessary corresponding revenues. As to the method of financing benefit payments, the report recommends that a mandatory plan for experience rating of individual employers be instituted. It further recommends that the board be empowered to recover the unfunded liability of an employer for its employees' injuries if that employer goes out of business.

Finally, as to the structure of decision making, the report recommends the establishment of a new independent tripartite workmen's compensation appeals tribunal as the final appeal authority over compensation claims. In addition, Mr. Weiler recommends the establishment of independent medical review panels to reach final determinations on disputed medical claims. He advocates the establishment of a new corporate board, with final authority for general policy making, composed of the chairman of the board, the vice-chairman of administration and the chairman of the appeals tribunal, as well as outside directors drawn from the ranks of labour and business and other disciplines and areas of expertise, including medicine, economics, vocational rehabilitation and occupational health and safety.

These are but a few of the highlights of the report. As I indicated previously, any summary does not do it justice, and I commend the full text of the report to all members. I intend to see that it is widely circulated to the business and labour communities across the province and I look forward to receiving responses as soon as possible so that I may make the appropriate submissions and recommendations to my cabinet colleagues.

Finally, I wish to remind members that this report covers the first phase of a two-phase procedure. The second report, which Professor Weiler intends to complete next summer, will deal with the relationship between the system for compensating injured workers and programs for improving safety in the work place; the emerging notion that workers' compensation might be folded into a broader system for protecting everyone against income loss due to personal injuries, however caused; and, finally, the important topic of industrial disease and its treatment by workers' compensation boards.

MUNICIPAL BOUNDARY NEGOTIATIONS LEGISLATION

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, today I will be introducing a bill which will assist municipalities to resolve boundary and boundary-related issues. This bill represents two years of consultation and work with Ontario's municipal leaders. In September 1978, urban and rural municipalities called for an alternative to bitter and costly confrontations at the Ontario Municipal Board on matters of annexations and amalgamations. In August 1979, the government presented a proposal for a new process modelled on labour-management negotiating techniques. The process was then tested in the Brantford-Brant area, where a comprehensive agreement was reached in the spring of this year and represented a mutually agreed-to legislated conclusion to years of discussions and controversy.

Earlier this fall I released a position paper setting out a refined version of the new process. This paper was prepared in consultation with a working group representing Ontario's three municipal associations. The paper has subsequently been endorsed by the boards of directors of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario and the Rural Ontario Municipal Association. The board of directors of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario has not yet had a chance to consider the paper, but ACRO has, of course, played a key role in the development of this new process.

Section 2 of the legislation to implement the position paper would authorize a municipality wanting to resolve an intermunicipal boundary or boundary-related issue to apply to the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs rather than to the Ontario Municipal Board. A fact-finder would be appointed under section 4 of the act to look into the application. If necessary, direct, face-to-face negotiations between the municipalities would follow. These, I hope, would lead to an agreement as they did in Brantford-Brant. If so, the agreement could be implemented either through legislation or, in certain circumstances, through an order in council issued under section 14 of the act.

If, however, there were no agreement, we would have a number of options, one of which would be allowing the matter to go before the Ontario Municipal Board. The bill would amend the Municipal Act so as to limit annexation and amalgamation applications to the OMB to those involving unorganized territory and those authorized following proceedings under this new legislation.

It is my hope that this legislation to make the Brantford-Brant process, as it has become known, available to other parts of the province will receive a broad measure of support so that we can have the necessary legal and administrative framework in place by early in the new year.

HALTON FINANCIAL DEFICIT

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I have a further statement in answer to a question from the member for Halton-Burlington (Mr. J. Reed).

Mr. Speaker, I would like to answer questions asked on Monday, November 3, and Tuesday, November 4, by the member for Halton-Burlington.

Mr. J. Reed: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: Will the answer to this question be allowed to result in a supplementary?

Mr. Speaker: Not at this time.

Mr. J. Reed: Will the minister be prepared to answer it during question period?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to answer any question. Since this will take a few minutes, it should be made as a statement.

On November 3, the member transmitted a petition containing 167 signatures from residents of the regional municipality of Halton which requested me to set up a commission of inquiry into the financial management of the region. The next day he gave me a second petition from a different group of residents from the region of Halton also asking for a commission of inquiry. The petitioners cited the existence of a large deficit as the primary cause of their concern.

After carefully reviewing the present situation, I would like to tell the House that the situation does not appear to warrant a formal inquiry. Our ministry has been aware of the difficulties in the financial affairs of Halton since this summer. My staff has been in close communication with officials and elected representatives of the region to determine what is being done about the problems. The regional representatives have not remained idle and have reacted quickly to find the cause of the problem and, we believe, to correct it. The region is undertaking a thorough review of its internal control systems and is now preparing a plan to deal with its accumulated deficit. It is also my understanding that council is contemplating the hiring or, indeed, has already hired a firm of management consultants to devise ways to improve its administrative practices.

In these circumstances, I am sure honourable members will agree the council is taking steps to investigate and correct the situation. I believe this is at this time a much more effective way of dealing with the situation than setting up a commission of inquiry. My staff is, of course, monitoring this situation closely and will offer such advice and assistance as may be required.

I might remind the House we have six criteria which we use to determine the need for a formal commission of inquiry. One or more of these criteria must be met. First, is there evidence of such maladministration on the part of municipal officials as to prejudice local government? Second, have criminal proceedings been undertaken? Third, we ask if such a commission might make recommendations of such a general nature as to benefit municipal governments throughout the province. Fourth, is there evidence the cost to the municipality of holding an inquiry, which we estimate at about $2,000 a day, is justified by the nature of the problem? Fifth, a commission may be set up if the municipality itself cannot or will not institute corrective measures on its own. Finally, a commission of inquiry may be required if the facts cannot be ascertained in any other way.

While in Halton's case there is little doubt the systems of internal financial controls require improvements, I am of the opinion none of the above criteria has been met and that a commission of inquiry is not the appropriate vehicle to use at this time and in this particular case.

TOMATO PROCESSING

Mr. Mancini: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of personal privilege in order to correct the record.

Mr. Speaker: It is either one or the other.

Mr. Mancini: Mr. Speaker, I rose the other day on a point of privilege and you informed me that was to correct the record so I can see some basis for using both comments today.

I would like to start off by saying that the leader of the third party has once again misinformed the House and has given incorrect information to the Legislature. He was speaking yesterday concerning the matter of hothouse tomatoes which are produced in Ontario.

The information provided to the Legislature was basically concerning the matter, and I quote, "Hothouse tomatoes which have been coming to market for the last two months have been kept off the shelves of the supermarkets in the Loblaw chain—"

Mr. Cassidy: Just Loblaws?

Mr. Martel: Are you the spokesman for Loblaws?

Mr. Mancini: Just a second, hang on, it is coming—

"And have been appearing only irregularly in other supermarkets across the province and why as a consequence consumers have had no choice in many cases but to buy imported tomatoes."

The leader of the third party does not understand the greenhouse industry or the marketing procedures used. It is also evident that he does not understand the matter of crop production. The vast majority of crops are produced in the spring, when the average yield is 12.1 pounds of tomatoes per plant. This crop is marketed readily to Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. The biggest market is in Quebec, where two thirds of all the greenhouse tomatoes are sold. In the fall the farmers are able to produce only 3.41 pounds per plant.

Mr. Foulds: What personal privilege has been violated?

Mr. M. N. Davison: Which side of the House do you think you're on?

Mr. Mancini: I can see those members are really interested in the greenhouse farmers.

Therefore, the quantity of tomatoes available for market is much less. The federal government, in recognizing this, has a 15 per cent duty on imported tomatoes running from April 1 until November 1. After November 1 the duty is removed. This was done with the consent of the greenhouse marketing board.

In the early fall when many of our home-grown field tomatoes are going to market, this is also another consequence of competition for the greenhouse grower. However, for the months of October and November—

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member rose, as is his right, to correct something he felt was misleading the House. I am not going to permit the honourable member to get up and make a budget speech. If there was an incorrect impression left, I wish he would bring his remarks to a close as quickly as possible.

Mr. Mancini: I would like to apologize to the House, Mr. Speaker, for the length of the comment but so little is understood, especially by the members to the left, about the greenhouse industry.

Mr. Speaker: Correct the record as you perceive it and then we will get on to the regular business of the House.

Mr. Mancini: More specifically on the matter of shelf space, Mr. Speaker, this morning I had the opportunity of speaking with the chairman of the greenhouse marketing board—

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member can table the remainder of it with the Clerk and everybody can read it. I think I have been more than tolerant with the honourable member. He makes his point; if he wants to elaborate further, he can table it with the Clerk.

Interjections.

2:30 p.m.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. The Leader of the Opposition, with oral questions.

Mr. S. Smith: It might be more profitable, Mr. Speaker, to direct the questions to this side of the House instead of the other.

ORAL QUESTIONS

DAY CARE

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services regarding the matter of day care, particularly in the Ottawa-Carleton area.

An hon. member: There is a by-election on there.

Hon. Mr. Baetz: You have never been interested in Carleton before. You wouldn't know where it is.

Mr. S. Smith: The members opposite seem to express a lot of incredulity. Ottawa-Carleton is toward the east end of the province. It is sort of by the river. You remember where it is.

Hon. Mr. Pope: After Thursday you will never want to see it again.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The question period started one minute ago.

Mr. S. Smith: Would the minister confirm for this House the information which he provided in the answer to questions on the Order Paper at one time, that with his vaunted help to Ottawa-Carleton, with their $120,000 overrun in the day care budget, the grand total contributed by this level of government is $22,500, roughly the salary of one of his office assistants in the ministry, and that is the total he has contributed to the cost overrun this year in the Ottawa-Carleton day care situation?

Hon. Mr. Norton: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. Could I ask if the member might repeat the latter part of that question? Did he say that is the total we have contributed this year?

Mr. S. Smith: Yes, towards the overrun.

Hon. Mr. Norton: I cannot recall offhand the precise dollar figure. I can indicate that the—

Mr. S. Smith: It was $22,500.

Hon. Mr. Norton: No, I do not believe the honourable member is correct. If he will just be patient for a moment, I will give him the percentage breakdown. I believe the first $51,000 was cost shared on the regular basis, 80-20, with 30 per cent coming from the provincial government, 50 from the federal and 20 from the municipality. On the balance, or the difference between $52,000 and the total amount of their overrun, it was cost shared as between us and the municipality at 50-50, but our 50 per cent was also cost shared by the provincial government. It was not strictly a pass-through of federal funds, if that is the point the member is trying to get at.

Mr. S. Smith: Since on page 4198 of Hansard it will be very clear that the total provincial government contribution was $22,500, I ask the minister to look up his own answers, which he has provided.

More importantly, could I ask the minister whether he could give me some advice to pass on to a lady who lives in Kanata, a Mrs. Hover of Salter Crescent, who is a mother alone with two children, aged five and a half and eight and a half? At present, she has just recovered from an illness, has been off work for a year and has a new job. She has a student who comes in, but comes in after her younger child arrives home, and it costs her $30 a week. She earns $9,360 a year, and she has determined that with transportation and baby-sitting and other associated costs she would be much better off on welfare. She has now been on the day care waiting list for approximately four months, and she has not moved at all, not at all, on that waiting list.

Can the minister tell me what advice I should give to Mrs. Hover in Kanata when in point of fact all he is able to do is contribute such a very measly amount to the problems in Ottawa-Carleton?

Hon. Mr. Norton: I can't respond on the basis of the specific figures that the member has given me. I have always been rather good in mathematics, but I won't rely upon my mental calculations as he relates those figures across the House.

I will say this in general terms: The allocation of the available subsidies and spaces is a matter that is within the jurisdiction of the municipalities under the administration of our day care policy in this province. I would reiterate once again it is my conviction—in spite of the protests that I know the honourable members from the Ottawa area have raised in the House when I have brought this to their attention—that there is a substantial amount of the subsidy money in the Ottawa-Carleton area which is presently going to sort of top-end subsidies by placing ceilings on day care rates or contributions that are chargeable to parents. I think this is having the effect of depriving lower income families in many instances and keeping them on waiting lists.

I have discussed this on numerous occasions with the officials from Ottawa-Carleton and I can assure the honourable member that in private conversations they agree that is one of the effects, regardless of the protests that I have to deal with in this House.

The only additional thing I can suggest is that, as members know from the budgetary statements of the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) last week, I will very shortly be announcing some expansion in the balance of this fiscal year in terms of subsidized day care spaces which will be allocated across the province. I hope it will be part of a larger package of announcements that I will be making in the very near future. Ottawa-Carleton, along with other municipalities in this province, will benefit from that and I would hope the particular individual to whom the member referred might benefit at that time, if not before.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister let the people in Ottawa-Carleton know how far he expects that $1 million additional spending on day care to go when there are 1,000 people on the waiting list looking for day care for their kids in the Ottawa-Carleton region, and the most generous estimate for the $1 million proposed by the Treasurer is that it will provide 500 additional spaces for day care to cover the entire province?

Hon. Mr. Norton: The honourable member either did not listen to the Treasurer or did not read the Treasurer's statement, because the $1 million figure to which he is referring—and I think his critic understands; at least I thought I communicated that across the House to him on the evening of the Treasurer's statement—relates to the last three months of this fiscal year and is not the annualized figure. As a consequence, when one translates that into spaces—although I will be making that part of my announcement, I am not going to indicate the specific number of spaces or their allocation at this point—it will be very substantially more than the number of spaces the honourable member referred to.

ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE LAND

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier regarding the matter of the St. Michael's College land in the city of Toronto. The Premier will be aware that it is the desire of the city of Toronto and has been voted unanimously by city council, if I am not mistaken, to use the St. Michael's lands for park land purposes. The Premier will be aware that the Ontario Municipal Board has recently overturned this unanimous decision on the part of the city of Toronto.

Given the fact that the OMB appears to have, in the first place, imputed false motives to the city of Toronto and in the second place has not addressed all the evidence presented at the hearing, will the Premier assure this House it is the intention of cabinet to overturn the decision of the OMB and restore the decision of the city of Toronto?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Leader of the Opposition, on sober reflection, might rephrase the question. I know he understands how the OMB works and that this is really a quasi-judicial matter where an appeal has been filed with the cabinet. The material has not yet been assessed by the legislative committee of cabinet, at least not to my knowledge, and certainly it has not been considered by the full cabinet.

Really, what the Leader of the Opposition is asking is that I commit the government to a decision based on a recommendation or judgement from a quasi-judicial group without even hearing or reading the material that has been presented by either the persons appealing, or by the church, or those in support of the development on that particular site. I am sure the Leader of the Opposition, really, if he thought this through carefully, would not presume to ask the head of government to make a decision here publicly prior to the process being followed.

Mr. S. Smith: I apologize for the assumption that the Premier had already read the salient matters, since it was published in the newspaper.

It was stated in the Ontario Municipal Board decision that it was the opinion of the hearing officer the city was trying to down-zone the lands, and the city should have expropriated the lands if it wanted them. However, it did not have the right to expropriate the land since it belonged to St. Michael's College in this instance. Furthermore, the hearing officer said the city should have bought the lands but Cadillac Fairview had the option to buy.

Will the Premier not agree that, on the face of it, at the very least there is a plain misunderstanding on the part of the hearing officer who, in addition, decided not to hear and consider all the evidence? Therefore, once he has had time to reflect on it, to read the material and familiarize himself with it, will the Premier not agree that there are good grounds for overturning that decision?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Once again, I realize the Leader of the Opposition gains most of his relevant information from the newspapers, and I am not being critical of that. I can always predict with some accuracy what the questions will be from the Leader of the Opposition based on his hasty reading.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member for Rainy River is not around enough to know how many polls his own party does on government trunk lines. Where does it get its information? He was away for that debate.

I repeat to the Leader of the Opposition that unlike him I do not, nor does cabinet, make judgements based on newspaper reports. I am not being critical of the reports, but the documentation involved is somewhat more extensive than what he has read in the paper. I am not going to argue for a moment whether the city of Toronto had the right to expropriate the lands from St. Michael's College. However, I know enough about the history, having been Minister of Education when St. Michael's College was involved in another matter with Metro, to know that the municipality certainly has the right to purchase from St. Michael's College if it wishes to do so.

Mr. S. Smith: Cadillac Fairview, I believe, had the option.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will not get into a debate on the facts, but I think the honourable member should have some concern as to the economic welfare of St. Michael's College. He may not, but as a part of cabinet's considerations we cannot neglect that side of the discussion either. I know he does not, except when he is meeting with the bishops, but he does have a concern on other issues. I know what he discusses with them.

DISPOSAL OF PCBs

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question of the Premier. Does he recall the assurances we had from his Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) about a year ago that the government was opposed to the disposal of hazardous wastes at sea by burning them on ships? In the light of that statement of a year ago, has the Premier made himself aware of the fact that Willinger Systems, which until a year ago was a part of the Walker Brothers Quarries group in Thorold, is proposing to bring together polychlorinated biphenyls at a site in southern Ontario and ship them to Czechoslovakia for ultimate disposal? Has the government changed its policy, or will it undertake not to foist Ontario's PCBs either on the unsuspecting oceans or on the unsuspecting Czechs?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I must confess to the honourable member I am not familiar with this discussion. I will be delighted to have the minister reply to him on Thursday. I would be very surprised if any country were as unsuspecting as the honourable member suggests.

Mr. Cassidy: Will the Premier undertake to have this House fully informed about the hazards entailed in assembling PCBs from the entire province and then shipping PCBs, with all the hazards they carry with them, along the St. Lawrence Seaway for a distance of a couple of thousand miles before they ultimately cross the Atlantic Ocean and go to another country?

Will the Premier undertake that in future Ontario will not try to export our hazardous waste problems to other countries, just as we should not seek to import hazardous waste problems from other countries into Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will be delighted to have the minister reply to as much of that as possible. He has always fully informed the members of the House. I think he has some doubts on some days as to how much of that information has been properly assimilated by some members of the House. But certainly he will inform members.

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Will the Premier advise the House—if he does not know, he can ask the Minister of Energy (Mr. Welch)—whether the government is still making plutonium shipments to France from Douglas Point?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I do not know if that is really a supplementary. I do not have the answer to that, but I will consult the Minister of Energy. I am not sure it is a supplementary.

I was going to say something about hazardous wastes and their exports, but I would not do that to the member for Grey-Bruce. If he would like me to redirect his question to the Minister of Energy, I am sure if he has the information he will be delighted to share it with the member.

Mr. Sargent: Why don't you ask him right now?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No. I want him to have the opportunity, if he has the information, to reply to the member directly.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I will redirect the question, then.

Mr. Speaker: That's not your option. If the Premier wishes to do so, he can do so.

Mr. Swart: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: When the Premier is discussing this with the Minister of the Environment, in view of the close connection between Willinger Systems and Walker Brothers, will he remind the minister of the deplorable track record of Walker Brothers in the violation of their certificate and suggest to him that they should not be given a permit to carry out this proposal with PCBs?

Will the Premier also remind the Minister of the Environment that the Walker Brothers site is located only 1.5 kilometres from the urban district of Thorold and that in no way should there be any PCB storage area there?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, knowing the hobby of the Minister of the Environment, there are very few members who are better able to determine track records on anything—

Mr. Swart: He may determine it but he ignores it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The minister's track record is an awful lot better than that of the member's over the years. I make that brief observation.

Mr. Foulds: Name one area.

DATA PROCESSING

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Premier. Since we will both be in the Ottawa area in the near future with respect to certain political events, my question to the Premier concerns markets in Ontario for the microelectronics industry, which is becoming increasingly important, particularly because of its growth in Ottawa-Carleton.

Can the Premier say what the government is doing to stop the transfer of data processing by Ontario corporations to the United States, such as the recent announcement by Graham Cable TV in Toronto that it is shifting its computerized data processing for 74,000 subscribers to a California company? Can the Premier say how we can have jobs for microelectronics firms in Ontario if the data processing continues to be shifted to the United States?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the data processing is not being shipped to the United States.

I can assure the honourable member I expect to be in the Ottawa area, as he does and the Leader of the Opposition does. I am not even in Carleton tonight; I expect to be at a nominating convention where we have a great candidate, sought after I am sure by others, who will upset that delightful young lady who is not here this afternoon, whenever the next general election is. That is the political event I am going to.

2:50 p.m.

I also make it very clear that over the objections of both opposition parties, the New Democratic Party and the Liberal Party, we are the ones who are supporting the electronics industry in the Ottawa Valley. We are doing it over the objections of the members opposite, who are opposed to Marconi, the multinationals and all the nonsense raised during the course of the by-election.

It is really intriguing to me that the leader of the third party comes here to ask me what we are doing to protect the market at the same time that the NDP and the Liberal Party of this province are making it difficult for the electronics industry to expand in the Ottawa Valley.

Mr. Cassidy: I remind the Premier that Mitel, a Canadian company in Ottawa-Carleton, has been trying for two and a half years to get its systems attached to Bell Canada here in Ontario, and there has not been a peep from the government to defend the right of that Canadian company to market here in Ontario.

Is the Premier not concerned that we are already importing more than $500 million worth of data processing services from the United States, which is already costing us 10,000 jobs, and the federal Department of Communications estimates that by 1985 we are going to be importing so much data processing from the United States that we will have lost 23,000 jobs that we could have had here in Canada? What steps does the government intend to take to stop this outflow of data processing, which should take place in Ontario or Canada and which would create jobs for tens of thousands of Canadians?

Hon. Mr. Davis: With great respect, I think the honourable member grossly exaggerates the situation. There is some data processing work being done south of the border; there is a certain amount being done here. This government, through the assistance to the electronics industry, has made it possible for us to be in the forefront of many of these new developments, in spite of the objections from the members opposite, and that will continue to be the policy.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary: Considering the Premier's recent conversion and his interest in the high-technology industry in the Ottawa area, when is he going to wake up his government and Minister of Education (Miss Stephenson) to provide adequate funds so we can get the specialized workers necessary to supply that industry?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have made it abundantly clear that, when the post-secondary institutions and the industry itself determine for the government what kind of personnel they require, we can educate them. In fact, we are in the process of doing it. We are holding discussions with some of the employers—and the member should spend a little time with them; instead of calling them the crummiest in the world, he should talk to some of these people who are involved in the process.

I just say to the honourable member, when he is talking about high technology, we are making some real progress in the electronics field in the Ottawa Valley—but the Ottawa Valley also extends to Kingston. If the Leader of the Opposition and the critic over there would be a little more understanding and supportive of the Urban Transportation Development Corporation—understanding that there is high technology developed in Ontario which is going to operate in Hamilton, and has bids in with Detroit, Los Angeles and Miami—then I would believe the member when he makes some of his observations about high technology. He does not like it because this government has done it; that's why.

OTTAWA HEALTH CLINIC

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, considering that of recent date the Premier is interested in Ottawa problems and considering that he is spending some time there, will he look into the question of the establishment of the 24-hour health clinic in the old Ottawa General Hospital which, as the Premier knows, has been replaced by the new Ottawa General Hospital? How does the Premier expect that clinic to be able to justify its existence if his Ministry of Health does not allow the clinic to advertise on radio, television or in newspapers that they are in existence and offering an essential service? Does the Premier want the clinic to work or does he want it to fail?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, of course that is not right. I say to the honourable member that my interest in Ottawa has been for years far greater than his. When I visit Ottawa, when I am in that community, I do not spend all my spare time in the courts, as he does when he is in his constituency. That is all he does up there.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, when it comes to believing people, I will believe Sister Paquette before I will believe the Premier, I will tell him that. Why does he not want Joe Clark in that riding?

I would like to ask the Premier whether he is prepared to prevail upon the Minister of Health (Mr. Timbrell) to extend the date for assessment of this clinic past November 27; and can he tell me what kind of government he is leading when it will not allow a clinic to advertise an essential service at the same time he is spending millions telling the public of Ontario how great he is?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not happen to be in the medical profession, but I know of a number of clinics and my recollection is that clinics do not advertise. I also say to the honourable member, who was not at the opening, I do not know of many communities that have received more assistance and support in terms of health services than the great Ottawa-Carleton region.

Mr. Roy: Fifteen years behind everybody else.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are way ahead. I understand the Liberal candidate has been taking some exception to where the chronic care facility is going to be, but memory serves me very correctly that he was a member of the health council when that decision was made.

Mr. Cassidy: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Since the Premier appears to have forgotten that Ottawa-Carleton consistently has been at the tail of the line-up in getting capital assistance for health facilities, a process that has gone on for the past 15 years, will the Premier explain why, even when there is a by-election on, the government is not prepared to come up with a plan to wipe out the $500,000 deficit currently being experienced by the Queensway-Carleton Hospital in the heart of the riding of Carleton?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am delighted the member for Ottawa Centre is at long last taking a modest interest in his own general area. Does he ever get back there except during by-elections?

I say to the honourable member, we are solving these problems, not only in Ottawa-Carleton but also right across the province. Ottawa has not been at the bottom end of the list. In terms of capital allocation, it has done remarkably well. I just wish the member had been with me at the opening of the new hospital the other day. Why did he not come there and see what the government and the people of that community provided—one of the first-rate hospitals in North America, right there in the Ottawa-Carleton region. Why was he not there?

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. There are other places in the province than Ottawa-Carleton.

SALES TAX ON CARPETS

Mr. Samis: Mr. Speaker, I have a quiet, nonpartisan, non-Ottawa question for the Minister of Revenue. Can the minister explain to the House why carpets were excluded from the list of household items eligible for the sales tax rebate when we have two major carpet producers closing down their plants in Cornwall and Lindsay this month and when the stated purpose of the mini-budget was to create jobs and stimulate the economy of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, first of all, the decision as to what would and what would not be exempted was taken by the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) and not by the Minister of Revenue.

I understand floor coverings of any type, including floor tile and even hardwood floor coverings, were not included. There was a limit to the amount of dollars the province could afford in this program and that was where the line was drawn.

Mr. Samis: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might redirect that question to the Premier, since the minister admits he was not part of the decision-making process.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, these matters of course are determined solely by the Treasurer; there is a great history and great tradition in this process. I am sure there are honourable members opposite who could add any one of a dozen items to the list of exemptions. The decision was made not to include floor coverings in the exemptions, based on the amount of money the Treasurer felt would be available in terms of stimulation. As I say to the honourable member, I can think of another half dozen a lot of us would like to see included, but one has to draw a line somewhere and that is where the line was drawn.

3 p.m.

BATA STRIKE

Mr. O'Neil: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. Can the minister bring this Legislature up to date on the status of the serious strike at the Bata shoe company's locations at both Batawa and Trenton, and can he report on events that took place over the weekend where several people were injured, some with concussions and one with broken bones, and tell us what action is being taken to settle this strike?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, mediators from the Ministry of Labour met with the parties in mediation on October 22 and again on November 7. They have been in constant contact with the parties and, as soon as there is any indication given to them that there is a reason to gather the parties together again, they will do it.

As to events that took place over the weekend, I have no information about them. The honourable member may wish to refer that question to the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry) when he arrives.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Mr. Lupusella: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. Now that the Weiler report has been tabled in the Legislature, can the minister state when he expects business and labour to respond and, therefore when we can expect retroactivity of legislation for current pensioners? When will the increases in rates occur so that inflation is compensated for to all injured workers across Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I will be tabling that report shortly today. Members have copies of it already. I have drafted a letter to be sent to all those who contributed briefs or who contributed in any other way to the process, as well as to a variety of representatives from business and from labour. I have requested responses to the briefs by the end of December so that I can get on with preparing recommendations for my colleagues.

Mr. Lupusella: Can the minister give us a clear commitment today that the new legislation he is planning to introduce in the near future will cover past injured workers who are currently receiving a partial permanent pension and those who are receiving temporary total disability benefits?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I can tell the member that as soon as responses are in to the report and as soon as I present recommendations to my colleagues—I have already asked Professor Weiler whether he will review interim and transitional arrangements with regard to pensioners who are on existing pensions—on the basis of that information, the government will proceed.

Mr. Mancini: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I would like to ask the Minister of Labour whether it is true that Mr. Weiler contacted all the interested parties in the province before he made his report, part of which has been tabled here in the House with the accompanying sheet? Why does the minister feel he has to contact these people all over again just to repeat the process?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, if the member was listening to me, I said all those who were interested and submitted reports or who appeared before Mr. Weiler will be receiving a letter from me, along with a request for their remarks. In addition, documents and the request for comments will go out to various business people, various trade union movements and others for their response. In other words, there should be a public response, and I want that response by the end of December.

USE OF AMERICAN DICTIONARIES

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Education. Is the minister aware that approximately 1,000 students who are taking correspondence programs in this province are being issued American dictionaries and that this is creating a problem with Ontario teachers, who are marking their assignments and expecting them to use Canadian spelling? Does the minister approve of it and, if not, what does she intend to do about it?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No, Mr. Speaker. As a semanticist whose Bible is the Oxford dictionary, I do not approve of American dictionaries, nor do I approve of the American spelling of a number of Anglo-Saxon and other words. I shall most certainly investigate that.

Mr. Sweeney: Will the minister, in her investigation, ask her officials why, when they are phoned by parents, parents are told this practice began in 1975, they plan to continue it to 1983, and the only reason it is being done is that the American dictionary is cheaper?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes. That is interesting information.

SCHOOL FIRE

Mr. Samis: Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Minister of Education. Can the minister report to the House what measures her ministry has undertaken to ensure that the temporary French-language high school in Lafontaine will continue to function effectively so that whatever twisted bigot or sick person who set fire to the building will be denied the satisfaction of interrupting the students' education?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, the program is continuing in that school and will continue there until other premises are provided.

Mr. Samis: Can the minister give the House any idea when those students will be able to move out of the firetrap in Lafontaine and into a decent facility in Pequetanguishene, as she promised last spring, and at what stage will she personally get involved to ensure that those students will be in a new facility in 1981?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: First, that building is not a firetrap. Second, it has not been condemned, as has been suggested by a number of members in the House. It is a building that has not been used by the board because of declining enrolment. However, the program is continuing in that facility and will continue until the problems related to the provision of other premises are resolved, in which I have already been personally involved.

MASSEY-FERGUSON

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question I want to put to the Premier in the continuing absence of the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman), pertaining to the financial situation involving Massey-Ferguson and to some extent the White Motor Corporation in Brantford.

Is the Premier aware that the Canada Development Corporation has announced that it will not be taking part in the refinancing of Massey-Ferguson? Since that announcement has been made, does he know what plans the government of Ontario, in conjunction with the government of Canada, has to see that the refinancing goes forward, that the company remains afloat and that the jobs remain viable?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am familiar with some of the discussions, but I say to the member that we are keeping in constant touch with the government of Canada. As soon as we have anything of a specific nature that is proper to disclose to members of the House, we will certainly do so, but I am not in a position to make any further comments today.

Mr. Nixon: Will the Premier arrange for either himself or the minister to make a statement on this matter on Thursday and, if possible, to make a statement having to do with the situation involving White Motor Corporation as well, since the proposal to buy out the parent corporation in the United States seems to be hung up on the Foreign Investment Review Agency? Really, the people involved in this way in the city of Brantford should have more information than they are getting.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am quite prepared to give any information I will be free to give on Thursday. I do not want to give an undertaking, because I would hate to have the member move the adjournment of the House if I do not have a statement.

Mr. Makarchuk: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the Premier aware that the intended purchase is dependent on the workers taking a $3- to $4-per-hour cut in wages? If so, will the Premier do everything possible to ensure that that purchase does not go through, using FIRA if necessary?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think it really is unwise to debate this or to discuss it here in the House based on either rumour or non-fact.

Mr. Makarchuk: It is fact.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am suggesting, with respect, that I am not in a position to say anything further to the House at this moment than I have already said. If I have some further information to share on Thursday, I am more than prepared to do so.

USE OF ASBESTOS IN SCHOOLS

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour. Why has the minister not ensured that the health and safety branch issue automatically—it has not covered the whole province already—to school boards and employee groups, when they start to search for the possible asbestos problems in schools, all the procedures, methods of testing and proper safety procedures which testing people should use when they are doing those inspection processes, which were patently not available to either the school board or the employee groups in Windsor this past summer when they went about their testing procedures?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, as the member knows, the Ministry of Labour did prepare for distribution by the Ministry of Education a detailed documentation about identification of asbestos. I will have to look into the other aspect of it, but I do know that in the Windsor situation that particular school board did, as he knows, retain a physician to advise them about the procedures.

Mr. Bounsall: As one who is intimately involved with health and safety inspection, would the minister be satisfied if six or seven school boiler rooms were inspected and found to contain some asbestos and the inspector then said, "If these are the types of boiler rooms found in all the rest of the schools, I do not need to see any more"? Would the minister not expect that any inspector or consultant would inspect all the locations in all the schools in the area concerned?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: The member well knows that in the Windsor situation the Ministry of Labour did have an inspector visit the school involved. Recommendations were made and follow-ups will be carried out to see whether those recommendations have been adopted.

TOMATO PROCESSING

Mr. Speaker: The Minister of Agriculture and Food assures me he has a brief answer to a question asked yesterday.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, the leader of the third party asked me a question. I am sorry he is not in the House, but I will give members the answer.

In Ontario, the production of tomatoes from our greenhouses was 24 million pounds in the spring crop. The fall crop was only two million pounds. The fall crop is available only from early October until mid-November, an insufficient supply to fill the needs of the supermarket chains. They are sold mostly through the small stores.

California produced an excellent crop of large, very high-quality tomatoes this fall. It was a bumper crop and they moved into the Ontario market at a very cheap price—from 25 to 40 cents a pound in Toronto—around the beginning of November.

Our greenhouse tomato season normally ends in mid-November. In view of the high quality, low price and heavy supplies of tomatoes from the United States, the greenhouse board advised Ontario growers to remove the tail end of their crop a week to 10 days early to save costs and fuel. Some growers did; others are trying to continue to harvest and sell.

Ontario quality normally starts to drop at this time of the year. The price dropped in the past two weeks from 50 cents a pound to less than 30 cents. The large retailers tend not to purchase fall-crop greenhouse tomatoes because of the very short availability period of six weeks. The inconsistency or lack of supply and the higher price are due to energy costs.

In the past, some growers sold directly to one large chain, Dominion. Once the chain converted completely to central warehousing, this was no longer possible. The chain now tends to purchase US tomatoes because of the price.

Loblaws seldom buys Ontario greenhouse tomatoes, especially if US imports are lower in price.

At present, the reason for not purchasing is the low quality of the Ontario greenhouse tomatoes. The quality has dropped because it is the end of the season and the heat has been cut back.

The House should be aware that the normal acre of greenhouse produces about $75,000 worth of products a year. If they continue producing through this period, it costs them about half that for energy alone. That is the reason our greenhouse operators cannot compete.

The only way this will be corrected is by a form of embargo.

I have a short letter here, Mr. Speaker, from one of the chain stores.

Mr. Speaker: You can table it or make it a ministerial statement. I wish you would emulate the precedent established by the government House leader (Mr. Wells), who gave a detailed answer by way of a ministerial statement.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, can the minister explain two things that were not covered in his statement?

In the first place, why is it that throughout the Ontario greenhouse tomato season this fall, Loblaws in Toronto has not once had those green house tomatoes available even when the quality, according to him, was better than it is at the end of the season?

Second, if the imported tomatoes are cheaper to the supermarkets, can the minister explain why none of the benefit is being felt by the consumers? The imports are being priced at the same price as the Ontario product, yielding windfall profits to the supermarkets and no benefits to the consumers.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: I did answer the honourable member's question. If he had listened to my statement, there was a clear answer—

Mr. Cassidy: The minister apologized for Loblaws. That is what he did.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: There are no apologies in this statement whatsoever. Loblaws seldom buy Ontario greenhouse tomatoes, especially if US imports are lower-priced. I have answered the question.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, again I say to you and to the honourable member that the greenhouse tomatoes in Ontario were withdrawn at the request of the producers' organization.

NURSING HOMES

Mr. Bradley: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Provincial Secretary for Social Development regarding nursing homes and their inspection.

Is the provincial secretary aware that in Ontario, specifically in the city of St. Catharines, two private homes have denied access to a five-member public institutions inspection panel, which replaces the old grand jury for the purpose of inspecting these facilities for which the citizens of this province and the Ministry of Health pay some of the shot, in the form of Ontario health insurance plan premiums, for those who are in there? Is the minister aware that these people have been denied access for inspection purposes and, if so, what action is she prepared to take to ensure these facilities will be open to inspection?

Hon. Mrs. Birch: No, Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of that. I think the question should be more properly addressed to the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry).

Mr. Bradley: Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question then to the Provincial Secretary for Justice, since it appears to be in that particular field? Will the Provincial Secretary for Justice inform the House whether it is his view that these nursing homes and rest homes, which indirectly are publicly supported, should submit themselves to inspection by a publicly appointed and provincially sanctioned inspection panel?

Hon. Mr. Walker: Mr. Speaker, I certainly have no objection to seeing the public institutions inspection panel do an appropriate review and check of various institutions, including the rest homes. I have no doubt whatsoever it is an appropriate step to ensure this happens.

I will bring the matter to the attention of the appropriate minister and I am sure he will develop a policy on it, if there is not one already.

INVESTMENT COMPANIES' FAILURE

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Is the minister prepared to table all the files being held in his ministry and its component agencies, boards and commissions which deal with Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation, Astra Trust Company and Mr. Carlo Montemurro so that members of the assembly finally can be privy to some information that might explain his negligence in registering Re-Mor and permitting it to rip off so many people in the province?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I was asked substantially the same question last Thursday by the member for Kitchener (Mr. Breithaupt). I had wanted that member to be here when I responded, but, since somebody else is trying to get on his coat-tails, I will give that answer now.

On Thursday last, the member for Kitchener asked me to inform the House if at the time of the Re-Mor application the registrar of mortgage brokers was aware of the judge's comments and the evidence tendered by the Ontario Securities Commission in the receivership application against C and M. In a supplementary question, he asked me to table certain documents.

I sought advice on these matters from the crown law office. I have been advised by the crown law office that the matters raised in that question and the supplementary question are directly in issue on the ongoing civil litigation. Anything I say in response to the questions or table in the House could prejudice a fair trial of the issue.

Mr. Speaker: Is the honourable minister saying anything of that nature is sub judice?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, the question that was asked by the member for Kitchener, while not as broad in scope as the one asked today, dealt particularly with the file.

I repeat, I sought advice from the crown law office and was advised that the matters raised in that question and the supplementary question, and obviously because of its scope in the ensuing question by someone else, are directly at issue in the ongoing civil litigation. Anything I say in response to the questions or table in the House, and that includes the file, could prejudice a fair trial of the issues. That is the advice I received from the Ministry of the Attorney General.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: Will the Speaker take under advisement the statement made by the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations and decide, for the purposes of the rules of this House, whether the matter is or is not sub judice?

Mr. Speaker: No, I cannot undertake to do that, because I do not know what is before the courts. Of my own knowledge, I do not know what information may prejudice the case. I will have to leave that to the discretion of the minister or the person answering the question.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on the point of order: It would seem you are simply accepting the minister's explanation that he considers the matter sub judice as sufficient reason not to answer the question. It would be sufficient then for the minister simply to say he refuses to answer the question on the basis of his own misgivings.

I bring to your attention, sir, that it may well be this matter will be directed to one of the committees for review. Frankly, I believe it should be and will be. The fact that the minister is refusing to answer the question surely does not mean the whole matter can no longer be discussed by this House or its committees. I would hope, sir, your ruling would not in any way indicate the matter should not be discussed.

Mr. Speaker: I did not make a ruling.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, on the point of order: I want to make it very clear that the minister did not refuse. He gave the member the information and advice he had received from the law officer of the crown. That is what he said on that basis.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Speaker, I cannot understand any reason why the minister is hiding this information from the House, but I have a supplementary question. If the minister will not provide the House with this information on which we could make some judgements and have some understanding, will he tell us whether he is aware of any activity or action of any sort undertaken by Mr. Carlo Montemurro that would lead the minister and his staff to believe Mr. Montemurro could have been expected to have been financially responsible or to carry on his business with integrity and honesty in accordance with the laws required by the legislation of the Mortgage Brokers Act? Can he provide us with a single example of such an action or activity by Mr. Montemurro that would excuse his negligence in this matter?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I want to make it very plain that I am not hiding anything. I would be delighted to table that file, because that would hit it right out of the ball park. I have been advised by the crown law office that I cannot table that file or answer those questions without prejudicing a fair trial on the issue. That was not my judgement. I sought the advice of the Ministry of the Attorney General. That was the advice I received. I have conveyed that to the House.

As far as the question of the member for Hamilton Centre is concerned, I have answered that question before.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Give us one example.

Mr. S. Smith: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: No. A new question.

Mr. S. Smith: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: The minister is saying the reason he has not been able to comply with the promise he made to table certain information is the advice he was given by the law officers of the crown. What I think is out of order is that we in the opposition are left in this situation with no way of taking anything other than the minister's word. For instance, all that has been filed is a notice of claim. There is no civil litigation; there is only a notice of claim that has been filed. Therefore, at the very least we ought to know what the basis is for the alleged opinion the minister has allegedly received from the law officers of the crown which prevents him from tabling the information he promised us.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I sought the advice of the Ministry of the Attorney General, of the crown law office. This is the advice I was given. I am conveying it to the House.

Mr. S. Smith: Table the basis of the report.

Hon. Mr. Drea: It is right here. This was the advice. If the honourable member wants another report from the crown law office, I will be delighted to table that.

Mr. S. Smith: There is no civil litigation.

Hon. Mr. Drea: That is nonsense. There is a statement of claim and everything else.

ACID RAIN

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I have a question to the Premier. In view of the unbelievable tragedy facing this province, based on a report that some 2,000 to 4,000 lakes in Ontario will disappear because of acid rain, and in view of the fact that someone has to take the responsibility to call a crash conference of all adjacent state governors, along with US President-elect, Mr. Reagan, I think it is on the Premier's shoulders to start carrying the ball immediately and to contact the President-elect and all adjacent state governors to call a conference. We are the main province affected.

I want to ask the Premier why he cannot forget all this nonsense about amending formulae and constitutional reform and do something that is relatively important to us here in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think the honourable member has at least approached part of the real difficulty here that perhaps was not highlighted in the discussions at the press conference yesterday; that is, a good part of the difficulty exists with our neighbours to the south.

The honourable member is quite right in saying that the states bordering the Great Lakes have a responsibility, but I must say to him that I believe the overriding responsibility belongs to the government of the United States.

In assessing some of the information from the news stories, I was intrigued by the suggestion that some of the American electrical plants were operating at better levels than those of Ontario Hydro. The facts do not support that. In fact, only about three per cent of the energy facilities or utilities that would impact upon southern Ontario have that kind of technology available to them.

I think the Minister of the Environment has been talking to Mr. Roberts about this. I myself have raised the matter with the Prime Minister of this country, and I hope that one of the very early priorities for Mr. Roberts and the Prime Minister of Canada when Mr. Reagan assumes office will be to establish immediately some form of contact, some form of policy development whereby our American neighbours will move with the same alacrity and will join in solving a problem that really does cross the border between our country and theirs.

To get the President-elect committed at this stage is somewhat premature. But certainly, in terms of getting the new administration's involvement and commitment to this, that is something this government will be pursuing.

Mr. Sargent: I say respectfully that I do not think it is up to the Premier to pigeon-hole this to a minister. I think it is important that the first minister of this province go to bat, put the thing on track, put the President-elect on the spot and get the thing in motion now, rather than letting someone else pigeon-hole it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I remind the honourable member, if he will go back in history a little bit to a matter that was the same sort of issue as acid rain, that he will find it was the Premier of this province who lit a bit of a fire under the then and present Prime Minister, who in turn had some modest success with the President of the United States three times removed.

If the member will recall, the Premier of this province was quite directly involved with respect to the water quality agreement that was executed between the United States and Canada. If memory serves me correctly—and the honourable member may check this—in terms of Ontario's performance and Canada's performance, we met it here in this province.

If the member finds out in his research that the Nixon administration in the latter stages of its activities started, because of restraint or whatever, to diminish its commitment in terms of water quality, that has nothing to do with the commitment of this province. So we were, in fact, successful in doing it on that occasion.

Mr. Philip: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to provide a procedure for the Residential Tenancy Commission to review rent increases allowed by the commission for the purpose of financing major repairs by the landlord. If the commission determines that a landlord has not carried out the repairs, or that the cost of repairs is less than the cost forecast by the landlord, the commission may order a reduction in the rent increase.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS ON NOTICE PAPER

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I wish to table the answers to the following questions standing on the Notice Paper: 384, 392 and 395. (See appendix, page 4411.)

WRITTEN QUESTIONS

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order relating to question No. 381 which was tabled on October 28, 1980. Standing order 81(d) requires the minister to answer within 14 days. Twenty-one days have now passed without my receiving an answer to that question. Surely there should be some mechanism to impose a penalty upon ministers who do not reply to written questions as required by standing order.

Mr. Speaker: There are no provisions for any penalties, not even flogging with a wet noodle. The minister can answer in any way he chooses. It is probably an oversight. I am sure the government House leader will bring it to the attention of the minister in question.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

House in committee of the whole.

EDUCATION AMENDMENT ACT

Consideration of Bill 82, An Act to amend the Education Act.

On section 1:

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to point out to my colleagues just how important this section is for everything else we will be doing during the course of the afternoon and for however long the debate on Bill 82 takes. I refer to section 1(1), the definition of "exceptional pupil." Much of the rest of what we do this afternoon will hinge on what we are doing in this subsection.

In this definition section we are conferring the statutory power of decision upon the placement committee of the local board of education. We are saying to the local board of education, "We, the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, are delegating the power upon you to decide the fate of the students within your school board. We are giving you the power to decide who of the pupils in your school system are exceptional pupils and who are not. We are giving you the power to determine which students within the school system will receive special education program services and which students will not."

The power under this subsection is such that the local placement committee of a board of education will decide who is an exceptional pupil. In order to qualify for special education programs and special education services, a child has to be so classified as an exceptional pupil. If a child is not designated an exceptional pupil, that child is not eligible for special education programs or services. So we are giving a twofold power to the local placement committee, first, the power to decide who is an exceptional pupil, that is, who is eligible for the benefits and programs; and second, the power to decide what kind of benefits and programs the children will receive, where a particular student will go and what particular program and services he or she will receive.

I wanted to stress that, Mr. Chairman, to you, to the minister and to my colleagues in the Liberal Party because at this time we are dealing with an amended bill which provides a means of appeal against the decision-making power of the local placement committee of a local board of education. None of the amendments that have been introduced either by the Minister of Education or by the Liberal Party speaks to the need to have an appeal system with respect to those two statutory powers of decision: the power of the local board to decide who is and who is not an exceptional pupil, and, following upon that decision, what kind of special education programs and services the child will receive.

If we are to be faithful to the principles of the McRuer report, written in the 1960s, we, as a Legislature, will enshrine in this statute a means of appeal against that particular statutory power of decision. We will get to that in the fullness of time and we will debate what the appeal process ought to look like when we get to section 7. But it is section 1(1), clause 20a, which vests this enormous power to determine life and death decisions in terms of access to educational services.

At this time, we have put an appeal procedure into the bill and others are trying to take it out. I want to argue over the course of this debate as strenuously as I possibly can that we have an obligation, if we are going to confer those kinds of powers on somebody else to make such fundamentally important decisions about the lives of the children of this province, to provide an appeal against those decisions.

There should be a chance for a second look at what a local board of education and what a local placement committee has in its wisdom decided. Unless we put that right of appeal in, first, with respect to the designation of exceptional pupils and, second, with respect to the adequacy of a special education service and program, we are betraying the needs and aspirations of many thousands of people in this province.

I believe that very deeply. There have been many hundreds of people who have communicated that feeling to us as members of the assembly over the course of the last month. I would start this debate by making an appeal to the other two parties to come to grips with the challenge posed to us through the delegation of these important statutory powers to the local placement committees.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak very briefly to what has just been said. I would draw the committee's attention to one sentence in the opening statement of the minister on May 23 of this year. She said: "But until today it cannot be said that the law clearly and unequivocally obliged the publicly supported system to provide appropriate forms of education for all students who could potentially benefit. Today's bill closes the small gap," and it goes on.

I want to start from that point by making the observations I agree with what has been said in that. The law until today did not, and the law at the present time does not, guarantee every student in this province the kind of education he or she needs.

The second point I would make is that since May of last year we have come a long way. The minister will recall that one of the first and most critical comments made to her by a number of members, particularly on this side of the House, was the need for an appeal mechanism because the original version of the bill, as presented to us, did not have what we deemed to be an adequate appeal mechanism.

There have been a number of amendments presented which gradually and slowly have closed the gap between what was offered and what is deemed to be needed. It will be my intention today to try to close that gap a little further. I would accept the premise the minister has come a long way, but the way that still needs to be gone though small, is critically important. It is on that point I want to indicate to the minister as clearly as I can that I will be making amendments to her amendments.

We have come a long way with respect to the principle of exclusion. In the original legislation it was made clear that in our judgement there was no place in this kind of statute, in this kind of legislative provision, for an exclusion principle. We have once again gradually, slowly but effectively, closed the door. We have just a narrow little crack there that still has to be closed with respect to whether potentially in practice, although not in word, there may be an exclusion principle still in this bill. We are going to speak to that in terms of the definition of a special education program and when we come to some other definition sections in this bill.

I would also draw to the attention of the minister and my colleagues something which is well-known to many of them, that there is a strong difference of opinion outside this House as to how we should deal with legislation like this. Many of the school boards and some of the teachers' federations of the province are concerned that the bill, as at present written, is too rigid and could lead to complicating problems which would mean the services that children should have will not be received by them. That is one side.

The other side is contacts from many parents of children who have already experienced some rather negative effects of the special education services that are offered in this province at the present time. They want, and it is understandable they would want, a bill that is as tight, as restricted and as rigid as possible so there will be no loopholes. Our job surely is to try to balance these two. That will be part of the attempt I will speak to as we deal with the various sections of the bill.

Finally, I would draw particularly to the minister's attention that, if we had in place in Ontario now sufficient facilities to meet the greatly varying needs of many of our children who have special needs, we would not be dealing with many of the problems in this legislation. All we would have to do then is decide who was going to pay for it and which one of those facilities the children were going to go to. That would be the only decision open to us. It would be the only decision over which we would have to spend much time. The unfortunate fact is that the need for this legislation is that for the past decade and beyond we have not had a sufficient number of qualified teachers to meet the greatly varied needs of the special education pupils in this province. We have to begin to move on that. It is certainly the purpose of this legislation and it is a goal I endorse.

The best information I have is that there are between 80,000 and 100,000 students in this province who still need special education. They still need the kind of attention they have not been getting for the past number of years and probably will not get if we do not do an adequate job with this legislation. It is those children, who have been identified by their parents and in many cases by the school boards that are now responsible for them, whose needs we have to meet. We also have to recognize the kind of experiences that parents and children in this province have undergone. I recognize we cannot be omnipotent here, but we must produce a piece of legislation that is most likely to meet the needs of every single child in this province who has a special need.

I would certainly hope that in the process of doing that we can put aside some of our own personal ambitions in dealing with this—let me put it that way—and I am speaking for myself as well as anyone else in this Legislature. I hope we will keep in mind the only ones we are here to serve are the children who have special needs and the parents of those children who are trying desperately to do the best they can to meet the needs of their children across this province.

In that light I am willing to work with the minister and with my colleagues in the New Democratic Party to produce the best piece of legislation we can.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, this bill has had a long and interesting history. I believe it was approximately seven years ago that work was begun on the drafting of what might be considered legislation in order to ensure that all the exceptional children in this province would receive the benefit of an educational program designed to help them meet their full potential.

In January 1979, we had completed the draft of proposed legislation that was widely distributed throughout the province to all the parent interest groups, the special education interest groups and the educational community interest groups in order to achieve their reactions. We received those reactions in comprehensive form, in brief form and in verbal form. All of those reactions were collated and brought together and the draft proposals were modified in order to accommodate the concerns that were expressed. We carried on with the help of an advisory council on special education that has been in existence now for at least three years and that has diligently addressed itself to the problem of legislation in this area and with the assistance of a multipartite committee made up of representatives of the school system itself—trustees, education administration officers and teachers. We went through the procedure of making the modifications to the draft legislation that culminated in Bill 82.

In all of this, the motivating force was the concern to provide an educational program for children. We have had no other goal in mind. That goal remains dominant today. However, in this province the structure of education is such that one must rely upon the goodwill, the co-operation and the thoughtful input of not just parents and those who are concerned about the children. I refer also to those who were given the responsibility under legislation for designing programs, for looking after children's educational needs, for delivering educational programs and for providing the facilities in which that occurs.

No bill can hope to be successful in this very sensitive area unless that kind of co-operation, that kind of concern and that kind of support are forthcoming from the educational community. Therefore, I welcome the remarks of my colleague the member for Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney) that a balance must be struck. And that balance must be struck in favour of the children. We must ensure that the program is made available to the children; that those children with needs who are designated exceptional receive that program; that there are methods of monitoring and methods of ensuring that program is being delivered; and that those children are being assessed.

In the hearings of the committee, the opinions which were expressed provided an excellent range of background information for all members of the committee to examine the bill and to make modifications to it. During those hearings and clause-by-clause examination, several modifications, which are entirely acceptable, were made. There were, however, two that were made that produced a reaction within a very wide-ranging group within our society which I think we cannot afford to overlook.

There were amendments related to section 1 which I believe now are probably appropriate. I am perfectly willing at this point to withdraw the amendments which I was proposing to that amendment and I would leave section 1(1) as it is in the bill.

In certain other areas of the bill, concerns have been expressed by people who have a great deal of knowledge, a great deal of experience and a good deal of concern about the provision of programs for exceptional children. One of these was an unsolicited letter received from Dr. Frederick Weintraub who was the prime mover of Bill 94-142 in the United States, a bill which has had some effect upon the thinking of not only those who are proponents of the amendments which the opposition party supported, but also those who are opposed to those amendments.

I should like this House to know what Dr. Weintraub has suggested in specific areas related to those amendments. Dr. Weintraub expressed some very real concern about an excessive concentration upon the development of what is called in the United States an individual educational plan which must be filed in that country and must be perused on a regular basis. His concern is based upon the fact that he believes IEPs, as he calls them, have become instructional tools, with teachers spending an inordinate amount of time doing clerical and paperwork, rather than devoting their time to the role they fill best, which is teaching. He has suggested very strongly that we not move in that direction.

In addition to that, he has suggested that we are wrong, or at least erroneous or perhaps misguided, in attempting to introduce into a piece of legislation the statement that we would be designing a plan that "meets the needs," of exceptional pupils because he feels very strongly that the appropriate phrase should be "designed to meet the needs." From his experience, he suggests that the needs of exceptional pupils are extremely difficult to define in the light of our current, somewhat circumscribed knowledge; that as we advance in our knowledge we shall be able to do that better, but at the present time we are suggesting, through that kind of wording, that we shall be able to do something he does not believe we can do.

This is a man who has had a tremendous amount of experience in this area. He was the prime mover of the legislation in the United States and actually shepherded it through the legislative process there. He feels very strongly that the failure to meet the needs may be in a number of areas which have nothing to do with education. He suggests very strongly that the educators should deal with education rather than with other matters.

He is concerned about our use of the word "appropriate." While I share that concern, I also understand the concern of parents in this area and feel it is probably better to leave that kind of definition in the legislation than to remove it because it gives us a goal towards which we can work with the co-operation and the support, I hope, of all of those who will be responsible for delivering programming.

Dr. Weintraub was particularly concerned about the establishment of what was called in the amendment Ontario's special education board. He recognized, appreciated and agreed with the need for parents to be able to appeal the decisions of placement committees and suggested this should be done, as we have attempted to do. He felt very strongly, however, that one could not, on the one hand, hold education officials accountable and responsible for the education of exceptional children and, at the same time, remove from those individuals the total responsibility for decision-making in that area.

He felt we should modify very dramatically the structure and function of that board as it was defined in the amendments. We have attempted to do that.

He also suggested it was not reasonable at all to anticipate that a board such as that would be able to devote the time that would be necessary to handle the appeals. He suggested it would be important to recognize that if we moved in that direction we would probably be establishing another major bureaucracy with perhaps the experience they have had in the United States that this consumes not just a great deal of time and effort but much of the cerebral activity of those who should be using that power in other directions on behalf of children.

In addition to that, we have received communications from the Council for Exceptional Children in this province, which very strongly disapproved of those amendments but which, having had in a small group an opportunity to look at the amendments which we had proposed related to section 34, suggested it could support the amendments which we were suggesting.

We have had tremendous communication from a number of areas within and outside of the educational system, expressing support for the concept of Bill 82, expressing very real concern about some of the portions within that bill and asking us to move in the direction of ensuring that the bill does what we had suggested earlier in all of this procedure, that is, meet the needs of children without exposing the children, the system and the educational program unduly to a litigation process that would be both time-consuming and destructive. We have tried to take into account all of the expressions of concern which we have heard from all sides. We have provided some amendments which I think are reasonable and meet the requirements.

I would remind the members that in committee the member for Mississauga South (Mr. Kennedy), who was representing me on a day I could not be present, introduced an amendment which ensures that the minister has responsibility for establishing an appeal mechanism in respect of placements of exceptional pupils and would be responsible for procedures with respect to parents' and guardians' participation in that. Those regulations are in the process of being drafted at this point to ensure there will at the time of designation, initial placement and further placement be a time, a place and the appropriate kind of participation on behalf of parents or guardians in support of the students for which they have concern and responsibility.

No one recognizes more than I, as a parent who has had personal experience in this area, that the responsibility of the province and government of Ontario is to try to ensure that all exceptional pupils will be well served in this province. That was the purpose of the legislation. In our consultations, when we discovered there were limitations within our capabilities at this point, we accepted the requirement that this needed to be a phase-in program. The first and most important phase of that program is being carried out right now.

It was begun on September 11, 1980, with the inauguration of pilot projects in the 21 participating boards. The initiating teams and the implementation teams functioned in conjunction with those boards in making an acute, critical and careful assessment of all the requirements and needs of exceptional pupils in those jurisdictions, an assessment of all the resources available and an estimate, as accurate as possible, of the resources necessary to provide the full range of special education programs in support of these children.

Probably by the end of the third year of the phase-in program this jurisdiction will have more accurate information about the requirements and the services which need to be provided for exceptional children than any other jurisdiction on this planet. I believe that is a goal for which we should strive diligently.

We know at this point our knowledge is circumscribed and that we are not, as my friend from Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney) suggested, either omnipotent or omniscient. Thus we feel we must at this time introduce legislation which provides us with opportunity to meet the requirements as carefully as we can and which also gives us the chance to modify those requirements as our knowledge increases and as we become more experienced in the totality of ensuring educational programs for all exceptional children.

I believe the bill we introduced, the amendments which we have accepted and those amendments which we are proposing today will allow us to move in that direction responsibly in order to ensure that our children are well served in the province. I would ask that the members of this House consider seriously the amendments we have provided today and the objective we are attempting to meet and support us in that activity which will allow this legislation to pass as we propose to amend it.

Mr. McClellan: I want to be sure I understood the minister, Mr. Chairman. The minister will not be proceeding with her amendment to section 1(1). Is that correct?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, given the concern which had been expressed about the amendment we had proposed, I suggested we will agree to accept the amendment that was accepted in committee. Therefore, we will not propose an amendment to section 1(1).

Mr. McClellan: That's certainly fine with us. We are quite comfortable, as in so much else, with the language of the bill as it reads now.

I would like to ask the minister one other question. It is my understanding that there may be some additional amendments coming from the minister. If there are, perhaps the minister could share those or, if not, indicate to us that we have the complete package of ministerial amendments with us now.

Mr. Chairman: This might be the appropriate time to remind the members of the committee of standing order 58: "When time permits, amendments proposed to be moved to bills in any committee shall be filed with the Clerk of the House at least two hours before the bill is to be considered and copies of such proposed amendments shall be distributed to all parties."

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, I believe our amendments were filed with the Clerk of the House and were distributed. Is that not so? I'm sorry, that commitment was made this morning. Do the members not have them?

Mr. Chairman: I believe the table received amendments from two members of the committee just as we were starting the bill, but that is all that has been received. The minister's amendments have now been received here.

Mr. McClellan: We are in something of a difficult situation. We can't really proceed until we have the complete package of amendments from the Minister of Education.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the complete package of amendments, save for one paragraph, was in the hands of the two critics for the past 72 hours, as a matter of fact. But there is one paragraph of addendum which I had notified at least the critic for the NDP about, and I believe the member for Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney) also has them.

4:10 p.m.

Mr. Chairman: I will ask the question again. Are there any comments, questions or amendments to section 1 of the bill?

Mr. Warner: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Before I begin, while the critic may have received the amendments, I would assume that properly they should be tabled with the clerk before we can proceed to any other amendments.

I have some concerns about the definition section. I am certainly pleased to learn that the minister has agreed to withdraw a previously considered amendment which she had. It indicates a good spirit with which to begin the deliberations of this afternoon and possibly this evening in an attempt to come through with an extremely important piece of legislation.

I start from the premise that our educational system should be designed in such a way as to meet the individual educational need of each student; that is a goal. As the minister knows, for far too long that goal has not been realized. In fact, over the past too many years, there has not been the kind of dedicated effort from this government which is needed. We need only remind ourselves, with respect to children with learning disabilities, a number of years ago the mentally retarded children and the parents of those children had a terrible time when attempting to get proper education for their children—the kind of educational program that would meet the needs of that child. We have a long way to go.

The progressive amendments that were spearheaded by the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan) go a long way to assist. Where the minister has indicated a spirit of co-operation in taking a second or third look at Bill 82 and in trying to come up with something which will be agreeable to all—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It would be more appropriate to say a 102nd or a 103rd look.

Mr. Warner: Several looks. That is certainly welcome. There is no doubt in my mind, as the minister is certainly aware, that there are a lot of parents in this province who are a bit nervous about whether or not they will have a direct voice in the educational future of their children.

Like other members, I have had phone calls within the last few days from parents and educators who are anxious to know what is happening. I have some specific concerns, one of which touches on the definition itself.

In our area, as the minister may be aware, we have a program for gifted children. The Scarborough Board of Education started it a while ago, and that program is running very smoothly and nicely. I think it is doing a first-rate job in meeting the needs of those children who are classified as gifted.

The concern raised to me—and this is why I raise it with the minister—is whether or not the definition, particularly as indicated on page 1, under 62(a), would ensure that a program for gifted children is included in the definition and could not in any way be excluded. While it may not be ultimately of any consequence for the Scarborough Board of Education, since it has already made a commitment to run such a program and to continue such a program, I raise it because there may be other boards that do not have such a program. I want to be assured that the parents in that area could then very logically and reasonably approach the board and ask it to begin such a program. That is why I am wondering whether gifted children would be included in that definition.

I also want to be assured that children with learning disabilities are included in that definition because, as the minister knows, the fight on behalf of those children against this government has gone on far too long. Like other members, I do not believe I should have to fight on a regular basis the government of Ontario in order to get children who live in my riding the appropriate course here in Ontario, nor do I think that in 1980 children should have to attend schools outside of the province or outside of the country.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Have you read the bill? That is what it is about.

Mr. Warner: I have read the bill and I do not want any loopholes left. With respect, I would like a commitment that children with learning disabilities and gifted children cannot in any way be excluded from the definition. In my experience, definition sections of bills are extremely important. They can be the loophole under which a board or any other authority can say, "It does not fit the definition. I am sorry, you lose." Those two particular areas are a deep concern to me.

The minister has shown a spirit of cooperation this afternoon, and I do not wish to destroy that spirit. But I must say, in the light of my experience in this Legislature, too often my faith has been misplaced in legislation I thought was going to help solve a problem. So if she will forgive me, I want to nail down every possible loophole this afternoon before this bill becomes law. That is why I raise both those matters with the minister and I would appreciate her response.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, I am delighted with the expression, "nail down the loophole." I find that a little difficult to do. None the less, had the member attended any of the committee hearings, he would know that under section 2 of this bill the minister is responsible for defining the exceptionalities. I can tell him that those exceptionality definitions include both dyslexic and gifted children specifically. The list is available. It was made available to the members of the committee at the time of the committee hearings.

Mr. Warner: I am fully aware of that, which is why I raised it. It is all very nice to have it appended. We are not discussing section 2. We are discussing section 1, the definition section. I want to ensure the definition of "special education program" includes gifted children and children with learning disabilities.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I just said it did.

Mr. Warner: With respect, Mr. Chairman, in responding to my question about section 1, I understood the minister to give an answer related to section 2. I want to know that the definition of special education program in section 1 includes gifted children and children with learning disabilities. That is what I want on the record.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, it does. I do have an amendment to section 1(2). I note on page two of the amended act under section 1(2)66 it states: "trainable retarded child" or "trainable retarded pupil" means a pupil who is six or more years of age, but less than 21 years of age." I would like to move an amendment.

The Deputy Chairman: Before we get there, I wonder if there is anything else in section 1(1)?

Mr. Grande: Mr. Chairman, I am dealing with the exceptional pupil and the definition of an exceptional pupil. That is in section 1. I want to go back briefly to the minister's intent in the Legislature on May 23 on the introduction of this bill. The minister at that time talked about principles, about universal access to education and about children having a right to an education, exceptionalities notwithstanding.

What I would like to ask the minister, in terms of the amended bill before us, is did not the standing committee on social development respond to the minister's intention of a right to a public education for exceptional children? I think we have a bill which, as the saying goes, has teeth in it. What is happening, of course, is that whenever one has a piece of legislation with teeth in it there are certain interest groups that don't like any legislation with teeth in it and don't like the fact that the exceptional child has a right to an education because that child was born.

In other words, it's a birthright to have educational opportunities in this province and the Minister of Education proudly said so in so many words on May 23. It is a right, and this bill is going to provide the opportunities and those rights for those children. Then we found in the first bill which was introduced an hour later, from the statements of the minister made on May 23 to the time the minister tabled the first reading of that bill, that really the children do not have rights any longer.

As a matter of fact, in that particular bill there was originally an exclusion clause. We talked about this famous exclusion clause forever and a day in the social development committee. I am glad we were able finally to persuade the minister that exclusion clause should have no part in that bill if the minister firmly believes children ought to have educational programs by right.

Different people and different groups have different estimates, but the one I have seen constantly is there are about 200,000 children with learning disabilities in this province—in other words, exceptional pupils. Once the minister makes the commitment that the child should have access to public education by right, the minister must admit there has to be a safeguard for that right to be exercised. There has to be some kind of mechanism whereby the parents can say, "The right of my child has not been protected and I have a way of redress." Once a placement committee of a board makes a decision under this bill, it should be able to say that those children have a right to an education. The placement committee should be able to say: "Yes, you have a right to a special education program. That's where you are going to be in that special education program." What can a parent do who sees his or her child slowly or rapidly deteriorating in terms of intellectual ability and educational growth? Very little.

The social development committee spent a whole week and a day over amendments. With both opposition parties firmly in agreement, the committee said in effect there has to be an appeal procedure and an appeal procedure worth its name. On September 30 the Liberals did support the New Democratic Party and the immense work the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan) and many other people have been doing in this province for a lot of time.

What has taken place? My suspicion is—and I certainly hope I am wrong, because 200,000 kids out there in this province demand, by right, that at this particular time, in terms of what I am going to be saying, I be wrong. I certainly hope that the Liberal Party is still consistent with the kinds of things it said in the social development committee about having the right of appeal to any decision that a placement committee might be making.

As a legislator and as a person who has taught for 10 years in this province, I do not want to see a child who vegetates because of a lack of services or because of a lack of programming. That is not an extreme position. Because I taught special education for two years, I know what I am talking about. I know some of those children I taught should not have been in that particular classroom; they should have specialized help.

Yet those children could not get that program. The reason goes back to the famous year of 1972 when special education programs were going well—at least we were beginning to see some movement—and then down came the ceilings from this provincial government which totally crippled that development in the schools.

I can understand why boards of education are upset about this bill as the social development committee has amended it. I can understand it, because in essence it says to the boards of education and not necessarily to those—shall I put the word?—enlightened boards that have in the past 10 years moved in that direction, but some of the boards across this province, as the minister ought to know—

Mr. Deputy Chairman: I wonder if I could interrupt the member for Oakwood for a moment. It seems to me that you are speaking pretty generally to the whole philosophy of the bill rather than dealing with some section. I have been quite tolerant, trying to find what section or subsection here you are talking about. It seems to me you are rehashing the philosophy that was done on second reading. I wish you would bring my attention to the particular item in subsection 1 that you think should be changed, or to which you wish to speak.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, the member for Oakwood is, in fact, speaking on the definition section of the bill. I would suggest to you with great respect that when one is talking about the exceptional pupil, special education program, special education services and the trainable retarded child, all of the points my colleague was making with regard to education for those people in that kind of a program are relevant.

The Deputy Chairman: I realize he is tying it in and that the whole bill deals with exceptional children in one way or another, but I do not know whether you are recommending a change in here, speaking to an amendment or just what the point is you are trying to make.

Mr. Grande: The point I am trying to make is that inherent in that definition of exceptional pupil everything else flows in this bill.

4:30 p.m.

The Deputy Chairman: Are you proposing an amendment?

Mr. Grande: What I am talking about, Mr. Chairman, is the definition of exceptional pupil. I am attempting to give my input to this Legislature in terms of the exceptional student in this province, and how those particular needs of the exceptional pupil have been addressed in the past and are going to be addressed by this particular bill before us.

The Deputy Chairman: As I say, I am trying to be tolerant, but would you make your point briefly rather than speaking to the whole principle of the bill, which has been discussed on many occasions. If you have an amendment to propose, I would ask you to put it before the chair.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, it has been the tradition in this House that one can speak on every section of every bill when it is in committee. There need not be an amendment to a section to speak to it.

The Deputy Chairman: The speaking must be relevant to the section. I am trying to find out how what the member for Oakwood is saying is particularly relevant to section 1(1).

Mr. Foulds: With great respect, he is speaking about exceptional pupils, and that is what is in section 1(1), paragraph 20a.

The Deputy Chairman: Committee study does not permit you to ramble and redo the speech that was done on second reading of the bill. I do not want to be short with the member for Oakwood, but I would ask him to save the House a little time and come to the point he is making.

Mr. Grande: Mr. Chairman, with due respect, I am attempting to save the House time. I am also attempting in the best way I know how to deal with this particular section before us now, namely the definition of exceptional pupil. I can only deal with that definition in terms of programs and lack of programs being offered right now in this province. Unless we begin from that definition and talk about programs, we have a definition in a total vacuum. That is what I am attempting to do.

The definition of exceptional pupil in this bill, as far as it goes, is perhaps a good definition. However, the programs that flow from that definition are really the pits. If we do not have the programs in place to look after the very specific and important needs of the exceptional pupil, then I think this bill will amount to nought. If the boards of education are saying in essence they do not want their hands tied by legislation in order to provide the programs, then I must say to you, Mr. Chairman, we will be going on in this province for the next 10 or 15 years without proper educational services being provided to the exceptional pupil or student.

This is what I am addressing to the minister. Since the minister has asked us to take a look at her amendments once again, I would like to suggest she take a look at the good, solid, fundamental amendments that the social development committee has brought forward to amend this legislation. I would say to my Liberal friends on that side, "Take a look at it very carefully, because if you do not what is going to happen is that the 199,998 children who need special education services in this province will not get them."

Mr. Stong: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, I want to assure my friend from Oakwood that we Liberals have indeed looked at the amendments. There are no amendments on section 1. As a matter of fact, this was okayed by the committee. It is here without amendment at this time. My privileges as a member of this House are being breached by this waste of time in speaking to the principle.

I would like to get to the meat of the amendments before us and have some votes on the rights to appeal that are not even involved in this section. Let us not waste time; let us get to the vote that is required instead of speaking to principle; then members will see that the Liberals are consistent.

The Deputy Chairman: As I said earlier, I am trying to be tolerant with the member for Oakwood. I am going to allow him a few more minutes to try to bring the chair's attention to the point he is making on section 1(1). That is the point in issue at the present time. We are looking at section 1(1) of the bill.

I know you are speaking about exceptional children, but I have not found anything in what you have to say that is drawing my attention to any change you want to make there or any proposed amendment to it. Are you asking any questions of the minister? If you would, please do that so we can get on with the work of the House.

Mr. Grande: I certainly would not want my Liberal friend to be upset about what I am saying. All I am saying to him is let us be serious about this legislation, let us remain consistent with what we decided in the social development committee because this legislation is indeed one of the most important pieces of educational legislation we have had in this province for a long time.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Chairman, for the first and quite possibly the last time in my five years in the House, I would like to commend the Minister of Education on something she has done today. I assure you it won't become a tradition with me. I want to commend her on withdrawing or not placing her amendment to section 1(1) and leaving this section of the bill as it came back from the social development committee. I think that it is a good principle that she should recognize as this debate progresses, that much—as a matter of fact, almost everything—that the social development committee did in terms of innovation is good. I know the minister has a number of other amendments which she intends to place and I hope she reconsiders them.

I think what has happened in section 1(1) is important. The government has an obligation to realize it has a record that is not all that very good in terms of special education. This is really the first time the government has moved so far by way of legislation.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Name me a government with a record that is better.

Mr. M. N. Davison: I am sorry, what did the minister have to say?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is all right. I am not going to interrupt.

The Deputy Chairman: The member for Hamilton Centre has the floor.

Mr. M. N. Davison: I welcome an interjection from the minister if she wants to bring something to my attention, although just because she does that is no guarantee I will accept it, as I have done this.

Like all members of the assembly, I had a lot of mail on this section and other sections of the bill and in it were compelling arguments made by parents in terms of the definitions and the other parts of the bill that were changed by the social development committee. I think the minister should listen and reconsider those other ones as she has in this case by not moving ahead with amendments to undo the work of the social development committee.

I don't know if this is true of all the members of the House, but I am one of the members of the House who can speak about special education from a personal point of view. I have a retarded sister who was denied any right whatsoever to a decent education in Ontario. I know what it is like for a family when the government will not permit one of its kids to have access to decent education. That was done by a Tory government, so I know a lot personally about the record of this Tory government.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is hyperbole to suggest it was all done by a Tory government.

Mr. M. N. Davison: When my sister tried to get an education in this province, this government did not give a damn and denied her access to a proper education, as it did in many cases, so don't tell me about it.

I would hope the Tories would finally understand that they don't have a record they can be proud of in special ed; that they will accept the arguments that have been put to them by parents in this province; and that this will not be the only time today the minister refuses to bring forward one of her amendments to undo the work of the social development committee.

I think the committee did a fine job and I do not think the minister should stand in the way of the important changes it has made to the bill.

4:40 p.m.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, I have two or three points I want to make on this section because, as some of my colleagues have mentioned, the rest of the bill hinges on the definition section. We have seen that time and time again when it comes to legislation or regulations that are devolved out of legislation.

There are two basic principles in this section. Like my colleague, the member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. M. N. Davison), I must initially commend the minister for her graciousness and her ability in accepting the section as it is printed and defined. That is very important for the children whose needs we are trying to meet with this legislation, and it is very important for the province as a whole.

One of the important things, and one of the principles that we must keep in mind when discussing this particular section of the bill, is that, several years ago a Minister of Education in this province made a commitment that there would be equality of access to education across the province and that there would no longer be a balkanization of education in this province. That Minister of Education later became the Premier of this province. For a while it was pretty hard for a Minister of Education not to become Premier of this province eventually.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Thank goodness that has changed.

Interjections.

Mr. Foulds: That certainly has changed. If the Liberals support the present Minister of Education for Premier, that would be the kiss of death. They can be assured of that.

Where is the member for London Centre (Mr. Peterson) going? Now I am off the section, I admit, Mr. Chairman. I am amazed you have not called me to order.

The Deputy Chairman: As I said before, I am trying to be very tolerant. That tolerance still exists.

Mr. Foulds: The important principle in this section, and the important principle that we face as we go through this bill clause by clause, is that we must at all costs avoid balkanization of education for children with special needs in this province. We must ensure that the principles which apply to education generally, the principles of universality and access, are maintained in this bill.

That is one of the reasons why I commend the minister for this section. It is obvious that this section, her acceptance of it and our endorsement of it indicate that the minister, and I hope also all of the Legislature when debating the rest of the sections of this bill, will decide that if there is a balance to be struck between the competing and conflicting interests in education, the balance must always be tipped in favour of the child because it is the child the educational system is designed to serve. In terms of this bill, it is the exceptional pupil whom the boards of education are there to serve; it is the exceptional pupil whom the teachers of this province are there to serve. I, for one, have objected, more strenuously in a personal way than I can express, to the lobbying, to which I have been subjected by people in the boards of education sector and the teaching sector of education, against the amendments put forward by this bill. It is their job, and the job of us in this Legislature, to serve those needs.

Contrary to one of the things my colleague from Oakwood (Mr. Grande) said, the children of this province do not demand special education. I know several children who have exceptional needs. I know children with learning disabilities. I have a child with a learning disability. They are not demanding special education because they do not yet know and are not yet cognizant of the fact they have rights in this province. Those of us who are their guardians, those of us who are legislators, must demand them on their behalf.

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Chairman, I want to speak very briefly to this section. It has occurred to me when I have looked at the educational system—and I spent some time in it myself—that it reflects the kind of society we have built, not just in Ontario but elsewhere. We have built a society designed for the young and the swift, whether we are talking physically or mentally. That is the problem with our educational system.

If I were to start all over again, I think I would design a system that said to the people who ran it: "We will teach the people who are young and swift how to learn; we will teach the rest of the people we describe as exceptional pupils. We will teach the others how to learn, and they will get about the process of learning primarily on their own. The exceptional pupils who have problems need the majority of the resources to teach them." For the first time, this bill seems to understand, or go part way, to resolving that problem.

I can think of a situation in Sudbury which is very bad. If a person has a speech problem that affects his or her learning, and such a person could certainly be described as an exceptional pupil under this section of the bill, if the student is of pre-school age he or she is referred to the Sudbury Algoma Sanatorium. If the person is of school age, that person is referred to the school system, the school board, which does not have speech therapists. It has itinerant speech teachers. It does not have the facilities to deal with the problem adequately.

I too have been lobbied in the last few days by school boards and by teachers. I find it pretty upsetting to be lobbied by those people who are supposed to be carrying out their mandate of educating the children of this province and who are saying that this problem, in effect, is too big. One person from a school board said to me: "We can't deal with this problem; we are not a social agency. We cannot deliver social programs, and that is what you're talking about in this bill."

What is the purpose of our educational system? I look around me in the Sudbury basin, as an example, where we do not have anyone who is co-ordinating things properly. At one point, it appeared there was going to be a social services commissioner in the basin who would try to co-ordinate educational needs, health needs and social services needs so there would not be overlapping and there would not be people in the system falling between the stools. But that has not come to fruition.

When the board of education says this bill just will not work because it is a social services problem, not an educational one, I wonder what the educational system is supposed to be doing for people with learning disabilities. When I think of the children in the province who really need the extra help, I wonder if the minister is going to say to the boards across the province, "We are no longer going to give you a formula; we are going to provide the assistance required to help people who are defined as exceptional pupils." That is one of the things that is bothering the school boards.

Where is the money going to come from to look after these programs? It is now going to be right for these exceptional students to have an education, to have a program designed for these needs? I can see why the school boards are very nervous. They are very nervous that this minister and her government are not going to provide the necessary funds. It would not be the first time.

I would expect the minister would have some very precise things to say today about making a commitment to provide an adequate level of funding to make sure the school boards are not only given the responsibility of implementing this bill, but are also given adequate funding to do it properly. I can understand why the school boards are nervous. They simply do not trust the minister to come through with an adequate level of funding. They have every right to be nervous.

4:50 p.m.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: On what?

Mr. Warner: On funding for education. It continues to erode each year. It dropped from 60 per cent to almost 50 per cent, and she knows it.

The Deputy Chairman: The member for Nickel Belt has the floor. Will he proceed please?

Mr. Laughren: The minister surely would not disagree that the property taxpayers are picking up an increased proportion of the educational costs, as compared with the province, through general revenues. I would simply urge the minister to make a commitment that, whatever level of funding is required to implement these programs, it simply be done.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Chairman, I want to compliment the minister on trying to simplify things this afternoon—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I did not succeed, did I?

Mr. Bounsall: —by not proceeding with her amendment on section 1. I would sympathize with the minister's feelings at this point in that what looked like a simplification is becoming a major debate. I think we should move on to another section.

I would like to say at this point that I missed very much being on the social development committee this summer because of having to serve on the Hydro affairs committee. I find myself in a more and more frustrating position over the last couple of weeks in dealing with constituents over the problems involved with the definition section. It was difficult trying to keep straight which version of the bill they were talking to, whether it was the original one or the one amended by the social development committee.

Then we had the minister tabling her amendment here, new calls coming in over the weekend and submissions being sent to us which were written over the weekend. At this point, it is very difficult to tell, unless their letters were very specific, which amendments they are talking about—those brought forward by the social development committee even in this section or those brought forward by the minister.

As I tried today to sort through some of the letters of objections and phone calls I received over the weekend, after having taken the minister's amendments home with me I found myself and the person who was talking getting more and more frustrated as we tried to determine which set of amendments we were talking about.

I know it is not possible now, but would it not have been more profitable if at this point we could have sent the minister's amendments to a committee outside the House? There it could be made very clear what was being asked of us by the various groups that were contacting us and whether it was the minister's amendments or the social development committee's amendments the various groups were concerned about.

I received a communication from the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario and some of their remarks looked very reasonable. They are concerned with some of the remarks the minister made in quoting the author of American Public Law 94-142, that we do not zero in on a plan, and the plan and the program themselves become the be-all and end-all. To quote them, "We should be looking at the result which is forthcoming." And we should have a phrase, which in their opinion, "in accordance with the best possible educational practices," coming in to achieve their ends, as the best way to achieve their objectives.

As I read through that paragraph, I have a great desire to sit down outside the Legislature with the people who have contacted us so that we could have a clear understanding of exactly what it is they wish to achieve. But here we are going through these various amendments and we will probably reach a point which is very much more frustrating to all concerned than it has been so far. I just regret there isn't a route open to us to allow a situation which would be a little less frustrating than the situation we have to deal with here.

I won't make the same speech I gave on second reading on definitions of exceptional students and their needs. I am glad we have reached agreement on the wording of section 1 that came from the social development committee and that we can go on to some of the other sections.

Mr. Chairman: Hon. Miss Stephenson moves that paragraph 66 of section 1(1) of the act as set out in section 1(2) of the bill be amended by striking out "a pupil who is six or more years of age but less than 21 years of age" in the second and third lines and inserting in lieu thereof "an exceptional pupil."

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, given the fact we have made so many amendments, and amendments to amendments in some cases, although it looks very obvious I think it is important that the minister would indicate to us the precise reason for introducing the change. I think I know what it is, but we have tripped over so many amendments to amendments to amendments that we can lose the thread of what we are trying to do here.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The purpose of the amendment is to reduce the age requirement to attain the status of a trainable mentally retarded pupil from six down to four in order to accommodate those people at an earlier age than at present in the act.

Mr. Nixon: How about those over 21?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: As you know, under the act at the present time they are the responsibility of the educational program until the age of 21. We are also looking at that. Specifically at this point, it is to reduce the admission age.

Mr. Sweeney: There are boards in this province taking even younger children than you have just described under their jurisdiction and providing a program for children who are hard of hearing. Are we speaking to this, or is that something different again?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That is something else again. The trainable mentally retarded is the only group addressed in this amendment.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, I want to be sure I understand the purpose of the amendment. First, from what the minister has said, age six is eliminated in order that children can be accommodated in the program who are younger than six. Is there a provision elsewhere in the bill or in the act so that the age can be extended at the other end to beyond age 18?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Under the Education Act at the present time, the trainable mentally retarded child is the responsibility of that educational program until the age of 21.

Mr. McClellan: Under what section of the act?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Section 571(1).

Mr. McClellan: I don't understand what section you are talking about.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am sorry, it is section 71(1) of the Education Act.

Mr. McClellan: Right. I didn't think that was correct because there are only 200 sections in the Education Act. There's nothing in section 71(1) about increasing the age from 18 to 21. The reason I want to raise it is that it is an important consideration. It is something that was raised in committee during the hearings. A number of witnesses who were advocating on behalf of mentally retarded children or on behalf of the association were commending the ministry on the extension of the eligible age from 18 to 21. I think your amendment is taking 21 out of the act. I want to know precisely where it is in the existing act or in the regulations. As I read section 71(1), it is not there.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Try section 32.

Mr. McClellan: I will try section 32. If you will bear with me, I will stay on my feet. Section 32 has four subsections. Which subsection?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: One, right to attend.

Mr. McClellan: Perhaps the minister could explain that section to me because I don't understand it.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It says, "Subject to sections 34, 35 and 42, a person who attains the age of six years in any year is, after the first day of September in such year, qualified to be a resident pupil in respect of a school section until the last school day in June in the year in which he attains the age of 21 years," and then the qualifications follow.

Mr. McClellan: Where are the qualifications that relate this to a trainable retarded child?

Mr. Foulds: That is a particularly important question in view of some of the exclusions in section 34.

Mr. McClellan: I don't mean to bring things to a halt but we can't proceed on the amendment until we have a clear understanding of where the authority is to extend the eligible age for trainable retarded children to 21 years and we haven't found it yet.

Mr. Foulds: With great respect, I think the minister is trying to find an answer and I believe she thinks the section covers the concern expressed by my colleague the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan). However, we are concerned because section 32(1) starts out with the simple words, "Subject to sections 34, 35 and 42," and then gives the right to attend and includes the age 21. However, section 34(1), which section 32 is subject to, reads: "A person is not qualified to be a resident pupil in respect of an elementary school if he is unable by reason of mental or physical handicap to profit by instruction in an elementary school."

We feel that unless it is clearly explained or embedded in this piece of legislation there is no provision for the act dealing with the problems we have before us in this bill, namely, ensuring that trainable retarded children will be eligible for school until the physical age of 21.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Under the existing definition of trainable retarded child, a child is defined as someone under the age of 18. The amendment is intended to remove that upper limit of 18 and permit the current practice, which is that those young people will be a part of the educational program until the age of 21 as other pupils may be.

Mr. McClellan: The minister has referred to another section and I don't know where it is. Perhaps she could tell us where the definition of trainable retarded child appears.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, it has been pointed out to me that section 12 of Bill 82 in its amended form may address the problem my friend is having. I am referring to section 71 of the act being repealed and substituted by section 12, which probably answers the member's question. I thank my informant in the gallery.

Mr. McClellan: Perhaps my colleagues will pursue that while I pursue another concern in the same subsection.

This subsection has caused me some concern because, to put it bluntly, it skirts around the issue of whether or not the child is able to profit from instruction. I can't tell from this section dealing with a trainable retarded child whether or not there will be special education programs for trainable retarded children.

What this subsection does is separate the so-called educable retarded pupil from the so-called trainable retarded pupil. It states that a trainable retarded child is a pupil who cannot profit from a special education program for educable retarded pupils. I am not quite sure what that means. Perhaps the minister could give us some clarification on that. Then I have another question.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: An educable retarded pupil is one who can profit from a special education program designed to meet the requirements of the intellectual capacity of that child. A trainable retarded pupil is one whose intellectual capacity is considered by all methods of assessment to be below the level of educability. Professional definitions have been developed. I have limited knowledge of them but certainly specialists in psychometrics, psychological assessment and those teachers who have been responsible for the development of the program have made that definition and it is a definition which functions at the present time.

5:10 p.m.

Mr. McClellan: If a trainable retarded child is not eligible for a special education program for educable retarded pupils, is there such a thing as a special education program for a trainable retarded child?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes.

Mr. McClellan: Will that be defined pursuant to your regulation authority under section (2b) or 3?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It can be included there. The purpose of including it in this act is because of the action that has taken place under the act that provides the responsibility to separate school boards for the provision of educational programs for the trainable retarded child. There is already a definition of that kind of program because it has been in place for some time under the Education Act.

Mr. McClellan: Why is it necessary to continue to use the term, "trainable retarded child," on the one hand, and "educable retarded child," on the other? Why is it necessary to maintain that distinction between these so-called classes of retarded children?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I shall be pleased to take that matter up with those professionals whose expertise has defined the difference between the two groups of individuals over the past several years. It is a matter of practice at the present time and it has some basis in valid, scientific assessment which has been accepted within the educational community and certainly within the psychological community.

Mr. McClellan: I want to be absolutely clear on this. Where does an educable retarded pupil receive his or her special education program?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Within the school system.

Mr. McClellan: I had assumed it was within the school system, I did not think it would be at the corner grocery store.

If it is not too much trouble, perhaps the minister could explain to this House which programs within the school system are particularly designed for educable retarded pupils and where they would be accommodated in some way different from programs for trainable retarded children.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The educable retarded have most certainly been educated within the school system for many years. Those children are children who can learn, probably to a lesser degree than those who are within the so-called normal range, but who do have the capacity to learn within the structure of the educational program provided. They have certainly been dealt with in many fashions during the past decades through programs designed specifically to help a group that in some instances have been called slow learners. In some instances in the past, they have been given the perhaps unfortunate name of opportunity classes, or other kinds of designations. They are instructed through special education programs within the school system at the present time.

Mr. McClellan: Trainable retarded children, then, are in an entirely different stream?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: In some instances many of the trainable mentally retarded, while they may have some of their program in an entirely different stream, are integrated into certain of the classes, depending on the philosophy of the program that is provided and the experience of the board, the supervisors, the teachers and the parents with those children. In many instances they believe that mainstreaming or integrating those children in certain of the classes is helpful to them.

Mr. McClellan: It is clearly the intention of the minister that all trainable retarded children—and it is an unfortunate phrase which we are forced to use, because it is the language of the statute—will have a program made available to them by the time the bill matures in 1985.

I have a concern, however, as to the number of so-called trainable retarded children who will be designated as hard-to-serve children. In the past, the two terms were synonymous. In the past we did not use the exact language, "hard-to-serve children"; we talked in section 34 about children unable to profit by instruction; under section 34 we simply excluded them entirely from the school system. Some of them remained at home, some of them remained in institutions, some of them were in nursing homes, some of them were in homes for special care, and many hundreds of them did not receive an education of any kind.

We have had a great deal of debate in the committee about the notion of exclusion and, as we stand here today, at least one thing all three parties are agreed on is that the word "exclusion" will no longer appear in the bill when it is finally passed. I think that is a major achievement.

Nevertheless, we still have the designation, "hard-to-serve pupil"—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is not in this section.

Mr. McClellan: No, it is not in this section, but if I can just finish the sentence: we have the definition of a hard-to-serve child in a subsequent sentence as a child who is unable to profit by instruction. My question is, how many of these children will be de facto trainable retarded children for whom no program is available?

I think in particular of what we discovered after a number of years of questioning of successive ministers of Health and ministers of Community and Social Services with respect to the number of retarded children who were in homes for special care without any programs. We finally found out, after being given varying figures by the Ministry of Health, that approximately 400 children with developmental handicaps are in homes for special care and not getting any education program at all.

You will forgive us, Mr. Chairman, if we are a little bit cautious about this particular issue. I do not know whether the minister is willing or able to speculate with respect to the number of trainable retarded children who are likely to end up categorized as hard-to-serve children unable to profit by instruction. But I think we know from past experience that it is the trainable retarded child about whom we have been talking when we have discussed the application of the principle of exclusion under either section 34 or another section that serve to do the same thing.

In fact, the process of exclusion is simply a de facto process, which says, "No, you cannot come." They do not have to formally invoke either section 34 or section 75 to achieve a de facto segregation. I am raising this point more as a point of concern. I do not know whether the minister is able to give reassurances on whether the hard-to-serve child unable to profit by instruction is liable to be the trainable retarded child and whether the very sad patterns of the past may continue into the future.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The very purpose of this piece of legislation is to ensure that the responsibility for providing a program for all children within the province will be assumed by all of the boards of this province. There is no child at the present time who cannot be admitted to the educational system with the passage of this bill.

The purpose of the specific change within the definition under subsection 2 was to ensure that the word "child" was defined as something other than the usual definition—that a trainable retarded pupil is one who does not fall into the classification of "child"—in the traditional sense of that definition—and would be expanded to permit the pupil in that classification both to receive an earlier program through the education system than the ordinary child would, and to have that extended to the age of 21 years in all instances. In almost all instances for the trainable mentally retarded, that is a very appropriate extension to help them to learn a skill or at least to become more self-satisfied in their educational experience.

I have no means of defining the numbers of pupils within this category who might be classified as hard to serve. Although the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan) continues to raise the matter of the mentally retarded young people who are within certain kinds of institutions, he is acutely aware that the three ministries involved are actively participating in a program to assess the educational requirements of all those children in all those institutions so that we may meet their educational needs. It is the intent of this bill to ensure that all children in the province, regardless of their circumstances, will have an opportunity to have their educational needs met appropriately within the school system.

Mr. Foulds: I have a question of clarification here. I assume that the minister's amendment and her explanation referring to the new section 71, which is section 12 of the bill, are still subject to section 75 as it is printed in the act?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Section 75 was revoked.

Mr. Foulds: Where is section 75 revoked?

Once upon a time several years ago when I was Education critic for this party I went through this whole act and that was one of the parts of the maze that escaped us. We do not want it to escape us this time.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Section 75 and 76 of the said act are repealed at section 14 in this act.

Mr. Isaacs: I have some concern when a bill of this nature has been dealt with by a committee, the committee has brought forward its recommendations, and the minister comes into the committee of the whole House with an amendment that appears innocuous and even desirable, but with explanations that somehow are not completely satisfying.

I appreciate the minister's saying it is the intent of the bill that education shall be provided to all children across the province. Unfortunately, decisions about these things tend to be made outside of this House, and outside of the ministry—in the courts. If we are not very careful with the wording, we are going to find a situation where someone uses something as a way of getting around doing something.

I want to raise one more point on this amendment. The minister is replacing the words "a pupil who is six or more years of age but less than 21 years of age" with the words "an exceptional pupil"—not a person, or something like that, but the specific phrase, "an exceptional pupil." As soon as that is used, we have to go back to section 1(1), or the revised section 20a of the act, where "exceptional pupil" is defined. But the definition of "exceptional pupil" does not encompass all the children of this province.

It seems to me, at least, there are children in this province who could be excluded because they are not resident pupils in a particular board area, because they are not being admitted under an agreement, or because they do not fall under the clause that says, "to which the cost of education in respect of the pupil is payable by the minister."

It seems to me those children might include children who are at present in special education programs in the United States and whose costs are being paid by the Ministry of Community and Social Services. I wonder how those children, who may also be trainable retarded, can be brought into this section as the minister is revising it, when section 1(1) does not appear to me to include those pupils.

I wonder why we take out the generalization of a pupil with an age description and replace it with an "exceptional pupil," which means something very specific. Why do we not take out the age wording and say it means the pupil whose intellectual functioning is below the level et cetera?

I would appreciate some clarification of those matters.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I understand the concern of the honourable member, which has to be based on a very malevolent kind of misanthropic attitude. I feel strongly he has to understand that much of the wording that is drafted into a bill is a result of requirements established by the legislative counsel in terms of definitions that have already been established, are already used in the Education Act and must be reused to avoid confusion.

The purpose of this amendment to this section is to ensure that all pupils who could be classified as trainable mentally retarded will be dealt with in this act in the definition of the function of the school system on behalf of the trainable mentally retarded. It also is an attempt to provide for flexibility for those specific pupils, recognizing they require an educational program or a training program that may be significantly longer than that which is necessary even for some exceptional children.

I have to tell the member the child he is talking about would be included in the group of which he is a resident pupil. As long as his parents remain within the jurisdiction of a school board, he remains a resident pupil.

Motion agreed to.

Section 1, as amended, agreed to.

On section 2:

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to section 2(1a) which I believe must be introduced at this time to ensure that the appropriateness of the legislation is maintained.

The general statement at the beginning of section 2(1a) is a preamble statement which I believe is spelled out fairly clearly in the Education Act and requires no specific redefinition in this area, in an act that is specifically designed to be of assistance to exceptional pupils. The concentration in this area on all children I think dilutes the kind of attention we were attempting to provide for exceptional pupils in this legislation.

I would therefore recommend this amendment to the House.

Mr. Chairman: Hon. Miss Stephenson moves that section 8(1a) of the act, as set out in section 2 of the bill, be amended by striking out "children in Ontario have available to them a free and appropriate public education that, for exceptional children, emphasizes special education programs and services that meet their unique needs, and that the rights of exceptional children and their parents or guardians are protected" in the first, second, third, fourth and fifth lines and inserting in lieu thereof "exceptional pupils in Ontario have available to them, in accordance with this act and the regulations, special education programs and special education services."

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, as I said earlier, our concern was that this legislation concentrate upon exceptional pupils, and this reference is to all pupils in the portion of the bill that was included by amendment.

5:30 p.m.

"Children" is not defined in the Education Act. It could mean only those under the age of 18 and it could mean those from the age of one day up. "Free and appropriate public education" is an American term from the American federal legislation, Bill 94-142, and each word is specifically defined within that bill. If the member wants that phrase defined, I think that would have to be an activity carried out by this House.

As it is used in this phrase, clause and section, the word "free" would be open to varying interpretations because it is not defined. The Education Act in Ontario for more than 100 years has made provision for all pupils to attend schools within the public system without payment of fees. I suppose that is one definition of a free educational program. But the the Education Act already specifies that. It is appropriately set out in the Education Act and is inappropriately added in this one.

The other thing that concerns me is that "the rights of exceptional children" has no definitive meaning in this legislation because we do not have a children's bill of rights in this province. If there were such a piece of legislation, then that might be appropriate wording. At the present time it would appear to dangle in mid-air without being tied to anything except for definitions as may be established by the courts from time to time.

The rights of due process for parents and children are already outlined in regulation 704 and they are strengthened by the provisions of the amendment in this act, which was made by the government member during the committee hearings and was supported by both members of the opposition parties who were present at that time.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, this is one area where I am prepared to understand the change the minister is making. In the initial amendment we were referring to all the children in the provincial schools and yet, on further reflection, I realize the purpose of this bill is to speak to exceptional children.

I would refer once again to the minister's opening statement of May 23, in which she said, "The concept is simply that an educational system which is supported by the taxation of all citizens has an obligation to be of service to all children, exceptionalities notwithstanding." We are dealing here with those children in the system who have exceptional or special needs, and for that reason I am prepared to accept the first part of the amendment.

But I have three changes which I would introduce at this time. The first is that we should change the word "pupils" to "children," leaving the word "exceptional," so we will not in any way negate the offering of some place to a child in this province, in some kind of institution and under some kind of special care in this province, who may not fit the definition of pupil. I want to use the word "children" rather than—

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman: I do not want to unduly interrupt the flow of the member speaking but, if he intends to move amendments to the amendments, perhaps we should have those in front of us first so all the members of the Legislature can understand what is being talked about.

The Deputy Chairman: I agree. I was going to let him complete his explanation first. Does he have those amendments with him?

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I had prepared amendments to the minister's amendments as I understood they were coming up. However, the minister has withdrawn one of her amendments, and that creates some problem for us, because now we are going to have to include the intent of some of our original amendments some place else. Obviously there is no way I can know in advance what amendments the minister is going to leave on the table or withdraw.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I have withdrawn the only one I am going to withdraw.

Mr. Sweeney: Then I would put it to you this way, Mr. Chairman: Until this point I did not know that. When I came into the Legislature this afternoon I had no way of knowing the minister had decided to withdraw her first amendment. Therefore, for the balance of this afternoon and perhaps even into this evening, I am going to be faced with having to put amendments in places they would have fitted otherwise. I have on the table before you an amendment that will match the first request I am making but will not tie into the next two I am making. They would have been fitted into the first one, which is no longer there.

Mr. Chairman, I checked with your predecessor and was advised that when I am making an amendment to the minister's amendment, it is not appropriate for me to make it until the minister places it. Therefore, I cannot give it to you in advance.

The Deputy Chairman: I understand the problem you are faced with but, at the same time, amendments must be in writing. I do not know whether you wish to stand this section aside for a moment. I realize you are in some difficulty because of the minister's amendment.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I can either speak to the amendment I want to make at this time, or I can write it out and give it to you, whichever you direct.

The Deputy Chairman: Will it take long to write out? Perhaps you can do that.

Mr. Sweeney: For the members who are in the Legislature I can identify the two simple changes I am going to request. I think they can write it on their own. If they choose to force me to do otherwise, I will do that.

The Deputy Chairman: The rule provides that it shall be in writing.

Mr. Sweeney: I will take a minute to write it then, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. McClellan: While the honourable member is drafting his flip-flop, let me speak to the amendment that is before us. In many respects, I regard this as the most significant amendment achieved during the deliberations of the social development committee in the summer and fall of this year. What this amendment does is broaden and extend the traditional rights provision under the Education Act of Ontario.

Until section 2 of this bill was passed, resident pupils in Ontario had the right to be physically present in a classroom, to sit in a chair within a school building. That was the beginning and the end of their right. It was an important right to be physically present, nothing else, but in the nineteenth century it was a significant right.

We stand here a century later and it is time to extend the provision of statutory right beyond what was appropriate in Egerton Ryerson's day. What we have done is to say in the statute that all children in Ontario have available to them a free and appropriate public education that meets their unique needs. In addition, the Minister of Education shall ensure that shall take place. I cannot think of a more significant amendment.

During International Year of the Child, when I moved the children's bill of rights, it contained a provision virtually identical to this section. I remind my friends in the Liberal Party that they supported it then. I remind you, Mr. Chairman, when we were in the social development committee, the Liberal Party supported this rights provision without equivocation. I make the appeal to them now, while it is still possible, to stay with the decision they made when the children's bill of rights was before us and stay with the decision they made when we were in the social development committee.

Mr. Stong: The social development committee made a mistake.

Mr. McClellan: I say to the member for York Centre, the social development committee did not make a mistake. The member is making a mistake today, and I want to tell him the nature of that mistake. His party wants to limit the ministerial responsibility to ensuring educational service for exceptional pupils. It wants to limit the statutory provision to exceptional pupils. I go back to the remarks I made when I first stood up this afternoon.

We have defined "exceptional student" in this statute as the only child who is eligible for special education programs and special education services. If a child is not so fortunate as to be designated an exceptional pupil, that child is not entitled to special education programs or special education services. We have given the local placement committee of the boards of education the power to make that life-or-death decision, and yet the Minister of Education and the Liberal Party are not willing at this point in time to grant a right of appeal against the designation of exceptional pupils. It is not in there.

I remind the minister that Chief Justice McRuer said appeal rights cannot be enshrined by regulation. It is the obligation of the Legislature to put appeal provisions and appeal rights into statutes and the minister can't shirk it. It is not proper to shirk it. The minister knows that and members of the government know that because they have followed many of Chief Justice McRuer's recommendations very faithfully over the years. The Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mrs. Birch) knows that because the social assistance legislation and the social services legislation of this province have been amended to conform with the recommendations of the McRuer report. When decisions are made with respect to the awarding of benefits or services and when decisions are made as to who is entitled to receive services from the government, there are rights of appeal, whether in the Family Benefits Act or the Vocational Rehabilitation Services Act or the General Welfare Assistance Act or the Workmen's Compensation Act or any of a dozen other statutes in this province.

For some reason, education is not regarded as a service or a benefit like the others. In fact, it is and it needs to be defined in that way. There need to be rights of entitlement put into this statute and a right of appeal against the decisions on who is eligible for the service and what kind of service they are going to get. Unless we have a clear and unequivocal statutory provision of right, as we have now in the bill as amended, then whatever right of appeal is set up will be a travesty and a sham.

The provision in the statute as it reads now sets a benchmark for all children in this province, whether or not they have been so fortunate to have been designated as exceptional pupils or not. It says to each and every child in this province they have a right to an education based on their own unique needs, that they are not ciphers, that all children aren't the same, that children are not a series of identical, infinitely multiple twins, and that we are not talking about a bunch of under-aged social insurance numbers. We are talking about living individual children, all with their own unique personalities, their own unique experiences and their own unique learning needs. We are saying as a province we are going to tailor our education system to provide service on the basis of the uniqueness of each and every child's own individual humanity.

The minister talks about this provision somehow diluting service to the exceptional pupil. Of course, exactly the opposite is true. What the minister is trying to do is water down a very strong rights provision. It is beyond my comprehension how the members of the Liberal Party, who participated in the debate in the social development committee, and who supported this statutory provision in the social development committee, can now come into this House and do a complete about-face. I think it is shameful. There is no other way to describe it. We have achieved something of significance in this statute that is unparalleled in this country, and we are forced now to watch as our friends once again backslide away from a significant decision.

Mr. Stong: Vote for our amendment.

Mr. McClellan: There is still time before we come to the vote. The kind of amendment proposed by the minister limits her responsibility to making sure that the act and the regulations are followed out. That is all she is saying. The minister will do what is required to be done in the act. I thank her very much. That is awfully generous of her. But that is not a rights provision; that has nothing to do with a statutory rights provision. If my friends in the Liberal Party cannot see that, it is because they choose not to see that.

Mr. Stong: Address the bill.

Mr. McClellan: I am addressing the bill and the Liberal Party's attempts to undermine the bill. The bill is tough and will guarantee that all children will have a basis for having their rights upheld. If there is no rights provision, there is no entitlement. It is as simple as that, is it not?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That is not true.

Mr. McClellan: It is true. If there is no rights provision in the statute, there is no entitlement. If it did not say, I think in section 32—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: What country does he live in?

Mr. McClellan: The minister is beginning to froth.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No. It is astonishing that I am not, but I am not.

Mr. McClellan: Bear with us for another 10 minutes before you begin to froth.

I believe it is section 32 that guarantees the right of the child to be physically present in the classroom. If that section was not in the bill, there would be no right for a child to be physically present in the classroom. Is that so hard to understand? Each and every child in this province now has the right to attend school. Why? Not because we are sweet, because we are just oozing benevolence, because all of our administrators are so full of the milk of human kindness that they let all these children into our schools. No. The reason that children have a right to go to school is that it says so in the Education Act. It is right here in the statute. If we want to say that children have a right to an appropriate education based on their unique need, that has to be in the statute too. If it is not in the statute, it does not exist as a right and it will not happen. It is as simple as that.

Over the course of the last three weeks I am sure all members who have been involved with this bill have been receiving a flood of correspondence from parents in the communities. All of those letters have said substantially the same thing, that they are aware of the changes that were made to the Education Act in the social development committee. They are aware that the new statute provides, for the first time in our history as a province, that all children have the right to a free and appropriate education based on their unique needs.

Virtually all of those letters called upon us to preserve and protect those victories won in the social development committee. I, for one, intend to honour what I read in those letters to be a very heartfelt plea. Those were not letters from the kind of people who usually write us letters—professionals, business people, trade unionists, each with his own set of organizational interests to put forward. Those were letters from parents with children with learning disabilities.

Virtually all of the letters talked about the kinds of problems they had experienced themselves, because of the failure to get service from the education system in Ontario, and the kind of agony they had gone through or the kind of anguish that the denial of an appropriate education had meant for them and their family.

5:50 p.m.

Those of us who are legislators are not charged with the administration of the school system. That is the responsibility of the minister and her officials. But as legislators we are charged with a sacred responsibility to make sure the legislation is as good as it is humanly possible to devise. I say to all members that we have taken a giant step forward through the introduction and passage of a statutory right to an appropriate education. It will be a sad day if that victory is taken away by the shortsightedness of people here in this assembly today.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I indicated a few minutes ago that I had what I considered to be three important amendments to this particular section that will parallel some of the amendments I had intended to introduce to the minister's first amendment that has now been withdrawn.

The first one would be to change the word "pupils" in the first line to "children." I have already indicated the reason for doing that. It has been brought to our attention that there are some children in this province, again going back to the minister's opening statement where it says, "All children, exceptionalities notwithstanding—"

The Deputy Chairman: Let me just explain to the House that the amendment was written out, but it was not written heavily enough for the photocopy machine to bring it forward.

Mr. McClellan: Maybe it was invisible ink.

The Deputy Chairman: It is not invisible but very close to invisible. Unless somebody else wants to speak to the minister's original amendment, I am wondering whether we should not rise at this point and let this be properly typed so that all members of the House can see it.

The House recessed at 5:54 p.m.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS ON NOTICE PAPER

STUDENT AID FOR FBA RECIPIENTS

384. Mr. R. F. Johnston: How many FBA recipients attending post-secondary institutions in 1978-79, 1979-80 and in this school year applied for and received or are anticipating receipt of financial aid from OSAP? What were the average levels of assistance per student in each of the school years listed? (Tabled October 28, 1980.)

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The number of FBA recipients who received, or are anticipating receipt of financial aid from OSAP: 1978-79, 1,155; 1979-80, 1,756; 1980-81 (as of November 12, 1980), 1,662.

The average levels of OSAP assistance per FBA recipient:

| Provincial grants | 1,395   | 1,443   | 1,648                                      |
| Loans             | 2,707   | 857     | 1,859                                      |

LIEN LEGISLATION

392. Mr. Van Horne: Will the Attorney General provide details of the proposed changes to the Mechanics' Lien Act? How do these proposals intend to provide further protection for the small businessman in the construction industry who is suffering from the misuse of the present legislation? (Tabled November 3, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Before the end of the month, I intend to table in the Legislature a discussion paper on the draft Construction Lien Act. It contains a first draft of legislation designed ultimately to replace the Mechanics' Lien Act.

The draft Construction Lien Act is intended to serve as a model for discussion. The discussion paper invites suggestions from interested individuals or groups with respect to improving the draft legislation. In this connection, I am establishing an advisory committee of experts in the field of mechanics' liens to review the draft and the suggestions received from the public.

The draft Construction Lien Act contained in the discussion paper completely restructures and rewrites the lien legislation. It makes the major revisions to the lien legislation about which some consensus has been achieved within the industry. It also presents for consideration a number of concepts devised by ministry officials.

The second part of the question in its present form is impossible to answer. Small businessmen can be involved in all stages of the construction industry. The nature of the protection offered by the draft legislation will depend on the relationship of the small businessman to the particular construction project. A small businessman may be the owner of the building or other improvement being made, a general contractor doing renovating work or a subcontractor doing work on a major contract. In each of these cases, the type of protection offered by the draft legislation will be different.

Once members have had an opportunity to review the discussion paper, I will make available for the assistance of any interested member, counsel of the policy development division of the ministry.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

395. Mr. Grande: Will the Minister of Education table the latest statistical information regarding enrolment, staff, and courses of study, provided by private schools pursuant to section 15(5) of the Education Act? (Tabled November 4, 1980.)

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The latest statistical information for private schools in Ontario is for 1979-80 and is as follows: enrolment, 67,899; teachers full-time, 2,640; teachers part-time, 3,121; teachers total, 5,761.

The Minister of Education supervises only the courses of study in inspected private schools that want to grant the secondary school graduation diploma or the secondary school honour graduation diploma. However, statistics are not gathered on the variety of courses offered in inspected private schools.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1980

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

House in committee of the whole.

EDUCATION AMENDMENT ACT (continued)

On section 2:

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Sweeney moves that the amendment by Hon. Miss Stephenson be further amended by deleting the word "pupils" in the first line and replacing it with "children"; by adding "appropriate" in the third line after "regulation"; by adding "without payment of fees" in the fourth line after "services" and by further adding "and providing for the parents or guardians to appeal the appropriateness of the special education placement."

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I would like to explain precisely why I have gone about it in this way. To repeat what I attempted to indicate prior to the dinner recess, some parts of this amendment were contained in an amendment I had to the honourable minister's first amendment, which she withdrew, and I apologize to my colleagues in the House for having created some confusion prior to 6 o'clock.

If I may now explain why I am asking the minister to accept this change to her amendment: I think it is necessary to change the word "pupil" to "children" because it has been drawn to my attention that there are some children in this province who may be in a facility not under the jurisdiction of a school system who would not be defined as pupils according to normal terminology and who may require special education services.

I am quite prepared to hear the minister indicate to me that under the existing section 1 of this bill they may be covered. I felt it was my responsibility to bring it forward as an amendment so we would at least have the opportunity to clarify that those children not under the jurisdiction of the school system, who may be in some kind of an institution, are covered. That is the whole purpose of doing it. I am quite prepared to hear the minister indicate to me that it may not be necessary, that they are covered in some other way—I will be happy with that. I just want to be sure they are covered, which is why I brought it in.

The minister will be very aware that the word "appropriate" has come up time and time again during our discussions. A number of those concerned about this legislation said the term "special education" may not be enough; we have to be sure it meets the needs of kids. That is the whole intent of using the word "appropriate."

I would draw to the minister's attention that on page three of her amendment to section 7(8), the minister herself uses the term "appropriate special education." I do not believe I am being inconsistent in saying at this time there would be no good reason to be concerned about using the word "appropriate." I realize it may be perceived as an unnecessary duplication but, on the other hand, if there are those who have children and who are concerned about what we are doing, and if this clarifies in a more precise way what we are after, I think the minister will appreciate why I want to put it in.

In terms of "without payment of fees," which is my third amendment, I would direct the minister to her own statement, which I briefly referred to prior to the recess. The concept is simply that it is an educational system supported by the taxation of all citizens. Literally, what I am saying here is, if we find there are some children who for whatever reason have to be educated in a program some place else, the general taxation base should bear that whatever the cost. The individual parent should not be burdened with that problem.

I would also point out to the minister, and I am sure she is already aware of it, that in a subsequent amendment I am going to move that where the board itself, co-operatively with the parent, decides to place the child in some other educational setting, the board pay for it. If we go one step further and the special education tribunal decides the child should be placed in another educational setting, I am going to move an amendment that the minister, for whom the tribunal is acting, would pay for it. Once again it would be consistent with what will be coming up later.

Finally, the minister will be aware that in the amendment she has withdrawn, I wanted a more precise statement of what she is going to do anyway, that is, to provide for the parents or guardians the right to appeal the appropriateness of the special education placement.

The minister will realize that in the bill, as it now stands, under section 5 there is a reference to the fact that a special education placement can be appealed. The fact the minister has accepted that in committee—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That is section 3.

Mr. Sweeney: Thank you. The minister probably will appreciate that I am trying to be, in so far as possible, internally consistent as far as this legislation is concerned. I am trying to draw to the minister's attention that any amendments I propose are consistent with what we have done in other places in the legislation. We passed it in standing committee. The minister supported it. I have not yet seen any amendment that the minister proposes that would eliminate it. I would recommend to her that putting this in this particular section would be consistent.

I do not intend to go on at any great length. What I have tried to indicate to the minister is the four amendments I am proposing. I have attempted to indicate in each case why I believe they are acceptable and consistent with what is done in other parts of the legislation.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: May I respond, Mr. Chairman? I should like to respond to the honourable member's proposed amendments. I think I have already stated my concern about the inclusion of the word "children" rather than "pupil" since the age range that is possible within that definition is one that is not entirely consistent with any of the provisions within the Education Act. I recognize the rationale for the inclusion of that word, but I believe the definitions included in section 1 under subsection 20(a) (i), (ii) and (iii) cover all the children in the province.

I do not believe there is anyone who can escape that net at this point because that includes all those children in all kinds of institutions, including nursing homes and homes for special care, where we may not at this point have agreements but will. It includes all those who are considered resident pupils of a board, and all who could enrol with the board although they may not be resident pupils for certain circumstances.

It would not be consistent with the remainder of the Education Act to include the word "children" rather than "pupils." But I do not have any major objection to it if the member feels it is going to cover a circumstance that might arise from some unknown factor that I certainly cannot prognosticate at this point.

I have no difficulty with the word "appropriate." I am told the inclusion of adjectives within legislation tends to be less than productive because there may be a number of interpretations of the word "appropriate" and this may lead to some difficulties in the future. But we know what we are talking about when we talk about an "appropriate" educational program. If we can use our definition of "appropriate," I think that is probably fairly reasonable.

"Without payment of fees" as an inclusion is simply a reinforcement of the current educational philosophy, and that I would certainly accept.

My only question about the member's fourth amendment is that in section 3(2) of the bill, paragraph 5a specifically requires of the minister an action that will develop the procedures to govern the appeals of parents regarding placement, will govern the participation of parents in all the activities that might lead up to a placement, and certainly will define the way in which those appeals should be carried out. Therefore, my question would be whether it needs to be repeated. Does it need to be stated twice within such a short space in the act, or is it more appropriate in section 3?

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, if I could briefly respond to what the minister has said with respect to the last point, I recognize, and I have already given cognizance to the fact, that the minister has accepted the appeals procedure on page three of the bill as it now stands. But it has been brought to my attention that when it is totally within the regulations, there is some concern by people outside this House that it does not fit all the needs. Since it is the minister's intention to bring it in by regulation anyway in this particular section, it seems to strengthen the statute requirement that in fact the minister do that.

I am quite prepared to understand that the minister in good faith would bring it in. In the same vein, I would say it does not really change anything here. The minister will recall in my opening remarks I made the observation that we are dealing here with a delicate balance between, on the one hand, trustees and teachers who have to implement this, and, on the other, a very large number of parents who have genuine concerns based upon long experience. Unfortunately, there is nothing we can do about that experience. That is what they are speaking from. That is their perception. If by putting it in this area they have some sense they are better protected in a way in which the minister intends to protect them anyway, I would simply ask the minister to accept it, even if it is probably a duplication.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the only concern I have is that it is repeated within a relatively short period of time in the act, if it is in both places. Which is the most appropriate place in which to put it?

I will make a commitment to this House that the regulations governing this activity will be introduced for the members of the House to see before this bill receives royal assent. We are in the process of working on those regulations at the moment. That mechanism for the active participation of parents in the function of the placement and review committee and the active role of parents in appealing that placement is a regulation activity I have already committed myself to and which will be before the members of the House before the bill receives royal assent.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Bellwoods.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, if I may—

Mr. Chairman: No, order.

Mr. Sweeney: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman, I believe the minister has asked a question with respect to my amendment and I would like to—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I did.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Sweeney: Am I in order or out of order?

Mr. Chairman: You will have an opportunity. The member for Bellwoods.

Mr. McClellan: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, I will not be long but I do want to indicate just how intolerable I find this subamendment.

My colleagues may try to argue that there is no difference between the amendment offered by the honourable minister, as amended by the Liberal Party, and what is currently on the books as passed by the social development committee. There are profound differences and let us not kid ourselves. If we want to water down the rights provision under section 2 of Bill 82, let us have the honesty to stand up and say, "That is what we are doing," because that is the result of the amendment and the subamendment.

Number one, it has eliminated the phrase "unique needs." We are no longer talking about an appropriate public education program that meets the unique needs of children. We are not talking about that any more. We are talking about something entirely different.

Secondly, we are not talking about all children in Ontario any more. We are not talking about all the children in the province. We are simply talking about those who are designated by a local board of education placement committee as exceptional pupils. If people do not see the difference between a statutory provision, which covers all the children of the province, and a statutory provision which simply covers those who are designated exceptional pupils by officers of a board of education, then there is something profoundly wrong with their mental vision.

The amendment and the subamendment include the word "appropriate." Later on, the same people who want to move this amendment and the subamendment want to take out the definition of appropriate from the act. So we have a nice little word in here—"appropriate." Nowhere in the act, if the group here—the Conservatives and the Liberals—has its way, will there be a definition of appropriate. Who are you trying to kid, who are you trying to fool?

I very much hope you are not fooling anybody who is watching this debate. There is the gamesmanship around what "free" means. What does the minister mean by saying there is ambiguity with respect to the word "free." Of course it means no user charge. If that is not sufficiently clear, let somebody move an amendment to Bill 82 that simply spells out the obvious meaning of free, instead of this gamesmanship around words.

What we have in front of us is a substantial backing off from the statutory rights provision in Bill 82, which guarantees to all children in Ontario the right to a free and appropriate education that meets their unique needs. The formulation that the other two parties are attempting to move is profoundly different from that. Let there be no mistake about it whatsoever. Finally, there is the little tag end that the Liberal Party has moved providing for the parents or guardians to appeal the appropriateness of the special education placement. What on earth does that mean? It means absolutely nothing.

The powers of decision in this bill are statutory powers. Let me stress the point again for the third time. It says on the very first page of the bill, "Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario enacts as follows." The very first thing we enact in this bill is the power of officials of a board of education to decide which children are exceptional pupils and which children are not exceptional pupils. Having made that decision, the same committee decides what kind of a special education program and what kind of special education services those who have been designated exceptional pupils will receive.

Neither of the other two parties is prepared to put forward a genuine appeal procedure and genuine appeal mechanism within the statute itself. A statutory power of decision cannot be met with the kind of vague nonsensical phrase that we have in the subamendment. Appeal procedures against statutory powers of decision cannot be imposed by regulation by the minister or the cabinet. It is us, the Legislature conferring the statutory power of decision, and only this Legislature, that should enact in the statute itself the right of appeal against the decisions exercised under that statutory power.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, in 1976 I introduced a bill calling for mandatory special education. That is exactly what this bill before us purports to do. Let me just speak to the amendment being offered by my colleague from Kitchener-Wilmot.

In the bill passed by the committee the word "free" is included loud and clear. In essence, the word "free" opens a Pandora's box. It represents bad legislation, bad drafting. It would allow any individual to commence litigation that would ask the court to determine whether that person would have to pay his property taxes for education if that could be tested. It is better to have the word "free" deleted from the section completely.

In place of that, my colleague from Kitchener-Wilmot included after that, "without payment of fees." This obviously includes no excess payment over and above what his property taxes would bring him for educational purposes. It also imposes and continues to impose upon the individual his responsibility to the educational system. The word "free" is not desirable and must be removed.

The question of "appropriate" is very important. It is our belief, as expressed this afternoon by members to my left, that the purpose of the bill itself is to meet a need. Until the enactment of this bill, this has not been a compulsion on the ministry yet the need has existed. We have recognized that need and attempted to do something about meeting it.

I have no problem with the definition or the inclusion of "exceptional children." As my friend from Kitchener-Wilmot defines it, it is desirable to us. I have more faith than my friends to the left in the appeal procedures that will be debated later and in the classification of individual needs of children. I have great faith in those who will be implementing the appeal procedures when we finally enact them.

This afternoon my friends on my left chastised us for flip-flopping. We have not flip-flopped; we have improved on what the minister has proposed. It is good to see the honourable minister is not opposed to what we have included. I would urge upon her that this is the most appropriate spot for enabling legislation in reference to an appeal. It is better here than in some section later on dealing with a procedural or regulatory enactment or enabling part. In fact, an enabling part ought to be included here, in my respectful submission to the minister, as we have done in our amendment.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It could be in both, actually.

Mr. Stong: That could be, and we are willing to have it invoked.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, I rise with a great deal of sadness and an enormous amount of anger. We have before us in the clause, as it is reported to this Legislature from the social development committee, a historic and important clause that actually breaks new ground and establishes the principles that many of us in this Legislature fought for for many years with regard to rights for children who need special education.

There were honourable members of all parties who fought for those rights. The two previous speakers for the Liberal Party, in fact, fought for those rights. I am saddened more than I can say by their retreat and the sophistry we have in the arguments coming from the Liberal Party this evening, and the sophistry involved in the arguments coming from the honourable minister in her amendment earlier this afternoon. Those arguments are simple arguments to save face and they are arguments to weasel out of a legislative commitment to the right to education for kids with special learning needs.

I would like to quote the member for York Centre, who had the courage in 1976 to include in legislative terms the phrase "every child" in his Education Amendment Act. He added it to the act, not to the regulations, and he did not have faith in the regulators in 1976. He said nothing this evening to show us what has changed his faith in the regulators.

His bill read: "The said act"—that is the Education Act—"is amended by adding thereto the following section: 19a. Every child"—no weaseling, no adjective that modifies that—"of compulsory school age has a right to an education."

That was a clause he could have been proud of. The amendment his colleague has introduced is one he should be ashamed of.

As for the minister's argument that the wording is American, are the Americans such horrible people? Have they not done something occasionally right in legislative terms? Of course they have. They have, in fact, occasionally made some of the best ringing declarations of human freedom this world has heard, and they have embodied some of those principles of freedom in legislation in a very sound and effective way.

The minister argues that the word "children" is not appropriate. Why not? Her argument is specious that it might include children starting at day one to whatever the age of majority is, because the rest of the legislation in the Education Act deals with all those problems.

The minister's arguments might hold water in legislative terms if the government had brought in a special and separate bill that dealt with special education, but it did not. It saw fit to amend the Education Act, the general act we consolidated in 1974. Because it did that, as my colleague the member for Bellwoods indicated earlier, this act embodies the right of the child to be present physically in a classroom. That is the only legislative right we have in Ontario, that children shall have access to education. That is the only legislative guarantee. If we want to guarantee the right of exceptional children to education, that guarantee also has to be embodied in the legislation.

As I ponder this clause and hear the arguments coming from the other corners of the House, I say to myself, as I look at section 2 of the bill as it was reported by the social development committee, what is so horrible about this section? What is there in the section that harms anybody? Is there any harm in the section? Does it harm the children? Does it harm the school board administrators? Does it harm the general public?

I must answer "no" to all those questions. There is no harm in the section. It does make more work for some people or less for others. It makes a lot more work for the teachers in the classrooms, for the administrators of the school boards and for the ministry. But we do not devise legislation for the purpose of the bureaucracies. The bureaucracies are there to serve the needs of the children.

I say to myself, does section 2 do any good as it is in this legislation? I can understand the misgivings many people have. I can understand their uneasiness because there is a precedent set. Thank God we have a precedent once in a while in this Legislature in 1980 when we have such a don't-rock-the-boat kind of legislative program from the William G. Davis government. Thank God we have one or two precedents.

Does it do any good? Yes, it does good. It does an enormous amount of good because it guarantees the right to education for the people we are supposed to be serving as legislators when we deal with the Education Act. Presumably we are supposed to be serving the children of this province who require an education.

We have an opportunity before us this evening which, if the previous speeches are the intentions of the two parties the speakers represent, is a historic opportunity that will be lost. We in this caucus propose to fight with every ounce of our legislative strength so that battle is not lost. If it is lost this evening or during the debate on this legislation, we will fight again and again until we have won the right for kids with learning disabilities, whatever they may be, to have enshrined in legislation the right to a free and appropriate education in this province.

One of the problems, because we are setting a precedent with this clause, is that we are setting out on some uncharted waters. That is what the bureaucrats are afraid of; that is what the Liberal Party is afraid of; that is what the minister is afraid of. It is because we have yet to define all the problems we will face. To be frank, we will never meet all those problems perfectly but, if we do not enshrine in legislation the principle that they should be met, that we have an obligation to meet them and that we must do everything in our power which is humanly possible to meet them, that right will be lost.

It will be a historic moment, a moment of lack of faith, a moment of cowardice that all of us in this Legislature will be ashamed of in future years. It will be an act that the bureaucrats in the Ministry of Education should also be ashamed of because they should have acquiesced in the Legislature's will as it was expressed by a majority of people on the social development committee and the good that would be done.

The Liberal member for Kitchener-Wilmot says they have a historic memory of having to fight for rights. You bet your sweet life they have a historic memory of having to fight for rights. We must embody in this legislation the principle that parents with kids who need special education should not be made to feel they have to beg for it. They should not be made to feel they are asking for something exceptional for their exceptional children. It should be a matter of right.

It is a rights clause we are talking about here, a good clause that was proposed by the social development committee. It is a clause that may be difficult to implement, I grant you, but given the will and the financial resources from the minister, it could be implemented.

Mr. Chairman, what we have before us from the minister, with a few Band-Aids by the spokesman for the Liberal Party, is a backing away, a shameful retreat, and I will vote against those amendments.

I would hope the Legislature would embody section 2 as it was reported by the social development committee. If the members are so worried about the word "free" being embodied in legislation, I believe my colleague from Bellwoods has an amendment that would strike that word, leaving the integrity of the clause in Bill 82 intact. The member is attacking and weakening the integrity of the clause. The party that has traditionally fought against government by regulation in this Legislature has acquiesced to the Tory move.

I remember time and again in the last six or seven years when the member for Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid) attacked regulations in the Crown Timber Act saying they should be embodied in legislation, but when the crunch comes he is willing to give the minister and bureaucrats the right to determine the terms under which a person may appeal a local decision.

Finally, we get back to the point made earlier in the debate: If we are amending the Education Act, we are amending an act that presumably applies to all the people of the province, all the children of the province, and we do not want to balkanize that act. If the minister strikes this clause, she and the members of the Liberal Party know very well that the amendment before us will be applied unequally throughout the province. Children who are not defined originally by the committee of the board will not have free and total access to the educational rights embodied in the bill.

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Chairman, I want to address myself particularly to the amendments put forward by my colleague. The member for Port Arthur quoted from Hansard the bill from the member for York Centre. I wish he had quoted almost everything in that amendment to the Education Act, 1974. He is correct when he says it would have guaranteed every child of compulsory school age a right to an education. It also would have required every school board in Ontario to establish special educational programs, particularly for those children suffering from learning disabilities.

Many of the amendments to the Education Act, Bill 82, follow the principle outlined in my colleague's private member's bill. When I read that and look at what has been proposed here by my colleague, I suppose the amendment to it is appropriate in the third line. I see nothing wrong with that. It follows the principle outlined further on in the bill, adding the words, "without payment of fees."

The word "free" perhaps has a double meaning in the sense that "free" means anybody who wants to can have his children in a special educational program. The words "exceptional children" could mean gifted children or children with learning disabilities or other physical disabilities and could be interpreted later on as meaning free education.

Nothing in this world is free, let's not kid ourselves, and my Socialist friend knows that. Somebody eventually is going to pay for it. The intent of the amendment is the same as legislation for any other school children enrolled in the school system in Ontario; the money is raised through municipal taxation and grants from the Ministry of Education. That is the point I want to make.

I interpret that to mean somebody perhaps could come back later and say, "My child gets free education. I do not pay a cent for it." I will tell you, that is going to open the door for all parents of school children in the province to say, "Do I have to pay educational tax if it is free?" This bill says it is free. I suggest to you that my colleague's private member's bill definitely says it should be part of the educational program and the school boards will establish the programs and they will be funded through school taxation.

The best way we have found to educate our children in Ontario is through the portion of the municipal tax base for school purposes and the grant system. I see nothing wrong with the amendment put forward by my colleague. I think it is a reasonable amendment. It just says "without payment of fees," so there is a clear understanding of what the word "free" means in the bill.

If that is left in the bill, you can rest assured it will be a lawyers' field day. If that word is left in there, that is what will happen. Everybody will be going to the courts to argue that there is no cost for education for any children in the province. It would be great to go that way. There would be no municipal taxes for anybody, but I suggest I can see difficulties in this particular area.

For example, in the Niagara Peninsula, there is a program called NTEC, Niagara Training Employment Centre. The students there are considered dropouts from the elementary public school system. They are not accepted in the high school. The way they go about raising the money to carry out that program makes it one of the best programs for retarded, emotionally disturbed children in Ontario. It is a forerunner you might say. It is done through lotteries and fund-raising programs by different clubs and organizations. It is also funded through the Ministry of Community and Social Services, which I disagree with, since it should be funded under the Ministry of Education.

Hopefully, the intent of this bill is that it will be part of the educational system and will be paid for by all taxpayers without this group of people, dedicated as they are, going out and trying to raise funds through lotteries, gambling, or whatever you want to call it.

I suggest it is a good bill, and the amendments put forward by my colleague from Kitchener-Wilmot are reasonable. I hope the minister will accept them.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Chairman, I feel moved to comment on this con being pulled by the member for Erie. One assumes he has looked carefully at the amendment put forward by his colleague from York, Mississippi, or wherever, which handily deals with five or six items in this section of the bill and in the minister's amendment.

The member for Erie has chosen to focus on only one element as his reason for supporting it, never mind what other damage is done in his colleague's amendment. He has hooked on to the word "free" and has found some objection to it. Through the most incredible sophomoric arguments about having to support our educational system through lotteries, he has decided he is going to oppose the bill as it was sent back by the social development committee.

What we are really talking about here, and what I think is the most important element in the debate on this section, is the question of sheer power and who it is that is going to make decisions on behalf of the people in the province. Is it going to be the legislative assembly of the province which has been elected as a constituent assembly by all the people in the province, or is it going to be the honourable minister and her friends in the cabinet and her friends in the bureaucracy?

That is what is really at stake. Are we, as legislators, going to go forward and support the position brought forward by the social development committee where the Legislature makes the decisions, and the people elected by everyone in Ontario make the decisions, or are we going to hand over that power to the Minister of Education and her friends?

We have seen the lack of sensitivity that the minister and the Tories have dealt out to kids with special needs over the past number of years in this province. That's what we will be doing if we support the Conservative amendment and the Liberal subamendments.

I want to come back to the question of the words "free" and "without payment" raised by the member for Erie. If that is the honourable member's concern, I would hope the member for Erie would support an amendment that would simply alter those words. We are quite prepared to negotiate something reasonable on that basis. He doesn't have to buy all the items brought forward by his colleagues, if that is his concern. There can be an accommodation on this side. We don't have to turn all the power over to the minister so we can be satisfied with one word.

If the member looks at some of the other things that are in his colleague's amendments he will see some of the problems. The report, as brought back by the social development committee, refers to "all children in Ontario." The minister comes back with an amendment that redefines "all children" very narrowly as "exceptional pupils." Then the Liberal speaker, not to be outdone, redefines it further as "exceptional children" as opposed to "exceptional pupils." The entire Liberal amendment is in that tone and I don't see any reason why we should support it.

I've already mentioned the aspect of the costs but, if we go to the third element, the social development committee reported back the phrase "emphasizes special education programs and services that meet their unique needs." It was talking about the needs of the children. The minister comes back and perverts that into "special education programs and special education services" with absolutely nothing about them being tailored to meet the needs of the kids.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That's in section 1. Does it need to be repeated?

Mr. M. N. Davison: Oh, yes. This is the way the minister is going to interpret everything. I can see it now, as the minister and her fuzzy friends sit down to see what they can do by way of interpretation of this bill in the future. The Liberal Party amendment does nothing to rectify that. They don't relate it back to the unique needs of the children. There is no question of tailoring.

I think the real issue here—the money and the unique needs of the kids aside—is the question of power. Are we as legislators going to take the responsibility to establish the parameters and guidelines of this program or are we going to turn it over to the minister?

During the social development committee hearings the Liberals decided they would take the power to themselves as legislators and try to arrive at some kind of process and fashion it in the Legislative Assembly. They fulfilled their responsibility as legislators. Now they are shirking it and handing that power over to the minister. That is wrong and I don't think we can trust the government with that kind of power. We would just welcome abuse, abuse not only of legislation, but abuse of kids who have special needs in this province.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, the question was raised a little earlier by the honourable minister as to whether it would be more appropriate to have the reference to an appeal mechanism where it currently is under section 3 of the bill or under section 2. I would say to the minister at this point that in my judgement, and responding to the concern expressed by many parents, it would be more appropriately placed in section 2.

Then without any question we could clearly state that they would have an appeal mechanism available to them at every single stage along the way. Whether their perception is correct or not, there is genuine concern that the first stage—the decision by the placement and review committee of the board—may not, as the act is worded at present, give them an appeal mechanism at that level. That is not my perception.

However, I would repeat for the minister's benefit that we are genuinely trying to hear what people are saying and to structure this legislation in such a way that it would meet their needs.

8:50 p.m.

I understood the minister to say it made no difference to her whether it was here or in section 3. It would certainly make a difference to others that it be here rather than in section 3. It would more precisely say to them that even at the placement stage—and the minister would notice that I specifically indicated in my amendment the word "placement," which is the first step—they would have the right to appeal that step. Therefore I would prefer to have it in section 2, where the amendment now stands, rather than in section 3.

On that basis, Mr. Chairman, I would once again say that the terms "appropriate" and "without payment of fees" and with the appeal mechanism built into this section of the bill, we are clearly saying to the parents of those children who have had negative experiences in the past that we have heard what they are saying and that we are moving in this legislation to respond to their concerns. For that reason I would ask the minister to support these amendments.

I would go one step further. It was drawn to my attention that I had a slight oversight with respect to the third part of my amendment; that is "without payment of fees." It was suggested to me that "by parents or guardians resident in Ontario" is an appropriate addition to my amendment. I can well understand the need for that and I would certainly go along with that.

So if it is appropriate at this time I would add, under the third part of my amendment, "by parents or guardians resident in Ontario." Surely we are talking about the special education needs of Ontario children. I cannot personally conceive of a situation where it would be other than that, but I appreciate the necessary restriction that we would be placing here and I would support that.

The Deputy Chairman: I would ask you again to put that in writing and send it up to me.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, I also rise in sorrow over the question of section 2. I am sad because the Minister of Education has not understood what happened over the course of the committee hearings this summer, when what was effectively a bad bill was turned into a good bill because of the work of the member for Bellwoods and other members of the NDP caucus, when a bill that began as utterly faulty in implementing the principles the honourable minister put forward was changed to put into legislation the principle that the minister had said earlier in the year the government intended to support.

In reality we know the minister was not giving a correct story at the very beginning, and that was demonstrated with this legislation as it came forward. The right to special education for kids in the province was not put into the bill. It was so hemmed around with regulations and the power to make decisions by bureaucrats and so on that the right was not there.

What has happened now, though, is that not only has a Conservative minister decided to try to go back to where she began in terms of watering down the principles of the bill, as contained in section 2, but she is now being joined by the Liberal Party which at one point seemed to be prepared to stand with the principle—which they had said was the principle they subscribed to for many years.

I have here not just one bill but three bills that were presented by the member for York Centre: in 1976, Bill 192; in 1977, Bill 23, and in 1978, Bill 66. That said quite explicitly that the bill he proposed guaranteed to every child of compulsory school age a right to an education, with specific reference to special education. There were no ifs, ands or buts. There were none of the endless qualifications that are being proposed now by the member for Kitchener-Wilmot, the education critic for the Liberal Party.

I took the trouble to go back to the debate we had in June of this year to see exactly what the Liberal spokesperson had to say at that time. There were no qualifications then either. The member for Kitchener-Wilmot said he was pleased with the two basic principles the government said it subscribed to in the legislation. The principles were that every child in the province now has the automatic right to be admitted to a school, and has the automatic right to expect a program meeting his or her special needs to be prepared for him or her—no ifs, ands or buts, no qualifying clauses such as “in accordance with the act and the regulations” which the minister has reinjected into the bill, and the member for Kitchener-Wilmot, on behalf of the Liberal Party, is now prepared to accept. This is where the somersault has taken place.

The government says, “We will make special education a right so long as it is in accordance with the act and the regulations, and we will define what that is going to be.” The minister says, “Before we get the bill to proclamation, we will let you know what the regulations are going to be.” But certainly she is not going to give to this Legislature the power to determine those regulations. No, she will leave it to her bureaucrats, to her officials, to determine what in their wisdom is going to be correct for the special education needs of kids of the province, whether or not that effectively implements the principles to which this party certainly subscribes.

Back in June the member for Kitchener-Wilmot said the principles of the bill of the member for York Centre were exactly that: Every child has the automatic right to expect that a program meeting his or her special needs will be prepared for him or her. But that is not what is entailed in the Liberal amendment. They backed away from that.

The member for Kitchener-Wilmot said he rejected the principle of exclusion. He said he did not believe there should be an exclusion principle anywhere in the legislation. But as I read it, that is effectively what he is endorsing with the amendment here right now. I want to point out the difference between the positive way we have put the rights of children, in the amendment accepted by the social development committee, and accepted by the Liberal Party at that time through their representatives on the committee downstairs, and what they are rejecting right now.

We say the minister shall ensure that all children, not just some children, should have available to them a free and appropriate public education. We say that for exceptional children education shall emphasize special programs and services that meet their unique needs. We say the rights of exceptional children and their parents and guardians shall be protected, and the minister shall ensure they are protected. The member for Kitchener-Wilmot says it is not a matter of protecting the rights of exceptional children and their parents, it is a matter of giving them an appeal process, whether or not that appeal process is actually going to do the job.

We say positively, “Protect those rights.” They say negatively, “Well, you may have to hammer on the door because you may be excluded, but you are going to have an appeal process that may or may not be effective.” The rights to education that the education critic for the Liberal Party said his party endorsed look pretty sorry by the time the Liberals have diluted them in the amendment we have before us.

Mr. Nixon: How are you going to vote? Why don't you quit playing cheap politics?

Mr. Cassidy: I am not playing cheap politics. The Liberal Party is playing cheap politics in the province, backing away from the needs of children who should have the right to special education with no ifs, ands, or buts and no qualifications.

Interjections.

The Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The member for Ottawa Centre has the floor.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, I quote the member for Kitchener-Wilmot who said on June 17, "some word or description that says it is not enough just to have special education; it must be of a particular quality." He said, "Don't just put the words 'special education' in the bill and hope people will understand what that is." Now they reject what we have suggested here, which attempts to respond to the need to define special education and to indicate that the special education program and services provided in the province should be such that they meet the unique needs of kids. God knows there are unique kids and there are unique needs in the province.

A week ago I had a phone call from a parent in North York who has been fighting bitterly with the North York Board of Education to get education for his seven-year-old child. The child has now been put into a private school with funding from the ministry, but only after a year or a year and a half of desperately anxious fretting by this parent. The parent was educated and had the ability and the resources to fight the system, and in this case perhaps to win. This child is beginning to benefit.

But what the North York Board of Education said was, "We know what is appropriate. We are going to put your child back in the class he was in last year" and that is the appropriateness of what was going to be provided to him. They knew from the experience of the child, they knew from the way the child was acting up, they knew from the way the child was depressed with the education he was getting, but that was not appropriate. Yet that would still be allowed to be continued under what the minister is suggesting, and what the Liberal Party is suggesting here as well.

I look at the kind of loopholes that were left in the Liberal position as early as last June, and God knows, they are driving through them right now. The member for Kitchener-Wilmot said we must not raise expectations too high. He said it may be difficult to define in certain cases. He was a bit concerned about the question of funding. He also left all sorts of qualifications around what ought to be a basic and unequivocal principle.

This section comes as close to dealing with the whole principle of Bill 82 as any other part of the entire bill. That is why it is so distressing to see the Liberal Party indicating they are now siding with the minister—just using a different set of words—in her efforts to sabotage a bill which in its present form has widespread support from enormous numbers of anguished parents across the province who simply want to ensure that their kids will be able to get the education from which they are going to benefit.

Mr. J. Reed: Children.

Mr. Cassidy: Call them children or call them kids; I call them kids because I love them, I call them children because they are important. They can use whichever term they want to use. I do not care whether the Liberal Party calls them kids or children. I call the Liberal Party members to stand to the principles they stood for in June and that they stood for in the committee over the course of the summer, and to reject the amendment of the member for Kitchener-Wilmot and to support the bill in its present form and to reject the amendment proposed by the Minister of Education.

The Deputy Chairman: Just before we call on the member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor), I now have the amendment proposed by the member for Kitchener-Wilmot.

Mr. Sweeney moves that section 2 be amended by deleting "pupils" in the first line and replacing it with "children"; by adding "appropriate" in the third line after "regulation"; by adding "without payment of fees by parents or guardians resident in Ontario" in the fourth line after "services"; by further adding, "and providing for the parents or guardians to appeal the appropriateness of the special education placement." I assume you have got consent to that.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, as one of the few members of the House tonight who is totally above the fray, living in some sort of sublimity—objective, unprejudiced with respect to the matter—I find what is going on here ludicrous. As a total outsider to this legislation, having not participated in the obfuscatory processes of the committee or in the initiation of the legislation, but sitting here and listening to the proposals being made, I have never seen quite the likes of it.

It is incredible that the honourable minister, who is usually a fairly open-minded and good-hearted soul—I am trying to make an appeal to her and would go to any lengths to seduce a minister of the crown—and who pretends on occasion to have modicum of intelligence, has been persuaded in the course of committee hearings by the wisdom, efficacy and equity of a proposal made by an honourable member of this House as to what she is really after, and what the principle of this legislation really is.

She acceded to it, the whole committee bowed to it, but it has been changed in the process. It is an articulation of a central motif. Now she is betraying us, not just by watering it down but washing it out. Standing back from the issue, I have never quite seen it on this scale. Shame on the minister for participating in this particular piece of scuttling.

The member for Kitchener-Waterloo is too much of a scholastic. He parses words too nicely, playing with the word "free." One would concede his wretched "free" in this particular context. He knows as well as I do that the courts construe things contextually. They would not wipe out all municipal taxation. That is just a simulacrum of the desperation he faces in order to bring a minatory position into effect in this legislation. He sells his own cause down the river in the process.

The members still have time to change their minds and I will leave it with them.

Mr. Bounsall: I should have my green turtleneck and my cross of nails on tonight. The members may understand.

Mr. Chairman, this section is what the entire bill is all about. The rest of the bill just fills in the details as to how we are going to implement what the social development committee put in this section. It is simply the very basic right of parents of exceptional children to have those special education needs met by the boards of education in an appropriate way. This bill is about the right of parents to receive that appropriate education on behalf of their children. The rest of the bill just fills in the details of how to do it.

This is the principle and the guts of this legislation and it is incredible that the honourable minister has decided to withdraw it. This is what it is all about. I cannot understand why the minister fears to give the parents of exceptional children or pupils—it does not matter much—an absolute statutory right to have the unique, special educational needs of their exceptional children met by special public education appropriate for them. I cannot think of any other reason why she is doing it.

What does the minister fear? If she cares to reply to that, I will defer to her at the moment.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That is exactly what the whole act is all about.

Mr. Bounsall: That is what the whole act is all about. If one turns to a corner of the act, one finds principle laid out somewhere. With this section deleted as the minister proposes, there is no phrase one can turn to, to see what it is really all about, while the rest of the bill goes on to implement the details of it.

This section speaks to the meaning of the act as amended by the social development committee. Where does the minister stand in this? What is it that causes her to withdraw this section?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am not withdrawing anything.

Mr. Bounsall: The minister is putting forth an amendment that withdraws the phrase that indicates what the bill is all about, a right in legislation for the special educational needs unique to the particular child or pupil to be met in the most appropriate way. She has taken out the words in the legislation that are really meaningful and left in are the details. She has cut down the forest and all she has left is a bunch of stacked up trees. That is what she is doing when she changes this amendment and I don't understand why.

All the other items that are embodied in these discussions of the amendments are trivial in comparison with what we have done here with this rights clause, and the minister, now supported by the Liberals, wishes to get rid of it. The provision for an appeal procedure is covered in section 5. In terms of the way legislation is written, it need only be covered in one place, I agree. Cover it in section 5 of the bill or cover it here; it does not need to be covered twice. If the minister wishes to cover it twice, then let her cover it twice. It is trivial in comparison with the removal of the rights clause.

Children or pupils, one can argue it both ways. I am sure in this party we really don't care very strongly whether it is children or pupils. My colleague from Thunder Bay put it in the right perspective: If this was a separate bill all on its own and not part of the Education Act, probably "pupil" would be the appropriate word; but it is part of the Education Act, and "children" is used in many places throughout the act. In terms of the act into which it is inserted, whether it is "pupils" or whether it is "children" really does not matter. It is six of one and half a dozen of the other and it is really a case of personal choice.

If the legislative counsel has an argument as to whether one is somewhat better than another, I would listen with interest and take his advice, but I am sure, again, it is a trivial point compared to the principle involved in this part of the bill which the minister is taking out.

With respect to the amendment which the social development committee inserted as the result of the very hard work of the member for Bellwoods to replace in the amendment the word "free" by "without payment of fees," it is probably a better definition. Certainly my colleague from Bellwoods would not be at all upset and would accept an amendment which says, "Children in Ontario have available to them without payment of fees an appropriate public education," et cetera. I am sure that would be perfectly all right because that is a bit more explicit.

I agree with the member for York Centre, who just fell out of the House, on that point that it is probably a lot more appropriate, but these are all trivial matters in terms of what the minister has presented and what she has done. She has taken out of this bill a clear statutory right, now agreed to by the Liberals.

The Liberals in their attitudes are often very clear followers of John Stuart Mill and often their thinking does not go beyond the eighteenth century, but I am sure Mill is flip-flopping in his grave tonight in face of what his followers are doing in this section.

In September 1980 they were for this absolute rights phrase and in November 1980 they are not. That is what the principle is all about. If one wants to write a section in a bill, this is where one puts it—in the bill. One does not put it in the regulations. That is ridiculous and I am sure the minister is not planning to say anything about rights. The word will not appear in the regulations. The minister is not planning to take it out of the bill to put it in the regulations. That would be ridiculous and I am sure she is not going to do it. You just want it out of the bill.

Quite seriously, why? What concern is it of yours? I really cannot see the teachers' groups in Ontario coming to you and saying, "We fear the right of our children and their parents to come to us as a right and to talk about the special educational needs of the children." I am sure they have not presented that to you. If they have I would be surprised because they so often have been forced into situations in the last four, five, six or seven years of having to stand up for some basic rights of their own. They understand what rights mean. I cannot see any teacher group in the province putting pressure on the minister, or writing long briefs to her or spending long periods of time in her office saying: "We have to get rid of this rights section in the bill. We are afraid of our pupils."

I cannot see that happening. I can see that occurring to some of the boards in Ontario. They would say, "My God, what will happen to us and our poor trustees if all of a sudden parents and children in this province have some right to come to us and demand, because they have the right given to them in legislation, some special education that meets their unique needs?" I can see some of them doing that.

This has been around for two months now. Upon reflection, I cannot see them looking at this, in a sane, rational way at this point of the game, thinking this is what they must do. That might have been the first reaction on the part of some administrators but, in looking at that reaction which they might have had in the first instance, I cannot see them holding that opinion for two months. I cannot see them fearing the parents and the pupils who have these special educational requirements in the province. If they do, I hope I do not live in the jurisdiction of one of those boards, because if a few of them still continue to hold that, they are not serious about meeting the intent of the bill.

Madam Minister, I would really like to know who got to you on this and said to you, in essence, "We must have that statutory right removed." Is it the people in your main administration office? I asked in estimates, if you recall, what is it you do up there? Is this one of the things you do? Do you get all fearful from time to time about putting a rights clause in the legislation?

I can think of much more appropriate things to get paranoid about. I would worry up there that some of the school boards were not going to take up the enthusiasm the minister has shown from time to time about this legislation and were not going to meet the exceptional needs of children. I can see them getting paranoid when you talk to management board over the years and are not able to get the funds to meet the exceptional needs that show up in the province. But I cannot really see them getting paranoid about granting a statutory right that says, "Look, you simply have the right as children and parents of children to have your unique educational needs met appropriately if you are exceptional children." This is what this is all about. Everything else in the bill pales in comparison to this.

Why have you done this, Madam Minister?

I can understand why the Liberals have done this. They have been nowhere on the amendments to this bill in committee, and for crass political purposes they are trying to carve out some area for themselves in this bill. I can see them doing that. I can see them having been out-scored, out-argued, out-debated and, in terms of placing the amendments, out-legislated. I can see them desperately trying to find a place for themselves in this whole situation by taking the minister's amendment and adding to it everything of a trivial nature they can possibly think of.

Meanwhile they are carefully avoiding the main principle of this whole section; that is, embodying a clear right for pupils and their parents in Ontario. I can see them doing that because that is the way they have always operated. When it comes right down to it, they are never honest about anything. But that is one thing one usually cannot accuse the Conservative government of. One may disagree with the Conservatives in Ontario—

Mr. Chairman: Order. I was listening very carefully to the member, and I believe he accused other members of this House of not being honest.

Mr. Bounsall: I don't recall exactly what I said, Mr. Chairman, sometimes one gets carried away with—

Mr. Chairman: Will the honourable member withdraw that?

Mr. Bounsall: If I accused anybody in this House of anything derogatory, I will certainly withdraw it.

Mr. Chairman: I understand you withdrew it.

Mr. Bounsall: Whatever it was I said, I withdraw.

Mr. J. Reed: Everything to this point.

Mr. Bounsall: Whatever I said that displeased the Chairman, I withdraw.

In terms of the Conservative Party being a party of principle, I have never been in much doubt of that. I may disagree with the principle, and rather heatedly at times, but I know they have taken the position from a principled point. My real question to the minister at this point is what has happened to their principles on this one?

What is it that the Conservative Party, through this minister, finds so repugnant about granting what should be a very obvious right? I really can't understand why they would give way on this one or what it is the minister or the ministry fears. I really don't think the minister—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Nobody is afraid.

Mr. Bounsall: Explain it, please. Let the minister explain why she has cut the real guts out of this bill in terms of the principle. This is where we state it, and this is where they do not want it. They do not want it in the bill at all.

I would be pleased if the minister could tell me precisely why she, by going to all the trouble of making this amendment, does not want to have in the amendment to the Education Act a clause which very simply and very clearly gives the right to parents of pupils or children who have a special educational need to have that need met appropriately. What is wrong with that? Why is it that she cannot tolerate that? Why is it they have gone to such great lengths to ensure that the Liberals will support them on this? That's something I would really like to know.

Mr. Grande: Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to take a long time. I do not intend to repeat a lot of what my colleagues on this side of the House have already stated. I will not say they have done a flip-flop. I will say they have done a back flip, a 180-degree turn.

I would like to say to the Liberal critic for education, with whom I have on occasion in the past two to three weeks shared the same platform, that if he really, truly believes this amendment is going to make any difference to this bill—that it is going to give those parents who have written him letters in the last two or three weeks asking him to water down this section of the bill—if he feels this is not a watering down of that section of the bill, then I must say to him, with due respect, with all his background in education, he had better go back to school.

I want to quote what the Liberal education critic said in the social development committee, "I cannot find anything serious to object to in this amendment." We are talking about the rights amendment. At the end of his very short speech he said, "So unless the minister or one of her officials can indicate what would be wrong with this, I would be inclined to support it." Obviously, at that particular time, the minister and her officials in the social development committee did not produce the evidence necessary for the Liberal critic to say, "I should not be supporting this amendment and this bill."

Between September 30 and tonight, the government somehow has produced that evidence for the Liberal member. I am sorry to say that tonight the Liberals are participating with the Conservatives in this province to deny rights to children who need special education, programs and services—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That is balderdash.

Mr. Stong: You know that is wrong. You know it.

Mr. Grande: Thousands of parents in this province have gone to every extreme possible in the past 10 or 15 years to find an adequate program for their kids, including the private sector, because the minister has pushed them to the private sector in this particular area in order to find an adequate program for their kids. The minister has pushed these parents to go to the social assistance board to try to get some money in order to procure an education for their kids—an education which, in 1980, we should not be debating is a right.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: What are you talking about? The logic escapes me. Why should they be pushed to the private sector about this?

Mr. Grande: The reason the logic escapes the minister is exactly the reason why she is watering down this amendment.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am not watering it down.

Mr. Grande: The minister has never understood that logic. She has never understood the plight of parents who have not been able to get a special education program in their province.

Mr. Chairman: Order? Would the member for Oakwood speak to the amendment?

Mr. Grande: That is exactly what I am doing.

Let me say to you, Mr. Chairman, when the initial bill was presented in this Legislature the Ontario Association for Children with Learning Disabilities issued a statement saying "Special act amendment a tiger with no teeth." We worked in good faith on the social development committee. At least on this side of the House we worked in good faith with the Liberals and Conservatives in that committee to try to bring about the best possible bill that we, as legislators, could. I think we succeeded in doing that.

Tonight the minister, with the help of the Liberals, is taking the teeth out of that bill once again. My friend from Windsor wanted an explanation from the minister. Let me assume an explanation, and that is that Tories in Ontario have never been interested in giving rights to people. People have always had to scream and yell. When the time comes that it is politically attractive for that to be granted, it is granted.

9:30 p.m.

Some members have said they are saddened by what has happened here tonight. Frankly, Mr. Chairman, I am not only sad, I am angry. I am angry with the flip-flop of those people on that side of the House. I am angry with the people on the opposite side of the House, because they are the people who continuously deny rights to children with learning disabilities. Perhaps there is no way to salvage this amendment, but let me inform the Liberals about that amendment they put giving the government the opportunity or the ability to set up some kind of appeal procedure, there is already an appeal procedure when we get to section 9. However, that appeal procedure will deal only with—

Mr. Chairman: Order. Would the honourable member return to the amendment? The appeal comes later in the bill.

Mr. Grande: Mr. Chairman, I thought I was speaking to the subamendment the Liberals have put on the floor. That talks about an appeal. That is what I was referring to.

In essence, what that accomplishes is virtually nothing because the minister herself has said that in the last year only two children in the province have been excluded from attending a school. That is the only right the children have now in Ontario, the right to attend a school, a right to be physically present in the school, a right to a desk in school. There is no right to quality education in our schools. There is no right to programs that meet the unique needs of those kids. If you do not understand that, and if you do not understand that this bill does not give those children the appropriate education which they require and must have, the expenses somewhere down the road to the public purse are going to be much greater if we do not deal with those problems when the children are in the school system. We are going to pay a lot more if you want to think in terms of dollars, in terms of money, than you would be paying by making sure the children get an appropriate education.

Mr. Chairman, I think I have done enough. I think I understand where the Conservative Party stands on this issue. I don't understand where the Liberals are. In the five years I have been here, I have never been able to understand where the Liberals are

Mr. Roy: —as one of my colleagues says, sanctimony from the members to my left. I have read the original proposal in the bill as amended by the social development committee, I have read the amendment as proposed by the minister, I have also read closely the subamendments by my colleague, the member for Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney), and I think it is important that things be put into some sort of perspective.

I am amazed to listen to speaker after speaker from the NDP talk about two of my colleagues, the member for Kitchener-Wilmot and the member for York Centre (Mr. Stong), people who have had an interest in this matter, whose motives are beyond question, whose sincerity and knowledge of the subject matter is something I would rely on by far. I would put far more emphasis on their judgement than on that of some of my colleagues to the left, but these members are portrayed by some of our colleagues to the left—one of them went so far as to suggest a question of honesty—as somehow having ulterior motives to take away the very principle of the bill which is to give special education to exceptional pupils.

This kind of rubbish comes from people whose background is teaching. I look at the member for Port Arthur (Mr. Foulds) who made a long-winded, passionate speech about how my colleagues had betrayed by this amendment, or how the Minister of Education had betrayed by her amendment, the very principle in this bill. I looked back and I tried to think—I read it again and tried to see—what it is about this process that has so stirred this enthusiasm on the part of the NDP and tends to misconstrue the whole purpose of the proposition, the amendments put forward by other members in this House.

This is from people who were school-teachers. I have to wonder what motivates these people. Even the leader of the NDP got up at one point and again mentioned the fact that my colleague the member for Kitchener-Wilmot talked about how he was in favour of the principle of the bill. Of course we are when we are talking about general principles. But when we are drafting legislation sometimes wording has to be changed. It has been my experience in this House, if I am going to rely on legislative interpretation, if I am going to rely on someone drafting legislation, I have known from the past not to rely on my colleagues to my left. This is from long-standing experience—

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Roy: The member for Ottawa Centre, Mr. Chairman—

The Deputy Chairman: He says he has a point of order. I will listen to it.

Mr. Roy: I am convinced you will rule against him. I will bet you on that.

The Deputy Chairman: I would like to hear it.

Mr. Cassidy: I just hate to see the member for Ottawa East castigating his own members on the committee who were prepared to accept the NDP's amendment a few months ago. Now he is repudiating them. While I am on my feet, I will just say I wish the electors in Carleton would see that a principle is not a principle of the Liberal Party when it comes to this Legislature.

The Deputy Chairman: The member for Ottawa East won his bet.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Chairman, do I have to emphasize my point any longer? Has he not just made it? He is confused, poor man. He has been here since 1971 and he does not even know the rules of this House. But he is going to tell us what type of legislation is going to protect exceptional children in this province.

We have heard rubbish from one member and the other. We started with the member for Port Arthur, then the member for Ottawa Centre. As I have said many times, the minute the member for Ottawa Centre takes a particular position there is an onus on this side to go the opposite way, and nine out of 10 times we are right on.

The process went on. My colleague the member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor) is a nice fellow, but he has been away from the law books and the courts far too long.

9:40 p.m.

Then we move on to dear Mr. Bounsell. He is the one who is going to straighten us out on the needs of exceptional pupils or children here in Ontario. We are going to get it from him. I sat for months with that man on the committee dealing with family law. I think you were on that committee yourself, Mr. Chairman. My God, think of the mess we would have here today had we accepted his amendments.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman: A few moments ago, the previous chairman of this committee indicated to one of the members of this Legislature that he should withdraw remarks directed towards other members. I suggest that the present speaker for the Liberal Party, such as he is, is imputing motives to my colleagues in the New Democratic Party. Surely this is against the rules of the House? It is particularly inappropriate for that member, who has said he prides himself on knowing the rules, to be abusing and contravening those rules.

The Deputy Chairman: The Chairman has been listening. It has been a little difficult for the Chairman to listen to everything tonight, but I have been listening and nothing that was said offended me to the extent where I thought it should be withdrawn.

Mr. Bounsall: On a point of privilege, Mr. Chairman: I almost brought in the matrimonial property law bill as an example in this debate. We did have a good clause in principle in that bill that we should have in this bill. I am very proud of anything I ever said and any stand I ever took on that matrimonial property law bill. If we did not have the fuzzy thinking of the member of the Liberal Party who last spoke, we would have had a decent bill in Ontario.

The Deputy Chairman: I wonder if we may now return to section 2 of Bill 82.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Chairman, do you think I am hitting close to the bone when these characters start getting up and interrupting on points of order about imputing motives? What motives could I impute? The only motives of you people I impute are ignorance and political posturing. Those are the motives I impute.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman: That remark should be withdrawn.

Mr. Roy: My God, Mr. Chairman, we would be apologizing all the time if we had to withdraw accusations of ignorance.

The Deputy Chairman: The word ignorance does offend me. However, I would ask you to keep to Bill 82, section 2. That is what we are on. Let us forget about the other members of the House, because I think a lot of them have forgotten us.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Chairman, if I may complete my remarks, we have the tirade and the posturing going on from one member to the next. I look at the amendment proposed by my colleague the member for Kitchener-Wilmot. What is the terrible man doing that is so undermining the very principle of the amendment proposed by the Minister of Education; that is undermining the whole principle of this act? In one line he is changing the word "pupil" to "children." It is terrible that he should be doing that. It is extremely offensive that he should be doing that. It is so underhanded that he should be proceeding so directly to undermine the very principle of this bill.

In the next step, he is adding the word "appropriate." The member for Bellwoods said: "That is terrible, adding the word appropriate. It should be defined." We are going to be defining every word in this act if we start defining "appropriate." Why do we not define the words "reasonable" or "minister"? We should define everything in the act. I know I have limited knowledge of the English language but are we going to start defining words such as "appropriate"?

They are annoyed because he changes the word "free" to "without payment of fees." Is that the change that is made? That is a terrible amendment as well. It is extremely offensive and, again, the man has betrayed the principles he stated on second reading of this legislation.

Finally, he sets up an appeal mechanism in this section and that is, I suppose, the worst and most underhanded move of all.

Mr. Nixon: The NDP is going to vote against that

Mr. Roy: Exactly. Finally, that is the key, that is what the NDP has been so annoyed about. It is because my colleagues in the Liberal Party have taken the initiative, something the NDP forgot about. Maybe at some point when talking about special education for exceptional pupils, people may have differing views as to what is appropriate, so they set up an appeal mechanism. I would have thought the NDP would think about something like that. That is why they are so—

Mr. McClellan: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman—

The Deputy Chairman: I will listen to this point of order.

Mr. McClellan: The point of order is brief. It is obvious the member has never read the bill. If he had, he would see in section 7 the appeal procedure which was introduced in committee and supported by his own colleagues. I rise simply to correct the invincible ignorance of the member.

The Deputy Chairman: I realize the word "appropriate" is defined in section 7, but that is not a point of order.

Mr. Roy: I am talking about the appeal process as proposed by my colleague. It has the NDP so annoyed one can come to only one conclusion: When the NDP cannot take the initiative about a bright idea, when it cannot take credit for something, it starts doing what is called political posturing. I heard the leader of the NDP say, "I love children," as though he is the only one in the province who loves children or cares about them. My God, that has to be your motto in the next election, "We are the only ones who love children."

What rubbish we have heard this evening. When it comes to sincerity and caring about children with special problems and about education, I would just as soon rely on my colleague from Kitchener-Wilmot.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Chairman, I was moved to participate in the debate on this subamendment by the member for Erie (Mr. Haggerty) who started talking about the relationship between property taxes and free education in this province. I wonder where the Liberal Party stands on that.

Since then, I have heard quite a number of contributions that have talked about the relative merits of positions taken by both sides. None of those contributions have been as telling as the interjections from Liberal Party members which have indicated to me this subamendment is a compromise. When it comes to providing the best possible education for all the children of this province, I will not accept any compromise. I want to say to the member for Kitchener-Wilmot that I understand—

Mr. Van Horne: Let's talk about what's best for the kids.

Mr. Isaacs: Get serious about education, I ask you. I want to say to the member for Kitchener-Wilmot who moved this subamendment that, if I understand correctly, he indicated to a member from the Hamilton-Wentworth chapter of the Ontario Association for Children with Learning Disabilities just a few days ago by telephone—and that person may be in the gallery this evening—that he would not accept any amendment which weakened this bill in any way and if such an amendment came forward and he was forced to vote on that amendment he would resign. I call the member for Kitchener-Wilmot to make good on that promise and to resign as a result of his plan to weaken this bill here tonight.

Mr. Chairman, I think we should look at the subamendment before us with regard to some of the comments made by some of the lawyers and some of the barrack-room lawyers who have spoken on this tonight. Right out, the subamendment suggests we change "exceptional pupil" to "exceptional children."

We have talked about the definition of terms within the act. We have talked about how, if we do not define things properly, everybody might get sued in court. I suggest that "exceptional pupil" is at least defined in the act where "exceptional children" is not defined in the act.

We have talked about adding the word "appropriate" to the term "special education." Yet we have not properly defined, in this section, how "appropriate" is to be determined. We talked in vague terms about an appeal without specifying here how that appeal process is to work.

We have talked about "without payment of fees" as being better than "free." My colleague the member for Bellwoods has indicated we are prepared to talk about that word "free" if, indeed, there is good legal advice that it causes a problem. But, Mr. Chairman, the citizens of this province believe they have a right to free education for the children of this province. I suggest that today that belief is incorrect. But if this bill is passed without the amendment the minister has moved, and without the Liberal subamendment, for the first time the children of this province will be guaranteed a free education regardless of their situation.

It is about time we stop putting children into categories; time we stop saying, "These children need special education, these children do not," and dealing with things in that kind of partitioned way. It is about time we had in our Education Act a statement which says the minister shall ensure all children in Ontario have available to them a free and appropriate public education. Anything less than that commitment from this Legislature is totally and utterly unacceptable.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, if I may, I should like to comment briefly. For the past hour and a half our ears have been assailed by the greatest collection of hyperbolic, hyperaemic, hypercholeriac hypocrisy from that side of the House that I have ever heard in my life related to this section.

No rights are being defiled. No rights are being removed. This section of the act specifically defines the responsibility of the Ministry of Education, the boards of education and the educational system to provide programs for all exceptional children in this province. There is no question about it. There is no question that is the purpose of this bill, and there is no question that is the intent of the amendments that have been introduced.

Mr. Foulds: Why are you watering down the sections?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: There is no watering down. The vision of that party is indeed myopic. It really requires some correction at this point. It is inappropriate for members of that party to make the kinds of remarks that have been made—

Mr. Van Horne: Which party?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The New Democratic Party, about other members in this House.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of grammar—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The members of the New Democratic Party—

The Deputy Chairman: Order. Will the member for Port Arthur please be seated? There is no such thing as a point of grammar.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I would be delighted to tell members that my children call the party the party of the knee-deepers. I will leave them to decide what they are knee-deep in.

There is no doubt in my mind that the amendments which have been provided will provide the framework for the responsibility—because this is responsibility legislation—to be delivered on behalf of all the exceptional children in this province. I believe the sub-amendments which have been provided are indeed appropriate as well. Therefore, we are in support of those subamendments.

The committee divided on Mr. Sweeney's amendment to the amendment to section 2, which was agreed to on the following vote:
Ayes 62; nays 29.

The committee divided on Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment, as amended, which was agreed to on the following vote:

Ayes 62, nays 29.

Mr. Warner: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, when the division bells ring they should be ringing in all the members' offices. In the north wing on the fourth floor, the division bells were not ringing. I would request the chair direct that repairs be made so the division bells can be heard in all the north wing.

Mr. Chairman: I will bring that to the attention of the Speaker.

The committee divided on whether section 2, as amended, should stand as part of the bill, which was agreed to on the following vote:

Ayes 62, nays 29.

On motion by Hon. Mr. Wells, the committee of the whole House reported progress.

SPEAKER'S WARRANTS

Mr. Speaker: I would like to advise the House that in accordance with the authority given me by an order of the House passed on October 28, 1980, I have today issued warrants for certain documents requested by the select committee on plant shutdowns and employee adjustment.

The House adjourned at 10:30 p.m.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

Hon. Mr. McCague: Mr. Speaker, I have a message from the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor signed by his own hand.

Mr. Speaker: John B. Aird, the Lieutenant Governor, transmits supplementary estimates of certain additional sums required for the services of the province for the year ending March 31, 1981, and recommends them to the Legislative Assembly, Toronto, November 20, 1980.

REPORT IN TORONTO SUN

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of personal privilege involving the defamation of my character.

I have been serving in public life for 17 years. I have come to appreciate and understand the political process. I have won political battles; I have lost political battles. I have worked in my community to serve my constituents to the best of my ability. I have had debates with my colleagues in municipal council and in this Legislature. I have had open and fair discussions, disagreements and agreements with constituents at public meetings and in other places.

I have derived a great deal of satisfaction out of being able to serve in this capacity, notwithstanding that, being in public office, one sometimes has to expect to take slings and arrows and abuses. One learns to live with those and accepts them, save with one exception.

The one exception of fundamental importance to me is that at no time during my public life would I permit a person or a group of individuals to malign me at any time or to endeavour through false statements or actions to lower the esteem in which I am held in my community by my peers, by my family and by my constituents. While I was a member of the municipal council of North York I had the unfortunate experience of being maliciously libelled by the Toronto Globe and Mail. It gave me cause to initiate a libel and slander action, the result of which was that a public apology was made in that newspaper to myself and to my family.

On Tuesday of this week I learned that on Thursday, November 13, I was libelled in this Legislature. You may recall that on that occasion I had a resolution before this Legislature dealing with the request to limit and to better control the proliferation and indiscriminate location of adult entertainment parlours throughout the province. At that time I indicated that while this province had taken great initiatives through this government in endeavouring to bring about these controls, more could and should be done.

During the course of that debate, I learned subsequently on Tuesday of this week, one of two members of this Legislature, with intent, with calculated purpose and with malice aforethought, sent a note, a written statement to a member of the press. It was the member for Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid) or the member for Wentworth North (Mr. Cunningham) who sent a note to a reporter for the Toronto Sun, Mr. David Oved, maliciously alleging I had danced with a striptease artist in a strip joint in a cocktail lounge in Washington, DC, in 1976.

That libel was designed specifically to impugn my integrity. It was designed to induce that newspaper to publish a libel against me. That libel was followed this week by a slander perpetrated by both of those gentlemen through slurs and innuendoes in a statement they made to the same reporter for that newspaper.

2:10 p.m.

I have two further things to say, but first I am going to demand here and now a full apology from the member for Rainy River and the member for Wentworth North. I will accept nothing less. If that is not forthcoming, I have two further matters to discuss.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, I presume it is on a point of privilege the member for Oriole has risen. It is one of the few times in my life that I have seen somebody die of self-inflicted wounds.

The honourable member has accused me and another member of libel. He started out his statement by saying it was either/or and wound up his statement by demanding an apology from both of us. I would think that as a lawyer and somebody who is intimately involved in this particular process, he might be a little more careful about his legalities and the way he approaches the matter.

I stand before this House to deny categorically that I sent any note to any reporter in the press gallery in relation to the incident the member has put forward to the House. I did not seek out any reporter and speak to him. That has never been my political style. We will beat the members over there by better policies, better government and better candidates and all the regular operations of the democratic process.

I feel now that my integrity has been impugned by the member, who has accused me and another member, and that member can speak for himself, but my integrity has been impugned in the very way that the member says his was impugned. I think he should have been a little more aware of the facts and done a little more research before he made that statement, which has slandered and libelled me in this House and before the people of Ontario.

To my mind, I read the article with some amusement, if nothing else. I think it is being blown out of all proportion. But I would repeat that I sent no message or letter, nor initiated any telephone conversation or any kind of suggestion with any member of the press in regard to this incident.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: What did you say to the reporter?

Mr. T. P. Reid: I said, and I believe I was quoted in that article, that I was not prepared to say anything about the matter because "none of us is squeaky clean." That is the quote I made to that particular reporter after he approached me. I did not approach him; I did not send any letter. I understand the member for Oriole was subsequently approached and spoke to that particular reporter.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: But you are one of those quoted, though?

Mr. T. P. Reid: In that phrase that I have just put forward.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, I feel my integrity has been impugned. The member has suggested I tried to seek out a reporter to give him this story, if that is what it was. I categorically reject that. I deny it. I stand in my place to demand a full apology from that member.

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated, I stand by what I said, that both of the gentlemen in question slandered me. There were two individuals involved and only two. The newspaper article, and I will quote it, states: "The first guy I see is John Williams," one of the MPPs remembered. "I would have given $100 for a camera that day." That is what one of the members said. It was either the member for Rainy River or the member for Wentworth North, because the other MPP said: "Williams seemed to be enjoying himself. It wasn't a classy place." If that is not a slur and an innuendo, that is slander.

I will make two further points. When I became aware of this matter, I walked over to the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon) because I saw that he, the ever-smiling member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy) and their leader were having some satisfaction and enjoyment out of the fact this matter was about to become public knowledge. I think the member for Ottawa East was pointing a naughty finger at Mr. Oved up in the press gallery at the time.

I approached the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk, for whom I have had, up to this point, the greatest of respect, and I asked him if his party would consider what it was doing in stooping to this new low, in condoning, with the knowledge of that caucus, that type of sleazy cheap action, which impugns the integrity not only of the Liberal caucus but of the whole of this Legislature. What I got from the member was a "Well" and a shrug.

I would have assumed these gentlemen at least, in the front ranks of the Liberal caucus, would have had the integrity to speak to those less-principled members of their caucus who had perpetrated this libel and slander. I am asking in the name of decency that the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk, his leader and the member for Ottawa East, together with the members for Rainy River and Wentworth, reconsider their position.

I will rise in this House after the votes this afternoon, in continuation of my point of privilege, to determine whether an apology is forthcoming. If it is not, I will be proceeding with a libel and slander action against the two named members for Rainy River and Wentworth North.

Hon. Mr. Gregory: Mr. Speaker, I feel I must rise on this particular issue. I was the chairman of the select committee on highway transportation and was, I suppose, in charge of the committee's trip to Washington.

I, too, read the article in question with some shock and also discussed the matter with the Liberal House leader as to the actions taken by one of two members of the Liberal Party. I find it very shocking that members of this Legislature could resort to this type of tactic. As the member for Rainy River stated earlier, the Liberal Party is content to depend on its good policies to beat this government. It certainly is not depending on its good character in this case. It certainly is not demonstrating it.

I regret very much that a committee of which I was chairman, which to this point has deserved and earned a good reputation and presented an excellent report that has been well used, has to be tarnished by this type of action because of irresponsibility on the part of the opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I really must respond very briefly by simply indicating to you that I know of nothing that requires an apology, and there will not be an apology. The member for Oriole indicates his extra-sensory perception somehow in knowing what is in the minds of the people across here. If he is so sensitive that he thinks we are laughing at him, I suppose occasionally he is correct.

Mr. T. P. Reid: We have laughed at the member for Oriole for years.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The member for Oriole has risen on what he alleges to be a breach of his privileges as a member of the House by one or more other members of this House. He has made very serious allegations and used very strong language in bringing it to the attention of the House. I think it only fair that I give the other member to whom the accusations were directed an opportunity to respond. Having done that, I will judge the information to see whether there is a prima facie case.

2:20 p.m.

MASSEY-FERGUSON, WHITE MOTOR CORPORATION

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Industry and Tourism pertaining to the farm implement manufacture industry in Ontario but particularly in Brantford and Toronto.

Can he confirm that the principal new investor in the Massey-Ferguson situation has publicly withdrawn and that there is no new investor in sight, which means the Massey-Ferguson situation has rapidly been downgraded to the point where we must once again look for new government initiatives to save the company? In the same connection, will he report to the House on the situation involving the White Motor Corporation, where the parent company has been purchased in the United States and the American purchaser has indicated it will not purchase the Canadian subsidiary because it is in receivership?

Hon. Mr. Crossman: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the Massey-Ferguson portion of the question, I would report to the honourable member that discussions are still going on between Massey-Ferguson and several potential and, I believe, fairly serious Canadian purchasers of the company. Also, Massey-Ferguson has had a great deal of success in convincing its international and Canadian investors to stay with the company. In other words, they are leaving their money in, they are continuing to extend credit in order that the company may continue to operate, and their suppliers are keeping them in a situation in which the current financial viability of the company remains intact.

With regard to the White situation, the White Motor Corporation of the United States, which was also in what is referred to as chapter 11 receivership, has now been purchased by an American corporation. In buying the shares of the White Motor Corporation, they buy the Canadian shares owned by White USA and the Canadian assets.

The purchaser has not yet filed an application to the Foreign Investment Review Agency, which will be our first indication and, perhaps more accurately, the clear and final indication with regard to what the purchaser of the White Motor Corporation intends to do with regard to the Canadian assets. I would hope that at the very least we would see a FIRA application come through. That would be some indication that there is at least that minimum position; that is, though it will continue to be foreign-owned, the people will be able to go back to work at a newly financed and repurchased White Motor Corporation.

Mr. Nixon: Since the continuing uncertainty in this matter is having a very serious effect on the confidence that farmers and consumers have in the two companies, and particularly if there is some indication they will not be in business perhaps this time a year from now, does the minister not feel he should make a firmer statement in support of the government policy to keep both operations in progress? Would he not agree it is not enough to say that Massey-Ferguson's current viability is not interfered with, when there is every reason to believe its current viability will lead it to a cessation of business unless there is some new money involved?

Hon. Mr. Crossman: I do not think there is any secret about the fact that unless a substantial reinvestment package—that is, one of many hundreds of millions of dollars—is put together for Massey-Ferguson, the company is going to be unable to make it. It is important that Massey-Ferguson's creditors have enough confidence in the company to have left their money in it. They are aware of the fact that, as time goes on, Massey-Ferguson is not making a profit each month—in fact, it is expected to continue to lose some money—but those creditors, who are currently in a position in which their money is at risk, are prepared to leave their money at risk rather than foreclose on the company and put it into receivership.

Those creditors who are in a good position to know everything there is to know about the company are obviously satisfied that enough progress is being made that it is safe to leave their money invested and, as it were, "at risk" in the company. I think that is an important signal that those who are most familiar with the company are sticking with the company.

I suggest no further statement needs to be made at this time with regard to the government's willingness to participate in the necessary package, because we have already indicated both at federal and provincial levels the degree to which we are prepared to participate.

I do not want to attest to the accuracy of these figures, but going on the publicly talked about figures, which are in the area of $600 to $700 million, the federal and provincial packages would amount to about $150 million. That is the ball park talked about in the discussions. That means the governments are substantially committed to a large portion of the refinancing. I think 25 per cent is a fairly large portion and indicates we will do anything practical and necessary if it appears it is appropriate to do that to save the company.

Mr. Makarchuk: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister indicate at this time whether continuous consultations are going on with the federal government to ensure that, if there is a need to change the government package for Massey-Ferguson, he is prepared to make that change?

Regarding White Motor Corporation, in view of the statements that have been circulated to the effect the American purchaser wishes to cut wages between $3 and $4 an hour, and in view of the fact there are possible Canadian purchasers for that operation, is the minister prepared to commit himself and his department to provide financial assistance to the Canadian purchasers to ensure that White remains in Brantford as a viable operation?

Hon. Mr. Crossman: Mr. Speaker, in the case of both companies, may I say this government has made it quite clear it will entertain any reasonable business proposition that will ensure the work force remains intact in Brantford. The whole purpose of our intervention and assistance proposed in the Massey-Ferguson situation is not to relieve the banks or other creditors of any potential loss, but to ensure that there is employment in Brantford and Toronto in the long term.

To that end, if a different proposition were brought to us by new potential purchasers, we would be open to any sort of proposal brought to us. That does not mean we would agree with a blindfold on to any blind proposal, nor would we give a blank cheque. However, if any good, viable business proposition is brought to us which we think will work, we would be willing to change our earlier undertaking or indication of support.

RADIOACTIVITY AT OHC SUBDIVISION

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of the Environment having to do with the detection of radiation at the Malvern Ontario Housing Corporation subdivision. If he wants his colleague the Minister of Housing to answer it, that will be all right with me.

However, since it seems to be technical, would the minister indicate what steps are going to be taken to correct the situation? It is reported that radiation in excess of 875 millirem per year is generally detectable in the area, while 500 millirem is the standard permitted. In fact, right at ground level, the radiation is in excess of 3,500 millirem per year. Obviously this is a matter of great concern.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I think several will answer this question. First of all, may I tell the honourable member what he perhaps already knows. The Atomic Energy Control Board people are there and, along with our own officials from several ministries, will be doing a thorough review. Depending on that review, it will be addressed in a short period of time by either the Minister of Health (Mr. Timbrell), if it is a public health matter, or by the Minister of Housing.

(The Minister of Housing may want to add something to my comment even now.)

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, just so we have the most recent story regarding the Malvern situation and the hot spots, may I say that Dr. Eaton, who represents the Atomic Energy Control Board, has been there this morning along with people of the press, radio and TV media, my staff and staff of other ministries as well. To date, they have not detected any high radiation counts in the basements of the homes in the community. They have spotted some very high readings, I am told, in the backyards along the fence lines of six or seven properties.

The man from the AECB indicated in a press conference at two o'clock today on behalf of the AECB that, where difficulties are encountered, he is prepared to recommend and take action to remove the soil, similar to what was done in the Port Hope situation.

My understanding is they are doing a very clear analysis. It is a federal responsibility. The Ministry of the Environment and the other agencies of the province have offered to give the fullest assistance possible.

Mr. Nixon: Malvern and the development of that property has been before the Ministry of Housing and its predecessor for many years. Can the minister explain why his technical experts were not aware of this sooner and why so many people must have been exposed to this radiation over the years of development?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Yes, Mr. Speaker. This site came into the possession of both the federal and provincial governments in 1953. Neither government was aware of any contamination on this land, some 1,700 acres. It was in 1972 that the opportunity to construct homes in that community began, and the first home was sold in 1973.

It was not until 1975 that the AECB came into possession of a private firm's records that demonstrated there could be some contamination on that site. It was as a result of some work on a building on Church Street, which had been used during the war years for the making of instruments where uranium was used in the printing on the dials. The waste from that operation was dumped on a farm that was owned by the president of the company that owned the building on Church Street.

Some spot checks were carried out on this site in 1975, as a result of the information acquired at the time the Church Street site was being renovated.

Mr. Nixon: That would be three or four years after they started to build.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: At that time, no one was aware of the fact there had been any dumping nor of any hot spots even to be detected.

In 1976 the Honourable Alastair Gillespie, who was then the minister reporting for the AECB to the federal House, tabled in the House of Commons a report indicating what were the contaminated spots across this country. Malvern was not one of those spots, as indicated in his report. It was not until this recent situation developed that we were brought on site. Throughout it all, the tests that were taken by AECB back in 1975 did not indicate contamination.

The main contaminated location we believe—and I have to preface this with “we believe”—from the reports that I have had so far this morning, was where the building on the farm was used for holding these contaminants and some fertilizer that had some of the contaminant products in it. The other part of the problem is the roadway that was used in getting to and from this building from the main highway.

Dr. Roger Eaton of the AECB is there today and is doing a thorough investigation. I am sure, as he said to our ministry just recently, that he will have a full and complete report. Whatever corrective actions are necessary, he assures us and the property owners in that area, will be taken at the expense of the federal government.

Mr. Isaacs: Supplementary to the Minister of the Environment, Mr. Speaker: The minister has been involved in a major review of industrial waste disposal sites, and it now appears the work that has been done by AECB is inadequate when it comes to identifying sites that contain radioactive waste. Given this, will he extend his testing program to make sure there are no other sites such as Malvern where housing has been erected close to dumps that contain radioactive waste?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I think the question is certainly reasonable, but I think we have all agreed that AECB should be entirely responsible. If the member is asking if I would be prepared to discuss with them a further examination of sites and potential sites, and relay to them any of the information that we get from our in-depth investigation of our sites, indeed I will.

Mr. Sargent: Final supplementary to the Minister of Energy, Mr. Speaker: It is quite apparent that what the minister is doing is not adequate. The AECB are dead down there. In view of the fact that the US Senate is now appropriating $4.1 billion to ferret out radiation toxic sites in America, why does the minister not start a system in Ontario where he will give a blanket reward of $5,000 for anyone who can come forward with a dump that is not known to his people? There must be plenty of them around. Why does he not consider setting up an incentive system to find out exactly where those places are?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I don't think it is necessary to have an incentive system because in the last year we have had many citizens of Ontario come forward and suggest to us where there are potential sites. We have immediately gone to these sites and investigated them and they will be thoroughly investigated in the whole program of our ministry, so I don't think a payout is necessary. The people are doing it because they understand the importance of it and I think they have been very satisfied with the response of the staff.

NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I note the Premier is back in my riding again today, and I just want to tell him he is welcome any time he wants to come to Ottawa Centre. It is not going to have much impact, but he was speaking there last week—

Mr. Speaker: Do you have a question?

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, I do, Mr. Speaker. I have a question for the Minister of Energy, to whom I am sending a questionnaire prepared for the Gallup Poll about nuclear waste disposal.

Is the minister aware that the Gallup Poll questionnaire has been prepared for use in the communities of Renfrew, Cobden, Field, Sturgeon Falls and Dryden, and that the questionnaire is clearly designed to measure the extent of public resistance to nuclear waste disposal and how that resistance can be overcome? Can the minister say who is doing this poll, why that poll is being undertaken, whether the province has been informed the polls being carried out by Ontario Hydro or by the federal government, and will he give an assurance that the results of the poll will be made public?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I assure the honourable member that this is the first time I have seen this material; so, obviously, I welcome the opportunity to review with my officials and with Ontario Hydro any information they might have about this and to report back to the House. I have not seen this before.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the Gallup Poll was most likely carried out by the Canada-Ontario waste management committee, which is concerning itself with nuclear waste disposal in Ontario, can the minister tell me whether there are plans to dump nuclear waste in any of those five sites—that is, Renfrew, Cobden, Sturgeon Falls, Field or Dryden—and if there are no such plans, can he explain why it is that a poll clearly directed to that question is being carried out in those areas?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Obviously no decision has been taken with respect to the ultimate disposal of nuclear waste. At the moment, I do not think they are past the flyover or general observation stage.

As regards whoever has commissioned the poll, I go back to my answer to the original question. I will have to get further information, which I will be glad to share with the honourable member once I have consulted with some of the parties named in the questionnaire.

Mr. Speaker: The minister, in effect, has taken it as notice. I will allow one brief supplementary from the member for Halton-Burlington.

Mr. J. Reed: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister apprised or briefed on a regular basis as to the activities of the federal-provincial agreement application? If he is briefed, would he not have been informed that such a poll was being undertaken if, as the leader of the third party says, it was in connection with that federal-provincial agreement?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I suppose it is reasonable to assume, if that is the committee that commissioned the poll, that would be information my officials would have, but that is the very point I am now being asked—whether that particular committee or group has retained Gallup Poll for that purpose. As the Speaker has indicated, I have simply said in response to all three questions that I have not seen this before but I will get the information.

AUTO PRODUCTION

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism. Is the minister aware of the Science Council of Canada's study of the auto industry which appeared this week and which once again documents that the problem with the Canadian automobile industry is a structural problem and not just a short-term problem of declining sales, and that the Big Four auto makers will not give Canadians a fair share of auto and parts production if they are left on their own, despite the assurances we have had from the Premier?

Can the minister say what new strategy the government intends to follow to ensure the Canadian auto and parts industry does get a fair share, not just of production but also of jobs?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: First, Mr. Speaker, I remind the honourable member that a great number of recommendations have been made in that report, which I should begin by saying we have just received and I am still analysing. From our preliminary analysis, we have found a fair number of things the science council has reported are things we reported to this House, and to other places, quite some time ago.

Second, for some time we have advocated many of the things that report advocates. If the member looks, as I know he has, at the remarks I made to the Automotive Parts Manufacturers' Association last April, I talked about moving to an averaging-out formula which would provide some of the flexibility that is required to get our production-to-sales ratios into the kinds of ratios we need that would encourage light car production.

I also said in that speech that it is time the automobile manufacturers began to assemble enough light vehicles in Canada. I also talked of the opportunities for the auto parts industry and indicated one of the shortcomings of the auto pact was the fact it was assembly-oriented and not auto parts-oriented.

In that same speech I said we believe the Canadian value added component of the auto pact should move from 60 per cent or 65 per cent up to 100 per cent. We advocated that over a five-year period the companies should be required to be in a balanced trade situation, which again would deal with the value and the number of cars and would be the kind of situation that would allow us to move to a situation where we were beginning to get a number of lighter, more fuel-efficient vehicles made in this country.

There was also talk in that science council report about the need for new technology in auto parts. I remind the member that the major initiative being taken in Canada in this area is being taken by this government with the auto parts technical centre we are setting up with the Ontario Research Foundation.

As the member goes through the various recommendations the science council has made, I think it will be difficult for him to find one or two instances in which this government has not dealt with in a maximum way possible for a provincial jurisdiction, the kinds of things that science council report advocates is necessary for the restructuring of this industry. In point of fact, assessing our policies and our performance in the things we have done against that single report, we have every right to be very proud of the progress we have made.

Mr. Cassidy: When there are 25,000 auto workers out of work in this province, and the prospects are that is going to continue long after the current decline in the auto industry is turned around, I find it difficult to see how the minister can say that he or the government is proud of what is happening right now.

Will the minister not admit that one of the major problems, and it is documented in the science council report, is the lack of leverage we have in governments in Canada in getting our fair share in auto production and in the auto parts industry? Will he not admit that what we need now is a crown corporation which can spearhead that development, which can engage in research and development, which can enter into joint ventures with the Canadian automobile parts manufacturers to get production here, and which can enter into long-term agreements with the Big Four manufacturers for the supply of technologically advanced parts that are now made almost exclusively in the United States? Is that not the way we have to go to get the leverage we are now lacking?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: First, in terms of pretending that this government or this country is going to be left behind, or is dramatically behind in terms of what is happening in the North American automobile industry, a quick look at the facts, in fairness, would be instructive.

In the automotive industry, for the week of November 3 to November 7, there were 184,700 workers on indefinite layoff in the United States, and 9,700 in Canada. That is in an industry where, as the leader of the New Democratic Party well knows, the ratio is about 10:1. Relatively speaking, in terms of the layoffs and adjustments that both American and Canadian industries are going through, we are substantially better off.

Second, we have never suggested there is not going to be a difficult structural change going on in this country. But in terms of how we are doing so far, in terms of assessing the performance and success we have had in getting some of the Big Three to move and to change some of their auto manufacturing, we have had some successes.

We know about the retooling that is going on in St. Catharines—I will not take the time of the House to recite it—in Oshawa and in Windsor to make key parts for the downsized cars. We know the smaller Ford vehicles are being made in St. Thomas, which is a major advance for us. We know that when Chrysler Corporation finally gets around to taking some of its investment steps in this country, it will be putting in a research and development facility—the kind the member is talking about—thanks only to the government of Ontario. We know that at that time we will have an auto parts technical centre in place, to help all the members of the auto parts industry.

The only thing the member is adding is the mystical suggestion or belief that if a crown corporation were set up, it would, to use his own words, have more success in negotiating and reaching agreements with the Big Three or the Big Four in the United States than the government and the independent auto parts people in Canada have had. I fail to see how a crown corporation, as opposed to the government of Canada, might have more success than the government or the auto parts manufacturers have to date.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary: Has the minister looked into the concept of using the labour content or the man-hours in the auto industry, both parts and assembly, rather than simply the dollar value of the product? There may be a substantial deficit in man-hours, whereas the dollar value may be in balance.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I think that does point out a lot of the concerns we have. The science council, even in its comprehensive report, could not address that fully. There are a lot of other things that impact. It is not only the kinds of cars being made here; it is the number and quality of the jobs. When one moves to the kind of calculation the member is talking about, I think we would not want to move away from putting some sort of value on the kinds of jobs.

Obviously the research-intensive, highly-skilled jobs are the kinds of jobs we want. We don't always want to be locked into the situation which the auto pact locked us into. We got a large number—more than we would have got otherwise—of lesser-skilled jobs, because they are assembly-oriented. Perhaps we are talking about a lower number of more highly skilled jobs.

We want an adequate mixture of both. I am leery of developing formulae that tend to get us into the kind of 1965 auto pact situation, where we found ourselves in a chronic situation that could not have been anticipated when we struck what seemed to be a reasonable formula at the time.

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Speaker, is the minister not aware that the report by Mr. MacDonald from the science council indicates there is a shortfall in skilled jobs for Canada; that is, in the United States, 75 per cent of the jobs are skilled and in Canada only 50 per cent are skilled? Furthermore, is he aware that in the investment intentions, there is going to be a $2.6-billion shortfall in this country in the next five years alone which will also exacerbate the problem that the skilled jobs are in auto parts manufacturing as opposed to assembly?

Why does the minister not come to the realization that the private sector has had all these years to turn it around and is simply not going to do it because it is not in the best interests of the automobile firms in the United States? Therefore, he simply must create a crown corporation and get on with the job to ensure that we get our fair share, which, after all, was the intent of the auto pact in the first place.

2:50 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I understand that the member for Nickel Belt believes, unlike everyone else who studies the industry, that all we need is a crown corporation to solve the problem. There is no point in us taking the rest of the afternoon to decide whether a crown corporation is the answer to our problems.

I just remind the honourable member that at one time his party believed the auto pact should be ended and totally renegotiated. Of course, reality has set in during the past year and his party has come to the realization that what we need are alterations to, not abandonment of, the auto part.

Mr. Laughren: No, no.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Oh, yes; it is true.

Secondly, the honourable member and his party have long been advocating a Canadian car: "Let us build our own car here in Canada."

Mr. Laughren: Why haven't you?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The fact is, the MacDonald report clearly disagrees with that and disposes of that as a viable alternative.

SCA PIPELINE

Mr. Kerrio: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. Will the minister assure this House that he will consult immediately with officials in New York state to reopen hearings on the SCA Chemical Waste Services pipeline, which is expected to dump 100 million gallons of treated liquid waste into the Niagara River each year? Will the minister recommend against this proposal in the light of the following facts?

Extremely explosive impure TNT has been found on the site which is as explosive now as when it was buried decades ago. CBC radio has reported today that not only are the nuclear wastes in a silo 400 metres from the TNT, but also there is low-level nuclear waste that was shipped in from the nuclear waste site in Nevada in 1948, and that there is a possibility that the mixing of radioactive and hazardous waste could lead to increased leachability and hazards to human health.

This information was contained in a brief submitted to the SCA hearing officer on September 25 of this year, but the Minister of the Environment seems to be unaware of it or to be ignoring it.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, if the question is whether I would do it immediately, I must tell the honourable member I did it yesterday. If I might, I would like to read a copy of the telegram I sent—

Mr. Kerrio: I finally got you moving, eh?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No.

Mr. Kerrio: It is a little late.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Maybe the member did not hear. I said I did it before the question. May I read it into the record, please?

Mr. Kerrio: Please do.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: "The apparent presence of TNT at the SCA waste site in Lewiston,

New York, requires immediate clarification. The existence of such high explosive adjacent to a chemical treatment facility is obviously a matter for grave concern to Ontario. While we have been able to accept the proposed technology for SCA's operation, this new information creates doubt as to the stability of the site. As this new information relates to US government activity, we urge that immediate clarification be sought by Ottawa from Washington."

I sent that to the Honourable John Roberts and I have his reply, which I would also like to read into the record. It was sent on his behalf: "On behalf of the Honourable John Roberts, I wish to acknowledge receipt of your minister's November 19 telegram requesting that immediate clarification be sought with regard to the possible presence of TNT at the SCA site in Lewiston, New York. The minister is aware of your request and will give this matter his prompt attention."

I have also called the state governor's office and indicated to him our concern. I have not been able to speak to the governor, but I will be speaking to Commissioner Flacke. This is a matter of very serious concern, and we will take a good deal of time and effort to clarify it with the officials in New York state. It could lead to a whole new dimension on that proposal and we will follow it with a great deal of care.

Mr. Kerrio: Is the minister also aware that toxic wastes dumped by Hooker Chemical have already contaminated portions of the Niagara River and the Niagara Falls, New York, treatment plant—this is an area other than the Love Canal area—and that New York state officials claim that chemicals found in the intake system include toxics known to cause or suspected of causing cancer, birth defects and mutations? Those toxics not going into the intake are going down the Niagara River, past the area where residents of Niagara-on-the-Lake get their water supplies. I have some concern about the water supply of Niagara Falls, Ontario.

Reinforcing a point I made last Friday in this House, the US chairman of the International Joint Commission, Robert Sugarman, stated that he could not understand how any government, federal, state or provincial, could recommend the SCA pipeline.

Mr. Speaker: Now that the honourable member has admitted to repetition, we will allow the minister to answer.

Mr. Kerrio: I have just one word left, Mr. Speaker. How can the minister have any credibility if he will not get into this picture and clear it up?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I do not understand how the member opposite could not understand what I just read into the record. It seems a bit strange to me.

Mr. Bradley: It's a bit strange.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Did the member say his colleague was a bit strange? I have to agree.

I want the member for Niagara Falls to know I raised that very significant issue with the commissioner. I am surprised the member did not understand the significance of that treatment plant some time ago and why it was not working and how it was not working.

Mr. Kerrio: I understood a long time ago. The minister didn't understand.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No. With respect, the member ignored that. This is a far more significant, far greater volume. We have made a very forceful presentation to the commissioner, saying we want that done as soon as it is humanly possible to do so.

May I also say I think the member raised an unfair worry for the residents who are getting their drinking supplies. We test that water on a continuous basis. I say to the member that water is safe. We will continue to test it on a continuous basis and we will be the first to set the record on what is or is not in that stream, if it is necessary. We will not deal with conjecture. It is a very important issue and, as I said earlier, we will follow it very carefully.

Mr. Kerrio: I will see to it.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No, he will not have to. I am ahead of him.

SKF CANADA PLANT CLOSURE

Mr. R. F. Johnston: My question is for the Minister of Industry and Tourism concerning the SKF closing, Mr. Speaker. Is the minister aware that for the past few years and until very recently, SKF Canada has been importing the 6200 bearing series from the United States of America, which bearings used to be produced in their entirety and in the hundreds of thousands in the company's Scarborough plant?

Is the minister also aware that, in addition to this deindustrialization policy of the company, these bearings coming from the US in two parts are stamped in the United States, "Canada SKF," implying that they are made in Canada, whereas, all the SKF plant that used to produce these does now is to grease them, clamp that on to it and then ship them out as made in Canada?

Does the minister condone this practice, and does he still feel that SKF is closing because of market problems in Ontario, or is it really part of a systematic rationalization of which Canadians are being made victims?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate it if the honourable member could send those over to me so that I could see them. As well, my seven-year-old's two-wheeler is missing a couple of bearings and I might be able to use them, provided they are made in Canada.

May I indicate to the member it is not my responsibility, even by the furthest stretches of his imagination, to monitor the production, importation and stamping of products made by SKF or anyone else in the province. I would appreciate if he could send them over anyway.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: In response to me on October 17, the minister gave the reason for the closing as problems with Massey orders and that sort of thing. Is the minister not aware that the annual report of SKF indicates that sales in Canada are up 33 per cent and they include this series, which is one of their largest sales components? Will he not ask the federal department to investigate this to see whether it is illegal? If it is not illegal, it is a questionable practice. Will he not commit himself to investigating this before they try to pull out of Scarborough?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the member will send the bearings over here, I will give one to my colleague the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea), who I am sure will send one up to Ottawa, where I am sure they will be pleased to investigate that situation.

3 p.m.

GO TRAIN FIRE

Mr. J. Reed: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for my constituent the Minister of Transportation and Communications. I am sure the minister is aware of the incident that occurred on the GO Train last night at rush hour when an eastbound train pulled into the Port Credit station on fire.

Can the minister tell us whether his officials have been able to determine if the operators of the train at that time were aware of the fire before they pulled into the station? If so, was the fire under control? If not, was there any danger to the passengers who were disembarking at that particular time from a westbound train?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I do not have the information regarding that particular incident. I will look into it and report back as quickly as possible.

Mr. Speaker: It is being taken as notice. Is there anything else the member would like him to look at?

Mr. J. Reed: Yes, please, Mr. Speaker. I just wonder whether the minister will also inquire, if there was knowledge that this fire was burning as the train pulled in, why it would not have been prudent to stop the train outside of that crowded station somewhere in the country at either side.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Certainly I will inquire as to that additional question as well. As I am sure the member knows, the train crews and the signalling and operation of the trains are under the jurisdiction of the CNR. I will have to get a report from them to answer those questions.

DISPOSAL OF PCBs

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of the Environment. Why has his ministry not been at all encouraging with regard to the testing of the diesel engine process for disposal of polychlorinated biphenyls?

Given that the preliminary testing has suggested that the process is 99.998 per cent efficient, does he not believe that it would have been of benefit to the people of Ontario to have the testing completed here so that, if it is proven to be as good as it appears from the preliminary tests supervised by Environment Canada, we might have had future development and marketing of the technology carried out here in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the member is correct. We have done those things required of us with regard to assessing the proposal. We did not spend any particular amount of money on this proposal; however, the federal government did. I am sure the member would not want to see it double-funded; there is no need of that. They have done their assessment of it, as have we.

I want to say also we have spent a lot of money on the destruction of PCBs in other areas. I think it is a clear case of where one government has chosen, with co-operation from the other government, to assess a particular method of destruction of PCBs, while we ourselves have chosen another area in which to do research. I think that is a very responsible way to address what is obviously a significant problem.

Mr. Isaacs: Is the minister aware that the frustration of D and D Disposal Services with regard to his ministry's failure to assist the project with further tests has resulted in a development contract being signed with a major equipment manufacturer in the United Kingdom, which contract gives that UK company substantial rights for the marketing of the equipment in Europe and across much of the world?

Does he not think it is sad when frustration with his ministry's officials means that we lose the possibility of a new technology that could make us a world leader in a very important area?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I would almost assume the member was always supportive of these kinds of activities and would not want us to do in-depth assessments of them. We are not prepared to do haphazard approvals or any other kinds of approvals unless we are certain in our own minds they are done properly.

If the member thinks in this instance that the gentleman does not also write letters to suggest that our ministry does an excellent job, I can assure him he is wrong. I will be glad to supply that information. We frequently hear both sides from that particular firm. Sometimes it is very complimentary; sometimes it is not. I can assure him it is more frequently complimentary of our staff than the contrary, and I wish he would understand that point of view. It would be helpful.

Mr. Hall: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: With regard to the answers the minister has given on the subject so far today, do I take it his ministry is not actively pursuing the diesel engine technique; that he is out of that one and is counting on other systems? Alternatively, is he really saying he is continuing to evaluate that method as well as others? He has not left it clear to me.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, fair enough. We are interested in that method, but we are not funding it; we think there are better methods. For instance, the plasma arc is a better technology and, as the member knows, we have spent a lot of money and will continue to spend more on that one.

On a nontechnical assessment of that diesel engine project, I think the member will agree it was a very limited amount of fuel that was put through the machine, and my staff tell me they have real concern about the possibility of this being successful.

However, we are not in a position at this time to say there is no chance of success. If they wish, with federal aid, to pursue that method of destruction of PCBs, and if it is successful, that is great. We think there are better alternatives, and that is where we are putting our money, but only on an assessment basis.

WELLAND CANAL BRIDGE

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transportation and Communications. Can the minister assure the citizens of the city of Port Colborne that the proposed new third bridge, located in the south end of lock eight of the Welland Canal, will be completed and in operation before the 1981 navigational season opens?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I have no reason to believe that there will be any change in the construction schedule of the third bridge. I will have to doublecheck whether the date the honourable member mentions is the scheduled date and whether the process of building the new bridge by the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority is keeping up with the schedule. I will get a report for the member. I have no information that it is not on schedule.

OWEN SOUND HOSPITAL TRANSFER

Mr. Breaugh: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Health concerning the outpatient medication program at Owen Sound General and Marine Hospital, particularly the one for psychiatric patients.

Who do I believe? On June 9, 1978, when we raised this matter in the House, the minister agreed there was a problem but they were not terminating that program. If I may quote from page 3327 of Hansard for that day, "By the terms of this agreement a condition exists which states that the hospital shall not delete, remove or modify any existing program unless instructed to do so by the province or unless prior consent is obtained in writing from the province." Yet the director of psychiatric medicine, in a letter to his staff, dated October 21, says: "Since that time, we have diligently and discreetly continued the phasing out of this program." Which one of them is lying?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I beg your pardon. Would the member like to repeat that, Mr. Speaker? I am sure he would.

Mr. Breaugh: Which one is lying?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, no one on this side is lying. I will look into the matter. In fact, I will be visiting that hospital in about 10 days' time on another matter, and I will look into that. The agreement is exactly as I described it in June.

Mr. Breaugh: While the minister is there, perhaps he can ask him about this remark as well. The administrator said, "I am entirely prepared to instruct the medical staff to stop the program immediately." Does that fall in with the agreement which the minister has with that hospital?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: The honourable member asked about the agreement. The agreement is exactly as I have described it. If the agreement is being abridged, I will take that up with the chairman of the board, who is responsible for that hospital.

SALES TAX ON UPHOLSTERY

Mr. Peterson: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Revenue. Noting that he acquiesced to the great upholsterers' lobby in this province yesterday, I believe, I would like to ask him how he justifies the existence of the following regulations. He has now removed sales tax on upholstery orders of more than $250. For orders of $250 and less, sales tax is charged on material only. When one buys material, one should specify the use and should pay sales tax but, according to his own officials, most customers do not specify use and therefore do not pay the tax. This brings into question the whole enforceability of his regulations. If one provides one's own material, one does not pay tax on the labour. How can the minister possibly sit there with such a screwed-up set of regulations and be happy?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I do not think I indicated I was happy about it. However, the member has correctly described the rule under which we have administered the retail sales tax on upholstery. Up until this time; retail sales tax was charged on material up to $250 if they were separately billed.

We have run into this in other areas of administration as well. For example, people who install mufflers, who give a total price rather than a breakdown of the material and the labour, also pay full sales tax. It is administratively impossible to break it down any other way. We encourage the retailers to break it down so that we can identify the material put in.

To go beyond the $250, what we have said there was that we consider it to be a manufactured piece of goods rather than just a repair job. Therefore, the retail sales tax was charged totally on that article, the same as it would be if one bought a new chesterfield or a new piece of upholstered furniture. Being consistent with that ruling, we have now changed the exemption on sales tax, in the new program that was announced in the budget, so that the same criterion applies. In other words, if there is $250 or more on the cost of an upholstery job, we consider it to be a manufactured product rather than just something that has been repaired; therefore, there will be an exemption on that part of the program.

Mr. Peterson: Because they are almost incomprehensible, even to the ministry, because they are virtually unenforceable, as admitted by his officials, and because they invite dishonesty and cheating by fooling around with the bills, why does the minister not just get rid of retail sales tax on all upholstery jobs and material to make it far less confusing?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: My function is to collect revenues, not to get rid of them. It is pretty obvious that any tax we take—

Mr. Peterson: You just got rid of part of it.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Yes. But we are trying to be consistent with the program that was in place before.

Mr. Peterson: Consistent depending on who lobbies you.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: We will look into it; let us put it that way.

INDIAN SALES TAX EXEMPTION

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question for the Minister of Revenue. Can the minister explain why he did not consult with the chiefs of Ontario before notifying Indian retailers on reserves that, to prevent non-Indians from taking advantage of the Indian sales tax exemption, effective December 1, 1980, treaty Indian store owners on reserves will no longer have the exemption under the Tobacco Tax Act from requirement to obtain sales tax vendors' permits? Why is he treating Indians this way because of a problem with non-Indians?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, this ruling applies to all Ontario citizens and all retailers. To sell cigarettes, one must have a retail vendor's permit. It costs nothing to have a retail vendor's permit. All one has to do is apply for it. The reason for that is very simple. Wholesalers are not permitted to sell cigarettes to anyone who does not hold a vendor's permit.

But I realize there is a problem there, and I have extended the time of implementation of that. As the member knows, it was to be immediate, and I think we have extended it until December 1 or the end of December—I forget which.

Mr. Wildman: Is it not correct that, until now, treaty Indians who owned stores on reserves have not had to get sales tax vendors' permits? If that is the case, why did the minister take this move unilaterally without consulting the Indian organizations? Will he now further extend the deadline from December 1 until April 1 next year, so that he can consult with the Indian organizations to work out a compromise method of dealing with his enforcement problems and not raising the whole question of provincial jurisdiction on federal Indian reserves?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, my legal advisers tell me we are within our legal rights to do what we are doing. I have already indicated that we have extended it beyond the first time limit we put on. I will be meeting with my staff either tomorrow morning or the beginning of next week and we will be discussing the very request the honourable member has made. I already have a request from the Union of Ontario Indians in that regard. In fact, I offered to meet with the Union of Ontario Indians and they rejected it.

Mr. Swart: They are in Ottawa now.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: I know; but it seemed a very urgent matter until I suggested we meet. At the moment, they are not ready to meet me. I am prepared to discuss the whole thing with my staff and see whether some accommodation can be made.

Mr. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: One of the accommodations to be considered would be not to have them registered at all but to allow them to proceed as they have since the grass started blowing—I mean growing—and the wind started blowing.

Mr. T. P. Reid: What kind of grass have you been blowing?

Mr. Nixon: Brant county gold. In other words, why does the government not leave them alone?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I think the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk knows very well we are having enforcement problems in the collection of tobacco tax. Some of the problems start at the Indian reservations where purchases are made without paying any tobacco tax. Some of these cigarettes are now getting into areas other than Indian reservations. We are trying to tighten up on this situation, and I hope the members opposite will give me some support in trying to resolve the problem of a possible loss of tax dollars in the amount of millions.

ASSISTIVE DEVICES

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health, and perhaps the Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mrs. Birch), in regard to my long-running questions about prosthetic, orthotic and assistive devices for the physically handicapped.

I last asked a question on April 3, 1980, as to what the minister intended to do in regard to providing these devices and whether he would table in the Legislature the report of his eternal committee that has been dragging on for some years as to the provision of these services. What is he going to do about it, particularly with the International Year of Disabled Persons coming up?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, the matter is under very active review by the ministers in the Social Development field. I anticipate they will be making a statement of policy on that matter for the beginning of the International Year of Disabled Persons.

Mr. T. P. Reid: The minister will appreciate that I am a little cynical, since I have been hearing this for a couple of years.

How does the government square finding an extra $4.7 million for consultant fees over and above the original contract price, yet having delayed this long in providing any kind of program for these devices in Ontario when they are available in almost every other province in Canada?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: If it were a very simple, straightforward matter without any complications about long-term effects from the use of the devices, their replacement and cost, the member would have a valid complaint.

With respect to the other matter, it is one the member should take up with the Chairman of Management Board of Cabinet. It is a one-time matter, whereas what we are talking about here is the development of a program that, once begun, will be ongoing, permanent and extremely expensive.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. Swart: Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of the Environment and again concerns the Walker Brothers dump site. Is the minister aware that some 75 to 85 additional drums were excavated at that site yesterday and the day before? They found liquid industrial waste in those drums and siphoned out some 1,500 gallons of it to be sent back to the suppliers in the Toronto area.

In particular, is the minister aware that Mr. Grant Mills, who is the director of the environment in that area, acknowledged publicly that this was a violation of Walker Brothers' certificate. Is the minister now prepared to lay charges against Walker Brothers, and will he take this into consideration in his statement next Tuesday relative to proceeding or not proceeding there with the solidification process?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, the answer to most of those three or four questions is yes and, if the honourable member would like, I will deal with the question he raised the other day. Do I have your permission, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The honourable member was on the same subject matter, which was the Hydro geological report. It is quite significant he has been asking for that, but I have been absent for the last two days and I really think he does not quite understand the nature of that particular report. I am not being argumentative when I say I think it would make the honourable member jump to some conclusions that are not necessarily valid. That report was to determine the suitability of the stockpile of strip overburden, which would eventually be used for the clay pad and liner for the proposed fixation site.

As part of normal, quarrying operations that area had been receiving the fines. We think at this time that it was calcium carbonate slurry that appeared in the borehole which the honourable member has questioned about.

Surely he also appreciates that there is a full investigation of that particular site and that the matter he raised, along with a myriad of other questions on that particular site, will be dealt with in the full environmental assessment hearing that is proposed.

I think that is a more appropriate time to come with all the information on not only the question the honourable member raised but also what is in those particular materials, which of course must be answered in detail. We think at this time it is calcium slurry, but that will be determined at a later date.

Mr. Swart: Supplementary to that—

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has expired.

REPORTS

STANDING COMMITTEE ON GENERAL GOVERNMENT

Mr. Cureatz from the standing committee on general government reported the following resolution:

That supply in the following amount and to defray the expenses of the office of the Ombudsman be granted Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1981:

Office of the Ombudsman program, $4,750,000.

STANDING COMMITTEE ON ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

Mr. Philip from the standing committee on administration of justice presented the following report:

Your committee met on Wednesday, November 19, 1980, to consider the annual report of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations for the year ending March 31, 1980, referred to the committee on Tuesday, November 18, 1980, on a petition of 20 members pursuant to standing order 33(b).

Your committee adopted a motion requiring the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea) to produce to the committee certain documents with respect to Carlo Montemurro and his related companies. The Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations failed to produce the documents which your committee requested.

Your committee therefore requests that the House authorize Mr. Speaker to issue his warrant, as provided in section 35 of the Legislative Assembly Act, requiring the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations to produce to the standing committee on administration of justice all correspondence, interdepartmental memoranda, memoranda to file, application forms, notes, files and other such documents that are in the possession of any agency, board, commission, registry, branch or division of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations relating to Carlo Montemurro and his related companies, particularly C and M Financial Consultants Limited, Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation, Canadian Metal Recycling Labs and Astra Trust Company.

Mr. Philip: Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the debate in accordance with standing order 30(c), I would like, by way of a brief statement, to point out to you and to members of the House that this is a matter considered to be of the utmost importance by the standing committee on administration of justice.

Your committee has been charged with the responsibility to inquire into the activities of Carlo Montemurro and his related companies, particularly C and M Financial Consultants Limited, Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation, Canadian Metal Recycling Labs and Astra Trust Company. To do this, our committee requested by way of motion that the minister produce certain documents as without these documents the work of the committee would be frustrated. The Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea) has failed to produce the documents in the time stipulated by the committee.

Today I received a letter from him stating it was his understanding that I would not make a report in the House until the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry) had made a representation to the committee this afternoon. This is simply not the case, as any reading of the transcripts of yesterday's justice committee deliberations will clearly show. I pointed out to the minister, through a call to his office at approximately 12:02 p.m. today, that this was not the case. It is clear to me and to other members of the committee that the minister was requested to produce the documents by 11:10 a.m.

I am mindful of the importance of the constitutional debate this evening and of private members' public business this afternoon. However, at a House leaders' meeting today, my leader sought a commitment from the government House leader (Mr. Wells) to have this matter debated and voted on following routine proceedings tomorrow. The government House leader would give no such guarantee.

This is an urgent matter that demands immediate attention. Standing order 30(c) requires the following: "After moving the adoption of a report, the chairman may make a brief statement and then shall adjourn the debate." Technically, therefore, I have no recourse but to follow the procedure set out.

I would however, ask members of the assembly to join me in voting against this motion of adjournment.

My colleagues and I realize that if the debate is adjourned today we may not have an opportunity to deal with this important matter in this House before adjournment. I feel the legitimate inquiry by the standing committee on administration of justice, of which I am the chairman, must not be stifled. The public has the right to know.

Now, as is my responsibility under standing order 30(c), I do hereby move the adjournment of the debate.

3:30 p.m.

5:35 p.m.

The House divided on Mr. Philip's motion for the adjournment of the debate, which was negated on the following vote:

Ayes 48; nays 56.

Mr. Speaker: The question now before the House is the motion for adoption of the report of the justice committee. Shall the motion carry?

Some hon. members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Does anyone wish to speak to the motion?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a couple of points on the record at this time. The real vote that has just gone on, of course, has not been on the substance of that motion or that report. We have really established a new interpretation at this time of what many of us thought were the rules of this House.

We had always believed, and it certainly is the interpretation I have received from people on the various committees who wrote these rules, that the intent was that reports from committees that contained substantive motions should be introduced with short remarks from the chairman of that committee and then adjourned. The understanding was that they would be adjourned.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with you that the rule says they shall be adjourned, and of course the way that is done is through a motion of adjournment, but it has always been my understanding that this would be a unanimously agreed adjournment.

I draw the House's attention to a report on October 6 moved by the member for Humber (Mr. MacBeth) from the select committee on constitutional reform. He moved the report be adopted when it came in here. We had agreement at that time of all the parties in this House to adopt that report and you said, Mr. Speaker, "I will hear the member for Humber, but I must remind the honourable member that a routine motion like that is usually best handled by a simple motion by the government House leader." That was the first point.

"If you are asking for us to approve what is contained in a committee report, the normal procedure is for the chairman to move the adjournment of the debate and for it to be recorded for debate on a later occasion.

"You do cause the chair some difficulty. However, I will hear what you have to say, and if we have the unanimous consent of the House to put the adoption of that report at this time, I will do so, but you know that we ran into considerable difficulty on a previous occasion."

I draw the attention of the House to this, Mr. Speaker, because—

Mr. Sargent: Why did you not say this before the vote?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I would have said this if I had had the opportunity. I just want to put very clearly on the record that our vote on this particular matter has nothing to do with the substance of this matter or any of those things concerned with this particular matter. What we have always understood in this House is that reports would be adjourned so they could be studied by the House. The reason for that I would submit is that this report contains a substantive motion.

Rule 37(a) says a substantive motion is a number of things and a motion for returns. This, in effect, is a kind of motion for returns. If this had been a substantive motion, it could not be moved in this House without notice. In effect, we are now being asked to vote on a motion from a committee without notice of the members of the House. It is a motion, I suggest, that most members, except those on the committee, do not even have in their hands.

What I am saying is, it is very difficult for the members of the House to speak in a debate and to vote on a motion at this time without even having that motion before them. In fact, that defeats the essence and substance of the motion on substantive motions.

5:40 p.m.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must remind the government House leader that there was an opportunity before I put the question to the House for the adjournment of the debate. I heard no one who wanted to express an opinion on the validity of the motion that was before the House. As members well know, any motion to adjourn the debate or to adjourn the House is not debatable.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: It's not debatable.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. A motion to adjourn the debate or to adjourn the House is clearly not debatable. If the government House leader wanted to get up on a point of order prior to my putting the question, he had an opportunity to do so. The question that is before the House now is whether the House wants to adopt the committee report. I recognize the minister and he has the floor, but he will have to speak to the substance of the motion, which is whether the House wishes to adopt the report of the committee.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I certainly respect what you say. I understand that you did not see me. I tried to get up before the vote was put.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Wells: My friends can talk like that. I even had the courtesy to send the Speaker the reference I quoted from before. I thought Mr. Speaker himself might interrupt these proceedings to remind the House again of the rule. However, I recognize it is not his duty to do that. I also recognize that once a motion to adjourn is put it is not debatable and it must be voted upon. The point is, Mr. Speaker, I suggest either you, the House leaders or the standing committee on procedural affairs should look at this, because we have now changed what was a pretty clear understanding—

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I really think my friend the House leader of the New Democratic Party is wrong. We have changed and we are now in another man's land as far as committee reports are concerned. That is the essence of my argument on this particular point about why this report should not be adopted today. The House is being asked to adopt a report which is a substantive motion that is not even in the hands of the members of this House to debate. I submit that is wrong, and the rules substantiate that; they say substantive motions must have notice given. Therefore, I would suggest the members should not pass this motion.

Let me also say the member for Etobicoke (Mr. Philip) indicated I said we would not debate this tomorrow morning. That is quite correct from the House leaders' meeting. But he left the impression that, if this report were adjourned, it would never be debated again in this session of the House. That is completely erroneous. That impression was never left. The record we have of debating these reports is a good one. We have always debated all of them. Even Nakina will be debated in due course, I am sure.

Speaking on the substance of this and further substantiating the point I have made—and I want to underline that—the vote we have just taken was a vote to uphold what we think are the rules of this House and the way this House should be administered, and not on the substance of this.

On the substance of the motion and the matter, the Attorney General indicated to the standing committee on administration of justice committee that he would appear this afternoon and fully discuss this matter.

This is a matter of great concern. It is a matter involving civil rights and the rights of everyone. It may be construed to involve only those who have been charged, but it is basically a matter that involves the rights of everyone in this province, our whole interpretation of the sub judice rule in this House and many other things.

We are being asked to pass a report and do something affecting such fundamental things in this province without prior notice or in any way knowing what is in this motion, without the Attorney General having been given an opportunity to appear fully before the justice committee. The Attorney General came this afternoon not expecting to sit here and wait for a vote but to be down in the committee discussing this important matter. That has been frustrated.

I am willing to suggest a compromise in this situation. Having voted that we are going to debate this now, this House should debate it now. But considering the import of what this motion deals with, considering the members have not had a full chance to discuss it, considering the Attorney General is ready, willing and wants to go before the justice committee and discuss the matter, after discussion in this House we should adjourn adoption of the report asking for a warrant from you until the Attorney General has had an opportunity to discuss the matter fully before the justice committee. Then I will give assurances to this House that, as government House leader, I will call the matter again and bring it to a vote at that time. If my friends are not willing to accept that procedure, I suggest we will have to vote against the adoption of this report.

Mr. Breithaupt: Mr. Speaker, there was only one point I particularly wished to raise in this debate this afternoon, and that is with respect to the events of yesterday. The committee, in its wisdom, passed a motion about 11 o'clock yesterday morning dealing with this particular matter. The Attorney General was kind enough—and I think that is the proper word to use—to appear with the Deputy Attorney General and a law officer at a few moments after one o'clock in the afternoon. We were able to hear the Attorney General explain at some length his particular concerns in this matter.

It was somewhat difficult to proceed, however, because there was not one Conservative member of the committee present, and there were only three other opposition members besides the chairman—it being very late in the afternoon, and the Attorney General's presence being, I think, unexpected at that point.

However, having made its motion, and there being no alternative, without a quorum, to deal otherwise with the matter, the committee was bound by the earlier ruling, which is why the motion, I believe it is fair to say, was put today by the chairman of the committee; he had no alternative but to bring before the House, at the earliest opportunity, the motion that had been passed.

Perhaps, if the attendance had been otherwise, the matter possibly could have been reversed at that point and the law officers of the crown could have been heard this afternoon, as I had suggested would have been a way to resolve the problem. However, in the absence of members of the committee, virtually nothing else could be done but to proceed in this fashion, with the hope that, if the Attorney General and his advisers were able to appear before the committee, possibly some other report would come forward from the committee that might reverse a step that had otherwise been made. But I put it to you, Mr. Speaker, that we had no alternative at that point but to reverse the earlier ruling. This is part of the difficulty in which we find ourselves.

5:50 p.m.

Interjections.

Mr. Breithaupt: The proposal having been made, if there had been one Tory present in the committee, we might have got somewhere. There was not one Tory present; so, as a result, we are here this afternoon and the Attorney General has the opportunity to speak to this issue. I wanted to put that matter before the Speaker so that we would know why we got into this circumstance, and I hope the Attorney General will speak to the report.

Hon. Mr. Pope: What a bunch of garbage. Adjourn the debate now and go downstairs.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Every member should have an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. Foulds: Let the Attorney General speak now.

Interjections.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, this afternoon at the House leaders' meeting, I volunteered to have the report debated tomorrow, which would have allowed the Attorney General to be present at the committee downstairs this afternoon. I have to remind the House that it was the government House leader who did not want to do it that way. Now we are into a hassle.

Interjections.

Mr. Martel: Do not barrack; that is factual.

In fact, I even volunteered to postpone it until Monday, if need be. We were not happy to do that. The House leader for the Liberals indicated he would prefer to do it sooner, but we were prepared to debate it tomorrow. If the government House leader and his party chose not to go that route and decided they wanted to resolve it this afternoon, that is their decision. But we were prepared to accommodate the Attorney General and allow him to appear this afternoon and then debate the report tomorrow. If I heard the government House leader correctly, that is what he just volunteered to do. We would not have gone through this hassle if he had accepted my proposal this afternoon.

If I could turn for a moment to the rules that my friend spoke to, the rule was not brought into the House for the reason he suggested. The government House leader, who continuously had to adjourn debate when reports were presented, did not want to be in the untenable position of appearing to be the person who put off all debates on all reports. So the new ruling was devised whereby the chairman of a committee would move the adjournment of the debate, after having an opportunity to make a few remarks, thus giving members of the House an opportunity to review the content of any given report. That is how that rule came about.

I think we have a problem yet. That is, unless there is agreement on a report, there is no guarantee that we can get a report back to the House for discussion. Up until this time it has worked well, save for one report which we are having a bit of a problem on. I think my friends from the Liberal Party and I are nervous about that one because we have attempted to have it brought forward on a number of occasions and there has been a little bit of reluctance—

Mr. Nixon: Nakina?

Mr. Martel: The Nakina one.

There is no mechanism to get it back to the House. If we are going to look at a mechanism that should be devised, once a report is tabled there should be a mechanism that says under certain circumstances or after an extended period of time this report must be called. In that way one has the assurance that a report is going to get back before the Legislature. It now rests totally with the government as to whether a report comes back. That is our concern with this one. If it had been adjourned this afternoon, there is no guarantee that we could ever get it back to be debated.

So except for one case, there has been no problem with that. But there is still not a real way of resolving it. Maybe that is the thing, in terms of the rules, that should be reviewed. If there were a time limit under which it must come back to the Legislature for debate, we would get ourselves out of this.

We had an easier way today—which I proposed and the government did not accept—and that was to debate it tomorrow morning.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, I would like to give some additional background in relation to this motion that is before the House, if I may. Certainly, in talking with a number of the members both from this side of the Legislature and across the aisle, it is very clear that many are not yet aware of the issues involved in this matter.

First of all, I would like to turn to the resolution that was passed by the committee because, as my House leader pointed out, this has not been distributed. With respect and not in any sense of criticism, I believe the majority of members are not aware of what this issue is really all about. I will quote from the proceedings the substance of the issue before us:

“Mr. Bradley moved that all materials relating to Carlo Montemurro and his related companies, particularly C and M Financial Consultants Limited, Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation, Canadian Metal Recycling Labs and Astra Trust Company, be produced to the committee, such materials to include all correspondence, interdepartmental memoranda, memoranda to file, application forms, notes, files and such other documents that are in the possession of any branch, board, agency, commission, registry or division of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.”

This motion, which was duly carried at some point by the committee, was made known to law officers of the crown and senior law officers of the Ministry of the Attorney General relatively shortly thereafter. The law officers of the crown were in possession of many of these documents as they pertained not only to an ongoing criminal investigation but also to criminal charges that had been laid. In relation to these criminal charges, as I will be discussing in a moment or two, there is actually a preliminary hearing scheduled to commence on Monday.

The law officers of the crown, having heard and being concerned about the proper administration of justice in this province and the extent to which this was going to firstly prejudice, undermine and potentially seriously interfere with an ongoing criminal investigation, and secondly, at the very least if not in fact, interfere with the proceedings that were before the court, brought it to my attention. As soon as I could, I attended—

Mr. S. Smith: Criminal?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: The preliminary hearing on the criminal charges, yes. I will give more details of that in a moment. As soon as this was brought to my attention, I decided I should go forthwith to the committee—which I did, as has already been noted by the member for Kitchener (Mr. Breithaupt), with the Deputy Attorney General and Mr. Howard Morton, the director of the crown law office, criminal division—to inform the members of the committee as fully and completely as we could of the issues involved.

You have been asked, sir, to issue a warrant. In the final analysis it is your discretion that will be applicable, because section 35 of the Legislative Assembly Act states that upon request you may issue such a warrant. I felt the members of the committee were entitled to all the relevant information we could divulge without ourselves interfering with the ongoing criminal investigation.

I want to stress at the outset that I was personally only familiar with the general details with respect to the nature of the investigation. Yesterday I appeared before the committee and I said in part that representations had been made in relation to the notices that have been issued and served with respect to civil proceedings. I do not want to dwell too long on those.

My senior law officers of the crown who have been advising the Ontario Provincial Police, particularly with respect to the criminal investigation, are very concerned about the Speaker's warrant in relation to the integrity of the ongoing investigation. In our view, the investigation could be seriously prejudiced by any issuance of a Speaker's warrant.

I was going to ask Mr. Howard Morton, who I have already introduced, to address members in relation to this issue, because he is more familiar with the details of the investigation than I am. Given the fact that there were a number of members of the committee who had voted on the original motion who were then present, I was quite prepared to have Mr. Morton address the committee at that time or, at the discretion of the chairman and the members of the committee, when there was, in the words of the member for Kitchener, "a larger audience."

I thought it was agreed. I do not want to get preoccupied with what was agreed, but it was my understanding—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I want to remind the Attorney General we have reached the time when we usually break for the dinner hour. Would this be a convenient point for him to break off his remarks and continue at eight?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Yes, it would, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I want to remind the House and the government House leader that the provisions of standing order 30 were not breached this afternoon. The chairman who brought the report in moved the adjournment of the debate. That was quite in order. He did move the adjournment of the debate. It was taken out of my hands by the House, which is supreme and which decided it did not want the debate to adjourn.

I want the government House leader to differentiate between this instance this afternoon and the one he quoted covering the member for Humber, who is the chairman of the select committee on constitutional reform. There is a distinct difference.

The House recessed at 6:05 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1980

The House resumed at 8:01 p.m.

CARLETON BY-ELECTION

Hon. Mr. Gregory: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege: It is a privilege for me to announce from Ottawa, that, out of 249 polls, 212 heard from, the NDP has 3,179 votes, the Liberals have 7,279 votes, and the PCs have 10,240 votes.

REPORT IN TORONTO SUN

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, prior to the recess I had asked for the right and you had extended to me the privilege to speak further on my point of privilege.

I had raised the question. In fact, I had made the statement with regard to the libel that had been committed. It had been perpetrated either by the member for Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid) or the member for Wentworth North (Mr. Cunningham), and that particular libel pertained to the notice sent up to the member of the press. That was a totally malicious and untrue statement.

I think I am entitled to have the member for Wentworth North here to answer to this matter. On the basis of the advice I have received from my discussions this afternoon with legal counsel, he must be entitled to answer to that. I am prepared to stand down until that occurs. But by the same token, because my reputation is at stake and it is a very serious matter, I ask that you exercise whatever you can in the way of influence, along with the leaders of the Liberal Party, to bring the member for Wentworth North before the House at the earliest moment to answer these charges. I must have an answer, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: As I reminded the honourable member this afternoon when he first raised the issue, it is only common courtesy that any person who is named as violating another member's privileges has to be given an opportunity to respond. I do not have it within my power to command him to be here at any given point in time. When he does arrive, I am sure the honourable member will avail himself of the opportunity to express his point of view. I do not have the authority to summon anybody at any particular point in time. No doubt, in due course the honourable member will be here to respond to any allegations you have made.

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, I ask the deputy leader of the Liberal caucus whether it is within his knowledge if the member for Wentworth North intends to be in the House tomorrow.

Mr. Nixon: It is not.

Mr. Williams: I did not hear the answer.

Mr. Speaker: You are not entitled to an answer. All you can do is put your point before the House. I am sure the honourable member to whom you refer will hear your remarks and, when he is here, he will respond to them.

REPORTS

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, as I recall when the House adjourned at six o'clock this evening, I was referring the members to certain extracts from the proceedings that took place before the standing committee on administration of justice yesterday. It was clear that some of the members indicated they would like to hear Mr. Howard Morton, the director of the crown law office, criminal division, because of the importance of these proceedings.

Although I am not familiar with everything that was said in the justice committee prior to the passage of the resolution which invites you, Mr. Speaker, to issue a Speaker's warrant, from what I have been able to learn and from what I recall as having been said yesterday, several members were totally unaware that criminal charges had been laid, that the matter was before the court and that there are accused individuals who are about to appear at a preliminary hearing.

In such a vital matter, I would like to think that even members who find it difficult at the best of times to demonstrate the most basic, elementary courtesy to this House should appreciate that this is an issue that affects the rights of every individual in this country. Regardless of what we may think of them personally, individuals who are charged in our courts have a right to a trial in a properly constituted court of law, not in this Legislature and not in a committee thereof.

I honestly believe the overwhelming majority of members on both sides of this House appreciate the importance of these fundamental principles. With respect, I am trying to direct my remarks in a nonpartisan vein. I cannot speak for certain but, as I indicated earlier, I doubt the majority of the members who voted on that resolution were aware of the criminal proceedings and the ongoing criminal investigation. I do not know to what extent the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea) was aware of the criminal proceedings.

In any event, as was suggested by the member for Kitchener (Mr. Breithaupt) and as appeared to be the view of other members of the committee, they invited me, as Attorney General, to return this afternoon and appear before the justice committee in order that they might hear Mr. Morton, the director of the crown law office, who was there yesterday and was again to be here today and Mr. Blenus Wright, the assistant deputy minister in charge of the civil branch of the ministry.

As I indicated to the members of the justice committee yesterday, I was not personally familiar with all the details of the investigation. It should not come as a surprise that the Attorney General cannot keep himself apprised of the day-to-day workings of any particular investigation.

Certainly on that occasion the members wanted very much to hear from Mr. Morton, and it was my understanding that he was going to be given an opportunity to address certain remarks to the committee today in relation to the nature of the investigation and what was involved. I want to indicate at this time, that, if the justice committee had proceeded as I thought was the intention of the members at that time, Mr. Morton's concerns would have been expressed to them.

8:10 p.m.

I am reading a statement prepared for me, at my request, by the director of the crown law office, as he is most familiar with the details of this investigation.

My major concern, and the concern of the senior law officers, with respect to the justice committee's resolutions, is that if adopted by this Legislature they will impair a very important and complex ongoing criminal investigation. Since early spring of this year, the Ontario Provincial Police have been conducting a criminal investigation with respect to the financial affairs of Mr. Montemurro; prior to that time, the Ontario Securities Commission had been conducting a similar investigation into C and M Financial Consultants Limited. As a result of the securities commission investigation, Mr. Montemurro and two of his associates have been charged with conspiracy to defraud the public, fraud, conspiracy to commit theft, and theft.

The preliminary hearing into those charges is scheduled to commence next Monday, and it is entirely possible—of course, I cannot speculate—that counsel for Mr. Montemurro may very well wish to adjourn these proceedings in the event that a Speaker's warrant is issued. While I am not suggesting any of our provincial court judges are going to be influenced by a debate that goes on in this House or in a committee of this House, what we, who are truly concerned about the administration of justice, are concerned about is the appearance of a man who is on trial at a preliminary hearing having the very issues related to his trial debated in a committee of this Legislature. Surely this is not a result that is desired by any responsible member, at least, of this House.

A much broader OPP investigation is still under way, and I am advised it will be some time before the decision is made as to what, if any, further charges will be laid. I might add that a very experienced counsel from the crown law office, criminal division, has been assisting the police from the outset of this investigation. Approximately 50 search warrants have been executed, and more than 50 boxes of documents have been seized. Accountants have been retained, and they are in the process of assisting the OPP in their investigation.

Although I am not prepared to hamper an ongoing criminal investigation by having a public debate at this time with respect to the details of the investigation, I am prepared to state that the substantial portion of the investigation centres on Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation and Astra Trust, the very companies named in the committee's resolution.

As Attorney General, I must impress upon you, Mr. Speaker, that in my view a Speaker's warrant to produce the documents set out in the justice committee's resolutions will seriously impair the integrity of a very important ongoing criminal investigation. In fact, it may impede it, or it may even grind it to a halt. As chief law officer of the crown, with public responsibilities that flow from that position, I cannot idly stand by and permit that to happen.

In addition to what I have already said, I would only add that, were a Speaker's warrant to issue, there is a very real risk that the three accused persons whose preliminary hearing starts next Monday will be prejudiced with respect to their right to a fair trial by virtue of the publicity which, I might say, has already been generated by the justice committee's resolutions. The right of any accused person to a fair trial is a right I am not prepared to compromise.

I remind the members of the House that, apart from the responsibilities some of them obviously are unwilling to discharge, they have a responsibility to you, too, sir.

Reading section 35 of the Legislative Assembly Act, which perhaps is not familiar to some of the members: "When the assembly requires the attendance of a person before the assembly or a committee thereof, the Speaker may issue his warrant directed to the person named in the order of the assembly requiring his attendance before the assembly or committee and the production of the papers and things as ordered."

It appears quite clear that it was the intent of the Legislature in passing this section to vest in the Speaker the discretion with respect to whether or not to issue such a warrant. I think—

Mr. Warner: You only give half the story. Why don't you try subsection 1 of that?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: The honourable member will have his opportunity to participate in the debate. He is always telling people to resign almost every hour on the hour. He is masquerading as the justice critic for his party. Why does he not smarten up for a change?

Mr. Warner: And you're masquerading as Attorney General. Read subsection 1 of that.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I would think, Mr. Speaker, even the members of the third party would have enough respect for your position not to ask you to have to exercise that very difficult decision. I would have thought the members of the Legislature would have more respect for the position of Speaker than to put you in that very difficult position.

The other matter that has been considered, I think it is fair to say, is not of as crucial importance as the matters I have been discussing, but they are matters related to the administration of justice. I am addressing myself to the issue of the civil proceedings that have been commenced. The advice I have from the senior law officers of the crown in the civil division of the ministry is as follows: I think again this may be of assistance to the members, and I am speaking about the majority of the members who want to know these facts.

Mr. Martel: You don't want to assist; you want to insult.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Perhaps some of the honourable members over there might learn again the most basic elements of courtesy and just allow the other members to hear these submissions.

Mr. Martel: Don't talk down to us.

Mr. Makarchuk: We've had enough of your sanctimonious claptrap.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: The people of Carleton have told the people of Ontario what they think of the NDP today.

Mr. Martel: That's because you blew in with every goodie possible to give in a by-election.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, the first notice of a potential claim in this matter was served on our office in June 1980. We have now received a total of 32 separate notices of claim delivered on behalf of approximately 300 claimants. Ten separate writs of summons naming the crown as a defendant have been issued and served on our office.

In addition, we are aware of three other writs of summons issued on behalf of a total of 83 individual plaintiffs. Mr. I. B. Weinstein, who at the material time was the registrar of mortgage brokers, is named personally as a defendant. A number of other writs of summons may have been issued but not yet served in which the crown or Mr. Weinstein or other individuals are named as defendants. No statements of claim have, as yet been delivered in any of the actions.

In every notice of claim and in every writ of summons we have seen so far, the specific issue raised is the decision of the registrar to grant a licence as a mortgage broker to Remor Investment Management Corporation, which is exactly the issue sought to be discussed in this House or in committee. In my view, any discussion of this matter, either in the House or in committee, would be premature while the lawsuits are pending as it could tend to create a prejudgement in the minds of the public, or in the minds of the litigants, as to the issues involved in the litigation. It would also set up this House, or the committee, as an alternative forum for the trial of the issues.

It is my view that this, in turn, would constitute a serious prejudice both for the rights of the registrar of mortgage brokers and the rights of the plaintiffs in the various lawsuits. In addition, because of the danger of prejudgement of the issues based on incomplete information or on an inadequate understanding of its effect, it also could create a serious prejudice to the administration of justice in this province.

For these reasons, it was our advice to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations to advise this House that the matters in issue are sub judice and we advised him not to produce the files and documents of the ministry with respect to the matters in issue in the litigation.

Finally, it was my respectful view and, I believe quite frankly, the view of a number of the members opposite, that the proper forum to deal with this issue, if it is required to be dealt with further, would have been the justice committee, where the members could have heard not only from the Attorney General or members of this Legislature but also from senior law officers of the crown who are much more intimately and better acquainted with the facts of these matters than I am. The members of the committee would have had the opportunity to benefit from the views of these senior law officers of the crown whose sole responsibility in this matter is to protect—

Mr. M. N. Davison: To protect the minister.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry:—the integrity of the administration of justice in this province. I hope that remark was not meant to be heard by anyone other than the person who uttered it. Suggesting that senior law officers of the crown have any other goal—

Mr. M. N. Davison: I am suggesting that it is the Attorney General's.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry:—than to protect the integrity of the administration of justice in this province—

Mr. Sargent: They do what they are told by the Attorney General's office. I will prove it to be the minister in a minute.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I say to the member for Grey-Bruce, that is beneath contempt. It really is.

I would have thought the committee would have been the proper forum to have heard from these law officers. I still think, on this very vital and crucial debate as far as the interests of individual citizens of this province are concerned in relation to proper law enforcement and the administration of justice, and before we risk allowing it to be ground down into a lot of mindless partisanship, the members of the Legislature should consider the possibility of allowing the justice committee to consider this matter further and to deliberate on it rather than placing you, sir, in a most invidious position in exercising your discretion in a matter that is of such fundamental importance to the administration of justice in this province which bears directly on the rights of every single citizen in our province.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, it is with somewhat mixed emotions I rise to speak on this matter. Having heard the position put forward by the Attorney General, one of course has to think very deeply about it.

However, I would bring to the Attorney General's attention a ruling that was made on July 8, 1977. It was a ruling made by the then Speaker Rowe in regard to Hydro contracts and the whole subject of sub judice. I put this to the committee yesterday morning before the Attorney General came in.

The Speaker was making a ruling on a question put by the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon) in regard to Hydro contracts. The Speaker referred to a study that had been done at the federal level in regard to the sub judice rule. I want to emphasize this point in particular. Speaker Rowe said this, "May I first say as strongly as I can that I know of no authority by which any court can prevent free discussion in this chamber." He re-emphasized that later on.

That is the first and most fundamental point. It is perhaps somewhat ironic that I should be quoting that particular section and bringing to the attention of the Attorney General this evening that this assembly has the authority for free discussion and free speech, when I personally have been the butt or recipient of a diatribe by the member for Oriole (Mr. Williams), which I think the Attorney General would agree would constitute libel and slander outside of this chamber. But he has that right as a member of this Legislature, and he has exercised that right perhaps a little further than most of us would like. I say to the Attorney General that this assembly as a whole has the right of free discussion of any matter that it sees fit. That is the first point.

On the general matter of sub judice, this federal report went on to state, and I quote from section 22: "In the view of your committee, the justification for the convention has not been established beyond all doubt, although it would not go so far as to recommend that it be totally abolished. Your committee believes, however, that any modification to the practice should be in the direction of greater flexibility rather than stricter application."

Further, Mr. Speaker—and I am sure you have the reference—I quote again: "On no account should the convention which has been applied infrequently in years past come to be regarded as a fixed and binding rule. It is not reasonable, for example, that Parliament should be any more limited in this debate concerning judicial proceeding than is the press in the reporting of such proceedings."

There is more, Mr. Speaker. As you well know, it also says, "Your committee recommends that the Speaker should remain the final arbiter in the matter."

The point remains that the whole sub judice rule is a vague one. It has been used on occasion in this assembly and in others as an excuse for not providing information or not taking action. I am concerned about this matter. I refer the Attorney General to the question put on November 13 by the member for Kitchener (Mr. Breithaupt). I remind him of that question to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea) in regard to the documentation and memorandum concerning the registration of Re-Mor after C and M had been put into receivership.

I find it somewhat strange, quite frankly, that the Attorney General should have come into the committee at the point he did yesterday—I happened to have come back into the committee—with a law officer of the crown, and attempted to explain to the committee at that point why he felt the way he did.

I would have thought at the very least it would have been incumbent upon the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations at the time he received that brief paragraph from the law officers of the crown to give a much fuller explanation than, in fact, was given.

Hon. Mr. Drea: In fairness, that concerned a civil matter. The discussions that Mr.

Morton attempted to bring to the committee yesterday, as I said, were unknown to me.

Mr. T. P. Reid: I appreciate that, but the minister did stand in his place the other day and say he could not reply to the request of the member for Kitchener because of the ruling of the law officer of the crown. With all due respect, and perhaps with some cynicism over the years, that is not sufficient. We have to have valid reasons why these matters should be considered sub judice.

8:30 p.m.

I find it difficult to understand how the production of these documents is going to prejudice or affect these cases. The justice committee, having received the documents—which it is entitled to under the rules of this House—will proceed with them in the way it best sees fit. It has that authority and that responsibility, as the committee charged with this matter, to proceed in the best way it knows how.

I was also concerned that the Attorney General put a new twist on the whole sub judice rule. It was my understanding that, vague as the rule has been in the past, at least it referred primarily and specifically, if not completely, to criminal actions in the court. The Attorney General shakes his head. Perhaps I have been under some misapprehension in that regard but I have not yet, until tonight, heard the argument that the sub judice rule also applied to ongoing or potential criminal investigations.

It seems to me, if we carry that argument to its logical conclusion, there is little if anything we can discuss in this chamber if that is a valid argument. I do not think it is acceptable to us as an argument to use the sub judice rule for closing off debate and discussion on this matter. I quoted the ruling of your predecessor, Mr. Speaker, on July 8, 1977. I fail to see how the production of these documents for the justice committee will have any prejudicial effect on these matters and we would hope the motion and report would carry.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, with the indulgence of the House, I want to vent my anger for about 60 seconds and then I want to try to deal with the substance of the matter. It is incomprehensible to me that the suggestion made by the House leader of this party to the government House leader that this matter be debated tomorrow morning was not accepted. That would have given the opportunity, as the record of the proceedings of the justice committee shows, to have heard the Attorney General and anyone the Attorney General wished to bring to the committee this afternoon.

My anger is not about that matter. My anger is that the private members' public business has been totally eliminated for this week. My anger is also directed at the fact that the third reading of the debate on the select committee on constitutional reform is not going to take place or only in truncated form.

In addition, it is a personal concern of mine as a member of the assembly that the failure to have maturity about the proceedings of this House disrupts the work of each member of the assembly. In this particular instance, I have had in my appointment book for well over two months an obligation to attend a meeting about lead pollution in my riding from 5:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. today and to attend the annual meeting of the South Riverdale Community Health Centre this evening. I am prevented from participating in those events because of the immaturity displayed today about this matter, although I was able to be there briefly during the dinner recess this evening.

Having said that, let me try to deal with the issue before us, which is the question of whether we should adopt the report of the justice committee in the light of the comments made principally by the Attorney General and his concern about it.

My remarks are addressed to allaying his concern by bringing to his attention what the justice committee is about, what the proceedings of the justice committee were dealing with yesterday, and not just to inform the Attorney General, because I believe my colleagues in the assembly who were not in that committee should have an understanding of what is being asked.

First of all, let me clarify as best I can what the process was at the end of the committee yesterday, not because I was present, but because there has been some confusion that in some way the committee was creating this difficulty. The committee did not create this difficulty. I quote from near the end of yesterday's Hansard with respect to the committee hearing, after the Attorney General had been there and spoken, when the question arose of whether there were sufficient members present to deal with the matter that had been raised and all the other matters that had been raised. My colleague the member for Brantford (Mr. Makarchuk) made these remarks almost at the end of the meeting:

"My feeling on this matter is that it proceed as it is right now, which still gives us time tomorrow when the committee meets. Mr. Morton can still make his statement. If the committee decides to withdraw the warrant at that time or requests the Speaker not to execute that warrant, that procedure can be followed. We have the time to follow that process. As the motions are at this time, I would suggest the proper procedures be carried out. The committee still has the option to change its mind on the basis of the evidence we will hear tomorrow and prevent the execution of the warrant. That time is still available to us and I suggest we will leave things as they stand at this time."

The member for Kitchener intervened, "Then we will hear Mr. Morton first thing tomorrow afternoon." There were a couple of other interventions and my colleague the member for Hamilton Centre stated: "If, in fact, the committee is given a warrant, the motion is granted and the warrant is obtained, then there is no problem if something should come forward that convinces us we should not do it by asking the Speaker to stay the execution of that warrant. It is not going to happen instantaneously. Nothing ever does."

The member for Kitchener then concluded: "We have no choice in the matter, in the absence of the withdrawal of the motion, and we do not have a quorum to continue with the placing of a new motion other than the one that would embarrass the chairman. I believe, Mr. Chairman, we have no alternative but to adjourn and to hear Mr. Morton tomorrow afternoon."

Mr. Chairman said: "We stand adjourned. Will the Solicitor General be free tomorrow afternoon?" The Attorney General replied, "Yes, I think we are scheduled to be here." Then the committee adjourned at 1:30 in the afternoon. I simply read that to indicate quite clearly that the normal adjournment hour for the committee was one o'clock. There was no quorum present at the time this discussion took place. There was no authority in the committee to rescind or alter or vary in any way what had been passed when the committee met in the morning.

What did the committee do when it met in the morning? It dealt with the procedural matters. There were four motions put before the committee. I do not intend to read them at length. They are in the proceedings. Three of the motions were put by the member for St. Catharines (Mr. Bradley). The fourth motion, the one relating to the request for the Speaker's warrant, was put by my colleague the member for Hamilton Centre.

It is because of the substance of the matter in issue that I am very much concerned with the great, broad cloak the Attorney General spread about the matter in the House tonight. I do not yield, and no other member of the House yields, to the Attorney General on the question of the integrity of the administration of justice in the province. He happens to carry the ministerial responsibility in this House. We all share that responsibility and no one can impute by direct words or otherwise a greater concern to some members of this House than resides in other members.

I get concerned when the Attorney General smothers or attempts to smother that issue on the basis that somehow or other he has sole responsibility. He only has sole responsibility in the sense that he is responsible to this House. It is important for the Attorney General, when he comes before the House to ask that a matter related to one of the committees of the House be aborted, that he stand in his place and understand what it was that the committee was about.

I suggest the Attorney General's remarks tonight showed at least an ignorance about what the committee was saying yesterday. I do not want to repeat the motions because they tended to be put in formal terms. Three of them were put by the member for St. Catharines.

The first motion, which was the formal gut motion before the committee, was expressed in formal terms and then explained to the committee by the member for St. Catharines. He said, "Through this particular motion, we would like to examine the role of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations." That was the matter the committee was asked to consider.

Before I go on, let me express that this House, under its rules, on a petition signed by 20 members, referred the report of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations to that committee to carry out its instructions. The problem, and I want to make this very clear, is that the committee's mandate will continue. The committee has no alternative as a creature of this House but to continue its investigation into the matters with which it has been charged.

The problem will be that if the argument of the Attorney General is accepted, the committee will be unable to do its work in the way in which this assembly must expect it to do its work and that is ably, well and efficiently.

I want to emphasize that the purpose of the committee, in the words of the member for St. Catharines who moved the motion which was passed by the committee, is, "Through this particular motion, we would like to examine the role of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations." He then went on to particularize the nature of the inquiry into the role of the ministry. Because we were not engaged in something called a fishing expedition, it was very clear as to what the responsibility of the committee is in that investigation and examination.

Again, quoting the member for St. Catharines, ". . . and, in particular, the registrar of mortgage brokers in relation to the issuance of a mortgage broker's licence to Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation. We would also, through this motion, like to examine the role of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations and, in particular, the registrar of loan and trust corporations, in relation to the denial of a provincial trust company charter to a trust company to be incorporated by Mr. Carlo Montemurro and the subsequent registration and monitoring by the registrar of Astra Trust Company; and also, the role of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations and, in particular, the Ontario Securities Commission, in relation to investigations pertaining to C and M Financial Consultants Limited, Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation, Astra Trust Company and other related companies."

I do want to emphasize, so it will not be overlooked, that that is the mandate of responsibility which the standing committee on the administration of justice has before it. We are now being told that to investigate the role of the ministry in some way is going to prejudice the rights of individual citizens because of certain civil matters and certain criminal matters which are outstanding before the courts. I want to say there is nothing whatsoever in the role of the committee in this matter that will in any way prejudice anyone in any trial in any court arising out of the defalcations which have damaged so many people.

I want to impress on the House we must have confidence in the committees and we must have confidence in this committee. If this matter is proceeded with and the warrant is issued, as I hope and trust it will be, and if that committee is aware in any way during the course of its investigation that it will interfere with those rights of individual citizens before the courts, the confidence of this House in that committee is such that the committee will respect the integrity of the administration of justice. To say at this point that the committee will run roughshod over the rights of people shows, in my judgement, a total lack of understanding by the Attorney General of the functioning of committees of the House and a lack of respect for the integrity of those committees.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Why did you not want the law officers of the crown to have an opportunity to discuss it?

Mr. Renwick: Perhaps a little later I will come back to the point my House leader made this afternoon and to the point I made about the process that will take place in the committee that will give the Attorney General the opportunity to make whatever statement he wants to make.

I simply want to make the point that the committee is not only entitled to respect, but this House would be most unwise not to respect the work of that committee. The committee is made up of members of this assembly who are alert to the kinds of concerns we all share about the integrity of the administration of justice.

My colleague the member for Brantford said so in expressing it. My colleague the member for Hamilton Centre at the end of the desultory talk yesterday indicated quite clearly what the position would be. That is not a particular bar.

I want to draw clearly to the attention of the House the two matters which relate to something called this vexed rule of sub judice which is before us, one relating to civil matters and one relating to criminal matters. Let me say right at the beginning that during the course of the proceedings of that committee yesterday morning, when the four motions were put, three by the member for St. Catharines and one by the member for Hamilton Centre, we were talking about the civil litigation that was the subject of questions on the preceding day to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations by members of this assembly. That is what we were directed to.

I want the Attorney General to understand that, yes, on Wednesday morning the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations indicated and recalled to the House for those who had not recalled it that there were outstanding charges. It was in the minds of the members of the committee that there were outstanding charges when they went to pursue this course. That is not because we were saying we do not understand or do not appreciate that what we are doing is not to prejudice the people who are standing trial in the province in these matters. That was not it, but they were aware of it and the purpose, as I said, was to investigate the role of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations in respect of the three matters outlined by the member for St. Catharines.

8:50 p.m.

I want to draw to your attention, not so much because it is a matter of your ruling at this point, Mr. Speaker, because it is a motion before the House for the adoption of a report, but as it is in essence a question of the sub judice rule, and I want to put clearly on the record what the rules of the House say about that matter:

"In debate, a member shall be called to order by the Speaker if he refers to any matter that is the subject of a proceeding (i) that is pending in a court or before a judge for judicial determination, or (ii) that is before any quasi-judicial body constituted by the House or by or under the authority of an act of the Legislature."

Both those headings are qualified by the following clause: "where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Speaker that further reference would create a real and substantial danger of prejudice to the proceeding."

I listened carefully to the Attorney General, and I want to say that in no way will this create a real and substantial danger of prejudice to the proceeding. If there are those who want to prejudge the matter at this time and say, "Oh yes, it will," then I say let us await the event.

Let us have the courtesy to give the committee of this assembly what it is entitled to: the respect to understand that in anything they do, whether it is related to the warrant which is one of the matters in the report to be adopted or whether it is simply in the course of other proceedings before that committee, they will be fully aware of their responsibility with respect to that kind of prejudice. To say at this point that it would be at least to prejudice. In my judgement, so far there has been no indication by the Attorney General that there is any real substance to the allegation he has made that we have no concern for the administration of justice and he is the only one who can be entrusted with this operation.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal privilege: I did not impute that motive to the committee. I invited the members of the committee to avail themselves of the opportunity of further deliberations with law officers of the crown to attempt to sort this matter out. I did not say, "You are not entitled to any documents whatsoever," nor did I impute that the members of the committee were all dedicated to running roughshod over the rights of individual citizens. I indicated that their responsibility to the administration of justice would demand that at least they make that attempt. That is quite different from the remarks attributed to me by the member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I did not mean to provoke the Attorney General in the matter. I want to deal further with the present wording of the sub judice rule we have in our rules.

Interjection.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I heard an interjection there that was clearly unparliamentary and I ask the member for Sudbury East to withdraw it.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, it was just a name I called him, but I will withdraw it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What did he call him?

Mr. Speaker: It is not a part of the record. The member for Riverdale will please continue.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, the rule we now have in our standing orders book on the doctrine related to matters of sub judice has evolved over a long period of time. I believe, along with my colleague the member for Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid), that the statement made by the Speaker's predecessor, Mr. Rowe, on July 8, 1977, is a very adequate statement of the present position under which we act with respect to the rule we have before us. I want to quote only portions of it, but I want to emphasize those particular portions.

I quote from the ruling of Mr. Speaker Rowe at that time, "May I first say as strongly as I can that I know of no authority by which any court can prevent free discussion in this chamber." Within that context, Speaker Rowe then went on and quoted from the study made by the House of Commons of Canada about this convention of the sub judice rule, and he concluded his remarks by saying, "I can see no reason why similar principles ought not to guide the members of this House."

At this point, I am not going to deal with one portion of that House of Commons report with respect to the matter of questions to the minister and a minister's claim, in response, not to answer the question because of sub judice matters. That is dealt with in one of the conclusions of the House of Commons report. I do want to read the one that I believe is pertinent to the work of the committee, because I think it will assist us in solving the dilemma we are in tonight:

"Your committee has given consideration to the role of the Speaker in the application of the convention. It is submitted that while there can be no substitute for the discretion of the chair, in the last resort all members of the House should share in the responsibility of exercising restraint when it seems called for. A member who feels that there could be a risk of causing prejudice in referring to a particular case or inquiry should refrain from raising the matter. Additionally, a member who calls for the suppression of discussion of a matter on grounds of sub judice should be obliged to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the chair that he has reasonable grounds for fearing that prejudice might result. Should a question to a minister touch upon a matter sub judice . . ." and so on and he deals with the question matter which I do not want to touch upon.

Then it goes on:

"Your committee is of the opinion that precise regulations concerning the application of the sub judice convention cannot be evolved and it would be unwise to attempt to do so. Your committee recommends that the Speaker should remain the final arbiter in the matter, that he should retain the authority to prevent discussion of matters in the House on the grounds of sub judice but that he should only exercise this discretion in exceptional cases where it is clear to him that to do otherwise could be harmful to the specific individuals. In exercising this discretion your committee recommends that when there is a doubt in the mind of the chair a presumption should exist in favour of allowing debate and against the application of the convention. In the view of your committee prejudice is most likely to occur in respect of criminal cases and civil cases of defamation where juries are involved."

That is the present statement, and to relate it to what we are about in this assembly, all the House is being asked to do is to adopt a report of the committee, one element of which would be that a Speaker's warrant be issued for the production of certain documents. The production of the documents to which the committee was referring was the production of the documents within the ministry. It was drawn in such a way as to indicate quite clearly that it is not a request for the 40 or 50 packing cases or crates of documents that have been seized by the Attorney General from these various companies or from any of the people who are being charged. It is a request for the production of the documents related to the investigation which the committee is charged to carry out about the role of the ministry.

Materials we would be calling for to be presented to the committee would be all the materials relating to Carlo Montemurro and his related companies, particularly C and M Financial Consultants Limited, Re-Mor Investment Management Corporation and Astra Trust Company. Such material shall include all correspondence, interdepartmental memoranda, applications, forms, notes, files, and so on, in the possession of any branch, board, registry or division of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Again it is carefully constructed so that it is the responsibility of the committee to deal with what is in the possession of the ministry, having to do with the very serious concerns that exist in this House about the role of the ministry in the matters referred to by the member for St. Catharines (Mr. Bradley).

The other aspect, with respect to the witnesses to be called, detailed the persons who were to be called. The persons to be called were the minister, the deputy minister, the executive director of the business practices division, the deputy director of the enforcement branch of the Ontario Securities Commission, the chief investigator of the investigation section, and Mr. M. A. Thompson, executive director of the financial institutions division of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

As you will see, Mr. Speaker, the matter was carefully constructed and carefully constructed by the member for St. Catharines and the member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. M. N. Davison) to specify very clearly the precise limitations of the investigation they were going to carry out. That had nothing to do with civil suits by individual citizens against the ministry or any of the officials of the ministry under the Proceedings Against the Crown Act. It had nothing whatsoever to do with the questions relating to evidentiary matters to be brought in at a preliminary hearing on the basis of conspiracy to defraud, fraud, conspiracy to steal and theft or whatever other charges are before the preliminary inquiry which, I understand from the Attorney General, is to start this coming week.

I cannot conceive that there is any judge anywhere who would so misunderstand his responsibilities as to grant an adjournment on the basis of any of the matters we have been trying to deal with, subject to the problems we have run into this afternoon in the standing committee on administration of justice.

Let me also state that there is nothing in the limited role of the standing committee on administration of justice in this matter as required by this House which will affect the ongoing police investigation in any way. The police can go about their business and we will go about ours. This idea that somehow or other there is a tandem and an "after you Alphonse" operation is totally wrong. We have our responsibilities and the police have theirs. Those two matters are not in collision. They can go along in tandem or in parallel or any other way. The committee is always open to be spoken to at any time by any member of the Attorney General's staff to make a case that a particular matter being considered is a matter directly related to those trials or those matters and to make the argument about prejudice.

To make a blanket argument, however, that the ongoing police investigation or the preliminary hearing is in some way going to be—and I think I quote the Attorney General correctly—something like "impaired if not ground to a halt" is a ridiculous argument to put to the assembly about the work of one of its own committees.

I have gone on at some length because, more than anything else, I was anxious to explain, to the members of the assembly who were not sitting on the committee, the course of events, the limited nature of the responsibility that committee has under the rules of the House and the responsibility for its continuing inquiry. The particular motion that is causing the concern is limited to the documents and the information that are in the hands of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. It is their documents, it is their witnesses we are calling, and it is for the purpose of investigating their role. It has nothing whatsoever to do with the civil actions that have been brought against the minister or other members. It has nothing to do with the criminal matters that are now before the court and certainly there is nothing that would indicate in any way that an ongoing police investigation is an automatic signal for this House to cease and desist from carrying out its basic responsibilities.

I made the point because I was intrigued by the argument that a sub judice rule, which had its origins long before the crown was subject to suit at all, is now called in aid of the crown against a committee of the assembly for a ministry that is responsible to the assembly. Talk about the inherent con-tradition in other matters, but that inherent contradiction is one that simply defies me. There is no way this assembly can be diverted from its responsibility to carry out an examination of the role of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations in the matters which were put before the assembly by my colleagues the member for St. Catharines and the member for Hamilton Centre.

Because the Attorney General again raised the matter when he made an interjection a while ago, let me end where I started on this matter. It was the specific request made by the House leader of the New Democratic Party to the government House leader, to have this matter brought before the assembly and debated, that would have given the Attorney General the opportunity this afternoon to have put his position. I regret that did not take place. That is not our responsibility.

I expressed my concern at the beginning of my remarks about the immaturity of what took place in disrupting the private members' public business and disrupting the debate that was an order of business of the House. I will never understand that lack of understanding by the government House leader in this matter.

Nothing I have heard from the Attorney General says that there is any prejudice to anybody under any rule of this House by an adoption of this report that would see the orderly process of an examination by the standing committee on administration of justice of the role of that ministry. It would not be anybody else's role. It would not be a fishing expedition. It would be a carefully limited investigation of the role of that ministry. It is there on the record. If we were to permit the interpretation put by the Attorney General to prevent the adoption of this report then on matters of urgency in the public interest, this House will not be able to fulfil its function.

I urge my colleagues in the whole House to have confidence in the standing committee on administration of justice. I urge them to understand that the committee is well aware of its obligations under the rule with respect to sub judice and that the chairman of the committee is charged with the responsibility in a committee of enforcing the rules of the House with respect to sub judice. The committee will always be open to representations on any issue about this ongoing examination from the Attorney General, or from anyone whom he deposes to come before the committee making any of the allegations in specifics that he has made in such broad general terms tonight. I simply say, on that basis, let us agree to adopt the report of the chairman of the standing committee on administration of justice, which will let that committee get about its business. Let us have confidence in that committee to abide by the rules of the House on the matters of sub judice.

I am certain that will be the outcome and they will be able to get on with their business, and the matters can be resolved in a way that is quite amicable.

9:10 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, very briefly, a few remarks: I want to place on the record very firmly and very concretely that the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, from day one in this matter—

Mr. Sargent: Speak into the mike. I can't hear you.

Hon. Mr. Drea: The microphone is on.

Mr. Sargent: I couldn't hear you.

Hon. Mr. Drea: The member must be having a problem. I'm sorry. From day one in this present matter—

Mr. Sargent: Now we can hear him.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Is something the matter now?

Mr. Sargent: Go ahead.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Thank you.

I believe it was a ministerial statement concerning certain criminal charges that were laid that began day one in this matter. I want it clearly placed on the record that I personally, as the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, was prepared at all times to provide any information asked of me, either in this House or in committee. In the spring half of my estimates, I discussed a great many matters, even though a number of people who now have become suddenly interested in the matter were not there and sometimes choose not to recall that when the questions were asked of me in the House. I want to set this very clearly on the record because of the events of yesterday; because Mr. Morton did not have the opportunity to go before the committee, I want to set a sequence of events entirely—

Mrs. Campbell: Whose fault was that?

Hon. Mr. Drea: It was not my fault. The committee said they could not hear him.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: There was no quorum in the committee at the time the matter was before it.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I was there, and I was perfectly aware of how many people were there.

Mr. Makarchuk: Well, was there a quorum?

Hon. Mr. Drea: No. There was not a quorum. You read the record. I said because the committee could not hear him. It has been told over and over again tonight why the committee could not hear him. If the member wants me to parrot all his mouthings, I will be glad to do so.

Mr. Makarchuk: You might be able to say something intelligent if you parroted my mouthings.

Hon. Mr. Drea: I would become—never mind what I would become.

Mr. Speaker, when the question by the member for Kitchener was asked Thursday last, it pertained solely to the file of the Re-Mor company and to files of the registrar. It was limited in scope. At that time I said I would bring back a report. I received the advice of the law officers of the crown to read a statement, which I did. That has been discussed fully.

At that time there was some confusion in the House. I have been assured by honourable members who raised interjection queries that they were not questioning my integrity or my honesty in stating there were writs out. Those matters have been put forward very clearly by the Attorney General tonight. But obviously there was some confusion as to the exact status of particular aspects of civil litigation, particularly if writs, rather than notices, had been served.

I trust the Attorney General's statement earlier tonight, where he outlined a sequence of notices and writs, has answered and clarified that question. Even though that matter dealt with Re-Mor, I assure the House that as late as 12:30 p.m. yesterday, Wednesday, I was not aware of the full scope of the criminal investigation which is under the direction and supervision of Mr. Morton. When Mr. Morton arrived at the committee there was another bill in process. I spoke to Mr. Morton outside. Mr. Morton informed me the entire Astra and Re-Mor matter was under active criminal investigation. I knew the C and M Financial Consultants matter was under investigation, as did every member of the House, because I announced it back in the early part of the spring session. In that statement back in the spring session I said there would be ongoing investigations into Re-Mor.

I want to make it perfectly clear that the practice in this province is that, in a criminal investigation, those in charge of the criminal investigation at the public prosecutor's level, at the actual field level of the police or, indeed, at the level of investigatory people of the Ontario Securities Commission, they do not report to the minister as to their day-to-day progress, lack of progress or development in a matter, notwithstanding it may be information that originated from a ministry or a minister and notwithstanding that the investigatory staff of a commission that reports through this minister to the Legislature may be involved. That is a very important tradition and practice to uphold.

If there is a culmination either in the filing of information for criminal charges or in the determination by those in charge of the criminal investigation that there is not sufficient evidence for a charge to be laid, it is only after one of those two events takes place that the minister is informed.

The reason I have dwelt at some length on when I first found out that all of Astra Trust and all of Re-Mor were criminal is that obviously the question is going to be raised, "If you knew on Monday it was criminal, why did you merely convey the instructions of the law officers of the crown regarding this civil matter?" Those instructions were conveyed because the law officer of the crown who issued that advice was not privy to the matters in the criminal investigation.

It was my feeling that Astra Trust was entirely in federal jurisdiction and was being investigated by both the federal Department of Insurance and, to the best of my knowledge, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in assistance to that federal department. While we were supplying and for many years had supplied information or corroboration, that was primarily in the federal sphere so that, indeed, the file on Astra in possession of the ministry—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. MacBeth): Mr. Minister, I wonder if you will wait a moment to see if we can get a little order in the House. There are a fair number of private conversations going on and it is difficult for me to hear what the minister is saying. I am sure it is difficult for the rest of you. I would ask, if you must carry on your conversations, to keep them very quiet.

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I was pointing out that I was unaware Astra and its documents were no longer in the federal sphere and had become a matter of criminal investigation in the province. Until 12:30 p.m. yesterday I regarded them as civil or regulatory proceedings under federal jurisdiction. I hope that clarifies the sequence of events for the honourable members, since Mr. Morton informed me of these details.

Had Mr. Morton spoken—and he cannot speak here tonight—he was going to explain.

I want to put it firmly on record that I am prepared to deliver those files, circulate them and hand them to the press. I am not suppressing or hiding anything. As a matter of record, there has been considerable turmoil between me in my position, which is one of constant openness, and the advice I have had to accept as a minister of the crown. I want to put those things clearly on the record.

I am perfectly prepared to abide by the rulings of this House, as naturally I would be, but I hope this assembly will understand my position. I must accept the advice and instructions given to me by the law officers of the crown. If this assembly wants to override that advice and those instructions, as a minister I shall certainly comply.

The House divided on Mr. Philip's motion for the adoption of the report of the standing committee on administration of justice, which was agreed to on the following vote:

MOTION

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

Hon. Mr. Wells moved that the supplementary estimates of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food be referred to the standing committee on resources development, to be considered within the time allocation for the main estimates of Agriculture and Food.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Sargent: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Over the years the Premier has come in the back door, but tonight he came down the main aisle. That's great showmanship.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I really wanted to find out what it was like to come in or go out the same route as the member for Grey-Bruce.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS ON THE NOTICE PAPER

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I wish to table the answers to questions 277, 300, 334, 344 and 381 standing on the Notice Paper. (See appendix, page 4479.)

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the standing order, I would like to indicate to the House the business for next week and the rest of this week.

Tomorrow we will consider the estimates of the Ministry of Northern Affairs.

On Monday, November 24, in the afternoon we will begin the estimates of the Ministry of Government Services, and the House will sit Monday evening and continue considering the estimates of the Ministry of Government Services.

On Tuesday, November 25, in the afternoon, we will handle any third readings that are on the Notice Paper and then continue with committee of the whole House on Bill 82, the special education bill. In the evening, we will have complete consideration of Bill 169, followed by Bill 168 and second reading and committee of the whole House on Bill 182 and Bill 192.

On Wednesday, November 26, four committees may meet in the morning: general government, resources development, administration of justice and plant shutdowns. Three committees may meet in the afternoon: social development, general government and plant shutdowns.

On Thursday, November 27, we will consider the private members' items that were not dealt with today, items 35 and 36 standing in the names of the member for York Centre (Mr. Stong) and the member for Parkdale (Mr. Duksza). In the evening, the House will debate the report from the select committee on Ontario Hydro affairs on fuel waste.

On Friday, November 28, the estimates of the Ministry of Government Services will be continued.

The debate on the report of the select committee on constitutional reform, which was not held tonight, will have to be re-scheduled in one of the remaining weeks before the House prorogues.

Mr. Speaker: Under standing order 28, a motion to adjourn is deemed to have been made. I will listen to the member for Port Arthur for five minutes.

PCB SPILL AT SCHOOL

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, I want to make some straightforward, if simple, points in this debate with the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott):

1. Polychlorinated biphenyls are environmentally hazardous when they are in the air, when they are in the food chain and, in liquid form, when they come in contact with the skin. As the report from the occupational health and safety division of March 1978 stated, toxic effects of human exposure to high doses of PCBs have been known for years. They include an acne-like skin eruption, abnormal pigmentation of the skin and nails and swelling of the eyelids. Digestive disturbances and burning of the eyes have also been reported. Low-dose effects of PCBs in animals have been studied recently; liver damage, malignancy and reduced ability to reproduce have been recorded.

2. The PCB spill at the Isabella Street School in Thunder Bay seems not to have caused serious environmental effects. It seems not to have been a dangerous one, and I think that should be stated at the outset.

3. The spill did cause considerable anxiety amongst people in Thunder Bay, particularly amongst the parents of children at the school there.

The sequence of events, as I know them, is that the transformer ruptured at approximately 3:40 p.m. on October 8, 1980. Because the school lost its electricity supply, the school officials notified Thunder Bay Hydro. It came and repaired the transformer that evening. Power was restored, I believe, at approximately 9:30 p.m., but neither the school officials nor the Ministry of the Environment were informed that the transformer was a PCB transformer at that time. At about 8 a.m. the following morning, Thunder Bay Hydro notified the Minister of the Environment that PCBs were involved. The Ministry of the Environment, and possibly the medical officer of health, at 3:10 p.m. on October 9, notified school officials that PCBs were involved in the transformer spill. That was some 24 hours after the event.

The most outstanding and simple question the minister needs to answer is, if he is not happy that his ministry was not informed, what is he doing about making damned good and sure that whenever a PCB transformer ruptures near a private or public institution he is notified and can take steps to rectify the situation?

Thunder Bay Hydro says it made a judgement call that in retrospect was possibly not the right one. What is the ministry doing to ensure that all institutions in the province do not, in the future, make such a judgement call when public health could be at stake?

I have forwarded to the minister 10 questions that I believe are outstanding. If the minister fails to answer these questions satisfactorily this evening, I shall file those questions in written form tomorrow. I want to mention a couple of them of which he has had notice for a week now:

1. What steps is the ministry taking to ensure that delays in reporting to it from owners of PCB transformers don't occur in the future?

2. Why did Ministry of the Environmental officials not notify school officials as soon as they knew of this PCB spill at least to alert them to the potential danger?

3. How could the ministry be sure that the PCB material was not a hazard to the school children when the officials are quoted as saying, "Readings were erratic," and when the minister himself in his reply to me, as reported on page 4192 of Hansard, "We wanted to make sure that there was no danger," was unconditionally so?

Another question is, what does the discovery of an unexplained and unusually high reading of PCBs about six feet below ground level indicate? Does it indicate there was a previous transformer rupture that was not reported and a spill? Is there any way of determining that? Is there an estimate of the amount of PCB liquid spilled? How can the minister call it a small amount when 250 barrels of PCB-contaminated earth were accumulated by Thunder Bay Hydro in the cleanup?

A week ago, the minister stopped me outside in the hall and said he did not understand why I was dissatisfied with his answer. My dissatisfaction stems from two factors. The minister does not seem to understand his responsibility to protect people and the environment from actual and potential hazards. In this case, if there was no harm done to the children of Isabella Street School and to the environment, it was more by good luck rather than by good management.

The procedure for reporting PCB transformer spills must be as foolproof as is humanly possible, and this one small incident proves that was not so. Why, therefore, does the minister not take and insist on more preventive measures? One small step would be to have all PCB transformers publicly identified on the outside, not on the inside.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. Foulds: If I might, Mr. Speaker, just one more sentence.

Finally, what I think we need is a Minister of the Environment who takes his responsibilities seriously. He should be a protector of the public good and he should be seen as the protector of the public good. He should not be an apologist for cautious inaction, for procrastination or for uncertainty. He should do all in his power to protect the people of this province.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: One is tempted to respond just by not answering the questions, Mr. Speaker. There were some other statements made which I will not respond to, other than to make one simple statement. This ministry, myself and my predecessors have done and are doing far more—this jurisdiction is so far in the lead of other jurisdictions in this country and in the United States—that by any comparison we are so far ahead the honourable member does not even understand how big that gap is. He is so far out in left field on this that it is not even funny. Make some comparisons—

Mr. Laughren: What about Darlington?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Yes, what about Darlington? Darlington D was cleaned up to the satisfaction of everyone there, if the honourable member wants to check with the mayor.

It took me five months and no more—

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The honourable member should check with the people in that area, if he is not scared to.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The honourable member should check with the mayor and he will hear quite a lot of testimony about what we did.

I would like to get as much information on the record as possible. I would like to point out that the delay in reporting this spill in this case was the exception rather than the rule. We usually get splendid co-operation. In this case, a letter of reprimand will be sent to Thunder Bay Hydro, and we will ask them for a copy of their procedures and an assurance that all staff are aware of them. As a precaution, the region will remind all other public utilities in the area of their responsibilities.

School officials knew about the incident on the morning of October 9, 1980. In fact, the custodian of the school was present when Hydro officials removed the back of the transformer to reveal the label, which indicated it contained PCBs.

The member was concerned why we would regard the material spilled as not being a hazard. I want to assure him staff made this judgement based on the amount spilled, the location, the isolation of the transformer and the fact the whole spill was extremely well contained and the children could not get near it. A barricade was erected on the evening of October 8 following the spill. It covered an area of approximately 50 by 100 feet, and staff discouraged children from coming within 200 feet of the site.

In regard to the TAGA, it is a highly sensitive device which costs in the neighbourhood of $400,000. It is installed in a large van and, as such, obviously cannot be available all over the province. Even if we were able to have one in each regional office, geographical considerations make it unlikely that the TAGA could be made available immediately at the scene of any incident.

The new-tech system that was utilized in this instance is a satisfactory means of measuring PCBs. I want to assure the member we always endeavour to use the best technology. I think the quality of our laboratory operations will bear this out.

With respect to the labelling of transformers, Ontario Hydro has carried out a labelling program for all its PCB-containing transformers. I am pleased to have a copy, which I will send across the floor to the honourable member. The federal government is also undertaking a labelling program for these transformers not covered by Ontario Hydro.

There was evidence in this case that a label had been removed by a person or persons unknown from the outside of the transformer.

In addition, the school board had a list of PCB transformers owned by it at its schools but, since this particular transformer was owned by Thunder Bay Hydro, it did not appear on the school board's list. Regional offices have listed the PCB transformers in their areas and the locations of same.

The member was concerned about the fact that a high level of PCB was found unexpectedly in ground below the transformer. We have no way of determining the cause of this for sure but it was probably due to a previous leak in the transformer. I know he also questioned why, if the spill was fairly small, we would remove so much soil. I would like to point out to him that was a precaution. We just kept digging until our reading showed the soil was clear of PCBs. In other words, a lot of soil we dug up was only very slightly contaminated and possibly a fair amount of that was not contaminated at all. We just wanted to be very sure what was left behind was clear.

I know the member was interested in the recommendations of the health and safety branch of the Ministry of Labour. This dealt mainly with the questions of spills of PCBs and safety in the workplace with respect to PCBs. I understand the Ministry of Labour will comment directly to the member for Port Arthur on that particular item.

I trust this information is sufficient for the member's concerns.

The House adjourned at 10:38 p.m.

LEGAL AID GUIDELINES

300. Mr. Warner: Will the Attorney General table any and all policy guidelines of the Ontario legal aid plan respecting eligibility for legal aid certificates of applicants whose financial eligibility has already been established, including but not restricted to those policy guidelines for (1) divorce, (2) criminal injuries compensation and (3) workmen's compensation cases? (Tabled October 9, 1980.)

See sessional paper 302.

LEGAL AID CERTIFICATES

334. Mr. Warner: Will the Attorney General provide figures on the number and percentage of persons awarded legal aid certificates in the York region of the Ontario legal aid plan in each of the last 12 months who: (i) were required to make a financial contribution to their legal expenses because they were deemed (a) to have financial resources of their own or (b) to be dependants of another person with financial resources; (ii) had such certificates withdrawn or discontinued because of inability to meet such financial requirements; and (iii) were as a consequence of such withdrawal or discontinuance obliged to proceed to trial without legal representation? (Tabled October 15, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: The reply to this inquiry is based upon a sampling of 120 files of contributing clients spanning the complete 12-month period.

The sample size was 6.25 per cent and the results of the sample were applied to all contributing certificates issued in the 12-month period under review.

When a certificate is withdrawn or discontinued, for whatever reason, our file is then closed and we therefore have no statistics as to whether or not a former client would proceed to trial without legal representation.

The results of the sample, as applied to the total population of contributing certificates, are reflected in the attached schedule. (See schedule A).

SCHEDULE "A"

WINTARIO GRANT AUDITS

344. Mr. O'Neil: Will the Minister of Culture and Recreation advise if the internal audit reports on Wintario grant recipients are open to the public for inspection? (Tabled October 16, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Once the Freedom of Information Act is in place it is my ministry's intention to open up all Wintario files for public inspection and such inspection would include the right to examine any internal audit report which was prepared in relation to such files.

DIAMOND SHAMROCK PLANT

381. Mr. Isaacs: What hazardous industrial liquids are stored at the Diamond Shamrock plant in Hamilton? What liquid industrial waste does this plant produce? (Tabled October 28, 1980.)

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The Diamond Shamrock plant in west Hamilton handles a wide range of animal, vegetable and mineral oils along with petroleum solvent-type chemicals. Some of these are sulphonated for use in manufacturing defoaming agents, surfactants and oils for the tanning industry. The materials present varying degrees of fire hazard. The Hamilton-Wentworth Fire Department has visited the plant and is fully aware of this potential hazard.

The plant also manufactures butylated hydroxytoluene, (BHT), an antioxidant widely used in foods to maintain freshness.

Waste waters from this plant are discharged in accordance with the regional municipality of Hamilton-Wentworth sewer-use bylaw. The discharge is monitored by the regional municipality to ensure compliance with the sewer-use bylaw. We are advised by the region that the discharge meets the requirements for the two main parameters that are of concern; that is, BOD and ether solubles.

The ministry has the information concerning the chemicals used by this company but is bound by section 87 of the Environmental Protection Act to preserve its confidentiality.

For reasons intended to avoid information concerning the formulation of the products becoming available to competitors, the company will not disclose a detailed list of chemicals it uses. We cannot require that the company disclose this information publicly.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1980

The House met at 10 a.m.

Prayers.

MEMBER-ELECT FOR CARLETON

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, on a matter of personal privilege: I would like to draw the attention of the members of the House to the presence of a distinguished public servant sitting in your gallery. He is Mr. Robert Mitchell, a former deputy reeve of Carleton and a public servant in the Department of National Defence for some two decades. In case some members opposite do not recall, he is here at the request of the voters of the great riding of Carleton who dispatched him here in our democratic process last evening to represent the interests of all of the people of that constituency and the people of this province.

I would like to make the day for the acting leader of the Liberal Party this morning by saying, as I look at the figures, the Liberal candidate did better in 1975 than he did in 1980.

Mr. Nixon: Before you start the clock on the question period, Mr. Speaker, I want to join with the Premier in congratulating Mr. Mitchell. I hope he will have a pleasant six months here until the general election. He looks like he will fit right in, so when the writs are returned we will see what he can do for the people. He will have the same opportunity as the rest of the back-benchers to influence policy.

NORFOLK TEACHERS' DISPUTE

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Education. Did she by any chance see a letter written by Mrs. Jackie McMann to the editor of the Port Dover Maple Leaf, dated November 14? I quote the second-last paragraph:

"I would like to know exactly when, in your opinion, does the continuance of a strike place in jeopardy the successful completion of courses of study by the students affected by the strike? Obviously, not even the Sudbury strike, which lasted over three months, jeopardized anyone's education. They were all given their credits. Great system we have."

Since that reflects the view that I myself have put to the minister, would she not feel that since the strikes in Norfolk and in Bruce county are now going into their eighth week she should be prepared to make a statement to the House as to how this is going to be brought to an end and what in her view constitutes jeopardy, other than a reference to her commission which under the law has to advise her when the students' education is in jeopardy? That is something which they have never seen fit to do.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, I think the honourable member is wrong in that final statement, because I do believe such a decision was made by the Education Relations Commission in 1976. I am sorry, but I have not seen the Port Dover newspaper and I have not seen that particular letter to the editor.

Mr. Sweeney: Doesn't the minister read that newspaper?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am sorry, I have not received a copy of the Port Dover Maple Leaf. I gather that is what it is called. I would be very pleased to see the newspaper, but it is a little difficult to see it if it is not delivered.

It is fortunate that the honourable member has raised this today, because there are things happening in both the Bruce and Norfolk areas at this time. Negotiations are being pursued in Bruce right now which I think will have a potentially happy outcome in the relatively near future. In Norfolk, I am aware that there has been a great deal of discussion this week and I am optimistic there will be a reasonably negotiated settlement in that situation as well.

The definition of jeopardy is one which I suppose is rather difficult to make because it depends on one's assessment of the length of time of separation from the school system that a student may undergo. There are those who believe that one day's absence may be jeopardy. There are obviously those who believe that a longer period of time can be compensated for through intensive effort on the part of teachers, principals and students after even a relatively prolonged period.

I wish I did have an easy definition. I do not, but it is something we must consider very seriously in our review of the responses to the Bill 100 external review committee.

Mr. Nixon: Could the minister be clearer as to what steps are being taken to bring this matter to a successful conclusion bearing in mind that having had the schools closed for seven weeks, the people in the community are feeling that these extraordinary steps might very well have been taken during the first week, since the employees of the ministry are using their undoubted persuasive efforts to have both sides leave their communities, at least in the one instance, and settle down and try to come to some conclusion?

Why should this be treated just like any other strike rather than bearing the interests of the community and the children in mind? Why does it have to be allowed to go on to the point where even the minister is saying that the students' education may be in jeopardy?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am not sure how the honourable member, who obviously must have had some experience, having been in this Legislature for such a long time, would determine that the labour-management relationships within a school board situation should be treated differently from any other public service situation, or indeed from any other labour-management dispute. It would appear that the appropriate mechanisms that are undertaken within such disputes have been pursued in this one. They have been pursued vigorously and appear at this point, at the beginning, I believe, of the thirty-seventh day of one of the strikes, likely to bear fruit in the near future.

I would hope the member would understand that for the benefit of the students there can be no doubt that a settlement which is negotiated amicably between the two parties is by far the best solution in any such situation. One which is imposed is less than likely to provide for the kind of atmosphere which will be conducive to the continuing education process of the students.

Mr. Laughren: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister assure me, as a member who lives in a community that experienced a long strike in Sudbury earlier this year, that she has a strong mediation team at work in those communities? Further, does she think that threats of a legislated return to work, as implied by the question from the Liberal House leader, aid in the process of a negotiated settlement or just encourage the two parties to dig in and wait for that inevitable date which the Liberals would impose on the settlement?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first question is yes, we do. The answer to the second question is I think that is a debatable point. I really fully believe there are those who probably would be extremely happy if they felt the Legislature was going to impose a settlement because it would absolve those negotiators, those members of the groups, of any responsibility which they have both demanded and both assumed under Bill 100, which I would remind the members was not something which was inimical to the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon). It is my understanding that he was supportive of this when that legislation was introduced. The results of that legislation have been that there has been a reduced number of disputes within the educational system. Unfortunately, they seem to have been prolonged in a way which I find unsatisfactory.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Why is it that young students who want to take correspondence courses find they cannot because they are registered in school?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, I could not hear that question.

Mr. Speaker: Other members were interrupting their own colleague. Would you please repeat the question?

Mr. G. I. Miller: Mr. Speaker, why is it that students who want to take correspondence courses are finding out they cannot take those courses because they are registered in school?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, correspondence courses are provided for students who are registered in the schools if the program is one which cannot be delivered within the school in which they are registered and if the principal agrees they should have the benefit of the correspondence course in addition to their school program.

These students are registered, and it has been the policy when there is a strike that the correspondence mechanism is one which is less than appropriate for the maintenance of the educational program of those students. This is something, however, which I believe has to be reconsidered.

ENERGY TAX CREDIT

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Premier to give him an opportunity to expand in his usual Friday morning manner. Now that the federal government has indicated it has no plan to participate in a shared-cost program with this province or other provinces in an energy tax credit program and since the mini-budget indicated clearly that the province was going to go ahead by itself if it did not get this co-operation, can the Premier indicate what the plans are for such a program? Will it be available for this heating season and what will be our cost involvement, approximately?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) has been away for the past few days. I will be discussing this with him next week, but we have not really given up in our efforts to persuade the government of Canada to show a more enlightened approach to this situation. I really think, given some time, the government of Canada might not be as adamant. To me, it is a very logical and realistic approach to the situation. With the increased flow of revenue to the government of Canada, primarily from the energy field, we feel this is as legitimate a use of those funds as many other programs they have suggested.

I can assure the members of the House that the Treasurer, when he returns, and perhaps even myself, will be discussing this further with the government of Canada, because I really think to share with the provinces this sort of credit for people in terms of home heating fuels is a logical position for them to take.

Mr. Nixon: Recognizing the government of Canada owes the Premier of Ontario and his government a considerable amount of gratitude for their continuing support of its position, will he still not recognize that the federal Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has flatly refused to participate in such a program, and might it not be realistic for this government to expect the undoubted persuasive powers of the Premier to be successful in this one instance? If that is so, might we expect the time table enunciated by the Treasurer that the first payments in such an energy assistance program would be due in the spring of 1982 will continue to be the government's program and, in fact, nothing will be done until that time?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think, as the Treasurer explained and the Minister of Energy (Mr. Welch) would explain, the more significant impact of the increase, in say home heating oil, will actually take place in the winter or spring of 1981. I think if one looks at it on the basis of a tax credit, it would be on the basis of expenditures in that period, but the credit then would take effect in the year 1982. I think a taxpayer would be able to calculate what might be anticipated, as he can with other parts of the credit system.

I want to assure the House we have not given up in our suggestions to the national government, but if the decision is to move ahead on our own, the program could be announced and in place. I want to make it clear the credit, because of the nature of the taxation year, would appear in 1982 but the home owners would, in fact, know in 1981 just what degree of credit they would be receiving, as they do with property tax credit and other matters.

I am delighted the acting leader of the Liberal Party really was this morning—I say this quite objectively—far more gracious in his reception and acceptance of the results yesterday than was his leader. I really want to thank him for that here this morning.

Mr. Laughren: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Will the Premier assure us any energy tax credit program which comes in to ease the cost of home heating fuel will be related to not only consumption but will also be related to income so those people who need the help the most will receive it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I seem to recall that most of the tax credits are related to income.

EXTRA BILLING BY PHYSICIANS

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I had a question for the Minister of Culture and Recreation (Mr. Baetz) but he seems to have disappeared for a minute. I hope he could be found and could come back.

I have a question for the Minister of Health arising out of the commitment he made last year, in an agreement reached with the doctors of the province, which indicated that in future in every public hospital in Ontario the patient would have a choice of access to physician services at Ontario health insurance plan rates.

Will the minister examine the pamphlet I am sending to him which is currently being used by the anaesthetists at St. Michael's Hospital and which informs patients getting elective surgery in that hospital they will be extra-billed while making no mention of the patient's right to receive services at opted-in rates? Is it the minister's position such prior notification complies with the 1979 agreement when it makes no indication of the patient's right to receive the care at the OHIP rate, and is it his view that acceptance of that pamphlet constitutes agreement by the patient to pay the anaesthetist's opted-out rates?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, if one looks at the bottom part, it says, "Accordingly a bill may be sent to you." I think it is well known generally by the public that the services are available. I remember an instance of a hospital in downtown Toronto a year ago when one of the members got up and talked about the fact that all of the anaesthetists were opted out. When we checked into it we found 70 per cent of their bills are opted in. I will check this with Sister Mary, the administrator of St. Michael's, but I would think if the member looks at it carefully, it makes it clear that it is not a universal thing with every patient.

Mr. Cassidy: Is the minister saying it is not the responsibility of the opted-out doctors to indicate clearly that people have the choice? Does he expect that people who are sick will know automatically that when they go to hospital they have to ask and they have to insist? Is that the position he is taking?

Can he tell the House how his alternative of getting anaesthetists on some kind of a direct payment plan is going to work when all of the anaesthetists are currently opted out in hospitals like St. Michael's? Through the Ontario Medical Association's fee committee they are now being told to consult the OMA before agreeing to any plan such as the minister is proposing. They are also being warned that their committee does not believe physicians are prepared to give up their economic freedom as that kind of plan would cause them to.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: First of all, I would ask the member to look again at what he just sent me. It points out that in most cases the patient will be visited beforehand, and it is at that point the discussion usually takes place about the billing. It goes on to point out the use of words—

Mr. Nixon: But they are sedated.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: No, before surgery. Not like Friday morning in the Legislature, sedated. It says a bill "may" be sent.

With respect to the question of the alternative mechanism, we are in discussion with a couple of groups on that. We already have one group at the Northwestern General Hospital who are on the alternative payment mechanism for anaesthetic services.

Third, I would remind the member that less than eight per cent of the physicians' services in this province are currently extra-billed, a significant drop from where it was a year and a half ago.

Fourth, I would remind the member that one of the ways we brought that about was in the last round of negotiations with the medical association. In those we paid particular attention to a number of specialties, especially family practice where their increase was in the order of 15 or 16 per cent. I think anaesthesia clearly has to be one of our primary focuses in the next round of negotiations which are about to begin in the next month or so.

Mr. Nixon: Supplementary: Can the minister assure the House that anaesthetic services are available at OHIP rates in every public hospital in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I believe I can, Mr. Speaker. I have the co-operation of the boards of the hospitals and the medical staffs that nobody will be denied these services by reason of the physician being nominally opted out. Again, I would point out the example—I guess it was the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. S. Smith) who raised it a year or two ago—I think it was the Toronto Western Hospital where he—

Mr. Nixon: We are not talking about charity cases.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I am not talking about that either. He was pointing out that 100 per cent of the anaesthetists were opted out in that hospital, as the member for Ottawa Centre is trying to say about St. Michael's. When we checked into that case, we found they opt in 70 per cent of their business.

Mr. Warner: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question regarding the phantom agreement and whether or not the minister intends to enforce the so-called agreement—an agreement which, by the way, we have never had tabled in this Legislature.

A constituent of mine was extra-billed. When she inquired she was told by Dr. Lamont, who was speaking on behalf of a group of Scarborough anaesthetists, and I quote from his letter, "At present it is ethical and perfectly legal for doctors to charge the OMA tariff without prior notification of patients." I ask the minister again, will he make sure that the agreement is upheld? If it seems, as it would appear, that either there is no such agreement or that the OMA chooses not to honour the agreement, will he stop the charade and end the extra billing in this province?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, I would say on the whole the agreement and the understanding between the ministry and the medical association is working very well. There are cases from time to time—I think in the last year maybe six cases have come to my attention—where, for one reason or another, there have been difficulties. On the whole, we have been able to get those resolved.

I think I know the case the member is talking about where unfortunately we were not able to get it resolved, even using the good offices of the Ontario Medical Association. There are bound to be some exceptions from time to time, but when you consider that by the time today is out, 250,000 claims will be filed on the health insurance plan for services rendered to the people of Ontario, the incidence of nonadherence to the agreement is extremely rare.

Mr. Warner: So you will not enforce the agreement; is that what you are saying?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: The honourable member is darned right. I am not going to follow his policies, which would destroy our system.

Mr. Speaker: A new question, the member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Cassidy: I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, in welcoming my former colleague from the Ottawa regional council, that things are a good deal more heated up here than they were in the regional council. I suspect Mr. Mitchell may find after a few months here that he wonders why he came down, particularly given the frustration that those of us who are Ottawa members have always had trying to get any action from the government which he intends to support for a while.

At any rate, I welcome him here and congratulate him on his victory. Maybe it is something to do with the ministers from the Ottawa area, so maybe Mr. Mitchell could—

Mr. Speaker: Do you have a question? Please put it.

STRATFORD FESTIVAL

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have a question for the Minister of Culture and Recreation arising out of the continuing hard line which is being taken by the members of the board of the Stratford Festival and the indications that they are not backing away at all from the choice of John Dexter and, consequently, are continuing to precipitate a boycott which may well keep the plays off the boards at Stratford next season.

The minister is aware that the festival board indicated it could not find a qualified Canadian to take over from the four in whom it had apparently lost confidence. Is he aware that John Hirsch, who is one of the most eminent Canadian theatre directors we have in the country, has now notified Equity by telegram that he has at no time received any official or unofficial communication from the board on any matter in the last five years? How can the festival board claim it was looking for a Canadian director if it had not even taken the opportunity to talk to John Hirsch, whose experience certainly would have enabled him to take over the artistic directorship of the Stratford Festival?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, obviously I have been following the events of the last few weeks very closely with Stratford and Canadian Actors' Equity, and we will continue, as we have in the past, to work through the Ontario Arts Council to enter the negotiations with Stratford and with Canadian Actors' Equity.

I am aware that this telegram was sent. I was advised of this by the Ontario Arts Council. But I just want to assure the member for Ottawa Centre and all members of this House that the policy of my ministry and of our government will continue to be to rely on the Ontario Arts Council to serve as our agent in the negotiations that will take place.

I know this is probably contrary to the cradle-to-grave government intervention mentality of the member for Ottawa Centre, who would like to see me jump in and muscle aside all those institutions which are set up to carry out this work. I will simply not do that. I remain highly confident that Stratford, Equity, the Canada Council, the Ontario Arts Council and all the key actors in all of this are going to end up in a very suitable settlement. That is all I am prepared to say at this time.

Mr. Cassidy: The minister has certainly retreated a long way from a week ago when he said something is rotten in the festival up at Stratford. Now he is saying he is not going to get involved himself. He says he expects there will be some form of compromise. In fact, the arts council expected there would be some form of compromise. But then we learned to the contrary that since they met with the festival on Wednesday of this week the arts council is frustrated, the members of Equity now find there is absolutely no give from the festival board, and they have therefore reconfirmed their boycott; and since we now face a major economic loss to southwestern Ontario and thousands of jobs will be affected by the failure of the festival to go forward, is it not time for the minister and the government to look for a new initiative which will help to find a compromise and get Stratford back on the boards?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, the member for Ottawa Centre has drawn many conclusions here and has created a scenario in which it would appear we are at a total stalemate, which is simply not the case. The various sides have taken rather firm positions but the bargaining and negotiations continue. I am still confident the plays will go on in Stratford next summer.

10:30 a.m.

I want to reiterate I am not prepared at this time, nor is my federal counterpart, nor is the Minister of Employment and Immigration, Mr. Axworthy, to jump in as the member would have us do and have government take over, intervene and come up with all the right solutions. We are not prepared to do that and we will not be drawn into it at all at this particular time.

PUBLIC OPINION POLLS

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier regarding our ongoing battle in relation to public opinion polls. In the Premier's answer, I hope he will not fuzz the issue as he usually does by talking about the polls this party or the NDP takes. We are talking about public opinion polls taken at taxpayers' expense.

In view of the report of the freedom of information committee, will the Premier now give us a policy statement in the Legislature to make public the public opinion polls taken by his government—I will be flexible—a week or two after he has had them, read them and sucked them dry? Will he make them public and table them in this Legislature because they are taken with public funds?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I will be delighted to give that matter some very careful consideration and contemplate giving a reply to the member some time between now and December 12. I do not say it is an unreasonable question to ask.

Mr. T. P. Reid: I have only asked it a dozen times.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Seek and you shall find; ask and you may get an answer. I certainly will not cloud the issue by suggesting the polls the opposition took at one point in time were, in fact, at taxpayers' expense.

Mr. T. P. Reid: They were not.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, you used the trunk lines. That is as fuzzy a position as any the opposition has taken.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have it here. "Chretien won't release details of $61,000." Why does the member not ask Jean to release that poll? I would be kind of interested in seeing it myself.

Mr. Ruston: Why don't you ask him yourself? You are in bed with them in Ottawa.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have to tell the member for Essex North the only poll that counts was the one that was counted at seven o'clock last night. That was the poll that counted. Does the member know what his Liberal leader said about that? He said, "If we do not win it, it will be a disaster." Obviously, the disaster has struck. Where is the Leader of the Opposition this morning? Do members of his party know what I think he has done? I suspect he is applying for the job as artistic director in Stratford as we sit here this morning.

Mr. T. P. Reid: I appreciate that the Premier is going to give me a definitive answer by December 12. In the meantime, would he consider tabling next week the polls that were taken in the last year, particularly last spring and summer, in regard to constitutional matters and the feelings of the people of Ontario in regard to those matters?

Hon. Mr. Davis: These questions have all been on the Order Paper. We have tabled a number of polls. I will certainly consider this. I am not personally familiar with any specific polls in this regard, but there may be some. I will give it some thought.

Mr. Makarchuk: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact it became quite obvious in the public accounts committee that public funds were used to obtain polls which could have been used for political purposes or partisan purposes, does it not bother the Premier that he is indulging in what is essentially a sleazy practice?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would not want to say the member for Brantford was reflecting what might be his own approach if given public responsibility. I would not make that observation except that I am always concerned when people make that sort of statement to me. I have never tried to hide the fact that as a political party we conduct some polls. They are more extensive on some things than on others. I suggest the member's own party does the same thing. Maybe they even use the telephones.

But I make this statement, and I make it categorically: Everything we do as politicians is political, but the polls we conduct for government are not done for partisan purposes, and they are not used for partisan purposes. That is the very real distinction.

STRATFORD FESTIVAL

Mr. Duksza: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Culture and Recreation. I realize the Stratford Festival board is semi-autonomous, and I realize that the Ontario Arts Council is semi-autonomous, but as the Minister of Culture and Recreation, he is the major paymaster. I would like to know his attitude towards this major Canadian festival, whether he believes the festival should be run by Canadians, and if he believes that not only the actors but also the directors should be Canadians?

He has never specified whether he actually believes that the director of the Stratford Festival should be a Canadian. If he does, what is he doing, secretly or otherwise, to make it certain?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: Mr. Speaker, I can only repeat what I said earlier. The agency that operates with the Stratford Festival is the Ontario Arts Council.

Mr. Duksza: May I ask very specifically what the minister believes, what is his attitude towards having a Canadian director for a Canadian festival?

Hon. Mr. Baetz: I may have a personal attitude on this, but I do not think the minister or the government at this particular time should say they are either all for Mr. Dexter or all opposed to him. The minute we state that, we are doing exactly the kind of thing the member for Ottawa Centre would want us to do, and I think that would be a very inappropriate stance to take at this time. I will not be drawn into that kind of a controversy.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The Minister of Transportation and Communications—

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: This question is going nowhere. The Minister of Transportation and Communications has the answer to a question asked previously.

WELLAND CANAL BRIDGE

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the member for Erie (Mr. Haggerty) asked me a question regarding the scheduling of the construction of the third bridge at Port Colborne. I have checked into this and I am pleased to advise that as far as we know, this contract, which is a federal contract being carried out by the federal government through the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and being shared on a 50-50 basis with the province, has been awarded. As far as we know, the intention is to have it completed and opened next year.

My staff is still attempting to check final details with federal officials to determine if any changes in the schedule are anticipated.

The approach roads to each side of the new bridge are being constructed under a contract by the regional municipality of Niagara at provincial expense, and these approach roads are substantially completed at the present time.

GO TRAIN FIRE

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I also had a question yesterday from the member—my member—for Halton-Burlington (Mr. J. Reed), who is obviously not here today. I would like to say that his question was regarding what he termed a fire on the Go train coming into the Port Credit station.

On Wednesday evening, November 19, the crew of an eastbound GO Transit train of empty equipment being returned to the Willowbrook maintenance facility was advised by radio from a passing westbound train that an abnormally heavy amount of smoke was visible from the running gear. You will know all about this, Mr. Speaker, being an old railroader.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, not an old railroader. A young railroader.

Hon. Mr. Snow: A young railroader.

Mr. Speaker: A knowledgeable railroader. A railroader on leave of absence.

Hon. Mr. Snow: A knowledgeable railroader on leave of absence. The crew of the equipment train had already noted the situation and attributed it to brakeshoe smoke. On receipt of the report from the other train, they decided to stop at the Port Credit station at 5:55 p.m. for a more thorough investigation. The inspection confirmed that the smoke was, indeed, caused by the heat buildup between the brakeshoe and the wheels which occurs normally as a result of brake application. Occasionally, oil or grease on the wheel surface will give rise to heavier than normal smoke during braking, as was the case in this instance.

There was never any suggestion that there was a fire or a hazard to persons close to the train. The final passengers on the westbound train were leaving the platform at the time the eastbound train arrived. In fact, to have stopped the train at a remote location, as the member for Halton-Burlington suggested, would have obliged the crew to perform an inspection on the uncertain footing of the railway ballast, and in the dark immediately adjacent to the other mainline track where trains could pass at a high speed at any time.

By deciding to move the train to Port Credit station where a proper platform and lighting were available, the crew recognized that a safer and more thorough inspection could be made. We are satisfied that the matter was handled safely and competently by the train crews involved.

PUBLIC SERVICE GRIEVANCES

Mr. Van Horne: Mr. Speaker, I have a question to the Chairman of Management Board of Cabinet. Is the minister aware that public servants must wait for excessive periods—over a year and a half in one particular case that has just been brought to my attention—before they can have grievances heard by the Crown Employee's Grievance Settlement Board? Would the minister not agree that justice delayed this long is obviously akin to justice denied, and would he take steps to expedite the hearing of these grievances?

Hon. Mr. McCague: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that action has already been taken. As the honourable member probably knows, we were without a chairman for a period of time. There was one appointed back in August. There is quite a backlog. We and the union are working to clean up that backlog, and I believe there will be some 200 scheduled for hearings in January, February, March and April.

Mr. Van Horne: A supplementary: Given the phone call that was made very recently to the Grievance Settlement Board indicating that the backlog would demand extra staff beyond the chairman, is the minister planning to add staff to accommodate that huge backlog?

Hon. Mr. McCague: We have already gone from eight to 26. I think that should take care of it.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. Swart: Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of the Environment. First, I would like to send him 30 letters from a school in Thorold expressing the opinions of the students there relative to the proposed solidification plant.

The minister knows, does he not, that there was a closed meeting held between the principals of Walker Brothers and the chairman of Niagara region and, subsequent to that, there was another closed meeting held between four mayors of the area and Walker Brothers? The city of Thorold has now learned from the minister's office that he is meeting with the principals of Walker Brothers on Monday. Will the minister tell this House whether that meeting with Walker Brothers will be open to the media, and what will be discussed between him and Walker Brothers?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No, Mr. Speaker, it will not be open to the media and I will make the appropriate announcement at the appropriate time.

Mr. Swart: The minister also has a request from the city of Thorold for a meeting with him before he makes his statement on Tuesday. I understand they have not had an answer to date but it was stated by the minister's staff that he probably will not have time. Would it not show a very high degree of distortion of priorities if the minister met with the representatives of Walker Brothers, which has grossly violated the environmental laws, and then did not meet with the elected representatives of the city of Thorold? Will the minister meet with them prior to next Tuesday, when he is going to announce his decision?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No, I am afraid I will not be able to meet with them before Tuesday. I am more than pleased to meet with them. I also want to put it on the record that I think it is rather important to bear in mind that it is all right for the member to pass a judgement of guilt or no guilt in this House. He can get away with that. I am afraid he might not have that same privilege outside the House. He is fortunate to be doing that in the House. But I will let him worry about that. He can look after his own bailiwick.

SEX AND VIOLENCE ON TV

Mr. McGuigan: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. Is he aware of the various studies in Canada and other countries that show the depiction of violent sex has a significant antisocial effect on the attitudes of the viewer? Has the Solicitor General advised his officials to lay charges under the Criminal Code of Canada against television stations that broadcast obscene films? I am speaking specifically of a film called Prime Cut, shown on CFPL-TV London at 11:45 p.m. on Friday, October 31.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the film the honourable member mentioned. I think many of us are familiar with the studies that have been done which indicate violence as entertainment is a very significant problem with respect to crime in society generally. The late Judy LaMarsh headed a commission dealing with violence in the entertainment industry. The studies the Royal Commission on Violence in the Communications Industry did would indicate this is an issue about which all society should be concerned. When we look at the rising crime rates, particularly in relation to violence and young people, there is no question violence as entertainment is something our society has not shown a great deal of responsibility about in continuing to tolerate it to the extent we do.

For example, while I do not have any particular views with respect to films dealing with explicit sex as such, I do not happen to think it is nearly the problem that violence is as entertainment. I am advised that in Europe most of the people in positions of responsibility are very concerned and much tougher than we are in relation to the whole matter of violence as entertainment, as opposed to portrayals of explicit sex.

As far as prosecutions are concerned for any offences related to the Criminal Code, this is a matter for local police authorities and, in our system of justice, individual citizens also have the opportunity at least to attempt to prefer charges if they are of the view the Criminal Code has been breached.

Mr. McGuigan: Would the minister have his authorities review that film? I would point out that in the film a scene of cattle pens was clearly shown. I thought this would be very interesting to show how a modern cattle pen operates. I was amazed to find they were not selling cattle in those pens; they were selling women. Also, two gangs were warring against one another in the film. One gang member was made into sausages. These sausages were presumably sold as human food. How can we stomach such a thing?

10:50 a.m.

Interjections.

Mr. McGuigan: There was no marketing board involved either. Would the Solicitor General have his officers request a viewing of that film and if they feel as I do, lay charges?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I will be happy to bring the member's concerns to the attention of the proper authorities.

UNICEF CHRISTMAS CARDS

Ms. Bryden: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Revenue. Is it true that the retail sales tax is applicable to handling, shipping and postal charges for Unicef Christmas cards as is indicated on the order forms sent out by Unicef this year?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I have no knowledge of it. I will certainly look into it and get back to the members.

Ms. Bryden: Supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The question has been taken as notice. When the minister responds there may be time for a supplementary.

REFILLABLE MILK CONTAINERS

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. Could the minister state why he directed the waste management advisory board, through its chairman, to inform the president of the Ontario Dairy Council that the introduction of a multitude of refillable milk containers in Ontario, in different shapes and sizes, will be allowed?

Since this action comes before the final decision has been made by the industry task force on fluid milk containers in Ontario, would the minister not consider this action inappropriate? Would he not also consider reversing that advice to the dairy council, at least until the task force has reported?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I do not recall offhand having so directed in a formal communication, but I could be in error on that. I am not saying I did not.

Mr. Gaunt: It was a letter dated November 5, actually.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: All right. I would like to look at that if I might and have an update on it before I respond to the question.

Mr. Gaunt: I can certainly provide the minister with the communication. Would the minister not consider that action inappropriate since we have been trying to encourage uniformity in pop bottles and avoid a proliferation of various types of pop bottles? Why would the same not apply to milk containers?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I think to a marked degree it does. At the same time I think the member, knowing of his great interest in the dairy community, wants to be very sure that the best beverage in the world—agreed?—

Mr. Gaunt: Agreed.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: —is in the most environmentally sound containers. We must be very careful that we deal with both issues, namely, the sanitation of the product and the maintenance of the quality of that product, plus the impact on the environment if inappropriate containers are used.

I will be glad to take another look at that. But I hope we would agree the maintenance of the product itself is of paramount importance.

WINDSOR HOUSING AUTHORITY

Mr. Bounsall: I have a question of the Minister of Housing. Having created the situation with the Windsor housing authority board which led to the resignations of six persons because of the minister's appointment of a chairman who had no previous experience with that board, what is he doing to resolve that situation?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, I have received two out of four resignations so far which have been submitted to the Ontario Housing Corporation. To answer the question very simply, I am in the process of making some new appointments.

Mr. Bounsall: Since it is quite important that the board be able to meet in the next few months because of the economic and unemployment situation in Windsor and the increased need for geared-to-income housing, has the minister contacted the federal and municipal governments, requesting them to fill their vacant appointment positions as soon as possible, and what date is he looking towards to having all those vacancies filled so that board may function properly?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: There are no municipal vacancies on that particular board to the best of my knowledge. The vacancies that occurred were those of the federal representation and one provincial appointment, the chairman, whose term had expired.

I made the selection of a new provincial member and I also selected him as the individual to chair that particular board. I want to indicate to this House that we have selected many individuals who have been appointed chairmen the first time they served on a board. The new chairman of Ontario Housing Corporation is a gentleman who had not served on previous boards. We appointed him to the board and made him chairman at the same time. I think we pick people with the competence, understanding and capabilities of one who is trying to direct a housing authority, whether in Windsor, Ottawa-Carleton or anywhere else.

I have already made one provincial appointment in the last few days. Going to the cabinet in the next few days will be the additional appointments as far as the province is concerned. I await the recommendations for appointments from the federal government, which we have already notified of those vacancies.

NURSING HOME INSPECTIONS

Mr. Bradley: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Health concerning nursing home inspections. As the minister is aware, two nursing homes within the city of St. Catharines, Tufford Rest Home and Chatelaine Villa Convalescent and Nursing Centre, denied access to a public inspection panel, not from the ministry. This right to refuse the inspection was upheld by Judge Kovacs on Tuesday in St. Catharines. Since these homes are indirectly supported by the Ministry of Health through OHIP payments, which are heavily subsidized through government funds, is the minister contemplating a change in legislation which would bring about the kind of definition which would compel homes of this nature to accept public inspections?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, the legislation under which these grand juries operate does not come under the Ministry of Health, as I think the member acknowledged. I am not sure whether it comes under the Solicitor General or Attorney General.

Secondly, even with those institutions which are subject to and are regularly visited by these public inspection panels that regularity is once every few years. It is not any more frequent than that. The inspections which are carried out by my staff in the inspection branch of the Ministry of Health are very frequent. Certainly they are all inspected annually with respect to environmental safety, fire safety, nursing, nutrition and the like.

Every complaint we receive, be it from a patient or a family member, is followed up by an inspection as well on that particular complaint. I do not know that there is the need to amend that legislation. I think we have an adequate number of inspectors and an inspection process including, as the member may know, team inspections, which I instituted a couple of years ago, in the case of homes about which we are receiving an inordinate number of complaints. We go in as a team to see what the problems are and get them cleaned up.

Mr. Bradley: Since other institutions are subjected to inspections by the public inspection panels, despite the fact they are inspected by ministry inspectors, does the minister not feel it would still be an advantage to give them the right to go into those institutions, as average citizens, to do an inspection, as the minister says, on an infrequent basis?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, the public inspection panels go into public hospitals which are totally funded from the public purse, but we in the ministry do not inspect the public hospitals. There is not the same inspection process for the public hospitals that exists for the nursing homes. It is a totally different situation. In addition, the nursing homes, like the hospitals, are subject to inspection by the local fire departments and by the public health departments with respect to infection control, so that by comparison on balance I would have to submit to the members that the nursing homes are inspected more frequently and more intensively.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable the Premier has the answer to a question asked previously.

Mr. T. P. Reid: He has a reply, not an answer.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do, I have an answer.

SOUTH CAYUGA LAND DRAINAGE

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, on November 7 the member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. G. I. Miller) asked me a question regarding some test drilling which was being carried out on properties in the South Cayuga area: I apologize, I was here a couple of times with the answer and other matters intervened.

I have been advised that the test drilling in question is being carried out by the Ministry of Government Services for the purpose of refining the Ontario Land Corporation's knowledge of the hydrogeological nature of the site. That is a very definitive answer. I have been informed that all affected residents in the area were notified that this drilling would be taking place, and also of the reason for the drilling. In fact, the member sent me a photocopy of a letter sent to a resident from the supervisor of western town sites providing to the resident—and to the member, incidentally—the information I have just presented to the House: a hydrogeological study to determine the hydrogeological nature of the site. How can one be more definitive than that?

Mr. G. I. Miller: I did ask the Premier a supplementary question also, pointing out that it is class one and two land. What is the policy of his government as far as the use of that land is concerned?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think they are two separate questions. One is the question of the land use, the second is why was the drilling and why is the drilling taking place.

Mr. Nixon: Because it is being associated with using it as a dump site for the Ministry of the Environment.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No one is suggesting in any way that there are no surveys going on in many parts of the province; but the honourable member asked me what the purpose of the drilling was, and the purpose of the drilling is to determine the hydrogeological nature of the soil.

HAMILTON COURT FACILITIES

Mr. Mackenzie: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General. Can he tell this House why, in spite of his own admission that we have a serious problem in terms of delays in the courts in Hamilton—which is adversely affecting the administration of justice in that city and in that area—absolutely nothing has been done about a situation which he himself admits is a serious one; and why, when the other Hamilton members and I met him today for the second time in five weeks, he could not give us an update on the Turner situation when we had specifically requested such information be part of the information available to us at the second meeting?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I think there may be a misunderstanding between myself and the honourable member, Mr. Speaker, as to precisely what the nature of the conversation was going to be today. I indicated I did not have a recent update of the Turner investigation. But with respect to the matter of trial delays and court facilities respecting the administration of justice in Hamilton, it is quite true that we are very concerned about the problems in that area.

I do not think it is fair to say that nothing has been done about it, because it has been the subject matter of frequent discussions with our members of crown attorney staff in that area as well as with the court administrators and the local police department, to expedite the trial of some of these matters. While we have not come up with any totally satisfactory solutions, I think we have made some modest progress at least. But I am of the view that additional resources, both judicial court and crown attorney resources, are required in relation to the administration of justice in Hamilton. We are hoping to be in a position to provide them.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that the Attorney General has been expressing deep concern over this matter since he arrived in the Legislature five years ago, and in view of the fact that, clearly, the time for an expression of his deep concern has long since passed and the time for action has arrived, will he not give a guarantee to this House to get the city of Hamilton two more courts as quickly as possible so that we can do something to deal with this backlog that has been the creation of his inability to administer the justice system in the city to the benefit of the people?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, additional resources have been added during my tenure as Attorney General for this province and the situation has been improved somewhat. As I indicated to the honourable members from the NDP caucus this morning, we are looking for additional courtroom space.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Let's have a guarantee.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Of course, I can give no guarantees in relation to the additional courtrooms about which I spoke. It is our expectation and certainly our desire to acquire those additional resources.

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has expired.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I thought this might be an appropriate time to bring to your attention and to the attention of other members, the presence in the gallery of the former member for Hamilton Centre, Mr. Norman Davison, with his grandson, another Mr. Davison.

MOTION

ESTIMATES

Hon. Mr. Wells moved that the estimates of Management Board be referred to the standing committee on general government for consideration, following the estimates of the Ministry of Housing.

Motion agreed to.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

ONTARIO UNCONDITIONAL GRANTS AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moved first reading of Bill 199, An Act to amend the Ontario Unconditional Grants Act, 1975.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, this bill will amend the Ontario Unconditional Grants Act. It revises the current provisions relating to special assistance in order to enable the ministry to provide assistance in circumstances which would result in an undue increase in property taxes in certain municipalities.

In addition, it contains measures which serve to complement the proposed Municipal Boundaries Negotiation Act. More specifically, it generalizes the circumstances in which the ministry could provide financial assistance related to municipal annexations or amalgamations. It also provides authority for the ministry to phase in the areas affected by reorganization towards a common municipal mill rate.

REGIONAL MUNICIPALITY OF PEEL AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moved first reading of Bill 200, An Act to amend the Regional Municipality of Peel Act, 1973.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, this bill has two amendments. The first would effect a minor boundary alteration in the mutual boundary of the cities of Brampton and Mississauga at the request of the two cities in the regional municipality of Peel. The amendment draws the boundary to coincide with the southerly limit of the northern link of the parkway belt west design area.

The second amendment would permit the region of Peel to establish a special transportation system for the handicapped without jeopardizing the right of area municipalities in the region to continue to operate public transportation systems. At present, the act provides generally that if the region establishes a transportation system, no area municipality shall establish such a system.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moved first reading of Bill 201, An Act to amend the Legislative Assembly Act.

Motion agreed to.

11:10 a.m.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, this bill provides that the differential in accommodation allowance for the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. S. Smith) and the leader of the third party (Mr. Cassidy) will be maintained. It makes some minor changes in the way the accommodation allowance will be calculated.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moved first reading of Bill 204, An Act to amend the Executive Council Act.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, this bill provides the same differential in accommodation allowance that I just indicated would apply to the Leader of the Opposition and the leader of the third party, for members of the executive council who reside outside of Metropolitan Toronto.

DENTURE THERAPISTS AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Timbrell moved first reading of Bill 205, An Act to amend the Denture Therapists Act, 1974.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, as the honourable members are aware, denture therapy is a relatively new practice that is governed by an appointed board. However, there are several members on the board who are coming to the end of their appointments. Under the Denture Therapists Act, 1974, they cannot be reappointed because of a six-year membership restriction.

Since the present members are so familiar with the issues that affect the practice of denture therapy, I am introducing an amendment to the act to permit members to serve for more than six consecutive years and be reappointed for one, two and three-year terms. We believe this amendment will enable the board of denture therapists to continue to discharge its responsibilities in an effective and knowledgeable manner.

REDEEMER COLLEGE ACT

Mr. J. Johnson, on behalf of Mr. Ashe, moved first reading of Bill Pr48, An Act to incorporate Redeemer College.

Motion agreed to.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

House in committee of supply.

ESTIMATES, MINISTRY OF NORTHERN AFFAIRS

(concluded)

On vote 704, regional priorities and development program:

Mr. Bolan: Mr. Chairman, I would like to take up the matter of regional priorities with the ministry. Under the heading "tourism development," he lists a number of activities his ministry has considered or is considering. I would like to speak for a few minutes about the ski agency that has been developed in the North Bay area.

I think the minister is familiar with it. In fact, he and I cut a ribbon last year. His presence was quite suspicious on that day because it was the first day we had sufficient snow to ski. However, his largess with respect to the falling of snow did not last very long; we had one of the more miserable winters as far as ski conditions were concerned. I hope that is not a reflection on his ministry.

In any event, as the minister knows, for two years in a row his ministry has provided seed money for the maintenance of trails, which have grown to have international recognition. In fact this year during the Christmas festivities we have some charter flights coming in from South America, as well as from Europe, which will be spending one week to 10 days using the trails. Perhaps the minister would like to come into my area at that time and bring with him the same good luck we had last year with respect to snowfall.

I point this out to the minister to show him how important it is to look at the programs, and how important it is for the government to get involved in them. When he considers the amount of money his ministry did put into the ski agency, it really is relatively small when one considers the tremendous benefits the entire region obtains from it.

My purpose in raising the matter of the ski agency with the minister is that as a result of the tremendous traffic that has come about, the local roads board in the township of Phelps has been under tremendous pressure to maintain the road that leads from Highway 69 into the ski agency area.

The local roads board has only so many dollars to maintain the road, and there was tremendous pressure put on it by the city of North Bay, by the residents in the area, and by the ski agency as well to keep that road in good condition, particularly on the weekends when the traffic is most heavy.

The attitude of the local roads board—and it is the proper attitude—has been that we simply do not have the funds to expend to better the facilities for the ski agency. There is such a tremendous usage of it, it requires much more funding than is made available to it.

I had several people from southern Ontario who spent considerable time and money coming up there to ski only to have their charter bus go off the road. The next 24 hours were spent in frustration, getting tow trucks and pulling the bus out. We did manage to solve some of the problems, but nevertheless I think it is an area the Ministry of Northern Affairs should look into.

I would ask ministry officials to contact the local roads board of the township of Phelps with a view to coming to some agreement with it to provide additional funding for the maintenance of that road. I don't know how the ministry would do this, but I leave it in the minister's good hands. I am sure he has a sufficient number of competent administrators in his ministry. A relatively small amount of money would be involved to assist the local roads board in providing better service for the people of southern Ontario.

They are the ones who are coming up weekend after weekend. If we are not going to have good access for them to get to the ski site once they arrive at North Bay, then they are not going to come back. It is going to be sour grapes and that is very poor advertising. I put that to the minister, as the member for that riding as well as a person who is very much interested in the development of what I think is a tremendous idea, a tremendous agency. Believe me, the north is really benefiting from it.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, if I could respond to the member for Nipissing, I would first express my appreciation for his very complimentary remarks in respect to our efforts to promote tourism in the North Bay area.

I, too, was most impressed with the attitude of the young people who had taken on that responsibility, the accomplishments of the community college itself, Canadore College in North Bay, and the efforts they went through to really get something going in the North Bay area that was the continuation of a good summer tourism economy into a winter tourism economy.

I am sure the people who read our comments and maybe those people in the gallery who want to do some cross-country skiing will look to North Bay as one of the finer places in northern Ontario to enjoy that kind of recreational experience. I must say I was most impressed to learn that X number of miles of the cross-country ski routes were lit by night. That was a very impressive sight and certainly those people in charge were to be and are to be complimented because they are fulfilling a need for something we can do up there. Certainly, I appreciate the member's remarks.

We will be following their successes very closely. We are prepared to co-operate with them right to the fullest because I think we have something going that we should continue. Following on that it is obvious, in response to the member's concern about the roads and access roads into those areas, that they must be maintained. It seems a little ridiculous to promote something and then not be able to get to it. I am going to ask my staff to meet with the local roads board and to meet with the tourism promotion people in North Bay to see if there is some way we can help.

I think there is. We have done it in the past. We have the regional priority budget designed for that type of assistance where it does not fall into a regular, normal program—it falls in between the slots, so to speak. We can come along, with the co-operation of the local services board, and I can assure the honourable member that we will look at that problem.

Mr. Wildman: Mr. Chairman, in that vein, I had not intended to raise this but I am glad to hear the minister make those comments because, as he may know, I sent him a letter—I do not know whether he has received it as yet—regarding the question of infrastructure for the King Mountain project.

Obviously, there is a possibility of a great influx of people if that project goes ahead, and there is some concern in that area on the part of the local roads board and some of the local people about first, how the infrastructure could be provided and upgraded, and second, how it could be maintained subsequent to the project being completed.

I would like to know if the minister could respond to whether or not that kind of funding is being looked at by his ministry. If so, is it independent from or is it related to the current discussions with the federal government with regard to the Department of Regional Economic Expansion subagreement on tourism?

The particular issue I wanted to raise this morning, however, deals with developments in Blind River. As the minister knows, related to the expansion at Elliot Lake, Blind River has become a bit of a boom town, which is quite a change from what it was a few years ago. There is a tremendous amount of expansion going on—residential, to be sure—with people commuting back and forth to the mines in Elliot Lake, but it is not only residential.

There has been a spurt of commercial development, tourist-related, service-related and small-retail-related. The municipality is very anxious to attract small secondary industry so that it will not be just a bedroom community but a community with diversification of employment opportunities within its boundaries.

On the whole issue of Granary Lake Road, one of the reasons the government has said it does not wish to go ahead with that construction at this time is related to cost, of course, but also it does not want Blind River to be a bedroom community. If that is the case, I would think the ministry would be doing all it can to ensure there is a possibility for the development of other types of small industry and business in the community to provide employment opportunities. In that regard, the municipality has had discussions with the Ministry of Northern Affairs, the Ministry of the Environment, the Ministry of Housing and the Ministry of Industry and Tourism for assistance in the expansion of an industrial park.

I understand the minister wrote to the municipality just last month, after his discussions with the other ministries of the government, indicating the provincial government would not be providing additional assistance for the rehabilitation of the sanitary sewer system and the provision of services in the industrial park area. Municipal officials were most disappointed with the response. Apparently, the main reason for the denial of funding was that municipal service charges in Blind River are lower than in a number of other northern communities with similar population and assessment; in a way, this seems to be saying that if the municipality does well fiscally it will be penalized, in that it will not be able to get special funding when faced with a great deal of expansion and it has to expand services. We have the unfortunate example of some other communities in northern Ontario which have not done well fiscally, and the provincial government had to come in and bail them out and provide the necessary funding to enable the community to provide the services it needs without greatly increasing the mill rate and taxes for local residents.

I wonder if the minister is prepared to meet with representatives of the municipality again to discuss this very important matter and to hear their views. In a way, it seems he is denying his policy of not wanting Blind River simply to be a residential area with commuters. I hope the minister is prepared to meet with the municipal officials, who indicate they would like to arrange a meeting convenient to him. I hope I can get a response and that the government will take another look at assisting Blind River. After all, extensive assistance is being provided to Elliot Lake, and it is largely the same expansion that is leading to the need for expansion of services in Blind River.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, replying to the question of the member for Algoma regarding the infrastructure for the possible King Mountain development, it is certainly obvious to the government—and I say that in a general way, because we are strongly sympathetic to that development—that it would be an economic development for the north-eastern part of the province, an area that really needs it from the point of view of economic activity and, I suppose, the magnetic attraction for tourists from the United States would be outstanding.

11:30 a.m.

I know the member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Ramsay) has been vocal on this issue. I had the privilege of flying with him in a helicopter about a month and a half ago during the height of the fall season when the colour was at its best. I guess the most beautiful colour on the North American continent is around Sault Ste. Marie in the fall. It was beautiful to see. To look at King Mountain at that point in the season and that time of the year was a real experience.

The location, as far as I am concerned from a layman's point of view, is an excellent one. The hills are great. The countryside is just gorgeous. It is untouched. It has reasonably good access. The member is quite right in saying the infrastructure requirements would be rather significant—roads, sewers, water and that type of thing. That would be part of the Ontario government's interest if we moved with the King Mountain development.

It is, as the member knows, a major private development. Until the Ontario-DREE tourism package is finalized or at least some direction is given to that package, I suppose we will have to do it as one big unit, but I can assure the member that is one area we will be sympathetic to.

The town of Blind River, as the honourable member correctly points out, has had an economic lift with the Eldorado refining facility being moved from Port Hope to northern Ontario, where I suppose it lends itself to the development very handsomely, as uranium is mined 40 minutes away from Blind River now. Is Elliot Lake about 40 minutes away from Blind River?

Mr. Wildman: It is 40 minutes to an hour depending on the weather.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, it depends on the weather. The whole Blind River area is going through some real upheavals and changes now. We have been active in the Blind River area with the assistance we have given out of the regional priority budget. We have put up $1 million for their treatment plant. They have had some real infiltration problems, as we are all aware.

I think the community is aware that, when we put the money into the treatment plant, the agreement was they would look after their own upgrading. I understand they have been doing that very well this year with their own forces. For that they are to be complimented.

The question of the industrial park is still around. I met with Mayor Gallagher. He was in about a week or 10 days ago. We discussed that problem in the east lobby of the main building here. We indicated to him at that time that he should go back to the Ministry of Industry and Tourism with respect to that request because the whole question of industrial parks is now under active review by that ministry. It is standing back and looking at its accomplishments, seeing how they are funded and the results of the efforts to date. It would be very timely if he went to Industry and Tourism with that formal request for some enlargement and improvements to his own industrial park. He said he certainly would do that.

With regard to the Granary Lake road, there is no change on the Granary Lake road. I think it is fair to say the feeling now is they are 40 minutes away from Elliot Lake by a fairly good road and that is sufficient for their immediate requirements. The expenditure of $12 million or $14 million—I am sure it is up to that now—to shorten the distance between Blind River and Elliot Lake would mean maybe five or 10 minutes in travelling time.

Mr. Wildman: I will come back to that when we get to northern roads.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Okay, but it was very difficult. There has been no change. I do not think there is that much demand. Mayor Gallagher did not make it an issue when we met with him last week.

Mr. Wildman: The Elliot Lake chamber of commerce wants it, but that is a different vote.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I have not heard from them.

You questioned our decision with respect to some assistance to Blind River and our examination of their local tax load. I think in all the assistance we give on the regional priority budget, that's one area we do look at. I think it would be unfair if the local taxpayers were not carrying their full equitable responsibility as it relates to adjacent communities.

The mayor or the reeve and the council of that community may say: "We will have a very low tax burden here and we will go after the federal and provincial governments to take our responsibility," which, by right, is theirs. So we look at that comparison and we point out they are lower than other areas and that to be fair and equitable to the other communities they may want to raise some additional funds, which would improve their borrowing capacity.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that responds to the inquiries of the member for Algoma. If there are any further questions I will be glad to assist.

Mr. Kerrio: Mr. Chairman, the minister is carrying a very heavy burden over there all by himself.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Oh, I've got some good staff over here with me.

Mr. Kerrio: Mr. Minister, I have a genuine interest in this area we are discussing as it relates to the tourist aspect of northern Ontario. I come from a very successful part of Ontario, Niagara Falls. We happen to be within reach of many people who visit our area—some 15 million every year—so that transportation is really left up to the individual. The very successful people in the area do a great deal of advertising, as does the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman), which actually reflects on the kind of business that happens down there.

The reason I wanted to talk on this subject today was because I have had firsthand experience. I spend a good deal of my leisure time in the north. I have taken on myself the task of representing our party in the north from time to time and so I know of what I speak.

I have a concern, and the concern is shared by the government, that transportation is very difficult in the north—and that's proven. The government has reacted on licence fees and in keeping gasoline at an equitable price with southern Ontario so that northerners can avail themselves of a bit of advantage to get from place to place.

My concern is that unless we provide some really meaningful transportation to the north, we are going to have difficulty getting people interested in spending time there. The reason I pose the question is because I have taken the Ontario Northland Railway from Toronto right through to Moosonee to hunt geese on James Bay at the Harricanaw camp, which is run by the Ontario Northland. I find this is a unique experience.

The train itself is one of the finest modes of transportation you will find on rails anywhere in the world. The difficulty I have with it is that very often on a weekend you cannot be accommodated on that train. If that is the case, without putting forward any new initiatives to get more people to travel, unless we have a more flexible means of handling the Ontario Northland Railway, unless we can add a considerable number of cars or more facilities, we will never expand that mode of transportation.

As I have suggested before, I know personally some of the people who are involved in the operation. I am very pleased about the functioning of the railway but the limits of it are obvious. Unless you take the initiative, there is little point in doing some of the things I would suggest should be ongoing in the northern parts of Ontario, such as preferential reforestation that has consideration for the animals as well as the pulp and paper mills up north. We should consider stocking our northern lakes, where the lakes are considered safe, so that our young people and our residents, as well as visitors from south of the border, can be assured they are going to come into northern Ontario and expect good fishing.

Doing things on the ski slopes and all over northern Ontario that will encourage people to travel there will all be for naught, unless we can prove we have the necessary kind of transportation. I mean an advanced thinking in transportation; I do not mean to keep pace with some other jurisdiction. I mean to take the initiative and say, "You can come to Ontario and leave your car parked. We will take care of you from point A to anywhere you want to travel for whatever you might like to do in northern Ontario."

A high priority in your responsibility as Minister of Northern Affairs is to encourage that railway to put forward a two-year, three-year or four-year plan that will ultimately say we have a tourist attraction where one can leave one's car at home and save fuel and go into the far reaches of the north, come snow or what have you. In the case of places as remote as Minaki or Moosonee, places that everyone in this great country of ours should be able to travel to, I do not think we will be able to exploit those visitors and give them the exposure they need unless transportation becomes a very high priority in the ministry's involvement in northern Ontario.

Mr. Chairman: I believe the member slipped down into item 4.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the involvement of the member for Niagara Falls in these estimates. I am very familiar with his love of the north and his desire to spend more time up there. I would extend a very warm welcome to him to visit us on a regular basis in all seasons—spring, summer, fall and winter. There are glorious opportunities to enjoy the things that many people in southern Ontario do not have the opportunity to do and to really get a feel for what is happening up there, not only for the wilderness aspect of northern Ontario, but the beautiful urban areas we have.

We have a beautiful city called Sudbury. I would encourage you to visit that beautiful city because there is a new mood in Sudbury. Recent ads have come out that they want to develop a new convention centre.

Mr. Kerrio: The only problem you have in the north is some of the members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I will get to that point next spring. First things first. I was interested in the comments from Sudbury about their community and how proud they are. They want a new convention centre established in Sudbury. They want to change the attitude of people in southern Ontario towards that particular area. It is most encouraging to go into Sudbury and see the greening of the rocks now coming on. I know the member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Laughren) is anxious to get into the estimates, to elaborate on the developments going on in the Sudbury area and to tell us about the great things that have happened in his particular community.

Getting back to transportation, I just want to tell the member that we have some excellent services into the northeastern Ontario corridor per se with the Northland train and the Northlander, to which you made reference, with Air Canada making regular trips into North Bay, Sudbury and Timmins and with the excellent sleeper bus service we have now which operates in that entire corridor. You can leave Toronto, go up to Tobermory, get on one of the most modern auto ferries anywhere in the North American continent, take a nice trip across to South Baymouth on Manitoulin Island and continue on up to northern Ontario.

I think you touched on a very sensitive area when you mentioned Minaki Lodge. I am sensitive about the way the rail transportation facilities into that particular area are regulated by the federal government and the CNR, which goes through there. We have a lot of work to do with the CNR because the attitudes to which you refer are not showing up in the Via Rail operations as much as I would like them to come forth. They do a lot of talking about getting people back on the rails, but in my estimation they have not made any great strides or changes. I know it takes time and I am one of those who are willing to wait until they can get their house in order, get new equipment and get on with the job of bringing people back to the rails. That is the way it has to go.

I want to compliment my colleague, the member for St. David (Mrs. Scrivener). As you know, she is chairing a rail task force. The interim report has just come down and my own deputy minister, Mr. Herridge, has literally spent hours working with that committee. I hope you have had the opportunity to read the interim report. I understand in her final report, or at least the report with all the recommendations as it relates to rail service in this province, she has gone beyond the provincial responsibility, which was part of her terms of reference, to look at the province as a whole and the need to improve rail services in this province. With the energy problem we have now, it is obvious that is the route we have to move in.

I encourage honourable members to read the interim report of that task force and to digest in great detail the recommendations when they come out later next year, because I think it will have some real effect on what the future holds for us in northern Ontario.

I am particularly proud of our services on the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission, and I want to touch on the norOntair operation. When you get to North Bay, you can jump on the greatest little airline on the North American continent, the norOntair operation.

Mr. Kerrio: I have to get to North Bay first.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, we have excellent service to North Bay. Right now we are serving 21 communities. Just last week we added Cochrane and we hope to add another four or five in the next short period. We also hope to add to our fleet. As the member knows, we have put in the first orders for two Dash-8s—I get mixed up between the Dash-7s and the Dash-8s; I think it is the Dash-8. It is a 30-passenger, twin-engine aircraft—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: And started the flood of orders.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: And started the flood of orders, certainly. The orders are up to about 100 now that de Havilland will build.

The transportation requirements of northern Ontario have been addressed in the past five or 10 years as they have never been addressed before. The highway construction program, which I am sure we will get into, has enabled you to drive across northern Ontario now. The passing lanes, the paved shoulder program and the improvements to the main highway are things that we, as northerners, expect, and rightly so. We are not asking for anything we are not entitled to, but that has been accelerated.

This year alone, with the funds that will flow out of our construction program, about $55 million, and what we add from this particular vote, the regional priorities budget, along with what we bring into our access road program, the Ontario North and Transportation Commission's budget and the forest access program, which flows through the whole package, all that comes to about $92 million. That is a big increase, and much of it comes from this regional priorities budget, which was established to look after the very special needs of northern Ontario where there are vast distances and usually high costs that we don't encounter here in southern Ontario.

We are very cognizant of the transportation needs of northern Ontario. It is something we are not going to relax on; I can assure the honourable member of that. I appreciate his sincerity and his desire to improve transportation, and I can assure him I share that feeling and I intend to go that way.

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Chairman, in the hour or so remaining, I want to divide my remarks into things that the Ontario government is doing well in the north and things it is not doing well. I think the northern service is a very nice service for the north. The one thing I like very much is the northern service for the small communities. Now I would like to get on to the things the government is not doing very well.

Mr. Chairman, a mini-budget was brought down very recently in this province. There was a day when no budget, mini or otherwise, would have been brought down without some reference to the north and its particular needs. I do not think the recent mini-budget mentioned the word "north" once in its entirety. It is an indication of the shifting priorities of this government and the lack of status which the Ministry of Northern Affairs has held in that cabinet. There was a day 10 years ago, perhaps beyond that and even a couple of years since then, when it was understood by cabinet that they had to address the particular problems of the north.

That is no longer the case. We never hear this government talking about the particular needs of the north except when the Minister of Northern Affairs cuts a ribbon or hands out a grant. Much of the money in the regional priorities budget, as the minister knows full well, is from other ministries, and that money would be there anyway. There are all sorts of examples in which the presence of the Minister of Northern Affairs has done nothing but clutter up the process. He has become a barrier in many cases to the proper functioning of the other ministries. There is no better example of that than with the Ministry of Transportation and Communications.

I invite you, Mr. Chairman, to talk to the people in the Ministry of Transportation and Communications and to ask them what they think of the role of the Ministry of Northern Affairs in the apportioning of the budget in northern Ontario. They will look at you and the first thing they will ask you is whether their remarks are on or off the record. They are very unhappy with what this minister has done.

I invite you to come to Sudbury, Mr. Chairman, and ask the people of Sudbury what they think of the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Snow). They will say to you: "I think he is a good fellow. We have had a fair number of new roads in the Sudbury basin in the last few years." Then you will say, "What about the Minister of Northern Affairs?" They will say, "Well, everything the Minister of Transportation and Communications has done, the Minister of Northern Affairs is trying to undo."

I will give you a very specific example from his regional priorities budget. The Minister of Transportation and Communications approved a northeast bypass which would join up Highway 17, west of Sudbury, and Highway 144, north of Sudbury. That bypass was promised by the Minister of Transportation and Communications as a result of public hearings. It was promised because the majority of the business people in that area did not want the bypass; they wanted an expansion of the existing route. I happened to support the bypass. To the credit of the former Minister of Transportation and Communications, I believe he listened to the public at large and did the right thing; he built the bypass.

But one of the things that was promised to the people in that community, to the business community in particular, was, "Support us on building the bypass, and we will put a link over to Highway 144 so the traffic will come over this way coming down from Timmins to Toronto, and going from Toronto up to Timmins or from the Sault up to the Timmins area." That promise was made to the community, that they would proceed with that bypass, that link between the two roads, with some dispatch.

In the community the municipal councils and regional councils were proceeding on the assumption that, as Highway 17 was expanded to four lanes and the bypass built, the link would then fall into place. We were given every reason to believe that. Then, suddenly this fall, the Minister of Northern Affairs descended out of the far north into Sudbury and said: "Maybe priorities have shifted. We need an updating of the data." What a lot of nonsense! There is no updating required. The promise was made.

Another reason the minister said they would build a bypass there is that at the present time there is no link between those two roads except to go into Sudbury. We were pressing to have another road. From each highway a road went part way in but they were not joined. There is a private road, owned by Falconbridge, called the Lockerby Mine Road. The minister said, "No, we are not going to join that and make a bypass through there, because we are building a link over the bypass in question, the link between Highway 17 and 144." So people, including me, said: "All right, we agree with you. Build that link between the two highways and then we will not push for this other road to be joined up, because it makes more sense to have a proper link."

There were all sorts of holdups with such things as building a shopping centre, until an exact route at the intersection of Highway 144 was determined, and so forth. Then the Minister of Northern Affairs in his wisdom shifted priorities around. Perhaps he could tell us today what became a higher priority. Was it Ontario North Now, down at Ontario Place? Is that where the funds went? Did it go to the northwest? Where did those funds go? Those funds were committed. There is no doubt about that.

The Minister of Northern Affairs had best not show his comely features in Sudbury these days or, if he does, he had better have the Minister of Transportation and Communications with him as a bodyguard, because he is going to need one.

That is one area in which the Ontario government and the Ministry of Northern Affairs are failing to do their job in northern Ontario.

A few moments ago, the minister talked about rail service. There is what is called the Budd car service, which runs between Sudbury and White River and back. It is a neat service that stops at all the small communities along the line. Hunters can throw a moose on and can send packages in and out. It is a boon for the tourist operators and the people who live in the communities. I use it myself to go to some of the more remote communities. I used to be able to go in the morning and come out in the afternoon.

Within six months of every federal member elected in northern Ontario being a Liberal, the Canadian Transport Commission cancelled the Budd car service. The people in northeastern Ontario are not missing that message one iota, not a bit. They cancelled the service for the Budd car, imposing a hardship on those communities.

I wrote to the Minister of Northern Affairs and said:

"Dear Mr. Minister: In view of the fact that the CTC is being so insensitive to the needs of the northeast, and in view of the fact that you are the Minister of Northern Affairs, why don't you join with us in battle and get the CTC to reverse that incredible decision?"

The minister said, "I agree with you; we shouldn't cancel it." I said to him: "That's not much of a commitment. If the CTC persists, why don't we get the Ontario Northland Railway to operate the Budd car services?" "Oh no," said the minister, "that is a federal responsibility."

That is some commitment to northern Ontario. Thanks to the pressure of everybody except this minister, the CTC has now agreed to hold public hearings in some of the communities.

Mr. Wildman: He wrote them a letter.

Mr. Laughren: Yes, the minister wrote a letter. Now isn't that a major commitment on behalf of the people of northeastern Ontario?

I ask the minister to read the latest headline in the Chapleau Sentinel which explains why there are now going to be public hearings, whereas there were none before. The proper credit is given in that story.

There were two basic reasons. My federal colleague in the House of Commons, the member for Regina West, Mr. Les Benjamin, has done a truly excellent job. He is a member from Regina and he is doing more to preserve rail service in northeastern Ontario than the Minister of Northern Affairs has even attempted to do. The member for Regina West pointed out to the CTC there are two basic reasons why the Budd car service should be maintained.

He said: "Cross-Canada travellers cannot be adequately served if the train is stopping to do local work. It makes more sense to supplement the Transcontinental with a local train than to stop a 16-car train every four or five miles to pick up a trapper or drop off a parcel."

The second reason is: "The Canadian transcontinental train will not carry express. Of the 19 express stations currently served by the Budd car, two will be served by interline truck, six will be served once a week by way freight, and 11 are left with no confirmation of service."

Perhaps I can expand on a couple of those points. It is so stupid to ask a transcontinental service to go from coast to coast and stop at communities every four or five miles apart—that is no exaggeration—communities some of which have 10 people, some 50 people and some 200 people. It is simply outrageous.

How can we ever have a crack transcontinental service if these trains are stopping at all these small communities? It is absolutely stupid.

12 noon

Secondly, the Canadian will not carry express. Do members know what the CTC told us? It said: "Your concern regarding the service changes impact on Chapleau's fur, tourist, and mineral exploration industries is appreciated." And here comes a critical sentence. "However, please be assured that the CTC has ordered Via to provide the same service on the Transcontinental as was formerly offered by trains 185 and 186. In that respect, all freight responsibilities previously provided by trains 185 and 186 in transporting supplies in and out of Chapleau will now be carried out by the Transcontinental during the off-peak months. The only exception to this will be hunters' game, which will be transported by a Canadian Pacific truck express service."

I ask the minister, how is a truck going to get into these remote communities, the only access to which is rail, and carry out the moose? I hope every hunter up there who shoots a moose waves down the Transcontinental and lugs his moose on to one of the passenger cars. Those are the kinds of silly statements that are coming out of the CTC. The Minister of Northern Affairs should have been involved in this issue. He sits there like a pussy cat and writes a letter to the CTC, telling them he thinks that is not a very nice thing to do.

I know the minister is very happy to have federal Liberal members representing northern Ontario. It makes him feel nice and comfortable and he can then blame them for the problems in northern Ontario. But he has an obligation to do something about their stupidity. He sits there and does virtually nothing about it. The whole thing has become absolutely ludicrous. All I can say is, thank goodness, my colleague Mr. Benjamin was able to prevail upon them to hold a public meeting.

They talk about express service. The express costs for shipping in and out of Chapleau by truck have doubled. Mr. Peter Gjoni owns Northern Pottery up there, a very nice and successful operation. He has received assistance from this government in the past. He knows from experience that his costs for shipping out are double. That is not going to make him nearly as competitive as he once was. We should be encouraging those kinds of businesses in northern Ontario. What is the minister doing? Not very much.

The CTC says they must provide the same service. Not too long ago someone went into the station in Chapleau and said, "I would like to ship this plywood to mile so and so up the track." He was told: "Oh, no, we won't accept that. You have to ship it by truck." As I said earlier, there is no road to that community, yet there is the CTC assuring us that the service will be provided to the same degree as was provided by the Budd car service. That is total nonsense.

I hope that as the public hearings take place we will see the Minister of Northern Affairs there making the case for Ontario and for those small communities in north-eastern Ontario. Do I have that commitment from the minister?

Mr. Wildman: He will be there but he will say he will live with whatever they say.

Mr. Laughren: Yes. I hope the minister is unequivocal in his position at those hearings, and not like he was in his letter to me, where he was more or less shrugging his shoulders and saying that is a federal responsibility. I do hope I have made some impression upon the minister about the need to maintain the Budd car service.

Another area that bothers me, when I think of the minister's responsibilities under the regional priorities budget, is the need to create new jobs and maintain existing jobs in the north. It is not too long ago since I spent a day at Jarvis Clark, a very aggressive, healthy mining machinery company in North Bay owned by CIL. They are expanding into world markets and are really flexing their muscles. They have the money behind them to do it.

I went there because I had heard a rumour that Jarvis Clark was expanding its operations in southern Ontario. Sure enough, they are. They have bought a plant in Burlington for warehousing purposes and God only knows what else down the road. When I went to visit Jarvis Clark and spent some time there, touring their plant, meeting the president and so forth, they impressed on me a couple of things. First, there is a shortage of skilled tradespeople they need there. I do not know why they would need skilled tradespeople in a warehouse; nevertheless, that was a problem, they said. Secondly, they were going into export markets and they wanted to be down here.

More fundamental than that is that the company has no sense of obligation to expand in the north. The reason they have no sense of obligation is that, although they know they started there and that is where they became healthy, there is no regional plan into which they can plug. There is nothing. The company in northern Ontario operates, makes a profit, does its thing; they don't feel part of any northern Ontario strategy.

That is part of what I was talking about at the beginning when I said there was a day when no budget would have been brought down here without talking about regional development in northern Ontario. Communities in northern Ontario have no reason to stay in the north and expand if it is more convenient for them to do so in southern Ontario. That is the responsibility of the Minister of Northern Affairs. I would have thought that is why he has a regional priorities budget, yet it is as though there were no regional priorities.

Falconbridge Nickel Mines in Sudbury is another example. They have been there almost 50 years. To this day they have no refinery. They do the dirty and dangerous work in Sudbury, namely, the digging out of the ore and the smelting, and they ship the ore to Norway for processing. The minister was formerly Minister of Natural Resources; he knows the story well. To this day not only is Falconbridge allowed to ship its ore to Norway but, to add insult to injury, it can also write off the processing costs in Norway against its operating profits in Ontario. That is a crazy policy on the part of this government. Creating a refinery there would create jobs and give us something to which we are entitled. That is not a favour; we are entitled to it.

I never hear the Minister of Northern Affairs talking about freight rates in northern Ontario. We know that is a deterrent to the development of the north. If this government were as angry about things on which they disagree with the federal Liberals as they are cozy with items and issues on which they agree, we might accomplish something in this province. When this government agrees with the Prime Minister, my goodness, the embrace is something to behold; but when they disagree, they are a bunch of pussycats. That is what has to change. The government has to say, "We agree with the federal government on certain issues and support you there, but when we disagree, we are going to make it very uncomfortable for you." The Minister of Northern Affairs has not made it uncomfortable for the federal government in northern Ontario. The federal Liberals have done virtually nothing for northern Ontario all the time they have been in power. Does the minister agree with me? Of course he does. He is nodding his head. Yet I never hear him saying that.

Interjection.

Mr. Laughren: That's right, but Mr. Rodriguez is not there any more. When Rodriguez was there he got public hearings when they tried to cut back the service of the CN. Now Rodriguez isn't there, the federal Liberals are saying nothing. They are mute on issues in northern Ontario that are important.

Mr. Nixon: The Minister of State for Mines, Judy Erola, is a northerner.

Mr. Laughren: That's right.

Mr. Nixon: And she's a great minister.

Mr. Laughren: She has done nothing. She has no mines either. She is known as the mineless minister.

There is another issue the Minister of Northern Affairs was strangely silent on, and that had to do with the iron ore mines. National Steel in Capreol, north of Sudbury, was closing down. They made $6 million the previous year—a profitable operation—and they closed down. The minister looked the other way, embarrassed, and said virtually nothing. There was no reason for that closing at all.

I think of this minister's potential to develop northern Ontario and compare that to what he is doing and it riles me. There are some other examples I want to mention to the minister. They are not as sweeping as the ones I have talked about so far, but one is the whole question of a little community called Gogama. Gogama is a nice little community. Citizens have formed themselves into different organizations. They have raised money locally; they have taken a real interest in making that a better community in which to live. They are in the process of forming a local services board now, one of the first in the province.

I hope the minister has noticed that two of the first service boards in the province are in the riding of Nickel Belt and the very first one was in the riding of Nickel Belt.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: And you weren't there to honour the event. Very nice.

Mr. Laughren: Foleyet, yes. The night that local service board was honoured by the minister—and I was really glad he was able to go there and do that—was the same night they brought down the mini-budget. I regret very much I could not be there.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: A funny coincidence.

Mr. Laughren: I do not really think they, knowing I am the treasury critic, did it that way on purpose. I am not paranoid, but even paranoids have enemies.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: They are going to remember that.

Mr. Laughren: They may remember it.

To get back to Gogama: People there have really worked hard to make their community a better place in which to live. They applied last year for a grant. They built a firehall. They have an ambulance and a fire truck there. The Sudbury District Health Unit says: "This is a public place. You wash your vehicles in there. You hold public meetings in there. You had better have washroom facilities." So they apply for a grant for building washroom facilities to help them out with the field grant and so forth. Northern Affairs told them it was okay to go right ahead. The grant is $8,303. They are given every reason to believe they would get that grant. I was given every reason to believe it. I phoned the minister's executive assistant, who said: "It looks like that grant is going to go through. There is just a holdup here; I will straighten that out."

It was straightened out all right: They were told they were not going to get the grant. I think that was handled in a very shabby way. Now the people in Gogama are being told the application goes beyond the provisions of basic community services. Isn't that beautiful? The facilities in this public building go beyond the basic community services. I think the minister should reassess the rejection of that grant application for some $8,000. The community was prepared to put some money of its own in as well.

I should remind him it was the Ministry of Natural Resources which originally approved it. There was a freeze on the lot; they approved taking the freeze off to allow the building to be built in the first place. So I think there is an obligation on the part of the Minister of Northern Affairs to review the rejection of that grant application. I think it was not done in a very nice way.

If the minister wants to make it clear to all communities that a grant like that is not appropriate, then he should send out some kind of notice to all the local service boards and the community organizations so they know. They did not know that. They were given every reason to believe, and they proceeded under the belief, that they were going to get their money. That may not seem much to the minister when he is talking about $90 million for his regional priorities budget, but $8,300 to a small community like Gogama really does mean something.

The last point I want to raise has to do with the Chapleau airport. I do not know whether the minister has been involved in this dispute yet. Chapleau is under supervision and, as such, all expenditures must be approved by the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs (Mr. Wells).

They applied to have an airport manager. The airport there is served by northern Ontario and there are quite a few small private planes in the Chapleau area owned by tourist operators, the lumber barons in the area and so forth. They applied to hire an airport manager and were turned down by the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs. The airport commission feels very strongly that the manager should be hired, because they can no longer run it like a shoestring operation. There is the sale of fuel to worry about, ticket sales, clearance of the runway and weather forecasting. All those things are going on there, and it should not be run by a part-time person any more. It has become too sophisticated, and there is an obligation on the part of the Ministry of Northern Affairs to help out there.

In his response, I hope the minister will tell me whether other municipalities have airport managers in small communities. Quite frankly, I do not know. If so, will he tell me roughly what kind of salary are they receiving, what are their duties and why is he not—or maybe he is—prepared to move in and help out Chapleau in hiring an airport manager and talking to the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs? Because they are under supervision does not mean they do not have to get on with the daily business of running a community and a local airport. I would hope the minister will respond to some of the points I have raised.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I welcome the honourable member's contribution to the examination of the estimates of this ministry.

Mr. Laughren: I did say something good, too.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, he said a little more than he did a few years ago. There has been a slight improvement. When I first came to Queen's Park several years ago as a novice, as one from the backwoods of northwestern Ontario—I was elected in a by-election in 1966—I sat here that first year—because there was a general election in 1967—and I listened to the member for Nickel Belt at that time—

Mr. Laughren: I was not here then.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: His attitude was the same.

Mr. Laughren: I was elected in 1971.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: But the attitude is the same. I would go back to my hotel room at night and I would think: "God, things are terrible in this province. They are really terrible. I cannot believe how terrible things are in this Legislature." Yet I would go home on the weekend and people were so grateful; things were happening in northern Ontario, all over northern Ontario and all across this province.

In fact, it was so bad I said to my wife one night, "Things are so bad, this government will never get re-elected." That was 1966. We are still around. We are still doing great things for the people of this province, from Kenora right clean through to Ottawa. I say that as a matter of interest, because the attitude is the same. I hope that the member for Nickel Belt will go to Saskatchewan and get on the government side of the House. I think he has been too long in opposition.

Mr. Laughren: I agree.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: He has become so cynical, so critical, it is built into his lifestyle. I feel sorry for him, because he is missing a way of life. There are so many great things happening around him and he has closed his eyes to them. Just last week—

Mr. Laughren: Does the minister think I have raised legitimate problems?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, but the member forgot a lot of them, though—a lot of the good things. That is what I am saying.

Mr. Laughren: My job is to raise legitimate problems.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I know. That is the point I am getting to. I have some sympathy for the member, and I feel sorry for him. Just last week I had to be in Ottawa; then the next day I flew to Sudbury. What a beautiful day it was. The weather was great. The attitudes were great. There we were, opening up a brand-new, $12-million provincial building. And who was there? The member for Kenora was there, the Minister of Northern Affairs was there, period.

Mr. Laughren: I rise on a point of privilege, Mr. Chairman. The minister is distorting the facts and misleading us all by saying that, because he knows full well that a plane left here in the morning with the member for Sudbury (Mr. Germa) on it, who was attempting to get there for that opening—along with the Premier (Mr. Davis), I might add. The minister had better retract that statement.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: He did not arrive. Nobody arrived. But, as a member for northern Ontario, I have a responsibility and I made sure I was there. I made sure I was there to look after the member's interests and the interests of this government, and it was a real pleasure and a real honour to officiate at that official opening ceremony.

Bouquets were prepared and tossed out to the Premier of this province and to the government of this province by the municipal leaders—in fact, they had prepared texts; all the texts were prepared and written out, and they read them verbatim. It was very pleasant from my point of view and of course I thanked them profusely. They even recognized the great contribution that 2001 had made to the—I know the member does not want to touch on that, but the mayor of Sudbury literally made reference to it; the member may want to comment on that.

Then, of course, I went on to Foleyet. I regretted that the honourable member was not there, because it was an historical occasion. As I said to the people in Foleyet, "This is the first local services board in the world." It was a gala event. The pride displayed by the people of Foleyet was something I will long remember. It was a sight to behold. I was pleased and I made mention there of the contribution all political parties have made to the LSB bill itself—yes, I did. In fact, it is such a good bill that all political parties want to take credit for it.

Getting back to the priority-setting for the highway construction program, I want to correct an earlier figure I gave. I said we had $92 million in road construction programs in northern Ontario in the 1980-81 budget. That figure should be $96.5 million. It is a very handsome figure, one that people in northern Ontario are very grateful for.

I went to Sudbury and had a very pleasant lunch with the regional chairman, with the mayor of Rayside-Balfour, the mayor of Walden and a couple of others. We discussed the north-south bypass. I said to them at that time, "What is all the fuss?" One of them said to me: "Look, there was a municipal election. We could not get any ink. Really we had to say something. We had to get the pot boiling a little bit." I said: "The Minister of Transportation and Communications made the announcement. When a member of this cabinet makes a public statement, it is a commitment of this government. That commitment will be lived up to."

Mr. Laughren: You are holding it back at least a year.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, we are not. The Minister of Transportation and Communications had indicated it would be in the 1982 budget.

Mr. Laughren: In 1981.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: In 1982. It is in the 1982 program, and there is no change.

Mr. Laughren: You promised 1981.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I said I would like to see a start maybe in 1981. I said that in Sudbury. We are going to try to do something to see if we can get something going in 1981.

Mr. Laughren: That is really shabby on your part.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No. It was announced for 1982 as part of a program that has to be examined. The land acquisition is all complete. The environmental assessment is nearing completion. The design work is practically complete. Everybody knows it was in the 1982 program. It was accepted; so I do not know what the fuss is. It is there, it is a commitment and this government honours its commitments.

Mr. Laughren: You have delayed it a year.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, we did not.

Mr. Laughren: You made a commitment that construction would start in 1981.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I could not make a commitment like that. I do not even know what my 1981-82 budget will be. The Treasurer gives me my allocation and we work out the budgetary process for the next year. I said that in Sudbury. We are as anxious to get on with that access as anybody else.

Getting back to the Budd car, I was pleased the member brought that issue up because I failed to mention it in my earlier remarks. The Budd car is a burning issue with us in the Ministry of Northern Affairs. We made our feelings known to the federal government. I am pleased the member made representation to his federal Liberal colleagues, because they sat very quietly.

So often the federal government does things and we are called upon to rattle the chains and to beat the drum for northern Ontario and we are going to continue to do that. We have done it for television. We appeared at the hearings in Geraldton and the recommendations we made at the CRTC hearings in Geraldton with relation to television have been accepted by the CRTC. We are waiting for the federal government to get on with it, to accept those as recommendations that will improve that. Our presence is very real and is there. We will be at the public hearing with regard to the Budd car. I say that sincerely. We will be there and we will be as vocal as we know how because we have the responsibility, as you correctly point out, to look after the interests and the needs of that great vast area of northern Ontario.

Mr. Laughren: Why didn't you do that with CN? You said you would accept whatever decision they made.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No. We fought them all the way along and we will continue. We are even fighting them now with regard to Minaki, for God's sake.

Mr. Laughren: You said you were opposed to it, but you would accept any decision they made. So they went ahead and made it.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I will not accept anything from them. If it is a decline or a lessening of the service to the people of northern Ontario, we will be in there fighting for them. That has been our attitude. That has been the feeling of this ministry and we will continue that.

Getting on with Gogama, as the member has correctly pointed out. Gogama has applied for local services board status. That is progressing very well and it will be announced and should be in place very soon.

I am prepared to look at that isolated communities assistance fund grant again. I think our responsibility has to be to the priority requirement of the community, and possibly a washroom area for firemen may not be that, in somebody's opinion. But I am prepared to have another look at that.

Mr. Laughren: The washroom area?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, the washroom area; we will have a look at that.

I was not aware of the problem in relation to the Chapleau airport. As you know, we have put about $1.8 million into that facility under the regional priority budget. It is an excellent airstrip; nor Ontario goes in there now. The Ministry of Transportation and Communications does have a program to assist municipalities in cost sharing the maintenance of the airports that are municipally owned. The town of Sioux Lookout, which is comparable in size to Chapleau—about 2,500 people—has an airport manager. So I think there must be a way that they could come up with some program. We really have to take a look at that.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that answers all the members' very constructive criticism.

Mr. Laughren: Except for the regional developments in the north like Jarvis Clark.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, the Jarvis Clark issue was one that bothered us and I would like to share that feeling with you. When we heard they were going to Burlington we made our feelings known to the Minister of Industry and Tourism. We felt very strongly that it should be an expansion to the plant in North Bay. We are very proud of that plant. It employs something like 400 people now and they are exporting mining equipment—

Mr. Bolan: There are 500 there and 100 in Sudbury.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, and they export right across the world. I understand they are getting into a different field as they come down to Burlington. As you correctly pointed out, they wanted some skilled labour; they want to be close to the market. I think one of the comments that came to me was they did not want all their eggs in one basket. That did not really wash with me. We have made our feelings known and we will continue to make that attitude known to these companies that move out of the north.

Mr. Laughren: It is always after the fact.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, we have been involved since day one and I can tell you right now, they are not finished yet.

Mr. Bolan: Again under the heading of tourism, there are two points I would like to raise. That should just about finish off my portion of the estimates.

I believe you sold Moosonee Lodge. Moosonee Lodge was sold in what year? The reason I am asking you is that I have a profit and loss statement for the Ontario Northland Railway operation for the period ending November 30, 1979. That would leave another three months to run on whatever their period is. On their expenditures they have Moosonee Lodge for which they had budgeted a deficit of $8,485 whereas the actual deficit, as of the end of November 1979, was $133,007. I am having some difficulty in understanding these figures. My information is that the lodge was sold before that, so why are we still carrying such a deficit of some $8,000 when as of the end of November 1979 the actual deficit was $133,000? I am sure there is an explanation for it and I would like to have it.

12:30 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: They are getting the figures now.

Mr. Bolan: Fine. There are two more points I want to make. On the Ontario Northland Railway, I would like to know the monthly cost of repairs for the Northlander. I will not go into the whole history of it as you know when it was acquired. It has been with us now since June 10, 1977. I understand it ran into all kinds of difficulties during the first while with respect to maintenance and service repairs—not just service repairs but actual mechanical breakdowns.

I would like to know if you have a figure on what the monthly repair cost is for the Northlander. When I speak of the Northlander, I mean all of the units. I believe there are four or five units. You might want to provide me with that figure as well. I am told it is as high as $125,000 or $150,000 a month. That seems astronomical. I do not know, but I want to find that out.

While those figures are being obtained, I would like to bring to the attention of the minister a petition which was forwarded for his attention a year ago. It was a petition from the River Valley Citizens' Association to do with a road, Highway 539 and 539A. It was signed by some 250 people. Their concern was the condition of the road.

As a result of the poor condition of the road, there was a period of half-loading there. Half-loading put a major portion of the work force on unemployment or welfare for anywhere up to three months in a year. School buses, which transport the children to and from their schools, go over it twice a day. Most residents of River Valley have to travel to Sturgeon Falls for health, legal, banking and commercial services. The road in question is about 10 miles long.

You did acknowledge receipt of this petition under letter of February 13. You did say there was some construction going on to improve the road. You said: "The residents of River Valley will benefit from some improvements in the driving conditions upon the reconstruction of the bridge over McCurdy Creek, five miles northwest of Field. This work, which includes reconstruction of about a half mile of road on either side of the bridge, is scheduled to take place during 1980-81." You then said you regretted you were unable to tell them when the remainder of the road would be rebuilt.

As I say, this was six or seven months ago. I have been over that road and, believe me, it is a sad sight. These people have a very legitimate complaint. I would like to obtain from you at this time an undertaking that further road construction will be done on this highway with a view to making it easier for not only the residents of River Valley, but people who travel with logging trucks back and forth. They are running at half-loads and it costs just as much for them to run at half-loads as it does with a full or three-quarter load. The reason they have to run at half-loads is the condition of the road. Perhaps I could have some response on that as well as on the items which I raised about Moosonee Lodge and the cost of repairs on a monthly basis to the Northlander.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the member's earlier inquiry with respect to the Chapleau problem of the airport, I have just been informed that my deputy, Mr. Herridge, will be in Chapleau on Tuesday. He has already had some discussions with Reeve Howard with respect to the airport itself. We have been in touch with the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs with regard to the financing and the airport matters. We can assure you nothing will be done that will affect or even close the airport. We want to assure you that will not happen under any circumstances. That can be passed on to them. There is no fear of that happening.

In connection with the operation of the Northlander, I would advise the member the actual operating subsidy for 1979-80 was $4,658,000, and in the 1980-81 plan it is $4,672,000. As you know the engine conversion for the Northlander was done in the North Bay shops where the very able staff of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission installed Canadian-made diesel units in these Swiss-manufactured locomotives. The cost of that engine conversion in 1979-80 was $770,000 and in the 1980-81 plan it was $850,000.

I am just waiting for the information on the Moosonee Lodge, and on Highway 539.

Mr. Bolan: When was the lodge sold?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: The Moosonee Lodge was sold in 1979 for $133,000. I am advised the loss on disposal was approximately $90,000. That is the difference between the book value of approximately $224,000 and the amount received for the sale of the lodge, which was $133,000. Accounting rules require that this loss on disposal be shown in the financial statement. That is the figure to which the member refers.

Mr. Bolan: How was it sold? Was it sold by public tender? I see Mr. Herridge nodding.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, it was sold by public tender. The idea of selling the Moosonee Lodge had been floating around for a considerable time. It was felt it could be operated much more efficiently by the private sector.

I think the initial idea of getting it going and keeping it operational until the private sector was strong enough to take over was a valid one. Now that it has taken over, it seems to be going very well.

In connection with Highway 539-539A, the member correctly points out that the work that was promised was done. McCurdy Creek bridge will be advertised for tender on January 21, 1981. We will be calling tenders for the construction of that bridge in January for completion in the summer of 1981.

Mr. Bolan: What about the rest of the road?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I will get the information on that for the member. I do not have it right at my fingertips. If I don't get it before the estimates are over, I will make sure the member gets it in the mail.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Mr. Chairman, it may seem strange for the member for Scarborough West to be getting up on something that has to do with the Ministry of Northern Affairs. It is because of the close relationship I have with Mr. Wildman. We have considered swapping our jurisdictions, one of the reasons being that the encroachment by Northern Affairs into Metro—which is my responsibility—has become obvious of late with Ontario North Now coming into Ontario Place. It is to do with Ontario North Now that I wanted to ask a couple of questions of the minister.

I visited the exhibition at Ontario Place for the first time this summer with a friend of mine from France who is a unilingual francophone. He is a forestry student in France, by the way. We went there because I thought the forestry side of things would interest him and I also thought this would be a way of showing him part of the French culture of Ontario and part of the role francophones have played in opening up Ontario and in developing the north.

I presumed this would be one area in the whole of Ontario Place where I might be able to find something he would be able to understand in French, maybe even be able to hear a slide show in French. I thought he would at least be able to have some comprehension that this province is not just made up of anglophones and that a special part of our province has been opened up in a great many respects by francophones and Franco-Ontarians.

I was very disappointed to see not one word of French in the whole place. There was mention, certainly, of the French community but it was mentioned in English. In the slide show, there was not one word of French involved. There were many displays with many plaques on the walls, all in English. There was a major pamphlet display at the very end with information on all the northern municipalities, put together, as I understand it, by the northern mayors. There was not one word of French, not one pamphlet in French in the whole place.

I became very upset about this and wrote to the Premier asking why this had occurred. His response to me indicated that the reasons, outside of oversight—to which he did not admit—were lack of time, lack of money and a lack of space in the exhibit.

Mr. Wildman: Aurele Gervais was involved in that—a francophone himself.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: That is right.

I was very upset to see that. I asked for some action and I know that there is more than this ministry involved; the Ministry of Industry and Tourism is involved. I have had a reply from Omer Deslauriers to say that he has raised this with the mayors of the northern municipalities and he is hopeful that some action will be taken in the coming year.

I would like to know from the minister's point of view—I think the minister was present at the opening, the ministry was certainly involved in the development of this project—why it was that such an important showcase was not developed with some francophone inclusion, with some French somewhere in the whole place.

It is important for Franco-Ontarians to feel that they are recognized for their role in northern Ontario, and this was certainly the place to do that, to show them off, to show the kinds of things that had been done in the mining industry, the pulp and paper industry and in plain pioneering through the clay belt by Ontario francophones. It was not done. There was a huge opportunity there to do it.

Aside from those people, there are a large number of people who go to Ontario Place who do speak French, not just my friend from France—which would be kind of unique, I would presume—but a number of Quebecois go there. There are 100,000 French-speaking people in this city who go there, I would presume, on a regular basis. What an opportunity to miss. I find it shameful that that is the case. This is at a time when our country is going through all sorts of turmoil.

It is not a matter of forced bilingualism, by any means. Even the Premier might have trouble stretching that one, I would think, to say that this would be shoving French down people's throats. This was the perfect time to take some action, to show that Ontario thinks as immediately of its French-speaking population as it does of its English-speaking population. Instead, what gets reflected is that they are not thought of, that it is bypassed. Somehow, a lack of money, in terms of having two languages on a sign, or of space, in terms of thinking of that as part of the design, are just not valid reasons to hold up to people in this province.

I would very much like to hear the minister's comments about why that occurred, number one; and number two, can we expect some very quick action so that by next season that is rectified and they are given their proper place in that spectacle?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the member for his contribution and his interest in and awareness of the northern Ontario showcase at Ontario Place. I am pleased that he took the time to bring his people down there to show what the north is all about and to share with us, in northern Ontario, a real northern experience.

I want to point out that the concept of Ontario North Now is one that has been accepted right across northern Ontario and across this province; that is, that we would have a northern Ontario showcase right here in the heart of the most populated area of this province.

Mr. Laughren: Who were the architects?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We asked for tenders from five. We got five proposals and the Association of District Municipalities are the ones who selected the architects.

Before I answer your question, I want to put on the record that we built a very unique showcase at Ontario Place, one which had the involvement of this province, this government, and the municipalities, not in a way that their local taxes were reflected in that development, but the involvement and direction of the displays themselves in the nine pavilions was the responsibility of the Association of District Municipalities. That takes in all the municipalities from Kenora to North Bay, headed by Aurele Gervais of Iroquois Falls, assisted by Tommy Jones of Dryden. The involvement of the municipalities was very real. It was there because we strongly felt we did not want to take the route on our own. We did not want it to appear to be another government initiative taking something away from the municipalities or regions. They had to be involved to get the real flavour of northern Ontario.

In addition to that, we strongly felt the industries—the private sector—in northern Ontario had a responsibility. They wanted to show their industries off in a light that was complimentary to what they were doing in northern Ontario. They were very co-operative and contributed handsomely. In excess of $700,000 came from the private sector for the displays which are located in Ontario North Now. All this was done in a very short time frame of about nine months. Many people said it could not be done. It was done and I think the staff of the Ministry of Northern Affairs, particularly Sheila Willis, with Don Obosawin's assistance in the latter part of the program, did a fantastic job in going across northern Ontario getting the interest and support which was really required to make the thing a success. It is in place. It will be a permanent showcase for northern Ontario. The member points out some of the weaknesses which I am very much aware of and which I accept.

During the course of the three-week entertainment period many French-Canadian groups from northern Ontario were present. In fact, opening night we had two French groups, one from Hearst, I recall quite well because it was an excellent group. The guides were all selected from northern Ontario. Many were chosen because they were bilingual.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: There wasn't one the day I was there.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: There should have been, because they were selected with that in mind. In connection with our native culture, we made sure the native people were present to provide the native flavour we are so familiar with in northern Ontario. They did it exceptionally well. They too were directly involved.

Through the Ontario Arts Council we made inquiries right across northern Ontario for groups to give us information about the francophone community. Regrettably, it was not forthcoming. We have had meetings since the closure of Ontario North Now with the various francophone groups and we have their assurance they will be there in full force next year. Some of the weaknesses in our signing will be corrected so I think the concerns you have expressed will be rectified. We will make sure all those things are done when the pavilion opens up this spring.

Mr. Wildman: Would it be in order for us to pass this vote and go on to northern roads?

Mr. Chairman: Shall item 1 carry?

Mr. Bolan: Do you have an answer to those other matters I asked about?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I thought I gave that to you. The operating subsidy in 1979-80 was $4,658,000 and in 1980-81 it was $4,672,000. The engine conversion cost was $770,000 in 1979-80 and in 1980-81 it was $850,000. That is where we actually changed the diesel units in the Northlander trains at the North Bay shops. We put in Canadian-made diesel units as they had been the European type. We must compliment the staff of the Ontario Northland Railway for doing an exceptionally good job.

Mr. Wildman: I would like to raise a number of things in terms of northern roads budget. The minister mentioned briefly, in response to my earlier comments, his views on the Granary Lake road and the lack of necessity to spend the dollars to make a shorter, more direct route between Blind River and Elliot Lake.

12:50 p.m.

I just want to point out two things to him. With the construction of Eldorado on the west side of Blind River, the minister may be aware—I think I have written to him about it—that Eldorado sends waste acid which is moderately radioactive to Rio Algom for reprocessing. As it looks now, that acid is going to be transported right through the middle of Blind River and up Highway 17 to Highway 108 and then up to Elliot Lake and right through Elliot Lake to Rio Algom.

I just wonder if it is worth looking at, in relation to the Granary Lake road, the development of some kind of bypass system where you are not going to be trucking this stuff right through these two communities. We have had spills in the area. Just a few weeks ago there was a major oil spill on Highway 108. These are dangerous materials and I think we should be looking seriously at doing something about it, especially when you consider the weather conditions that we have in northern Ontario.

One of the long-standing arguments against this road is that you did not have the agreement of both communities. I am looking at an article that appeared in the Elliot Lake Standard on October 8, where it states, "The Elliot Lake and District Chamber of Commerce says construction of a road between the uranium capital and Blind River should be given top priority." The reason for that is that with the expansion of residential development in Blind River I guess a lot of the business men in Elliot Lake are hoping to be able to have those people travel easily to Elliot Lake to shop.

There are two other highways in my own area I would like the minister to give me some indication about when they might be going ahead. We have had extensive discussions and correspondence about the Searchmont highway. That is even more important now when you consider that one of the main reasons for Searchmont is the ski hill. If the King Mountain project does go ahead they are going to have some competition there. It would seem to me if we are going to put provincial money into the King Mountain project we should be doing all we can to ensure that the access to Searchmont is as good a road as possible so that they will be able to compete. There are new owners for the ski operation in Searchmont now and they have done all they could to make that a more competitive operation.

The last one is Highway 631 between Hornepayne and Highway 11 which is in terrible shape. There have been a number of accidents there. The Ministry of Transportation and Communications, on that highway as well as the Searchmont road, is carrying out what they call aggressive maintenance, whatever that is. I would like to see this aggressive maintenance turn into aggressive reconstruction.

To finish off the estimates, I do not like to finish off on a negative note, but I want to give the minister the opportunity to respond to this. The minister may have seen an editorial that appeared in the Thunder Bay Times-News on Tuesday, November 4. It is entitled, "And This is Dedicated To—"

It says: "Provincial Tories engaged in a heap more of tacky campaigning when they flurried into Ear Falls last week for a round of ribbon cutting, beaming in the spotlight and claiming credit for bringing goodies to the north. Transportation minister James Snow and Northern Affairs minister Leo Bernier flew in and were greeted by a throng of 500 residents and school children out early for the occasion and doubtless herded to the site by party organizers.

"The ministers first shared in slicing a ribbon to pieces as part of a six-member official cutting team dedicating a $1 million airport paid for by the people of Ontario. Then came the speeches, and Snow outdid his mossbacked cronies, who, after decades of government in this province, have grown very accustomed to the role. He urged the crowd to acclaim Bernier in the next election and turning to pal Leo, remarked, 'After all you have done for the Kenora area, Leo, I think they should call you king of Kenora.' Then they go on, 'Thanks, Jim, we will stick to regular elections for now.'

"Then the party unveiled a plaque on the wall of a mobile home being used temporarily as a terminal building. A mobile home as a terminal building? Looking closely, one might have seen the ministers jotting reminders to have an opening later for a permanent building, and maybe a closing for the temporary one, too. Then they were off to unveil a monument commemorating last year's area rocket launchings for a solar eclipse study. Then they were away to a fire hydrant where apparently Bernier helped to turn a wrench to spout out some water for a post signalling extension of the community's water supply, thanks to a $78,000 boost from the people of Ontario.

"Such horn-blowing forays are outdated and wasteful. If our high-priced elected representatives can't confine themselves to more productive activities for the people of Ontario, perhaps it's time some guidelines were established."

I hope the minister will take this to heart and will look at the particular projects I have raised with him and not look at them in the way of more of this outdated horn-blowing but rather as a way of serving the needs of the people of the north.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I am sure that if we accomplished all the things in his riding the member for Algoma would like, he would join me with enthusiasm at every ribbon-cutting ceremony. He was disappointed he could not be at Hornepayne, Wawa and Blind River on the same day, three major accomplishments in his riding. He chose to go to Blind River which was the largest one, I admit. I say to the member, when we open up the Hornepayne town centre complex he will not be in Wawa or in his home town. He will be there with me and the Premier. He will be there with the Premier and he will be taking the glory like all the other politicians who have been involved in that project.

But I share the humour the member advances. I think it is right that members of this House recognize the accomplishments in those small communities. I think they like to see one up there to share with them the joy and the pride of moving ahead and improving the quality of life in northern Ontario. The things you recited are all part of the things we enjoy doing on this side of the House and we invite you to share with us the joy and pride of opening up those facilities.

Mr. Wildman: I would like to join you in opening up the Granary Lake road.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Okay. In connection with the problem of dangerous waste, this is a concern to us in the ministry because of the great distances and, in many instances, the main highway goes through the centres of those small communities. Bill 189, the Dangerous Goods Transportation Act, 1980, which my colleague the Minister of Transportation and Communications now has before the House will, I hope, address some of those problems in a regulatory manner along with the federal authorities. It had not been known, let's be honest, but since the Mississauga issue that need has arisen in a very real way and I would hope it will address some of the concerns you have. We obviously won't be able to put a bypass around every community for the hauling of waste but I hope these regulations will be tight enough to alleviate any concerns.

In connection with your inquiry about the highway programming, I will be meeting with my own staff and the MTC staff within the next two or three weeks to set the priorities for next year's highway construction program and I will certainly make it a point and a commitment to get back to you in writing on those two projects.

Vote 704 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: That completes the estimates of the Ministry of Northern Affairs.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I will just take a moment to thank my critics on the other side of the House in both the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party for the constructive criticism they advanced during the course of the examination of my estimates and the co-operation they have shown in passing these votes within a time frame that will allow us to get on to other things in the Legislature. I appreciate it very much.

On motion by Hon. Mr. Bernier, the committee reported certain resolutions.

The House adjourned at 1:01 p.m.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

Hon. Mr. McCague: Mr. Speaker, I have a message from the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, signed by his own hand, which replaces the message of Thursday last as there was a typographical error in the estimates accompanying that message.

Mr. Speaker: John B. Aird, the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, transmits supplementary estimates of certain additional sums required for the services of the province for the year ending March 31, 1981, and recommends them to the Legislative Assembly, Toronto, November 24, 1980.

REPORT IN TORONTO SUN

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, I must speak now to the further point of privilege regarding the defamation of my character. I have carefully read Hansard of November 20 and I have now determined that a further slander has been committed against me since November 20. For this reason, I must speak further to this matter here and now, even though the member for Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid) and the member for Wentworth North (Mr. Cunningham) are not in the Legislature.

Before I proceed, I would point out that numerous interjections were made while I was speaking to my point of privilege in this Legislature last Thursday. What I thought I heard on a number of occasions disturbed me greatly. In reviewing Hansard, I found none of the interjections was recorded. I will not tolerate the attempt by any member of this Legislature to ridicule or embarrass me further on this matter. If there has to be a libel and slander action, I will not hesitate to add further names to the style of cause in the action.

I am asking you, Mr. Speaker, and I am directing the members of Hansard to report in particular any interjections and to identify the authors thereof. I direct the Hansard reporters in particular to that area of the Legislature where the member for Hamilton Centre (Mr. M. N. Davison) is sitting.

There are seven points that I must have you consider in this matter so that there will be no question of my position in this matter.

First, the false portrayal of my behaviour arising out of my attendance with fellow colleagues of this Legislature in a cocktail lounge in the city of Washington four years ago, while a member of the select committee of the transportation of goods committee, has done irreparable damage to my character and reputation, and it has been of great public embarrassment to me, my wife and my family. I have been humiliated before my family and friends.

My anger on last Thursday was so great, Mr. Speaker, that I did not give you the benefit of having before you the basic facts of the incident surrounding the false and malicious charges that have been made against me. It is, therefore, absolutely essential that I set the record straight.

The establishment which the member for Wentworth North, the member for Rainy River, the member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Lane) and I attended in Washington four years ago was a cocktail lounge. What became a private embarrassment to the member for Algoma-Manitoulin and me at that time was that after the waitress had served us our drinks, she left our table, walked to the dance floor, removed her top and started to dance. It had to be degrading to the girl. It was certainly embarrassing to the member for Algoma-Manitoulin and me. He and I finished our drinks and left the premises.

Second, the libel contained in the note sent to the Sun reporter alleging I was dancing with a stripper in the Washington cocktail bar was a malicious, blatant and total lie. Not only must I have a total and absolute apology from the guilty member, I must have his admission that he deliberately lied about me.

Third, with regard to the first slander made in the Sun article, which said, "The first guy I see in the bar is John Williams. I would have given $100 for a camera that day," any reasonable person would interpret that slander to mean that I was involved in some gross impropriety, that I was doing something inconsistent with good moral conduct, that I was doing something other than enjoying a drink with my friend, the member for Algoma-Manitoulin. I demand the apology and an acknowledgement that there was no impropriety.

Fourth, the other slander was that "Williams seemed to be enjoying himself. It was not a classy place." From this innuendo, any reasonable person would conclude that I went to the cocktail lounge for the express purpose of seeing a nude performance, and that the establishment was not the type of place a reputable person would visit. I demand an apology for both those slurs.

2:10 p.m.

Fifth, on Thursday, the member for Rainy River admitted to the members in this House that he was the author of the slur, "None of us is squeaky clean." At that time, the member complained that I accused him of seeking out a reporter to speak to him on this matter. I tell the member, and he will have to read it in Hansard because he is not here, to read Hansard carefully. He will find no such statement made by me. He alone made that suggestion.

On Thursday, the member for Rainy River also said he had read the article in the Toronto Sun with "some amusement." I suggest to Mr. Reid that before he shoots off his mouth again, he have a long, hard talk with his lawyer. The general, all-encompassing nature of that slur, within the context of all of the charges made against me, makes it perhaps the most serious slur of all. It was clearly designed to give credence to the libel and the other innuendoes. Any reasonable person could conclude from the inference that John Williams would be likely to commit those indiscretions. I remain resolute in my demand for an apology for this slur.

Sixth, on Friday, November 21, I was further slandered, specifically by the member for Wentworth North in the Sun newspaper of that date on page five, in an article dealing further with this matter. The member was quoted as saying, "The place—" meaning the cocktail lounge—"was so sleazy you would want to flush with your foot, but I do not begrudge anyone going to a place like that."

The clear implication is that everything about the establishment was so bad that no self-respecting citizen would want to go in, certainly not four persons in public life, four members of the Legislature of Ontario, and that it is the type of place not even a skid row bum would want to frequent. The irony of that slur is that the member for Wentworth North and the member for Rainy River were both in the bar in question, sitting two or three tables away from the member for Algoma-Manitoulin and me. In fact, they were still there when he and I left the establishment.

I demand an apology from the member for Wentworth North for this most vicious of slanders.

Seventh, the integrity and privileges of all members of this House must be protected from unprincipled personal attacks of defamation by any other member of the Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, you must discharge your duty in this regard. If you do not demand the apologies and admission of false statements on my behalf, and if those apologies and admissions are not forthcoming before I walk out the door of this Legislative Assembly, when I walk out that door I will be instructing my lawyer to initiate an action for libel and slander against the member for Wentworth North and the member for Rainy River in the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: First, I want to remind the honourable member that it is not his responsibility or his prerogative to direct Hansard to add anything to or subtract anything from the official record of this House. That will be done in the normal manner as the editor of Hansard sees fit and that will continue to be the policy of Hansard. I want the honourable member to disabuse himself of any authority that he thinks he might have with regard to directing Hansard to do or not to do anything.

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: No. Order. I have been very patient and very tolerant of the member and allowed him to put whatever it was he thought he must put on the record.

The second thing I want to remind the honourable member is that anything that is said in this House is privileged and can't be used as an action outside this House.

The third thing I want to remind the honourable member of is that I have heard one side of the story from the honourable member on three different occasions. One of the members who is named in the allegations made by the member has had an opportunity to respond. The other member has still not appeared in the House. I will await his arrival to hear what it is he has to say about it and decide at that time whether or not any action is deemed appropriate by the chair.

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question?

Mr. Speaker: Order. No, I am not listening to you any more. You have had an opportunity to put your case on the record and that is it.

Mr. Williams: I wish to ask a question of you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: No. I am not in a position to answer questions. That is the prerogative of the ministers.

SPEAKER'S WARRANT

Mr. Speaker: I beg to inform the House that even though the Legislative Assembly Act makes it discretionary with the Speaker as to whether or not he should issue a warrant, I feel that in view of the clear direction of the House on Thursday last, the warrant should issue. It will, therefore, be served this afternoon.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, if I might, I'd like to rise on a point of order about the matter of direction. I think it is important, and I think we would all agree, that this be done in the most orderly way possible.

I have had discussions with the chairman of the justice committee dealing with the process in the event that you made the ruling that you have, sir. In view of the fact that we have a number of issues to be concerned about—and I won't trouble you with all the details now, but for example, the security of the documents being one principal concern, and there are others—it was understood between the chairman of the justice committee and me that we possibly would have some discussion today and that he would, in turn, deal in committee with the matter with respect to the process—the mechanics of the execution of the Speaker's warrant.

I thought it would be important to acquaint the members with the understanding because I think once the warrant is issued, the manner in which the documents are delivered and the manner in which they are dealt with are, of course, very important. It may be that the delivery of the documents could await the deliberations of the justice committee on Wednesday, but I think it is important that we have some understanding about that.

Mr. Philip: Mr. Speaker, on the point raised by the Attorney General, the committee is sensitive to the problems of security, in particular, and to obtaining these documents in an orderly way. I instructed the clerk of our committee this morning that should the Speaker make the decision which he has now announced and issue the warrant, the clerk, immediately on hearing this, should contact the Attorney General and the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations to discuss those methods whereby security and the orderly transfer of those documents may be made to the committee.

I have no doubt that he is in the process of doing that at this very minute. Of course, I will be happy to meet with the Attorney General or the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Drea) to see if I may be of any assistance in this matter.

On the other matter of the scheduling, I have asked that the steering committee of the justice committee meet tomorrow, and the clerk is sending out notices of that to that committee. The Attorney General and any other member who is interested will be kept informed of our proposals. We will present a proposal on Wednesday morning for the scheduling of the committee for the rest of this session.

ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE

Hon. Mr. Davis: On behalf of the government of the province, I would like to express to the House our deep sympathy for the victims of the massive earthquake that struck southern Italy during the weekend. The first reports indicate that several hundred people were killed, many more injured and extensive damage occurred in at least 29 cities and towns.

This new tragedy causes special concern and anguish in this province, for a large number of residents are of Italian origin, many of them with relatives in the region affected by the earthquake. May I remind the House that in 1976, after the Friuli earthquake in northeastern Italy, the Ontario government, in conjunction with local Italo-Canadian organizations, played an important role in the large aid project for the reconstruction of the area destroyed.

The Ontario government is now following closely the situation in southern Italy and the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs (Mr.

Wells) is keeping in constant contact with the appropriate organizations with a view to obtaining detailed and updated reports. We are prepared to give immediate emergency relief assistance to the citizens of this stricken region as needs unfold. We are already working closely with the Canadian Red Cross to do what we can to help in this tragic situation.

To their families, particularly those resident in this province, we extend our sincere condolences.

Mr. Mancini: Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate the Liberal caucus with the comments that have been expressed by the Premier. Being a person of Italian origin and having been born in that country, I can well imagine what this terrible event is doing to the small villages and towns of southern Italy. I wish to commend the Premier for his quick action. I sincerely hope that the Ontario government moves quickly in order to approve funds for food, medical supplies and clothing and possibly any other staples that might be necessary in this type of emergency.

Mr. Di Santo: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the New Democratic Party, I would like to express my sympathy and feelings and associate myself with the Premier and the member for Essex South in their remarks.

The earthquake that hit Italy yesterday is the worst in the last 70 years and certainly the worst disaster since the Second World War. Cities, towns and villages have been destroyed and wiped out. The death toll, as announced at this point, is 792. The Ministry of the Interior of Italy announced that two towns have been completely wiped out. If that is the case, the toll can go as high as 5,000 people dead.

I would like to express to the Italian people, to the relatives of the victims and to the thousands of Italian-Canadians who live in Ontario and in Canada and who come from the area hit by the earthquake, my sympathy and condolences and a sense of solidarity at this time of grief and sorrow. I am sure I express the feelings of all the members of the assembly.

I would like to say we are close to the populations who have survived such a tragedy. I want to thank the Premier for his action. I am sure it will be as generous as it was in 1976 when a similar tragedy occurred in the northern part of Italy.

DEATH OF JULES LEGER

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to express on behalf of the government our very deep regret at the passing of the former Governor General of this country. The Honourable Jules Leger was one of the very great public servants, known to a number of the members of this House in a personal way, I am sure. He was a gentleman who really dedicated the bulk of his public life to endeavouring to do his best to further the interests of this country, both at home and abroad.

I would extend in a particular way our sympathies to Madame Leger, also chancellor of the University of Ottawa, a very distinguished Canadian who, I know, speaking for many of us, made us feel very much at home in her presence.

I had the privilege of being with both Jules Leger and Madame Leger here a few days ago in what was, I guess, their last public appearance in the city of Toronto. I can recall the warm words expressed by so many at that gathering about the contribution he had made to the public life of our nation.

In very simple terms, he was a great Canadian. I extend my particular sympathy to his wife, who shared those responsibilities with him for so many years and who, in her way, has done so much for this country as well.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the official opposition I want to extend our sympathies to Madame Leger and the family on the death of the former Governor General.

The Premier has indicated some people in this House knew him reasonably well. Unfortunately, I was not one of those, but shortly after he became Governor General I did have an opportunity to have dinner with him, along with the other members of the Legislature and a number of government officials, at a very special event which was hosted by the government of Ontario.

I am sure everyone will recall the dignity with which he and Madame Leger conducted themselves that evening. His remarks made it clear to all of us that we had as our Governor General, an outstanding citizen, a man of great intellect and moderation, but as well and perhaps just as important, a man of good humour and breadth of understanding. It is a great loss indeed that, for a part of his tenure, his illness prohibited him from being as active in his responsibility as Governor General as I know he would have wished. This is very much to be regretted.

We were all delighted at his recovery, but during those years Madame Leger assisted him in very special ways which were obvious to anyone seeing them in action performing official duties. I know on one occasion she even read the Speech from the Throne in Ottawa.

I want to join with the Premier and other members of the House, on behalf of my colleagues, in saying we sense the loss of a great Canadian, a man whose career must be an example to all of us.

Mr. Cassidy: De la part du Nouveau Parti Démocratique, j'aimerais joindre mes hommages destinés à M. Léger, ancien Gouverneur général et homme dont tous les Canadiens peuvent être fiers.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to join my voice, on behalf of the New Democratic Party, in paying tribute to Jules Leger and in expressing our sympathy to Madame Leger, two great Canadians. In the case of the Honourable Jules Leger, he was a Canadian who came from the most modest of backgrounds in a small town on the fringe of Ontario and New York state in western Quebec. He had modest beginnings, yet came from a family that gave not only a man who became Governor General of Canada, but also his brother who we all know as Cardinal Leger, another distinguished Canadian.

I took part in the recent banquet of the conference of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews where an award was given to the Leger family. There was a great deal of emotion at that time because of the distinguished contribution this family has given to our country over so many years.

Jules Leger was originally a journalist. He was an ambassador. He was a civil servant. He was Governor General of Canada. He spoke throughout for Canada. He expressed in the finest and highest ways what we want to achieve in Canada, the melding of our two founding peoples, the French and English people in Canada. Jules Leger in his years as Governor General displayed exceptional courage in overcoming a debilitating stroke, the second of which took his life this weekend, and in continuing to serve his country through an entire term.

I had looked forward to the chance of making closer acquaintance with the Legers because, when they retired, they moved into my constituency just a few blocks from where I live in Ottawa. That will not be, but on behalf of all of my party I join in the tributes that are paid to him and in paying thanks to him for his contribution to our province, to our country and to the world.

2:30 p.m.

POLLUTION CONTROL

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the ministry and this government, I would like to acknowledge a compliment paid to this province today by the United States Interstate Legislative Committee on Lake Erie.

The committee's chairman, representative Roy Wilt from the state of Pennsylvania, presented a resolution today to Premier Davis. I have it here and a copy is attached of the statements I have sent to the other parties. In this resolution, the committee commended Ontario for our achievements in urban air pollution control, air quality monitoring and an air quality alert system.

The resolution mentioned specifically our sharp reduction of both sulphur dioxide and particulate matter in the air of Metropolitan Toronto and other major industrial centres. It also commended our clear identification of acid rain as a priority, our action program and my ministry's efforts to seek Canada-U.S. accord on a strategy to deal with this problem on a continental basis.

I appreciate the endorsement and the support that was offered by this committee, representing as it does four of our neighbour states—New York, Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania. While we have observer status rather than membership in the committee, I am pleased we have been able to co-operate in resolving policies on offshore drilling in Lake Erie, in finding common ground on regulating wastes from pleasure craft, in phosphorous controls on detergents and in a number of initiatives in controlling toxic substances on both sides of the border.

I would like to express Ontario's appreciation of this gesture of support and the sincere environmental commitment of these, our neighbour states, and to wish the committee every success in the issues it is dealing with during its meeting here today and tomorrow in Toronto.

I would like the members of the Legislature to join me in welcoming, and to recognize in the Speaker's gallery, Chairman Wilt and the members of the interstate legislative committee, our fellow legislators from New York, Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Speaker: I would like to draw the attention of all honourable members to the presence of yet another distinguished guest in the Speaker's gallery, the Honourable Ken MacMaster, who is Minister of Labour in Manitoba. Would members also welcome him to our assembly.

RURAL ELECTRICAL RATES

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I am tabling later this afternoon a report with respect to rural residential electrical rates received from Ontario Hydro in response to the request made by the Premier (Mr. Davis) on April 10.

Members will recall Ontario Hydro was requested to prepare proposals to reduce the differential between the retail rate for electricity paid by rural residents and that paid by urban residents.

Ontario Hydro has recommended that the target differential be set at 15 per cent above the weighted average municipal hydro utility rate at a monthly consumption of 1,000 kilowatt hours. Two options are recommended in order to provide the funds for reducing the differential. These are as follows—I quote from the report: "The government provide an annual operating grant to Ontario Hydro for this purpose or the funds be obtained by separate and distinct charge to the bulk power costs."

As the members are aware, the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) in his wisdom, in his budget statement of November 13 advised the House that the province will provide a $20-million grant to Ontario Hydro during the coming fiscal year, so that Hydro can provide a direct discount to its rural residential customers.

This operating grant to Ontario Hydro will reduce the differential between the average municipal retail rate and the rural residential rate to about 20 per cent for the year 1981; I point out that without that grant the differential would have been about 30 per cent.

Effective January 1, 1981, some 525,000 rural and farm residential customers, using 250 kilowatt hours per month or more, will receive a discount on their electrical bill. The grant will not be available to intermittent occupancy cottages and chalets, and will not cover commercial or industrial customers.

As members are aware, the rural retail system is only one part of the total hydro system. The majority of the power consumers of Ontario, some 2.1 million customers, receive their electrical service from 325 municipal electrical utilities. As well, there are some 100 large industrial customers, which while small in number, use more than 15 per cent of the electrical energy consumed in the province.

In its preparation of the report tabled today, I am advised that Ontario Hydro discussed the rural rate differential issue and obtained the views of these two major customer classes. Their letters are contained in the report I will be tabling this afternoon.

The 30 per cent reduction in the rate differential announced by the Treasurer, measured against the goal recommended by Ontario Hydro, is an interim measure pending further action for the year 1982. The precise way subsequent reductions in the rate differential will be made is still under discussion.

It is anticipated, however, that in the coming months further discussions will be held with the municipal hydro representatives and industrial customer representatives, with the objective of making another adjustment in the rate differential for the year 1982. The change for 1982 will take into account the proposals now before these customer groups for the change in rate structure, and will attempt to achieve the dual objectives of an equitable rate structure and a reduced rural municipal differential.

Mr. Nixon: Pretty weak.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I thought that line was pretty good, to tell you the truth.

Mr. Nixon: I have a story I want to tell the minister about it.

Hon. Mr. Welch: English was never a strong point for the member. He should remember that.

As the members of the House know, Ontario Hydro is also reviewing its rate structure as a result of recently concluded hearings of the Ontario Energy Board and currently has proposals before its customer classes for changes in the basic rate structure for 1982. The interim reduction in the differential between the rural residential rate and the municipal retail rate should not be confused with this ongoing review of Ontario Hydro's rate structure.

That is put in for the benefit of the member for York South (Mr. MacDonald).

Similarly, it is not appropriate to confuse the general rate increases announced for 1981 by Ontario Hydro with this special grant, as the member for Renfrew North (Mr. Conway) has been reminded recently.

The bulk power rate increases, which are approximately at the level of inflation or below, are applicable to both urban and rural rates. However, the special discount is applicable to rural residential customers only, so as to reduce the rate differential between urban and rural residential electricity customers. The interim measure is a first and significant step in achieving that particular goal.

In summary, whatever the 1981 electrical rates for rural Ontario and for municipal utilities may be, the differential at a consumption of 1,000 kilowatt hours between the average rural and urban bills will be reduced by 30 per cent as a result of the progressive measures taken by this government.

ORAL QUESTIONS

RURAL ELECTRICAL RATES

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Energy relating to the statement he has just completed.

First, why would he have rejected the concept of equality of rate structure and opted for the goal of 15 per cent, which will continue to penalize our rural hydro users as opposed to the rural users in many other jurisdictions? It will still leave us with one of the higher rate structures.

Second, why is it that he would permit the chairman of Ontario Hydro to announce an 11.2 per cent increase in rural rates, effective January 1, and then come out with this $20-million handout to the farming community, which is going to go into effect just after that? Does it not occur to him that the $20 million is even less than the government is investing in Minaki Lodge, and that it is an insufficient step to improve the inequality that has burdened the farming community for the past 36 years?

2:40 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I suppose one should be somewhat appreciative of the persistent attempts of the House leader of the official opposition to strive to continue to confuse this particular issue.

Mr. Nixon: Is there anything I have said that was incorrect?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Absolutely. It is quite clear from the statement that the member is confusing an annual exercise that started some months ago in determining 1981 rates, to which reference was made in the statement. That is a process about which the member has all kinds of information.

I do not recall reading that the member attended the Ontario Energy Board public hearings to make any representation with respect to the general rate consideration. In due course, the increase was reviewed by the Ontario Energy Board and subsequently announced by Hydro. Hydro, of course, has some obligation to notify customers with respect to the adjustments to become effective on January 1.

The municipal utilities commissions' addition to the bulk rate has hardly increased—perhaps at the rate of inflation or below. As the statement says, they add their cost of distribution to the municipal system; so, therefore, there are these adjustments. We are talking here about the differential, whatever it may be.

One point has to be made particularly clear. Regardless of the rate increases to all customers in 1981, the differential between the weighted averages will be reduced by 30 per cent. No matter how many times the member tries to confuse the issue, that is what the rural customers are really entitled to know, namely, that the differential in 1981 between their rates and the weighted average municipal rates, because of this transfer agreement to Hydro, has been reduced in this first year by 30 per cent.

Mr. Nixon: Why would the minister think that I, or even my colleague, should attend the rate hearings held by one of the government boards when our responsibility is to do what we have done, that is, repeatedly bring it to the attention of the Premier, who no doubt told the Minister of Energy what to do about this matter. It was the pressure of the farm lobby, if one wants to call it that, present right here at Queen's Park, that prompted the Premier to pull a sorry situation that he found himself in back into a little bit of limelight when he promised he would do something about the rates.

Is the minister implying that anything I have said is incorrect when I simply put to him that he and the chairman of Hydro, the good friend of the Premier, have allowed the rural rates to go up by 11.2 per cent on January 1 and then balance it—

Hon. Mr. Welch: And the urban rates are going up as well.

Mr. Nixon: They go up by less than 11.2 per cent. They even increase the disparity.

Mr. Speaker: Would the member ask his question?

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, would the minister not agree that it would be unfair if he did not agree with me that the $20 million, being less than what is spent on many of the piffling programs that the minister and his colleagues are supporting elsewhere, is not sufficient to meet the needs for the electrical costs, which have been unfairly high for the farming community of this province, and in fact really does not require any support from us?

Mr. Speaker: The question has been asked.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I have three observations. When the Premier rose in his place on April 10, he read from a statement indicating that the government was committed to this and that I had received instructions as to what can be done to reduce the differential. The statement is there to be read; it is quite clear. It is in Hansard.

Secondly, there is an ongoing process every year with respect to reviewing rates and power at cost. That process was going on and adjustments will be made as of January 1, 1981, reflecting those increased costs. What we are talking about now is addressing ourselves to the differential. The member makes reference to the target percentage which, I remind him, is simply a recommendation from Hydro. The government has not responded definitely with respect to this report. It has taken step number one for 1981 and made $20 million available from the consolidated revenue fund of Ontario to reduce the differential between rural and urban rates in this province by 30 per cent.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: There has been considerable confusion out in the public as to whether the objective in the government's new statement of policy is to reduce or to eliminate the differential.

My question to the Minister of Energy is this: Does he accept Hydro's target differential, in other words a permanent differential of 15 per cent between rural and other rates? If so, is it his intention to take money out of the public treasury and subsidize Hydro in order to bring it down to that 15 per cent or lower? Or, as an alternative, is he going to suggest to Hydro by a policy statement, which presumably it must abide by, to do here in Ontario what has been done in four other provinces—that is, to pool the revenues from the three different kinds of customers and equalize rates at least between residential and rural?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, in keeping with the spirit of the statement, the government has not as yet accepted the report from Hydro. I am tabling the report today. Second, as an interim measure for 1981, we have gone the consolidated revenue fund route and are making available to Hydro $20 million to reduce the differential. What happens for subsequent years is referred to in my statement—we want time to further consider the implications of reaching some target with respect to the rate differential. We must keep in mind that we have some obligation to consult with the municipal utility organization and other users of hydro because of some of the implications that are involved.

In summary, the report is here to be considered and we are not committed to it as yet. In 1981 the answer is a direct grant to Hydro for the 30 per cent reduction in the differential. What happens in 1982 and subsequent years will be the outcome of discussions and consideration of this report, and the attitudes of other customers of Hydro.

Mr. J. Reed: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the minister could explain, if he has backtracked to the point today where he said that the objective was to reduce the differential, could he explain the statement in the mini-budget on page 16 that says "the government has decided therefore to instruct Hydro to eliminate" the undue differential between rural and urban electrical rates by 1982.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I leave it to the House to decide whether or not "to reduce" or "to eliminate" the undue differential mean the same thing. I direct the member to the Premier's statement on April 10 which talked in terms of reducing the differential.

HOUSING AUTHORITIES' MEDIA RELATIONS

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Housing. Can he confirm to the House that a special training program began on October 16, 1980, involving his housing authority managers, in which they are supposed to be taught what elements reporters are looking for in a news story and to give suggestions on the handling of bad news?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, in the course of running the housing authority—

Mr. Conway: Are you taking the course too?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: No, but I suggest that honourable member should try it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What are the members opposite doing about Carleton? Was that bad news?

Mr. Riddell: Greatest fabricators of the truth you would ever want to run into.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Boy, you have been working with great teachers from Ottawa in your party.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I see that one of the perpetrators is moving. If the other one will join him behind there, we will get on with the business of the House.

Mr. Conway: I would not be seen with that minister after some of his remarks.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The member for Huron-Middlesex made a statement that I am sure, on reflection, he would want to have removed from the record.

Mr. Riddell: Mr. Speaker, reflecting on the type of information that came out of the Carleton by-election—

Mr. Speaker: I don't want you to do that. I want you to reflect upon what you said in the House, which was clearly unparliamentary. Would you please withdraw it?

Mr. Riddell: Very reluctantly.

Mr. Speaker: You will withdraw it?

Mr. Riddell: I will withdraw a statement which I firmly believe to have contained more fact than fiction.

Mr. Speaker: It is not what you believe, but what you are allowed to say in this House.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, in the course of trying to serve the public and keep them informed on the running of housing authorities, whether it be in the Windsor area or the Ottawa area and so on, what we have been trying to do is offer to our chairmen and members of the various authorities some opportunity to understand the way they should be dealing with the press in answering specific questions. In no way has it been to try to flavour or colour their stories. But obviously some of the chairmen—

2:50 p.m.

Interjection.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Margaret, if you would sit and listen for a while you might just improve your knowledge. You are not the fount of knowledge in this great province.

Mr. Speaker: Order. It may help if the Minister of Housing would speak to me.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I agree with you. If the member for St. George would speak to you too, I would not have that problem.

Very clearly, when people are going into some of the chairmanships and various memberships of the boards of directors, they do not have the understanding of how they are going to face the questions of the press. What we have very simply tried to do is show them how they should cope with the situation and be able to answer the questions the press asks. In none of our housing authorities have we a thing to hide or colour or flavour. We give exactly what goes on within those authorities.

Mr. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The interjection from my colleague, the member for Essex South (Mr. Mancini) is a good one. Why are they not just instructed to tell the truth and give the information as requested? Why would it be necessary, for example, in trying to convince the press of the efficacy and usefulness of John White's vision in Townsend, after spending $50 million to develop a town site in which only 14 lots have been sold, for the minister to have his managers in so that he could persuade them and teach them to convince the press that that was some sort of a good thing and not just a ridiculous bad judgement that has been a burden on the taxpayers for all these years?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, very frankly, I do not accept the acting Leader of the Opposition's remark that our people have to be brainwashed or fed, or would indicate to the press something that is not correct. Through our housing authorities and through our staff in various areas of this province, we have always given to the press exactly what they have asked for as clearly and concisely as possible, because we realize they are the communicators to the public and it is the public's money we are spending wisely and soundly.

BOYCOTT OF ONTARIO GOODS

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Premier. Has the Premier received a letter from the group of Alberta oil companies that committed themselves to boycotting Ontario goods? Did the Premier take the opportunity this weekend to discuss the matter with the Premier of Alberta when they were sitting a seat or two away from each other at the Grey Cup game, and specifically ask the Premier of Alberta to ensure that Alberta does not try to take out its anger on a federal Liberal budget by boycotting goods manufactured in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I was in fact one seat away from the Premier of Alberta. The intervening seat was occupied by a very dedicated loyal Ontario fan, cheering vigorously for the Hamilton Tiger-Cats with some measure of futility—

Mr. Nixon: Great girl.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That was my wife who was—yes, a great lady.

Mr. Peterson: Did she get hit at all between you two guys?

Mr. Speaker: Order. Just ignore the interjections.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But he was getting very personal, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Peterson: No one else would put his wife through that. Why would you?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Listen—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Anybody who watched the game yesterday knew who was sitting between you and the Premier of Alberta, but the question has nothing at all to do with that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: With great respect, Mr. Speaker, it did. The question very clearly said—

Mr. Speaker: No, not who was sitting between you and the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Davis: “—when you were sitting close to or near the Premier of Alberta,” and I wanted to clear up for members of the House just how close that proximity was on Sunday. The member for London Centre asked how my wife could tolerate being between the two of us, and I was just replying—

Mr. Speaker: Order. That was not the question I heard. I heard an interjection that I ignored totally and I want you to do the same.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I did not actually see the Sunday edition of the Toronto Star until after the game was completed. I left fairly early on the Sunday morning, at least for me, and I must say I had not seen the story. I think it originated in the Sunday Star; anyway I had not seen it.

I have not raised it yet with the Premier of Alberta. I certainly did not yesterday because I was not familiar with it during the Grey Cup game itself or the festivities preceding it.

I would make the general observation, because I have been asked by one or two others, that in spite of the story I have read, this government would not and will not adopt any policy that precludes the free operation on a competitive basis of business within Canada.

In this province we have not limited our procurement policies, nor have we given instructions to agencies or other areas in the general government service to buy solely Ontario goods or not to buy goods from some other province of Canada. No matter what the provocation may be, that will continue to be the policy.

I think it is fair to state we are going through a period of some controversy. Quite obviously, there are people in our sister provinces—perhaps including Saskatchewan, I do not know—who are upset about the directions of the government of this country, partially related to the recent budget, obviously in the energy field.

I spoke in Ottawa on Thursday with respect to some of these issues, suggesting it would be wise to try to reduce some of the rhetoric and to make it clear these are important issues that must be resolved. Nothing will be served, in my view at least, by further exacerbating the situation by increasing the rhetoric or making threats of “we will do this if you do that,” et cetera. To me that is not a solution, nor is it the route we should go at this time.

On Thursday, I repeated the messages I sent to both the Prime Minister of this country and the Premier of Alberta, that I believe it would be in the national interest for them to sit down once more to see if they can negotiate an acceptable solution to the present energy debate. I would hope both those gentlemen would consider this very seriously as being the best route to go.

I want to make it clear that I regret the point of view expressed by, hopefully, a small group of people in the business community in Alberta and that this is the approach they are taking. I think it is a negative approach, quite frankly. I do not think that sort of thing produces positive results in a political or economic sense. I would only add this to it, in case there is a supplementary, that I think for most Canadians, at least, this kind of approach will not provide the kind of solutions we are looking for.

I think it is fair to state that with some companies, at least, the shareholders or even the boards of directors might start to take a modest interest because, if steel happens to be one of the products they may be considering boycotting or what have you, I would suggest those who are interested in the business activities of those organizations really would question the judgement whereby they would be importing Japanese or West German steel. With the amount of differential in money at this time, and knowing the efficiency of, say, the steel industry in this country, I think shareholders and boards of directors would have to be a little careful about saying, "We are prepared to spend substantially more on a given product," knowing that would reduce the economic viability of those organizations for which they have responsibility.

Mr. Speaker: That answer took five minutes.

Mr. Cassidy: Given that energy investments in western Canada will approach $100 billion over the next 10 or 12 years, and given the need to recycle oil and gas revenues in western Canada back to the rest of the country if we are not to get a completely lopsided economy, when the Premier discusses this matter with the Premier of Alberta, will he seek to have Alberta introduce Canadian content requirements for the oil industry to ensure that the benefits of those investments in western Canada are spent in Canada and not elsewhere and, therefore, to ensure that Ontario benefits in a major way from the investments being made in the oil industry?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think the history up to this time has been by and large very positive. It is something I keep reminding people about in this province. When another Syncrude plant is committed, the Ontario economy is the beneficiary, not only from the standpoint of steel and other goods being provided to the development of these major undertakings, but also in the long-term objective of sufficiency of oil supply. There is a very positive impact on the economy of this province.

I think it is fair to state—and the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Grossman) can correct me if I am in error—that while there may not have been any written or stated policy, there has been a recognition that the marketplace is somewhat relevant, that in the marketplace Canadian suppliers have been very competitive and that we have had our fair share of supplies to the oil industry in Alberta.

3 p.m.

The Minister of Industry and Tourism can correct me if I am wrong, but I think that is factually the case. I would be very optimistic when we get through the next short period of time, with hopefully the two governments sorting out the policies at present in conflict, that that will continue to be the policy. I see no benefit for anyone in not having it the policy.

I might have reservations if we were not as competitive. In the steel industry in particular, we can compete with any offshore supplier in terms of quality and price. I have no reluctance in making that observation because those happen to be the facts.

Mr. Peterson: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Before the events we are reading about escalate to the point where they become unsalvageable or at least very difficult for the respective parties to back down from, would the Premier consider leading a delegation to the west to do the best he could to be an honest broker in this situation and, in the process, as best as he can, protect the interests of the manufacturing sector in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, one would like to convey messages. I intend to be in Vancouver a week this Friday and have some observations to make. I think there are some things that can be stated and can be said. One thing that would give me some difficulty is that when I say some of these things, I am always confronted with people saying, "What does the leader of the Liberal Party of Ontario say? We recall a few months ago he said that Alberta producers should not get another nickle." Have the Liberals once again changed their policy on energy, so that if I say some of these things, I can speak on their behalf as well?

Mr. Nixon: That is terrible.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is true, that is exactly what he said.

The honourable member asks me, why don't I be the broker. We have made a very genuine attempt to resolve some of these—

Mr. Nixon: You are making a mess of this.

Hon. Mr. Davis: People have to be accountable for what they say. The honourable members are always very reluctant to accept the responsibility for what they say, and when they are reminded of it, they do not like it.

NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy. Last Thursday, I asked the minister about a Gallup poll on nuclear waste disposal that was taking place in a number of Ontario communities. We have since learned that the poll was carried out by Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and it was conducted in August and September of this year.

Would the minister explain how this poll, which was clearly designed to help AECL soften up resistance to nuclear waste disposal, could be conducted in Ontario without the knowledge of the ministry and apparently without the knowledge of the joint Ontario-Canada committee which is supposed to oversee all research into nuclear waste disposal in this province?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, surely the honourable member does not find it unusual for a lot of things to be going on that would not necessarily be specifically brought to the attention of any particular minister.

In fairness, the honourable member will remember that as he was asking me that particular question last week, he sent the document across and asked me if I had seen it. I said honestly that I had not seen the document. I undertook, as I am sure he found out later, to find out who had prepared these questions for a regular Gallup poll survey.

As I did my follow-up, it is my understanding—and I apologize to the honourable member for not reporting the next day—that that particular survey was the sixth survey of an ongoing series done by the federal commission and these results are made public and are part of their report. I suppose eventually we would have access to the information that is made public as part of the publications of the commission.

Mr. Cassidy: Perhaps the minister could say what is going on. He does not know that polling is taking place, but it turns out there are six polls by AECL that have been done up until now. Is the minister aware as well that AECL has now gone into the area at East Bull Lake near Massey, west of Sudbury, without informing the local council or consulting with them, in order to carry out research into using that area as a nuclear waste disposal site?

Does the fact they are polling and not telling the minister, and the fact they are now contravening their previous policy and going into potential waste disposal sites without telling the local council, mean there has been a change in their policy of consultation with the province or with local communities? What are the changes in the consultation program and why have they not been announced?

Hon. Mr. Welch: I do not think the member is being fair in suggesting I indicated I did not know anything about polling going on. I remind him once again that he sent across to me a particular set of questions and asked me if I was familiar with those questions. I said I was not and he has subsequently confirmed that fact.

General polling going on to get certain public attitudes on the part of the commission is another matter. The member once again is confusing the fact that there are five centres about which Atomic Energy of Canada Limited announced particulars, in unorganized territories, where they were, at least at this stage, simply doing flyovers and walkovers. That was the only aspect of the program they were doing. The five areas publicized in their news release indicated that. The information was quite public at the time in those organized territories.

Mr. J. Reed: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the minister could explain what was meant by the statements made by AECL to the select committee on Ontario Hydro affairs when they told us they would not enter an area without local approval. Indeed they said that if they could not get that approval, they would not go into those areas.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I don't think I am accountable for the activities of AECL. However, I do point out once again by way of emphasis that the five areas we are talking about now are all unorganized territories; AECL announced what their plans were with respect to flyover and walkover and that has been completed. It is my understanding there was some consultation with federal and provincial members of Parliament in whose ridings the unorganized territory was located—and I repeat, the unorganized territory. They are the five we are talking about at the moment.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: During hearings of the Hydro committee, the minister indicated he was postponing any effort to renegotiate the Canada-Ontario agreement with regard to developing an acceptable waste disposal management program until he got a copy of our report. The minister has a copy of that report and he has had it now for some time.

On page 29 of the report there is a recommendation that the governments of Canada and Ontario should establish, under joint ownership, a nuclear fuel waste management agency that would have an overall responsibility for the Canadian program, et cetera. Is it the government's intention now to move to establish that agency in order to take away from AECL the overall political management of the program and leave them to do what they are capable of doing and equipped to do—namely the research work? What is the minister's reaction to that recommendation?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, as the member notes, the minister attended before the committee and indicated he wanted to see the report, he is quite correct in that regard. That report has not yet been debated in the House and we are soon to debate that. The minister wants the benefit of that debate, and the government's intention with respect to the recommendations contained in that report will be made in due course, following the completion of that debate.

SALES TAX EXEMPTION

Mr. Eakins: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Revenue, and I ask it on behalf of a constituent of mine who is a double amputee.

Will the minister give consideration to expanding the retail sales tax exemptions to give greater coverage for the purchase of special vehicles for those who are handicapped? On the purchase of a van, for instance, the rebate is given only for special controls and/or a wheelchair lift. Will the minister consider expanding this rebate to include other installations to assist in the comfort of those handicapped people who must often spend a longer period of time in their vans and require these installations for medical reasons?

Hon. Mr. Macck: Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact I directed my staff a month or more ago to look into the very type of situation that the member has brought up. There are many people in the province who may not require a modified vehicle but may need special options—for instance, power steering, power brakes or an automatic transmission that they would not need under normal circumstances. We are looking into that situation at the moment and hopefully some solution can be found to it.

Mr. Eakins: Will the minister give special consideration to medical reasons for the equipment of a van? I am thinking of couch facilities or toilet facilities which many amputees require.

Hon. Mr. Macck: That would be part of the overall package. Any special equipment that would be required or special option that would have to be ordered is being considered.

Ms. Bryden: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Since the cuts in the retail sales tax were designed to improve purchasing and employment in this province, would it not be a sensible approach to make this change when the bill to put in the sales tax cuts that were in the mini-budget is going through?

3:10 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Macck: Mr. Speaker, I do not believe it is necessary for me to bring in legislation for this purpose. I think it can be done by regulation. I believe the rules we are working under now, which deal with vehicles that have been altered, are by regulation rather than legislation. I do not think the fact that the legislation is before the House or not would have any bearing on it.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Philip: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health. Has the minister seen recent statements by Robert Ferguson, the administrator at Humber Memorial Hospital, in which he states, "Humber Memorial Hospital receives the smallest Ministry of Health annual allocation of all the west suburban hospitals," and, "Were it to receive even the average received by other west suburban hospitals, it would have received an additional $1,428,482 for this year"? If so, does he agree with Mr. Ferguson's figures? Does he feel this is equitable? What action is his ministry taking at present to remedy the situation at that particular hospital?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker. I have not seen the particular quotes to which the member refers. I have met several times in recent months with the entire board of that hospital, most recently about four weeks ago, at which time we discussed their present operational plans and the 1980-81 budget situation. To the best of my knowledge, any problems they were forecasting are being addressed.

Mr. Philip: I wonder if the minister would help me to understand why the hospital has been underfunded from the time it opened, as alleged by Mr. Ferguson. Why has this one particular hospital been so underfunded historically?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, at the last meeting with the board we established that it has not. The hospital had a significant addition in 1972 or 1973, for which the hospital projected certain operating costs, which projections the hospital exceeded significantly. That has led to a battle of words from time to time between the administrators of the hospital and my own civil servants over whether the original forecasts were accurate or whether there was a difference that had to be settled.

At that very meeting I submitted to the chairman and members of the board that that meeting should be considered the meeting at which we resolved that matter once and for all. I believe we have.

PALMERSTON PROPERTY TAXES

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs. The minister is probably aware of recent public revelations concerning the town of Palmerston where the records showed that up to 70 per cent of the property owners were in default of paying their property taxes. Since municipalities are the creatures of the province and since the province is supposedly the watchdog over municipal actions, why was his ministry not able to detect the great discrepancy between what was actually paid by the residents and the amount recorded by the clerk-treasurer, a shortfall of several hundred thousand dollars in a budget of $1 million or $2 million for a population of 2,000 people?

This theft has probably been going on from three to 10 years, and neither the town's auditors nor his ministry officials detected anything wrong during this period. In fact, it was left to one of the councillors of the town of Palmerston to detect that it involved 70 per cent of the property owners, a figure which is about 10 times the provincial average. What steps are being taken by his ministry to correct this particular problem in Palmerston and, secondly, to try to detect it before it might happen again in the province?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, the best way I can answer the question is to say, first, we do a computer printout and make it available on the percentage of tax arrears to levy. Therefore, as a ministry we know and are able to tell the various municipalities, if they do not know or if the figures they have are different from those we have.

The Palmerston situation involves criminal charges. Criminal charges have been laid against the clerk-treasurer of that municipality. I understand he subsequently submitted his resignation. There is a new audit firm coming in to do an investigation. Hopefully, after that has been completed, we will have more detailed information as to how the various events occurred in that area and what steps can be taken to prevent them from occurring in other areas.

In view of the fact the matter is before the courts and charges are pending against this person, I really do not think there is anything else I can say about the matter at this time.

Mr. Epp: Does it not appear odd to the minister that, in a municipality the size of Palmerston, the rates would go up from 10 to 15 to 30 to 50 to 60 to 70 per cent and no one in his ministry would think it odd these percentages were that high, that people were not paying their taxes? Up to 70 per cent of the people in Palmerston were suspected of not paying their taxes, 10 times the provincial average. Did nobody think it was odd?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I certainly do think it is odd and it did occur to us it was odd. For that very reason the ministry asked the crown attorney about the matter and he asked the police to investigate. Subsequently, the charges were laid.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES' ALLOWANCES

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Education. As the minister is aware, many school board members now carry out the job full-time. Since there has not been a major review of the allowances for some time, for people who are trying to do the job on a full-time basis the present allowance is clearly inadequate. Does the minister have any intention of introducing an amendment to section 164 of the Education Act to increase the allowance to members of school boards across the province, an allowance now fixed at a maximum of $7,200 even for large metropolitan areas such as Toronto?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the honourable member is aware that, up until this date, the role of the school trustee has never been considered philosophically to be one that required full-time activity. However, it is becoming obvious some trustees are making the job a full-time activity, in spite of a fairly massive increase in the administrative staff employed to administer the schools under the jurisdiction of the board.

There has been a request from the Ontario School Trustees' Council that we consider this matter. As the member is probably aware, or he may not be if he has not read Issues and Directions, there is at present a thorough-going review of the role of the school trustee and his relationship to the roles of others within the structure of education in Ontario. This is an integral part of that examination.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: Is there consideration in that review of the establishment of a new formula that is not based on enrolment, like the present formula, but is more in terms of the duties performed?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I have not considered a new formula. The philosophical base upon which the whole process is established is what is being examined at the present time. There may be any number of ways to determine the appropriate level of remuneration.

Mr. Sweeney: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does the minister have any records or statistics to show where in Ontario trustees are performing their jobs on a full-time basis?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No, Mr. Speaker. I am sure we could do a survey asking trustees. We have the public statements of certain members of school boards that they consider their jobs to be full-time. I am very aware that, in the vast majority of boards, the role is still considered to be a part-time rather than a full-time activity.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY FUNDING

Mr. Blundy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services. Is the minister aware of the precarious financial situation of the Lambton Children's Aid Society and the concern by the board of that society that it will go broke by the end of the year? According to the write-up in the paper, the director says, "The CAS is going broke by the end of the year." Apparently the funding situation is that it is not able to provide the funds for the work load of this children's aid society. Is the minister aware of this and, if so, what is he planning to do about it?

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, I cannot claim to be intimately familiar with the details of the financial situation of that society. I can assure the honourable member, though—as has been the case throughout this year when we moved into the new funding approach with children's aid societies—that any society experiencing financial difficulty or projecting a deficit situation at any point during the year has been urged to notify the ministry immediately.

We have a group of staff who will work with the society in what we are calling a special circumstances review. If, as a result of the work done with the society, it becomes evident that it is facing a financial situation as a result of unforeseen circumstances and the only solution is to look at the possibility of additional funding, then we will do that. But the first step, of course, is to look at the total budget situation and to make recommendations to the society of ways in which it might otherwise cope.

In the case of the Sarnia society, I am not sure whether there has been a special circumstances review at this point or not. I would have to check with staff to find out.

Mr. Blundy: I do not believe such a review has been held. Apparently the great increase in the case load of juveniles in the system is one of the things contributing largely to the substantial deficit of the board. I would like to know whether the minister will look into this matter and take whatever steps are necessary.

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker. I will certainly check with staff to see if there has been a request for a special circumstances review from that society. If there has not been a communication from the society, I will certainly ask staff to check with the society to see what the situation is.

I do think, though, it is important to recognize that in many instances where the special circumstances reviews have taken place, they have resulted in finding a resolution to the budgetary difficulty the society perceived itself to be facing. In fact, in one case, a society was projecting a deficit of $160,000. As a result of the review, working with our staff, it agreed it was able to reduce that projected deficit to something like $25,000 and would be able to eliminate it by the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. McClellan: If memory serves me, Mr. Speaker, there was a royal commission inquiry into the Sarnia Children's Aid Society. I believe we have been waiting some three years for the report. Does the minister have some explanation as to why there has not been a report as a result of that royal commission?

Hon. Mr. Norton: Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge, His Honour Judge—

Mr. McClellan: You have forgotten his name.

Hon. Mr. Norton: It has been a long time. Judge H. Ward Allen, I believe, has been writing the report for some time now. I have not received the report. I do not know precisely when it will be received. I have been expecting it for months now.

Mr. McClellan: Years.

DRUG PRESCRIPTION RECORDS

Mr. Breagh: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Health concerning the practice known as double doctoring. We have now had court cases in regard to the practice of double doctoring, whereby drug addicts identify which physicians in any given community are either extremely loose in their keeping of records or extremely loose in giving out prescriptions for drugs and feed their habit in that manner.

Does the ministry have any accurate records on precisely who these physicians are? Is the minister condoning the practice known as double doctoring? What steps is he taking then to correct that problem?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: We certainly do not condone it. We are in the position that we are dependent, to a great extent, on the co-operation of the federal government, which gains after the fact—and sometimes quite a while after the fact—access to the records of whoever is prescribing which narcotics. Based on that information, usually through the auspices of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and sometimes of the police, we are able to follow up on these cases. The ministry does not have a direct line to all the prescribing habits of every physician. That would be nigh unto impossible.

Mr. Breaugh: Since it appears that drug addicts on the street, federal law enforcement agencies and local police forces know who these physicians are, it should not be that difficult to find out—from the minister's point of view—who they are. What steps is the minister taking to correct the problem?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I have been in discussions with the college. My officials have been discussing the situation with the federal officials. At this point I don't have any particular remedy to suggest, but as the member indicates, clearly the police authorities are aware of it and they do lay charges with our full co-operation where they are able to obtain the evidence.

Mr. B. Newman: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I ask the minister if his ministry operates a data bank into which is inserted information concerning doctors who seem to prescribe an unusual quantity of drugs, as well as individuals who have purchased a substantial quantity of drugs?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated in answering the initial question, the federal government does maintain a record of the dispensing habits with respect to narcotics, which is the area of concern here.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: All scheduled drugs.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: The Minister of Education reminds us it records all scheduled drugs, but particularly narcotics, which are the problem. We are reliant on that data bank, which exists in the federal government.

LABOUR RELATIONS BOARD RULINGS

Mr. Van Horne: Mr. Speaker, I will direct this question to the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development in the absence of the Minister of Labour (Mr. Elgie). With your permission, I will put the question and a supplementary because I am sure he will take it under advisement.

I would like to know from the minister if he agrees with the perverse and ludicrous ruling of the arbitration board in the case of Graham Cook, whose appeal for being unfairly discharged was upheld by the Ontario Labour Relations Board. Further, I would like to know what steps the minister is taking to protect the public interest in the light of the often apparent interest of the labour relations board to protect only the interest of the worker?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the case and I will be pleased to get the information for the member.

NURSING HOMES

Mr. R. F. Johnston: I have a very general question for the Minister of Health, Mr. Speaker, regarding the nursing home situation in the province. Given the amount of controversy surrounding the situation in nursing homes in the province, is he going to undertake a major review of his policies for nursing homes in Ontario, especially in terms of how the profit motive in nursing home care may be affecting the quality of care, specifically in terms of the use of physical restraint and drug abuse in those institutions?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, only six months ago we revised the regulations under the Nursing Homes Act. I may say that I think in the last four years we have been very successful through a variety of means, including changes in methods of inspection of our branch, in bringing about some salutary improvements in a few of the homes that were giving us trouble two or three years ago. I think we are now in a position where more than half the nursing homes in the province are new; that is, they have been built since the new act became effective in 1972.

I do not believe the profit motive inhibits the quality of care. I do not believe there are grounds to suggest other than that belief.

With respect to drug abuse, one of the changes in the nursing home regulations made clear the responsibility of a consulting physician for each nursing home. Unless the member has some specific questions in that regard or specific concerns, it is very difficult to respond, except to say we have placed in the new regulations a greater responsibility on the physicians to be responsible for the courses of treatment they are prescribing for their patients.

Mr. R. F. Johnston: There are any number of specifics that could be raised, Mr. Speaker. The reason I asked the general question was because I thought it was important.

I guess the way to raise this in a question is to ask the minister how he reacts to a case where a woman is restrained in a wheelchair in an institution and is drugged to the point where her speech is slurred and her eyes are glazed. This is on one day. The next day somebody from the outside gets that individual out of the home and has her performing kitchen duties for a volunteer organization in the community. The day before she was restrained physically in a chair and was drugged to the point where she was slurring her speech. She came out the next day and, after being out eight or nine hours, was able to participate as a regular functioning human being.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, if the honourable member is suggesting that there is some professional misconduct here, that somebody had mistreated the individual—

Mr. R. F. Johnston: The same thing happens all the time.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, with respect, the member makes these kinds of generalizations, but let us be fair. I know the member does not have any use for anybody who believes in profit, no matter who they are or where they are, but let us be fair. If he wants to give me the specifics so I can have a medical consultant look at that and see if there is something untoward, I will be glad to do so; but he should not make those ridiculous generalizations.

Mr. Conway: Mr. Speaker, supplementary to the member's very general question about government policy with respect to nursing homes: I note in the minister's current tender call for an additional 300 nursing beds for the city of Toronto he makes mention of heavy nursing care. However he does not spell out in the tender, nor have I seen it spelled out elsewhere, what he imagines to be heavy nursing care. Recognizing the extreme importance of this category, does his ministry have an operational definition for heavy nursing care? Second, is he now prepared, or does he expect to be shortly, to fund to an additional level, or fund and recognize as a special category, the increasingly important area of heavy nursing care?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, I indicated when I released the report of the review on Metropolitan Toronto that one of the things we are looking at is the possibility of revising our regulations so as to require the holding of a certain number of beds for persons needing heavier nursing care.

It is a difficult area to comment on because what is heavy nursing care to one may not be to another. To be covered as an extended care patient, the patient must require a minimum of 90 minutes nursing per day. There is no maximum indicated. Some of the operators and some of the reviewers of needs in certain parts of the province have commented that there seems to be a heavier level of nursing care being required than was the case five and 10 years ago.

I think one might argue that some of those patients should properly be in chronic hospitals if their needs have become that heavy. That is one of the things we are looking at, and if we do that we would have to amend the criteria for extended care. Then it would become part of the general negotiations with the nursing home association, which are carried on annually with respect to the overall per diem rate. Even those who are covered now as extended care patients have varying needs of nursing care.

FIRE SAFETY IN NURSING HOMES

Mr. Nixon: I would like to put a question to the Minister of Health about his nursing home policy. Is he familiar with the situation in the village of Ohsweken in the Six Nations Indian reservation, which has been well provided with hospital and later nursing home care in the same building, known as the Lady Willingdon Nursing Home, which has become old and I believe probably offers some fire danger? I do not want to over-emphasize that but it obviously is a matter of concern for the local Indian council.

Does he recall receiving a letter from the Minister of Community and Social Services (Mr. Norton), being a copy of a letter to me, bringing the matter to his attention? If he does not recall that, will he get somebody to dig that out and give us some information about what should be done to co-operate with the government of Canada to build a proper nursing and chronic care facility without too much delay?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, I do recall it. My staff are looking into it. I may say that in a related matter, namely the provision of institutional care for the native people, I was disappointed recently in discussions with the federal minister to find that apparently they will not participate in any way in funding facilities that they consider to be nursing homes.

It was indicated to me by the federal minister that they would consider sharing in the funding of "what they consider to be hospital facilities" but not nursing homes. So it is related and it could be an additional problem. Our staff are looking into it.

Mr. Nixon: Supplementary: This community, as the minister knows, has a population of 9,000. There is every justification for a modern facility and I do not believe the minister is incapable of putting it to his federal colleagues in such a way that they could not turn him down. This community has to have a proper facility and since nobody else is taking the lead, I believe we should take the lead.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: The honourable member may recall—perhaps he did not see it—that last week my colleague, the member for Cochrane North (Mr. Brunelle), and I issued a press release dealing with the beginning of planning to replace the two hospital units of the James Bay General Hospital at Attawapiskat and Fort Albany. It was specifically with respect to those two units that I put to the federal minister that the assistance of the federal government in funding would be helpful. I was told in no uncertain terms that they consider those to be nursing home units, not hospital care, and they would not consider participating.

I will be glad to take this matter up further with the federal minister, but having been turned down once I am not all that optimistic that she is going to change her mind. If, in fact, the need is for a nursing home as such, then in the absence of any federal assistance, the money would have to be raised privately, as it is for new construction at all nursing homes in the province.

Mr. Warner: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I am wondering if the minister has any intention to introduce changes to the Nursing Homes Act as a result of the recommendation from the coroner's jury at the inquest on the fire that occurred in Mississauga.

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: We have had that now about five weeks and we are working on it. In fact, I have the first draft of an analysis my staff are working on now.

Most of the recommendations have to do with staff training and with the question of smoke detectors versus closure devices and various other things. I think it is a little early for us to comment until we take the matter up with the fire marshal's office, but it is under review. I will be making a statement at some point in the next couple of months once that review is completed.

Mr. Speaker: So as not to establish a dangerous precedent, I would like to advise the House that that was not a supplementary.

Mr. Warner: But it was an important question.

Mr. Speaker: Yes, but not a supplementary.

OHIP COVERAGE

Mr. Conway: Mr. Speaker, my question is also to the Minister of Health and it concerns a comment in Mr. Justice Emmett Hall's review of our national medical program. Reading from page 46, I quote Mr. Justice Hall as saying:

"During the public hearings I was surprised at the wealth of complaints regarding the numbers of persons reported by community groups and by medical and hospital spokesmen as not being insured in the three provinces of Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario, which still levy premium taxes."

Can the Minister of Health for Ontario indicate whether he has evidence to indicate, and to assure this House and the people of Ontario, that as of this month not less than 95 per cent of the people of Ontario are enrolled in our medicare program as it is defined and described in the Medical Care Act of Canada?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I do not receive monthly reports on the percentage of the population enrolled. I can tell the member, though, that the numbers on premium assistance are up this year over last. Currently, approximately two million people in the province are receiving some form of OHIP premium assistance, be that full assistance to the elderly or to those of extremely limited income, or partial 25, 50 or 75 per cent subsidization. I do not receive a monthly report on the actual percentage coverage unless there is a problem, and to the best of my knowledge there is no problem.

Mr. Conway: Could you give me an assurance to find out?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Sure.

REPORT IN TORONTO SUN

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Speaker, earlier today the prurient-minded member for Oriole (Mr. Williams)—or Topless John as he is known in some quarters—drew attention to some alleged and purported problem with Hansard's recording of interjections and took the opportunity to name me specifically in that regard.

3:40 p.m.

He stated this afternoon in the House, "I will not tolerate the attempt by any member of this Legislature to ridicule or embarrass me further on this matter." Surely the honourable member does not need any help from me in his bizarre and twisted penchant for self-abuse.

He did go on to say, "If there has to be any libel and slander action, I will not hesitate to add further names to the style of cause in the action." Regarding this rather bizarre threat, if there is any doubt in his mind or the mind of any other member of the House, let me say I think the member for Oriole is a moralizing little twerp and I invite him to sue me.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ESTIMATES, MINISTRY OF GOVERNMENT SERVICES

House in committee of supply.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make some brief introductory remarks concerning my ministry before we proceed with the discussion of the various votes and items in the 1980-81 estimates.

The general mission of the Ministry of Government Services is to provide accommodation facilities and a wide range of goods and services in support of government programs. The operations of the ministry are organized into three major programs of service: accommodation, supply and services, and communication and computer services.

The accommodation program has responsibility for the provision and maintenance of accommodation for ministries and agencies of the government.

The supply and services program involves the provision of a wide variety of centralized services and facilities to achieve efficiencies and economies in the supply of purchased goods and services as well as certain commonly used government support services.

The communication and computer services program is responsible for the supply and promotion of computer processing services as well as the provision of local and intercity telephone service for government use.

The ministry's annual report for 1979-80 provides information on the achievements of all ministry programs and also provides complete information on tenders and contract awards. The 1980-81 estimates are within the target established by the government and are in accordance with the government program on expenditure restraint.

This concludes my introductory remarks and I will be pleased to answer any questions concerning the estimates of my ministry.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Chairman, to start off on the estimates of the Ministry of Government Services, this ministry covers a wide-ranging area of responsibility, much more than a lot of people probably anticipate, with the number of buildings involved, with leasing and supplying services to the government in other ways, with purchases and so forth.

I thought I would make a few remarks this year with regard to the overall leasing and ownership of buildings of the ministry, especially in Metropolitan Toronto. I know it has buildings in many other cities and towns throughout Ontario, but I have had a cursory look at the buildings and some of the leasing in Metropolitan Toronto and I must say it is a hotchpotch of a number of areas leased, parts of buildings leased and four or five floors in some buildings taken over. One ministry moves to another area, and so forth.

I think it would almost take a royal commission or a select committee of the Legislature really to look into all the leasing and owning of buildings in Metropolitan Toronto if one wanted to delve into it thoroughly. If it is not too much trouble to the ministry and its officials, I would like at some time to have a complete list of all the buildings, parts of buildings or property leased in Metropolitan Toronto, the owners of each building and the cost per square foot of that property. In the past we have had some information to that effect to some degree, but it could probably be updated without too much trouble.

3:50 p.m.

However, in the last few weeks I have looked around at some of the property we have. The other day I went to 77 Bloor Street West, where the Ministry of Culture and Recreation is located. They have leased many floors in that building, as have the Ministry of Revenue people.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Food is located on the very elegant corner of Yonge and Bloor. It is, I suppose, one of the most elite corners of Metropolitan Toronto. When you say "Bloor and Yonge" to people outside Metropolitan Toronto, they figure that is the corner. We talk of Bay Street, where the financiers are located, but most people are more familiar with Bloor and Yonge in Toronto. That is where the Ministry of Agriculture and Food is located.

Many people, farmers in particular, would wonder why it is necessary to have the Ministry of Agriculture and Food officials on the corner of Bloor and Yonge streets where the asphalt and pavement are pretty thick. Those people would probably think the ministry should be located in an area where there is a little green grass around, or the odd field of wheat, or where tomatoes or soybeans are growing and blowing in the wind. It would give a little better feeling to those officials who are looking after the farmers and the ministry might have a little better outlook on what is going on, especially if there was a driving rain or a flood and they could not see the soybeans for the water lying in the fields. They would then have a little more sympathy for them when there is a little trouble in the farming community.

I suppose the same could be said with regard to the Ministry of Natural Resources. Their offices are across the street from here. I understand they would like to get into a larger building into which they could move all their people. That would probably be on the corner of Bay and Wellesley streets, where the ministry has a fair-sized piece of property. I believe I read in an article that they have about 18,000 square feet in either that area or on Grosvenor Street. Maybe some of their staff who deal with day-to-day operations in Northern Affairs should be in the great city of North Bay. It is still all part of Ontario.

I realize that when one starts moving offices, one runs into problems such as the Ministry of Health is having in regard to moving the Ontario health insurance plan to Kingston. One of the promises was that it was to be moved. Of course, that means a lot of people have to move with their jobs. That is a real problem. If one were going to make a policy of decentralizing government, one would have to make it over a long-range period in order to avoid those problems with employees who would have to sell their homes and move. That is quite understandable. However, this government has been in power 37 years, three months and 21 days. I have a feeling they created their own problems and they keep trying to solve them.

This is not directly related to these estimates, but I am sure you will not rule me out of order, Mr. Chairman. When I was the critic for the Ministry of Correctional Services, they used to have problems when they tried to replace some of the old jails through the assistance of the Ministry of Government Services. They had systems in Correctional Services 15 or 20 years ago that many people thought were pretty good.

As the change in government policy came along, it had to become more modern so it did away with all the facilities having any livestock or any gardens or any farms around the jails. They made a great statement about it, but I will be darned if the Minister of Correctional Services (Mr. Walker) is not bringing it all back in. That is the problem with the democratic system. When we have one party in power so long, we lose a little bit of that democratic system. They resort to repeats and change their minds and do not have a complete new look at where we are going. It is just a rehash of the old.

There are buildings scattered in different places. I know they are probably leased and rented on the basis of "we can't be building new buildings all the time." That is right; sometimes it is cheaper to lease. We have Consumer and Commercial Relations at Yonge and Wellesley. I believe a portion of Northern Affairs is across the street at 10 Wellesley. We have the Minister of Housing at Bay and Wellesley at the new Sun Oil Building. Downtown, the Ministry of Labour has large offices on University Avenue. The Attorney General's massive offices are on King Street East.

As the lease was going up on the property where the Ombudsman was located, that office is moving to the corner of Bloor and Avenue Road into the Massey Building. I believe it is part of the university and it is being refurbished. The building apparently has been vacant for some time. From what I gathered when I was in the estimates of the Ombudsman last week, the lease seemed to be fairly reasonable. It was $10 a square foot.

However, there is a lot of proper floor space that might be a bit of a problem to use. I understand the hallways are very wide and he said that by using low partitions and so forth he could use some of the hallways for office space. The lease is quite reasonable compared to leases in most areas, especially when one considers the corner of Bloor and Avenue Road is another prime real estate property. I understand they are going to take the top two storeys. It is only a three-storey building. A bank would be going into the lower floor. There again, we are scattered around considerably.

I suppose some would say the Ombudsman shouldn't be located in a government building or around the Legislature here because he is independent—an arm of the Legislature itself and not of the government. Perhaps we would agree that he should be in a place outside the government buildings.

Then there is Correctional Services. Some of its offices are located out on Eglinton East in the Scarborough area.

One has some reservations about all this. I think probably it has come about as government has grown so much over the last 20 years. We have taken over many functions that were done previously by—the capitalist system, I guess. For instance, the health care system is a big business with government—hospitals and OHIP and all that—so naturally we have a great many employees; we have expanded in other areas. This, I suppose, was never planned by the government as to where they were going to put all the people.

They built some new buildings, of course—we are well aware of the ones to the east of these buildings where some of them have been named after the Premiers and so forth. We are well aware of the buildings that are close by and are serving a good purpose. Also there is Ontario Hydro, which is not really a part of this ministry, as we are well aware. But in a way it has probably one of the choicest pieces of property in Ontario, on the corner of College and University Avenue.

I think anyone who ever comes to Toronto and drives down University Avenue would have to say it is one of the nicest streets in any city on the North American continent. I think whoever laid it out, and the people of Toronto who have kept it the way they have, are to be commended because it is a beautiful street. We have the massive Hydro mirrored building on the corner. There again, I am sure Ontario Hydro could have been located in many other places in the province than on the corner of College and University. However, I think that was thrashed out before in this Legislature a few years ago.

They have other buildings next door. I was down a few weeks ago and was given an opportunity to go through their two adjoining buildings. Since we are looking for space, the province is looking for space, and the members here are looking for space so as to be housed in proper offices, I went down to look into the Ontario Hydro buildings. The building directly south of the new tower has, I think, only two floors not leased out yet. The executive suite on the top floor, of course, is not leased out. I do not know who will take it. It is a very sumptuous place with nice high ceilings and built-in panelling and, I suppose, it is a little more difficult to lease out. The building is in good, satisfactory condition.

I went into the adjoining building built around 1915 or 1920, apparently, the Historical Society of Toronto has named it as a historical building. What to do with the building now is a real problem as far as I am concerned: if I own a building and someone designates it as historical, what I am going to do with it? In the case of that Hydro building, the cost of rebuilding it and making it usable for offices and so forth is really more than that of having it torn down and building a new building. This is a concern to me.

I am not sure about that building—and I suppose I would ruffle a few feathers of some of those in heritage and historical groups. I believe in our history as much as anybody, but I do not think one needs a lot of buildings restored so that we will know our past. I question the case of that building, when one looks at what it is going to cost to have it refurbished and rebuilt. The stairways and elevators are all on the same hallway; of course, that is against all fire regulations. An addition would have to be built on the back end to allow for stairways. Of course, the elevators have to be all closed in with hallways around them to avoid spaces where a fire would go up.

I have great reservations about that building when I understand that Hydro is going to have to pay $55 or more per square foot to refurbish it, and then have to look for tenants to whom to lease it out. I think we have had some problems there, and I think that was some space that probably could have been taken over by the government prior to Hydro's doing anything with it to use it for future space. It certainly is close to here. I just wonder if that is a possibility. However, I do realize there are those who feel the front does look like a historical building. I know there are some beautiful historical buildings in Toronto. I notice between here and downtown there are a number. I am not sure that we need to reserve them all for posterity.

As far as members' accommodations here go, we have had many discussions and meetings with regard to this. I know there are other people in this Legislature who are more familiar with the situation than I am, as far as having meetings with regard to it is concerned. I find it very difficult as a whip, whenever the bells ring, to find out where everybody is located because we have them situated in about four different parts of the building. I suppose the only way to solve that is to win the election, to have them all in one place, and let everybody else do with the best they can find.

I am sure it is a problem for all the members and all the caucuses, and is something that is going to have to be dealt with as soon as possible. Some of the members have very small quarters. I myself had very small quarters for some time but, somehow or other, I happened to be near an area that had a very large room and happened to be there at the right time. Now, I must say, I have ample room.

However, everyone is not in the same position. It just happened that the rooms were there and a number of us were in that corner where four or five of our caucus members are, and we now have ample space. It is much nicer to work in than before. I find myself more content and more willing to stay in the office when the House is not sitting than I was when I had a hole in the wall. It was about eight feet by eight feet and had no windows and there was material piled all around. I know we talk about whether there should be an addition on the north side, and whether this should be torn down or that didn't look very satisfactory. The property the government owns east of Bay, as I mentioned previously, is something that needs some consideration.

I don't envy the minister his position with all the leasing he has to do. He leases floors on one street, and maybe five miles away he has another couple of floors leased out. I can see the problems that creates. I just wonder whether we should take a new look to see whether in the long range we should be having some staff and some of the offices located in areas other than downtown Toronto.

The Ministry of Transportation and Communications has most of its facilities on Highway 401. It seems like a good logical place for the highways department to be located, more or less on the outskirts, but I wonder whether there are other offices, other ministries such as Agriculture and Food or Northern Affairs that should be looking at locating closer to areas where they are actually working, and dealing with people and problems in connection with their offices. That is something I have concern about.

I really don't have anything else right now, other than that I will be asking the minister some questions with regard to telephones and some of the contracting, et cetera, that I have run across in public accounts. That is all for right now, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Warner: Mr. Chairman, it is my privilege to participate in the opening statement on these estimates. I want to say at the outset that I consider this ministry to be very important, although it is one which I suppose is very quiet in terms of public perception. When you think of government you normally think of the large ministries of Education, Health and Transportation and Communications and so on. The ministry of public services is perhaps left behind in terms of being considered to be very important, but it is an important ministry because it delivers a lot of services.

As we go through the estimates I would like to deal at some length with some of the services, such as providing courtroom space. The Ministry of Government Services is involved whenever there is talk of a new courthouse or trying to get courtroom facilities. That is an extremely important role in this province. There are quite a few other important areas I intend to raise as we go through the estimates. I would like to give the minister my list of things I would like to deal with and perhaps we will have an opportunity to discuss them as we go through the estimates.

I am curious about the status of the east of Bay project in Toronto. The whole area of the project has been spoken about at some length. Many of us are not sure about the future of that entire area. We would like to know what role Government Services will have in that project and when the minister believes there will be a final determination of the status of that project.

I wish to discuss the future of several courthouses, starting with Hamilton, of course, because there is a very serious shortage of courtroom space in Hamilton. I think the shortage is the equivalent of at least two courts. There are other areas too, of course. The Cartier Square development in Ottawa is still under discussion. If the minister can unravel some of the mysteries of that, I would certainly be most grateful.

4:10 p.m.

In connection with that, and I am hoping the minister will see the connection, I would like to know the ministry's involvement with historical buildings and whether the ministry has had an active role in attempting to identify historical buildings for possible use as courtrooms, or other government offices if they are not suitable for courtroom space. As the minister well knows, not every building is suitable for a courtroom, but as we are now going through this phase in Ontario of taking a closer look at our buildings before we decide to demolish them—and, where we can determine their historical significance, we are having a second or third guess at what the building should be used for—that is a very healthy exercise and I, for one, am pleased to see that.

It suggests to me there is not always the need for a restaurant, that sometimes a historical building can serve a good function as office space or perhaps commercial space or, in some instances, as a good location for some government services. I am wondering how active the government is in pursuing those historical buildings in various parts of our province, particularly, of course, if they can be used for courtroom space.

I think we need to have some discussion about the future of this building, the future of the Legislative Building here at Queen's Park, particularly the north wing, which has been under some discussion. The government has—

Interjection.

Mr. Warner: If we put the Liberals into the north wing, it would definitely qualify as an historical building housing artifacts.

The government has a legislative building expansion presentation. At the appropriate time, I would like to deal with that submission because the government brought forward three particular alternatives with respect to the accommodation which will be needed in the future. Part of it hinges on whether, following the 1981 census check, the Legislature decides in its wisdom to expand the membership of the Legislature. If we follow the Camp commission reports, then we are looking at a sizeable increase in the number of seats in the Legislature and, with that, the attendant space which would be required by members. Even if we accept the status quo of 125 seats, but accept another recommendation of the Camp commission, that members be entitled to one researcher plus an assistant, then obviously we again have a space problem. From that come the various suggestions as to what should happen with the north wing. As I say, at the appropriate time I would like to go into detail on that.

Along with that, I would like to know from the minister what he has been doing and what his thoughts are on a residence for the Lieutenant Governor. The subject crops up from time to time as to whether the Lieutenant Governor should have separate residence outside of this building. If I understand my history properly, this was the situation at one time. Those who are much older than I, such as the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon), could probably enlighten us on that point. I would like to know if the ministry has followed that up and whether it has any specific suggestions.

I would like to talk about procurement policies, whether the government has what I would think is a more enlightened procurement policy than has been the case in the past with respect particularly to small business in Ontario, that is, small business owned and operated by Canadians. I would like to know whether there is a preferential procurement policy with respect to Canadian-owned and, I would hope, Ontario-based small business and what the ministry is doing to try to promote such a procurement policy, obviously in an effort to aid small business endeavours in Ontario involved in manufacturing and processing.

I would also like to discuss something which has come up from time to time—I think the standing committee on members' services has dealt with it intermittently—and that is the split jurisdiction which exists within the Legislative Building between the Speaker and the Ministry of Government Services. The minister is no doubt aware that, under the previous minister, we had a prolonged discussion about the future of the part of the building which still comes under Government Services and the reluctance to turn it over to the Speaker.

If we believe the Speaker represents a neutral position with respect to the Legislature and the functioning of the Legislature, all the space within the building should come under his jurisdiction and all members, no matter what party they belong to, whether in government or opposition, should be treated in an equal and fair way when they come to the Speaker with requests for use of a portion of the building. I would like to know this minister's feelings. We are well aware of the previous minister's feelings on the subject, but I would like to know if this minister is perhaps a bit more flexible than the previous one.

Mr. Chairman, perhaps I am at your mercy here, but I have had some difficulty in raising this matter with other jurisdictions, so I am going to try the Ministry of Government Services. It seems to me that within the building all members should have the same treatment with respect to hearing the debates and with respect to the ringing of the division bells. I understand the government members have been equipped, I presume by way of Government Services' action, with individual bell systems in their offices to acquaint them that a division has been called. I think the same should be available to all members of the Legislature.

Similarly, the nice little squawk box I have in my office, placed there because of my position as caucus whip, whereby I can work in my office, listen to the debates and then come down here at the appropriate time, should be available to all members of the assembly. I think that is legitimately a function of the Ministry of Government Services. If I am wrong, I am sure either the minister or the Chairman will correct me.

Those are the topics I wish to discuss. As I said at the outset of my opening remarks, this ministry is important because it can take an active role. It can take a leadership role in the issues, whether it is a courthouse facility which is needed, whether it is a procurement policy or whether it is protecting this historic building in which we are situated now. Regardless of which issue, it can take a leadership role and can provide good, efficient service to the people of Ontario, but we need to know from the minister whether he is prepared to take that leadership role. Those are the kinds of questions which I and my colleagues will be asking as we go through the ministry estimates.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make some brief comments on what the member for Essex North (Mr. Ruston) had to say in his opening remarks. I would like to start by saying how pleased I am he took the time to go around and look at the different buildings. As the minister, I am always pleased when my critics or other members want to go around and look in a constructive way at what we rent and lease. We are only too pleased to have them go there. I was only sorry I could not go along with the members when they went to look at the old Ontario Hydro building, but I am sure they were well looked after by my deputy and those who attended from the ministry.

That shows the interest of the member for Essex North and I am pleased about that. The member did mention the number of leases we have in the city. We ourselves own 8,966,338 square feet of space in the downtown area and we lease 3,290,325 square feet, made up of 220 leases in 150 separate buildings. From the comments the member made, if we do come forward in the future with a building and find the capital to do it, I hope this means he will be supporting us for the east-of-Bay property. From the remarks he made, I am sure he would.

I am sure the member will agree also that in order to change a lot of that leased accommodation in downtown Toronto, we would need a considerable increase in our capital. We all know that in time of constraint capital is not forthcoming as fast as some of us might like.

I was pleased that members, including the member for Sudbury East (Mr. Martel), went down to look at the old Hydro building. No doubt he will comment on it when his time comes around. The member commented that the money would be a lot better spent tearing it down and rebuilding rather than putting it back into good repair, taking into consideration energy conservation and the utilization of space on the floors.

Perhaps I could answer both the member for Scarborough-Ellesmere and the member for Sudbury East at the same time when they talked about accommodation for the members. We did make a proposal to the Board of Internal Economy. At that time, we had three proposals. The first was to take out the top and put one storey on the west wing. We found the cost of that to be quite high. I was hoping to have the cost here for you. Perhaps when we talk about it again later on, I will have those figures for the member for Sudbury East. The cost was high and it still would not give us the space we feel we need to meet the Morrow report and others in the future as far as more members of the Legislature are concerned.

The second proposal was one my predecessor brought forward. It was to tear down the back section and rebuild it with parking underneath. I have those figures here. For the first proposal I mentioned, taking off and adding one floor to the present north wing, the cost would be just under $13 million. It would be 15,600 square feet and the cost would be $828 per square foot. For any of you who have anything to do with cost of construction, that would appear to be away out of line.

The demolition of the north wing and the addition of the new project my predecessor mentioned would give us 147,000 square feet of usable space, but would cost $44 million plus. The third proposal was to carry on the way we are and build a building east of Bay, between Grosvenor and Bay, to use the land up between where the YMCA has purchased and on out to Bay Street. This would be 297,500 square feet, and the estimated cost would be reduced to $153 per square foot, which would put it in line.

I believe the member for Essex North mentioned relocating some of the ministries. I think one he zeroed in on was Culture and Recreation. Another one was Natural Resources, where all their offices in Metro Toronto could probably be together east of Bay, and then we could renovate the Whitney Block. It was not the member for Sudbury East, as he would have us believe, but my ministry that suggested that if five or six or seven different groups of people moved to the Whitney Block, this building then could be used for the members. We would then have enough space around in the main building for the members that would meet their needs for some time in the future.

The member for Scarborough-Ellesmere suggested that we should go beyond the 300 square feet per member to accommodate researchers and so on in the future. On this, a lot of people say, "Go back to the drawing board again," but I would only say to the members that there is a limit to what we can do. Rather than just saying, "Go back to the drawing board," I would hope some constructive ideas come in on that as well.

The member for Scarborough-Ellesmere asked about the east of Bay project. He can see that we are looking into the future with the possibility that that is how we might be able to work to get a building there that would accommodate the members in this building eventually. We have a planner who is working with all the interested parties and we expect a report soon.

As to Cartier Square in Ottawa, it is coming along reasonably well. We hope some time early in the new year we will have a model we can show to the interested city officials and the National Capital Commission planners and all who attended the meetings up until this point and we hope to have a meeting after that time with the public.

When we have the model there, that probably will show, at least on the outside, something of the concept of the new building, how it is going to sit on the lot, et cetera. It will be better understood by the lay people, in my opinion, than showing them all the drawings we have at the present time. That is basically where that stands, and it seems to be going along relatively well.

4:30 p.m.

The member also asked what we were doing with our heritage buildings and suggested they could perhaps, be used for courthouses. I would suggest to the member that the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry) sets out the priorities for courthouses in his ministry. If the member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. Eakins) were here, he would have to agree that the training school we converted into court facilities in his area has worked out fairly well. We are not finished, but in just a few months we were able to move in the courts which are now located there, with the alterations our people were able to do.

Both members mentioned space for the members. I think I have covered that before. The Lieutenant Governor's residence has been talked about but, at the present time, it is felt it is perhaps best to leave it in this building. On the possibility of having bells or chimes in all members' offices, I am told that when I was in this building not all offices had them. You could usually hear them. I do not know whether it is a plus to have them in your office, or better to have them somewhere in the hall if they happen to ring as long as they did last Thursday night. The member noted what happened a week or so ago when he mentioned to the Speaker about not being able to hear the bells. I believe it was one of his members who had a bit of a problem, as I do myself, with hearing. An extra bell or chime was installed almost immediately. That member came over and thanked us for doing that.

Those are some general remarks for the two leadoff speakers. I am sure we will have more questions as we get into the votes.

On vote 501, ministry administration program; item 1, main office:

Mr. Martel: I have been sitting on the select committee on plant shutdowns at the present time, Mr. Chairman, but I have a couple of comments I want to put on the record with respect to the building.

Let me begin by saying to the minister I will recall the day the three proposals as outlined were put before the Board of Internal Economy. I turned to my friend the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon) and I nudged him as we got to the third proposal. I said to him, "That is it. That is the one he wants. He is presenting it with such relish and such delight that I am sure that is the one the government wants." Sure enough, it was. It was not to accommodate members. The new proposal was to build a new building on Bay Street to house some civil servants across the way.

I have been in this building 13 years and it has been a struggle, so help me, even to get half-way decent accommodation for members of this Legislature.

Mr. B. Newman: You are lucky compared to the days before you came.

Mr. Martel: I want to tell the member I was here a short time after him. I do not recall writing letters in this Legislature, but I certainly well recall five of us in an office that now houses the Sergeant at Arms. There were five desks all one against the other. Space and accommodation for members have always been wanting in this place save, of course, in the last five or six years. If one is a government member, the choice is much better than if he happens to be on this side of the House. That still applies. As the minister knows since he visited my quarters—and I speak on behalf of the New Democratic Party—there are 70 or 80 of us on the second floor in the north wing. There are still members who have piddly little offices.

Mr. Worton: Piddly?

Mr. Martel: Piddly, yes. It is a little puddle.

I want to go back to the proposal because there is something rotten in the state of Denmark. I listened to the three proposals. We went along a little better than two years ago with your predecessor. We said we were prepared to wait until the government was prepared to demolish that north wing and make accommodations big enough to accommodate members and the services offered.

I looked at the three proposals, and I grant the first one is out of whack. It is far too costly at $12 million or $13 million to put one floor over there. I am the first one to accept that. What bothers me is that number three becomes so attractive. Whatever you are going to put up over there, you could well put up here, depending on the design, and house as many people.

In fact, I suggest as a positive suggestion to the minister, for a change we should lease some of our buildings to somebody in the civil service. We might put the Ministry of Northern Affairs, which is one of the offices being contemplated, up on the seventh floor instead of over on the corner of Bay and Wellesley. In other words, the additional space that would be left over we could give to the various government offices that require it, but this building is to serve the Legislature. That does not mean taking out part of the library, as is now being considered. In fact, at the Board of Internal Economy last Monday, we had difficulty in ascertaining where part of Dr. Land's new group of people are going to go, because we cannot find space for them across the way in the Whitney Block. There is no space available there now and he needs it.

The library space is inadequate. Somebody should tell you it is totally inadequate. It does not house the people who are there, nor is it going to house the complement of people who are at present being hired as we expand the service of the library to bring it into a first-rate library system similar to the one in Ottawa. We are moving towards that end. There is not sufficient space now for them at this very moment, I say to the minister. They are looking for space and they haven't got it.

To suggest we should remove other services is crazy. I checked with the Hansard people. I went to Ottawa. The select committee went to Ottawa. There is some difficulty with it. I say anybody who is going to utilize this building in this way to serve the needs of this Legislature must stay here. As you go through the list, tell me who does not serve the Legislature in this building?

As I sat there on that auspicious day when the thing was unfolding, I knew what would happen. I turned to the member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon) and said, "This is the one they want." I must say I did not stay to the end to see if that was the one they were going to propose, but that was it. The member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk can come in later on and verify that. From the way it was being presented, it was a totally different ball game.

I say to the minister that his responsibility is to serve the needs. There are some things that have to go on in this building. They talk about too much space left over in option two. We know from a select committee, the Morrow report, that the existing building has to be brought up to standard. As we bring this building up to standard, we will have to take from the fourth floor right down to the basement and lop a third off. For a year at least that is not going to be serviceable. Then we will go to the east end and will lop off a third there and go right from the top to the basement. Then we will do the remaining part of the building, which is going to take roughly another year. You are going to have to house people from this building in the extra space you spoke of that was going to be surplus space which you did not know what to do with. You are going to have to house the very people who are here if you are going to bring the rest of the building up to any standard.

One just has to look behind the curtains in this building to find wires that are illegal in the rest of Metropolitan Toronto. In this building they are all nailed into the frame because the cost to refurbish the building is going to be so great. My friend from St. George and I sat on the select committee and we know. I believe the cost then to bring this building up to standard was over $20 million. It has further deteriorated.

I ask the minister, where are you going to house that one-third you do not have space for now when you start to do this building? Are you going to shove us over to the Whitney Block? That is totally crazy.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: If we take the second proposal, you have to move out for three or four years.

Mr. Martel: Right. You will tear that down and build a new one, but then you can refurbish the rest of this building. If we take your first proposal, we will be out for ever.

Mr. Ashe: Hear, hear.

Mr. Martel: The member for Durham West won't have anything to do with it. That cannot be overcome. You are going to have to do that anyway. It was recommended in 1975 or 1976 that we start to renovate this building. It has not improved since then. You are going to have to find accommodation. The easiest way, of course, is to tear that old section down and start from scratch.

Build a little extra space and then take the Ministry of Northern Affairs out and put it on the eighth floor. Then take another small ministry and put it on the seventh floor because that is putting the priorities where they belong. If you want to put an eight-storey building over there, put it here and serve the Legislature's needs first. I am sorry, but that is not being considerate.

The standing committee on members' services had an opportunity to look at this several weeks ago and it is not happy either. I think it said, "Go back to the drawing board." That might not be a bad idea. You might take into consideration that you are going to lease the remainder on a lease-back arrangement to some ministry. It is as easy to put the Ministry of Northern Affairs on the eighth floor here as it is to put it over on the corner of Bay Street. I would suspect it is simpler because the minister just has to come down the stairs and into the Legislature to vote. I suspect that option has not been considered. Somebody is going to tell me: "The design of the building is such that we cannot do it. There is that rock outside, which is a different type of rock."

We all know that if we tell an architect to design a building that complements the existing structure, it can be achieved. I am no architect, so I will not tell you how it can be done, but I can tell you architects who can do it. We have looked all around us and have seen old buildings renovated and added on to that come out very well. The north wing is totally inadequate.

Speaking about a little additional space, shall I remind the minister there are six members of my party who sit in little offices that are vastly too small? Forgetting the members for a while, I have a woman's co-ordinator who is in an office six feet by seven feet. I can show you staff who are overcrowded, and not just there. I was invited once to the Premier's office where I recall one of his staff showed me where some of them were working. They were in an old vault. They still are in an old vault. Can you imagine the working environment?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: They are not females.

Mr. Martel: It is not right for either of them. That is why it is not right for a female in my office to have a six foot by seven foot space. We talk about providing space for the civil servants. To hell with it. It is time the minister said, "No, we are going to look through this whole shack and we are not going to allow people to work under some of the conditions that exist in this building."

The conditions are deplorable. To try to cook the books a little bit to doctor this building isn't going to work. We all know what Morrow recommended and we are moving towards it. Your predecessor recognized it because in his drawings he had space for a researcher for each member of the Legislature. That is coming as sure as I stand here. Society is getting more complex. It is more difficult to deal with any problem and members are going to need researchers. Where are we going to put them? If we are talking of about at least 80 members in this building and probably 90, exclusive of the cabinet, we are talking about an additional amount of space. When they look at the space the Legislature is going to require, I would like to go over it item by item with whoever designs it because there is something wrong in the state of Denmark.

I don't think we can even start to consider taking any of the library services out of here. In fact, we should enhance them. I don't think we can take Hansard out. Mr. Brannan can't keep up with today's demands of the Legislature. It is impossible. He is being ordered from pillar to post to produce yesterday's Hansard for today's considerations of a select committee. It is totally impossible. That service is going to expand.

I say it is unrealistic and the books have been cooked to make it appear as though we need that building over there and that in this one our needs are not that great. Well, they are. I am prepared to argue with the minister. I am prepared to go over the figures and, in fact, I will bring in my own architect, if he wants to go over the figures. I have found that over the years—and this is my fourteenth year in this Legislature—the last to be served around here have always been the members. The minister shakes his head. I want to tell him that even to get a tape recorder at one time was difficult around this place.

Last week I said to the staff when they were looking into the bells, "Instead of that stupid bell that make so much noise it drives all of us crazy, could you put in a chime?" They said, "Oh, no, we can't put in a chime." I said, "Why can't you put a chime in the main corridor?" "We just can't do that," they said. I said, "Why can't you?" They answered, "It has always been done like this."

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: If someone can't hear the bell, how is he going to hear chimes?

Mr. Martel: The bells can't be heard when they are not ringing.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: It was not working.

Mr. Martel: You tell me why. This place is so bound in outdated tradition. He complains because he couldn't hear the bell. The bell wasn't working. You can't hear it if it is not working.

Interjection.

Mr. Martel: You could do then as you do for cabinet ministers. You could put a chime in every office. I will tell you an interesting story. When I first became House leader, I was wandering around the premises with Bob Fleming. I don't want to take his name in vain but I think I saw him come in a few moments ago. We happened to be in the government House leader's office. There were a number of other people with him from Government Services. I don't want to make him feel uncomfortable. I said, "Do you know there is a refrigerator in Mr. Welch's office? He is a House leader and I am House leader. Do you think I could have a refrigerator?" he said, "Why certainly, Mr. Martel. What colour?" My colleagues don't have a refrigerator.

Mr. B. Newman: Have you got one now?

Mr. Martel: Yes, I have one now. That is all it took. If you can find someone at your level in this place, you can get anything you want. Within days there was a refrigerator in my office. When aren't my colleagues entitled to a refrigerator?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: What for?

Mr. Martel: The government House leader had one. I thought if he were entitled to one as House leader, I would be entitled to one too and, lo and behold, I was. I had a refrigerator. Isn't that magnificent? That is the way things are done around here. Nothing changes on merit. It is a question of who you can catch with his finger in the cookie jar. If you catch somebody with his finger in the cookie jar and you are at the same place, you too are entitled.

4:50 p.m.

I well recall when Sidney Handleman was on our select committee. He never used to be able to get the equipment he wanted. He went to the cabinet and then came back. We still couldn't even get a portable Stenorette; it was impossible, it was a horror. Other people had them. They came to the Board of Internal Economy and, lo and behold, those who wanted could get a portable machine. There has been no great run on them.

It all used to come in a book from Government Services. If you were at this level in government, you had an office that was big, if you were down one notch, you had one that was a little smaller. As you got further and further away, they just kept getting smaller and smaller. It is part of getting up there.

But we never even fit in that book. Members of the Legislature didn't fall into any category, from the lowest to the highest. We weren't even included. When you wanted something it was a battle royal to get it. Slowly within the Board of Internal Economy, we are cleaning out some of that problem. When members have a requirement, they can now get the equipment they require through their caucus office. But the battle to get it was insurmountable for a while. It is funny what minority government does.

The same applies to this building. This should be the most important building in the province. I was in three legislatures this year and none of them was the dingy, drab facilities that we see here.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Which ones?

Mr. Martel: We saw those in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Quebec. I suppose I am being selective. Then I went to Prince Edward Island where they are now refurbishing theirs after 105 years. I can understand why theirs has fallen a little behind.

Where else can you walk into a building where the rug is kept down with Scotch tape or binding tapes? Go to the other quarters, the wing I come from, and the whole rug looks as if it has been sewn together with bands of masking tape—that is the word I am looking for. All along the floor it is held together. Before the stairs were repaired, I think I had five assistants who fell on them. Finally, they tore the whole rug out. It's nuts.

I use those silly little examples to show that the priority in this building has never been for the people who occupy it. I, for one, am fed up with the nonsense that goes on with respect to it. It is obvious the government's intent now is to dabble with this building, move some of the people out of the Whitney Block eventually and give that to the members of the Legislature.

I remind the minister we are the ones who are here until nine, 10 and 11 at night and we are the ones who are in our offices when the House is sitting from nine in the morning. It is time this building was for members. Don't get me wrong. I am not talking about plush living quarters or anything like that, but decent services and decent accommodation to work with the people we all have to work with in here. That includes offices for cabinet ministers.

I have been trying to kick cabinet ministers out but only for one reason—lack of space. I think one cabinet minister surrendered her office a number of years ago because she hadn't been in it. I believe that was the Minister of Education if I am not wrong. She said someone else could use it because space was at a premium. Those offices should be there to do the business of this province appropriately. I get offended every time I turn around and see they are going to try to hijack another building for civil servants over on Bay Street.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The Whitney Block is not that far away.

Mr. Martel: But the Whitney Block has problems. One only has to witness what went on here last Thursday. One can't divide the services. One cannot take one half of the library from here and slough it over to the Whitney Block. That is within the plans and that is unfair.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Move the members over there instead of the library.

Mr. Martel: That poses a real problem. It poses a problem for your whip and my whip. It poses a problem for members who want to come in and who have scheduled an hour or an hour and a half to get in and out. Why should we be the ones walking over there?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I have to go over to the Mowat Block, which is farther away.

Mr. Martel: It is crazy. I say to the minister that the services in here are for the members. They are not for anyone else. I am hard-headed about it; I really am. Even at the Board of Internal Economy this very week, I am sure the members' services committee will be looking at a couple of other problems, one of which deals with closing down the lounge for the members. We are going to close that down. We can close that. It is a dungeon; it is the most unattractive place in Toronto. I would not say it was sleazy, mind you, but it is an unattractive place.

The bill they gave us to make a few repairs was $80,000. I am not the world's greatest carpenter, but for $80,000 I could make just about any type of room you want down there. I know enough about it. The things we suggested down there would not cost $80,000.

I suspect that the same high-jinks are being played with respect to the building. If we can make it so costly, $340 per square foot, then how in the world could anyone in his right mind say yes.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: It is $300.

Mr. Martel: Even $300 per square foot. How could anyone in his right mind say we were going to go for $300 when they are offering us double the space somewhere else for half the price? Somebody is going to have to convince me of that too, unless you are telling me it is going to cost $100 million to tear that place down. That is what it boils down to, because you say for $3 million more than the cost of rebuilding, you are going to end up with double the space. That means it has to cost over $100 million to take that building down.

I have some friends in Sudbury who do a lot of mining. They are real experts. They can blow as much as they want, just a little bit, or a little more, without damaging anything else. If you want me to bring one of them down, we can get rid of the building in a hurry. I do not believe it can be that much. I simply do not believe that for $3 million you are going to get double the space. I find that unacceptable, unless you are telling me the difference is going to be in tearing this building down. I think Green-spoon Brothers Limited could tear it down in a hurry.

I recall saying to my friend, the member for St. George, when we were doing the Morrow report that it was strange, even at that time, we could not get the money for this building. But we could find $28 million, for what? Some building down the way. We found how many million for Hydro? Everybody found money in those days. We cannot even find money to fix this building up appropriately.

Mr. Warner: The ceiling has fallen down. It almost killed one of the employees.

Mr. Martel: That is right. The place looks like a zoo.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I was there when it happened.

Mr. Martel: Did it hit the minister? I will bet if it had, we would have a new building under construction right now.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It did not almost kill anyone.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. The member for the Sudbury East has the floor.

Mr. Martel: I am prepared to let anyone in, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chairman: I know, but I am not.

Mr. Martel: That is up to you. I will continue in my place.

5 p.m.

The minister has to tell me the costs have not been cooked. I want to know how you can get double the space for only $3 million more. The only way I can assess it is that the cost of demolition is certainly going to be high. Also, I want to know precisely what services there will be. The minister gave a whole list in that rundown. What services are not involved with the Legislature and the ongoing operation of this building? Perhaps John Thatcher can help you on what services are not required in this building. The first one that is off the list as far as I am concerned is the library. You cannot split it. Dr. Land is having trouble right now trying to find a place. Finally, there are all the other lists. Perhaps you can tell me how they do not fit into the everyday workings of this building and what goes on and how we are going to overcome that little problem.

I leave that for a moment to deal with one other minor problem—Burwash.

Mr. Ruston: Good old Burwash.

Mr. Martel: It used to be Burwash; it used to be Government Services. The goats are gone. You and I knew about a year ago when we visited Burwash that it was just a matter of time for the goats to go with Schaffernicht. He is now in Algoma-Manitoulin trying to pester the member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Lane), thank goodness. The legacy he left behind is a debt of about $112,000. That has gone.

I am pleased this minister came to Sutton and took the time to look at that accommodation. He was involved in the second study of the utilization of Burwash. It boiled down to a point where we have to agree on how we lease. I think in the final assessment it is a case of leasing. As I understand it, the ministry would like to lease the property to the regional municipality of Sudbury and the regional municipality would like to lease it, but not in one shot.

In other words, if they take over Burwash as of now, the cost to the region would be about a half-million dollars, give or take a few bucks, to provide the services and do the maintenance work. The region certainly is not in that kind of position any more than the province is. The province would like to get out of that half million they spend annually for nothing.

I suggest to the minister he might approach it this way, that Burwash be divvied up in such a way that when the region leases a portion of it, the region should bear the responsibility of maintenance for that portion. As I understand it, the first portion under active negotiation would deal with a training centre sponsored by the Labourers International Union of North America. Ultimately, a whole range of training could go on there, including the Canadian Union of Public Employees people who are in need of training for operating heavy equipment in municipalities. That is the first phase.

If the second one were to be turned over to Dr. Newbury and the native group from Laurentian University working with native people—and the member for Algoma-Manitoulin is interested in this—and if that took eight or 10 per cent of the operation, then the region would be responsible for the maintenance of eight or 10 per cent or whatever it is. Bit by bit, as the region moved in and took over a portion, they would bear the responsibility for the upkeep and maintenance of that portion. Ultimately, we hope the whole thing could be taken over by the region, but no region can afford a clout of half a million dollars just for maintenance with nothing in return.

In addition to that, the other thing the minister could do is have the region look after it and maintain it. He knows what the costs have been over the past four or five years. They could maintain it for the ministry and bill it. As they took over more and more of it, the billing to the province would diminish. For example, if they took 20 per cent in the first year, the cost would be roughly $400,000 to the ministry and $100,000 to the region. That sort of lease arrangement could be carefully worked out. I think the region would be receptive to it. I would hope the government and this ministry would be responsive to that sort of approach so we could take it over bit by bit, reducing your costs and increasing ours as we start to lease sections of it for various programs.

I would mention a program that is of interest to my friend from Algoma and myself, which we have been talking about for two or three years. It is a program for the native people as they come out of institutions. They could go there and be helped get back into society properly with some sort of skill they could carry on and make a livelihood from. Certainly they are close enough. If we ever get that road over through the park, they will be within an hour's drive of the island.

Mr. Lane: It is just a matter of time.

Mr. Martel: Just a matter of time. Certainly there are other programs. We lost one, by the way. The region was going to train people who were on welfare so that we could get them off welfare, but the discussions were so long and ongoing that they leased an old school in Sudbury. I believe the son of the member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell) was involved in that. They are now leasing premises in the city of Sudbury and have started to retrain people.

It is particularly difficult for the women in the Sudbury area to get any type of retraining, but they are doing it. They could have been there and possibly they will end up there. I am not sure how long a term their present lease is. Until we get the basis resolved as to how we can work that out, I cannot see any regional municipality jumping in to take it off the government's hands when it is going to have to expend $500,000 before it even tries to utilize any part of that facility.

Certainly the government wants it off its hands. The longer we leave it there the more it deteriorates. I appreciate what the minister has done to date, the second report and so on, but the sooner we get a solution to the leasing arrangement, the greater the possibility is that we will start very quickly to lop it off into sections and see people utilizing it. I would hope the minister could give me an indication that he is prepared to enter that type of leasing arrangement with the region.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, in answer to some of the questions the member for Sudbury East has raised, I will get back to the building here. It would appear from the member's comments he supports the second proposal. I am pleased to hear there is someone to whom we have made those three proposals who has supported one of them. This is a move in the right direction.

There are some costs that the member should know about. I think he knows me well enough to know I don't cook the books or do those sorts of things.

Mr. Martel: I didn't say you were.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Nor do my honourable staff do them.

The construction costs for phase two are estimated to be $37.8 million. As you know, we would have to move. The member mentioned moving the members across to the Whitney Block, as if it were a long piece away. If we followed proposal two, we would have to move the members—probably the closest accommodation would be the Whitney Block—for a period of up to four years.

5:10 p.m.

Mr. Martel: That is only interim; the other one is in perpetuity.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Not really. There is construction for $37.8 million, the lease, which is, I should tell you, $5,537,000, and the leasehold alterations of $823,000. That is how we come to the figure of $44.16 million. That is how we arrived at that. I should just mention we are looking at a need for 32,000 square feet in this building. With option two, we would have 147,000 square feet if we tore down the north wing and put up the building the honourable member is suggesting.

What the member for Essex North mentioned earlier would indicate that perhaps he was in favour of putting some of those ministries in one of our own buildings rather than having them scattered all over. It would be interesting to hear his comments on that.

As far as the members who have the inner offices are concerned, the honourable member knows we did go around with our interior decorator to try to improve that situation. It is hard. You cannot put windows where there is no outside wall but we could have, in all fairness, brightened up those areas for those people and improved it in some way in the meantime.

It was said by the honourable member that he visited three legislatures throughout our country. I visited two this summer. When I visited our rich relatives in Alberta, I visited the members' offices. I can say they are more crowded than when I came here in 1971 and about seven of us occupied what is now the government caucus office with about two secretaries among seven of us. They are really crowded out there. That is Alberta, even with its heritage fund and all the rest.

I saw the same thing in Manitoba. I did not see anything like the offices we have. I suppose you could compare theirs with the seven inner offices that we have for some of the Liberal caucus and some of the NDP. I believe the breakdown is three and four. Even out there they are not as well off as we are. That does not mean we should not be looking after our members, and I think we have been.

I was interested to hear the member for Windsor-Walkerville say how things have improved since he came. I only know that in the nine years I have been here things have sure come a long way since the day seven of us spent some time in that one office with only two secretaries. Again, that is not to say that is what everybody should be back to.

As far as Burwash goes, the honourable member made some comments about our friend who raised the goats. I am sure the day we were there both of us wondered if that could ever make a profit. I know I did as a part-time farmer. I think I made that statement to my colleague, the member for Algoma-Manitoulin, and to the member for Sudbury East. I think we all agreed on that.

What the honourable member has said is along the lines of what we have been discussing with the region, as far as Burwash goes. We have had discussions. I was in one of the meetings with a representative from the region. I believe that person has had meetings after that with my staff. We were waiting for the results of the meeting of the region.

As early as today, I heard—perhaps the member for Algoma-Manitoulin and the member for Sudbury East have heard as well—that the region is going in on Wednesday with the chairman of our citizens committee, Ross Smith, to look at Burwash. I believe there are some new councillors in the region and they have not had an opportunity to see it. I hope they are able to view it without a lot of snow on the ground. I know I enjoyed seeing it. It is a lot better than looking at it on paper and I was pleased the two members I mentioned earlier came along with me and my staff at that time.

I am hopeful something can be worked out with the region. I believe the region is in a better position than we are, to be the landlord of that, as we're so many miles away. But I am sure the honourable member will be keeping in touch with us as to what happens after they meet on Wednesday and perhaps have a full meeting of the region to discuss it further.

Mr. Martel: If I could just speak to the minister on one more point before I go back to committee. Would the minister be prepared to meet with the members' services committee with all the figures, not just the quick presentation that was given to us several weeks ago, and possibly the Board of Internal Economy? I do not want to get us into more reasons, but to go over that.

I am not convinced yet, Mr. Minister. You tell me we only need 32,000 square feet. I find that hard to accept. For example, I do not have a room that my caucus can meet in, save a huge caucus room which has four pillars running through it.

Mrs. Campbell: Be our guest.

Mr. Nixon: Let's have those removed.

Mr. Martel: Yes. If we want a small meeting with seven or eight people, I do not have a room unless I kick the member for Brantford (Mr. Makarchuk) out of his office. That does not happen.

[Applause.]

Mr. Martel: You can pound your desks. It is the only way you are going to get your jollies, because he is coming back.

We cannot even hold small meetings, so when we say 32,000 square feet, I want to know if that includes a proper caucus room. Does it include a caucus room like the one that members on that side have down in room 229, that they took over from the kitchen? It used to be a cabinet office and was neatly seconded by the whip for Tory gatherings. Would you be generous enough to lend it to me whenever I ask? We do not have a room like that. In fact, the Tory whip's office is about a quarter of the size of all the other space I occupy. You need a tour guide just to get through it.

I want to extract a commitment from the minister that he is prepared to sit down with us and show us where they got the figure of 32,000. Will he show us where all the bodies are going to go and just how he has arrived at this proposal, before any major commitment is undertaken? I dispute some of it and most of all I dispute that requirement of 32,000 square feet. Maybe he has it and I am prepared to be convinced; but I am not prepared to be convinced just by someone telling me that is it. I guess I am from Missouri. Show me.

I hope the minister is prepared to meet with the standing committee on members' services with all the facts and figures to convince us and then to show us we are not going to take people out of this building who meet the needs of the members and have them scattered about.

I realize if we fear that down we are going to have to find other space. I accept that, but that is only an interim measure. He still has not answered what he is going to do when he repairs the main part of the building we are in now. It is going to have to be closed off, possibly including this chamber, a whole third at a time, for a prolonged period which is going to stretch over a number of years. There is just too much left hanging. I would like to extract from the minister a commitment to meet with the Board of Internal Economy if it requests it, with all the figures. I do not mean a short half-hour meeting but a meeting where we can go through it brick by brick.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I do not know whether all of us have the time to go through it brick by brick but I would give a commitment that we would review it with you. The indications from my ministry staff who have worked on this are we need 17,000 square feet immediately. For future needs, they estimate we need 22,500. They are going on the assumption that practically all these estimates are a little on the heavy side and they have taken off 20 per cent of that, bringing us down to what they feel is a more realistic future requirement of 32,000 square feet.

Mr. Martel: Does that include a little heavy on the costs as well?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I would not think so, because we are able to base that on what it is costing us for other buildings, as I am sure the honourable member will realize. We would welcome a meeting some time in the near future with the Board of Internal Economy and the members' services committee as well.

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Chairman, I will be brief. I would like to draw the attention of the minister to some of the debate we have had in the members' services committee which prompted us to send your proposals back, requesting that you go back to the drawing board.

I think the member for Yorkview, who is probably one of the most highly respected members in this House, put the matter clearly when he said we could not go on with patching off or the little-dab-will-do-you approach to accommodate members and the services relating to them without some major proposals. It was, of course, the proposal in part from the members' services committee that we should look, not to tearing down the north wing—I do not think that is what we felt, although we will be discussing it further on Thursday—but rather looking at a building to the rear of this building which could be designed in keeping with the nature of this building so we could accommodate, not only present needs but future needs, if we are going to require a redistribution five years down the road.

As far as we were concerned, with the legislative library, for example, if you have ever looked at the stacked—

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Where would you put that building, back of the parking?

Mrs. Campbell: Back of this building. For the purposes of staff, we do have underground parking over in the Whitney Block. It should not be such a difficult thing to get the parking underground. Let us have a building which will accommodate the needs of the people who work in this building, namely, in priority, the members. It has been a difficult thing for all of us to get through to various Ministers of Government Services the whole idea of the precincts of this House. I think it is time you got your staff together and told them what the purposes are because I really don't think they understand.

You had previous staff who regarded this building as essentially for the government side—that was clear in some of the discussions we had with the Morrow committee. The whole philosophy has to change. They have to learn, maybe step by step, maybe in an overall review, that this building is a legislative assembly building and belongs in priority to the members elected, all of them by the same route, to sit in this place.

When we were going over this booklet, to which my friend the third party House leader referred, we saw in very clear and carefully specified terms what a deputy minister had to have by way of office: size, equipment, support staff and other things. At that point, Government Services was of the opinion that if you were in the opposition you didn't even need shelving. It wasn't in the book, nor was anything else for the rest of us.

Over the years since I have been here a bitterness has developed because of the lack of understanding of what this building is all about. It is not a building for the Tory party. It is a building for all the members equally. Certainly, as you know, we advised the minister not to waste money painting windows on blank walls. Give our members at least what middle management in the bureaucracy here is entitled to. We have never had that.

We talk about costs with reference to this building and to any extension, but we never talk about the costs of building east of Bay. Where is the commitment? The commitment is not to the members in this building. The commitment is to further office extension in an area which seriously disturbs the people of my particular riding. We begged that the then Minister of Government Services would look at the old Hydro building with a view to holding that for purposes of relocation from this building in a set of three phases. No way would anybody listen to us.

5:30 p.m.

I frankly welcome the attitude of this minister in trying to cope with what are serious problems. The philosophy is interesting, though.

The members' lounge is in really one of the most inaccessible parts of the building now that we have members scattered throughout the building. It wouldn't occur to the minister or his staff to suggest that perhaps we could have the members' lounge where the cabinet lounge is, where it would be closer to the members as they are engaged in this House. Oh, no! You lose money in the north lounge, so you cut off the members' lounge. It is the only thing you or your staff can think of, and it worries me.

I know the cost of the stewards and the rest are a matter for Mr. Speaker, but it is exactly the same kind of problem. Mr. Speaker can't move the lounge up here because you won't surrender it to his need to service the members. It gets back to that old tug-of-war. Surely your staff has enough to manage that they don't have forever to hang on tenaciously to this building. Let the Speaker look after this building for the purposes of the precincts of this House.

I suppose that will come in the year 2000 or so, but I say to you it is wrong. When you refer to the various assembly buildings, I can say I was in the assembly building in Whitehorse. I was not in members' offices. I saw very modest cabinet offices and I also saw modest staff provisions so that at least there wasn't that difference among the minister, his deputy, and the private members in this House. That is a comparison that we see. It is all very well to talk about what members have in other places, but we have to look at the corresponding provisions for staff. That is where it is totally out of gear here. I beg your pardon. I'm sorry, I didn't catch what the minister is saying.

Interjection.

Mrs. Campbell: I am of the opinion the cabinet ministers are entitled to some reasonable offices because of their position and because of the people with whom they have to meet, but I resent the fact that staff should be more important than members in the assembly. I think that is the comparison I am making. I wish that something could be done about the simple day-to-day efficiency of this particular ministry.

I drew to your attention my request, made I believe in February or perhaps in March, to have someone come to tear down these hanging strips that your ministry sticks in my window every year to keep the wind out. There has been no action. So when some of your ministry people were before members' services, I asked again. Do you have several branches? Do you have one branch in your ministry that looks after a westerly window and another branch that looks after a southerly window? I wonder if perhaps there is some regulation. It seems to me, as a very simple soul, if they come in to tear the strip off one window they might do the other window at the same time. But they can't do that. They did one window and I climbed up on a credenza finally to take the stuff off the south window because I could not stand looking at it any more.

It is the same thing with exterior lights at both side doors. We have steps which are themselves dark. In the wintertime, it is hard to see those steps. It seems to me the lights should be cleaned and should have sufficient wattage to cast light and not shadow on those steps.

I am not pointing this out to be picayune; I am pointing it out to say I believe we could increase the efficiency around this place. But I would like very much to have the minister once more go over the meaning of the assembly, go over its purposes and go over what is meant by the precincts of the House and the protection of the privileges of members in this place, so that he would understand and perhaps teach those who do not know what this place is all about.

If we could get the philosophy accepted, if we could get the Speaker properly in charge, as he is for the most part in this country, then it seems to me we could work together. There would be that force speaking out on behalf of the members, and not always on behalf of what people in the ministry consider to be good enough for members other than their own.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to reply to some of the remarks made by the member for St. George. Perhaps the member was not in the House when her colleague mentioned earlier that he had been down, along with a couple of other colleagues, to visit the old Ontario Hydro building. His comments, I believe, were that it probably is close to a heritage building, but it would take a lot of money to restore that and give us the energy conservation that we look for in a building today, the utilization of floor space and things like that. I think the member said it would probably be cheaper to tear it down and start from scratch than it would to do the renovations necessary on it.

Mrs. Campbell: I was just looking at it as temporary accommodation. You could take one third out, then another third out and then the middle third out.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: There were a few remarks by the member for St. George and the member for Sudbury East (Mr. Martel) about the east-of-Bay property. But, first, there is another point I would like to make to the member for St. George. There has been a study going on by a planner for the east-of-Bay project, taking into consideration possible users with the city, with our own people and so on, and that study will soon be forthcoming.

Mrs. Campbell: Can you tell me how many studies have been done?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: This was one that is quite neutral. It is being done by an outside firm and we are all looking forward to reviewing that report to see what it has.

Mrs. Campbell: But this is not at all the type of local autonomy that is used by this government.

5:40 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: There have been some comments by a couple of speakers suggesting that it looks as though we are trying to steer everybody east of Bay Street to get some added space for civil servants, forgetting about the members. I do not look at it that way. Part of my job is to give accommodation to the ministers and to try to do it in the way that is most efficient.

I gave a commitment a while ago to the member for Sudbury East that we would go over the costs with the Board of Internal Economy and the members' services committee. If you were in my position you would see a building costing $153 a square foot compared to at least $300 for the one the member for Sudbury East recommends. I am pleased he recommended one because until this point, after our presentation, it looked as if the presentation had fallen on deaf ears and we were not getting a response other than to go back to the drafting board.

I have a responsibility to get space, where I can, that is reasonable. Earlier this afternoon your colleague mentioned we had ministries in different places within the city. I think he was looking at putting them closer together or together rather than having them spread out.

The member for St. George mentioned the taping around her windows and asked whom you should call about it. We have a director, legislative services branch, in this building, Mr. Cameron, whose responsibility it is to look after the members. If you have a problem like that, I am across the floor from you every question period or as close as the telephone.

I would say to the members that next year we are anticipating changing the windows in the building. We will not do them all in one year. We realize we are losing energy through the windows and that you are getting drafts. We will be changing the windows. Tenders will go out early in the new year, probably for half of the windows.

The second half will be done the following year.

We hope inconvenience to the members can be minimized. We may have to move a member out of his or her office for a day or two because we are going to take everything right out. Hopefully, before they take one out they will have the new one ready to go in. However, we will be disrupting your offices, probably for a day or two. The windows will be fixed. I did follow through on the lights the member mentioned. I followed it through the next day and I thought that had been corrected.

There was some indication—at least I got that indication—that we were not doing anything around this building. To do what some of the members have said and cut it off the building in wings, while we are doing each section, would be costly. We are doing renovations and trying to upgrade the building. You can see the Amethyst Room and you can see the second floor which we have carpeted. We have done the elevators in the last year, which I am sure is good for everyone. Anyone who has walked across through the tunnel knows the improvement there. As members, we saw improvements to the ante-rooms outside the Legislature. That has been a welcome change. We even have a ramp for the handicapped to get into the Legislature. We are making changes and we will continue to make changes.

I would like to ask the member for St. George if she would give me a little bit more of an idea of what she had in mind for behind the building because we would want something there that did not distract from the present building. If we tore down the present building under option two, we would try to save as much of the stone as possible from that. We are trying to get additional stone that will match the Legislature, although we haven't got any yet. We would have to keep as much of that as we could, veneer it and cut it in two so that it would cover more of the new building and would be in keeping with the age and character of this building. I would be interested in what the member has in mind back there, either now or when we meet with the members to go over the three proposals.

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Chairman, to respond to the minister, I did say that the members' services committee will be meeting on Thursday. I have sent out a copy of the minister's letter to all members, asking them to come forward with their proposals in writing, if they could make them. I trust by that time we will have a firmer position as to just what is requested by the committee as a whole.

My suggestion was simply as a result of a preliminary meeting when all of us felt that the proposals did not meet the needs of members and, therefore, we are prepared to discuss it. The minister shall have that as soon as we have completed those discussions.

Ms. Bryden: Mr. Chairman, as a member of the members' services committee, it comes home to me very clearly that we have outgrown this building. That is understandable over the years since I believe we are approaching the centenary of this building.

We do have members in very substandard accommodation, in rooms even without windows. My colleague to my right is one of those. We do have very many members who have not what is considered adequate office space for their operations. If we get to the stage, which I hope we will very soon, where members are provided with very necessary assistance in the form of research persons, we will not have space for those research people as part of the members' offices. It is obvious we have outgrown the building and if we want to operate as a modern, efficient Legislature, we do have to look at new proposals.

The members' services committee had three proposals from Government Services and it rejected all of them. The main reason they rejected them is that it appeared they were contemplating a patchup and renovation job. I don't believe a patchup and renovation job can answer the modern needs of members. That is what has been going on in the past. We moved a few civil servants out of this building or out of an adjacent building; we took over space that was designed for completely different purposes; and we tried to patch it up to suit members' needs.

It seems to me if we are going to spend money on new buildings—and one of the proposals was a new civil service tower east of Bay—it should be a tower designed for members, to meet our specific needs and to provide us with efficient office space. I don't see why it should be impossible to design such a tower and at the same time have a building that is compatible with this building. I don't think any of us want to destroy the park-like setting in which this building is located, but it should be possible for an architect to design a tower that could be attached to this building or connected by a tunnel which would fit in with the contours of this building.

In Europe one finds legislative buildings with many additions that have been built over the centuries and, somehow or other, they do harmonize. One does not necessarily get the same colour of stone, but one can get buildings that harmonize.

5:50 p.m.

It seems to me if the ministry does not have architects with enough imagination to develop an east block, a west block or maybe an east and a west block to add to this building, or a single tower that could be compatible, perhaps it should have an architectural competition and get us a building of which we could really be proud. It might be a good idea to have the architectural competition over the next year, so when a new government comes in after the election we will have designs for a building that is designed to meet members' needs. I hope we have that kind of government after the next election.

Mr. Conway: Mr. Chairman, as a member of some five years' standing in this assembly I would like to comment briefly on some of the issues being dealt with here by the minister and the members for St. George and Beaches-Woodbine.

I have been surprised from time to time, and shocked more recently, at the condition of this building in some respects. I happen to be one of those people who was within a couple of minutes of the collapse of the ceiling underneath the main staircase. I noticed, coming up the other day, there is another big crease down the centre of the new plaster. Presumably, that does not betray any weakness in the renovation. But it struck me on that occasion just how in many ways we in this assembly have allowed this building to deteriorate in some significant measure, notwithstanding the improvements that have been made, which the minister has drawn to our attention. I think it important that everything be done to highlight the architectural and other aspects of the historic and working facility.

This summer and fall I spent some time travelling in western Canada and elsewhere in the country. I was impressed by the relative condition of many other legislative chambers. It seems to me our building does not stand the comparison very well. But that is, I suppose, secondary to my main point, which is this continually intolerable condition whereby the jurisdiction for the assembly of the legislative building is shared between the Minister of Government Services and the Speaker of the House. When you think about it, that is ridiculous, untenable and unfortunate.

I think it a first principle that a legislative building should be under the complete, the absolute and the undisputed jurisdiction of the Speaker of the assembly. To me, that is a transparent, unchallengeable reality. That it is not so in this jurisdiction says a lot about the independence of this Legislature. As I look around and see the changes that have occurred here in the past number of years, there is no doubt that because of the shared jurisdiction there continues to be a very determined and quite successful attempt by some to make this not a legislative building so much as an executive office building controlled by the ever-burgeoning first minister's domain, the lower centre of which is located in the second floor of the east wing.

When I think about the proliferation of the executive branch, not in terms of jurisdiction and influence, which is quite a story in itself, but in terms of the physical plan here relative to the principal, prime intention of serving members of the Legislature, I am quite appalled. We have seen a growth in that executive branch here in this building which I think is unacceptable in terms of the amount of space now required to feed the apparently insatiable appetite of the executive branch.

Let me say as well that I do not dispute the right of any minister to have facilities in this building. I think that is a right which must be granted to the Minister of Government Services, to the parliamentary assistant, to the Minister of Energy, to the Minister of Transportation and Communications or whatever. I think they should have an opportunity to find physical space to meet their legislative requirements here in this building. That does not mean to me that under that umbrella they can justify all or most of the ministerial and executive traffic which some see, with some considerable success to effect.

I'm shocked when I look at the condition of some offices of members who have served here for 20 or 25 years—the shabby, shoddy, dysfunctional corners of the north wing—and also the offices of their staff. I am a relatively junior member here, but I think the conditions which the members of my staff and the staffs of the members for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. G. I. Miller) and Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid) share in that corner of the first floor of the north wing are just intolerable. That members of the Legislature of any party and their very limited staff should be relegated to such a humiliating and, as I said, dysfunctional environment is totally unacceptable.

As one member of the Ontario Legislature, I resent the implication that this assembly might be compared with its equivalent in Prince Edward Island or Tasmania or with Perth county council. We are, as I see it, an important legislative assembly. We have an extremely important role to play in terms of our province and as full-time members with full-time staff assistants. I am shocked at the conditions in which many members find themselves, members of all parties and many with considerable seniority and standing. That they should be driven into near hovels in the north wing, I find totally objectional. At the same time, the burgeoning empire of the executive branch, in its multi-tiered, carpeted splendour, sprawls ever widely across the entirety, it seems, of the east wing. I think we are not doing justice to the prime function which is a legislative assembly building.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Have you told the other members that?

Mr. Conway: I speak as a private member in this debate and I think the Minister of Government Services would do well to realize that. But I find unacceptable the suggestion that members of the assembly should be packaged off to the Whitney Block or some new complex on the corner of Bay and Wellesley or the old Hydro building downtown, while hundreds of bureaucratic minions reside in the legislative building itself.

Speaking as a private member, I want to reiterate my concern about the continuance of the shared jurisdiction here between the Minister of Government Services and the Speaker of the assembly, a jurisdiction which I believe should not be shared. A jurisdiction over this building should be exclusively in control of the Speaker. I believe the sharing of that has facilitated in a physical sense the unacceptable growth in the executive branch in this facility.

I just wanted to take this opportunity as one private member to express, if nothing else, my resentment over a trend which I think has worked against the better interests of individual private members.

The House recessed at 5:59 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

---

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1980

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

ESTIMATES, MINISTRY OF GOVERNMENT SERVICES

On vote 501, ministry administration program; item 1, main office:

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, the member for Beaches-Woodbine (Ms. Bryden) asked a couple of questions before the House recessed at six o'clock.

We have looked at her suggestion regarding space out in front of the main building. In our opinion, there is not enough space to put two buildings in a horseshoe around the park at the front and still have the Legislature look proper as one comes up University Avenue.

She also mentioned the possibility of researchers. I am told that the space I mentioned earlier this afternoon, the 32,000 additional square feet that were needed for this building, did include every member having 500 square feet, which would give enough room for a researcher as well.

The member for Renfrew North (Mr. Conway) mentioned a few different areas. One was the plaster on the ceiling going out to the north wing. I live in a plastered house myself, and I don't know how from seeing the odd crack one can tell when it is going to fall down. It is pretty difficult. But I am sure he would agree that we try to eliminate a problem before it becomes a disaster as that could have been. The member said he was just a couple of minutes away from being there at the time.

When I first heard of this I asked my deputy if anyone had been hurt. We can repair the building; the main thing was to ensure that no one was hurt in the accident. As far as a crack going into it since it has been up, we will have a look at that. But, having lived in a plastered house, I know it is pretty hard to eliminate those kinds of cracks. I am sure the member must see the odd crack when he visits a friend of mine, as he does occasionally, who lives in a beautiful old home in the town of Perth. I am sure the judge's wife and family aren't afraid that plaster is going to fall down because they see a crack.

I was pleased the member mentioned the county council chambers in Perth. I know we don't have the fanciest in the world, but I would ask the member some time to go and have a look. They did fix it up, but it is not as fancy as some other county chambers I myself have seen. I don't think he really meant some of the things he said about the condition of this building when he mentioned that he had visited other legislatures across the country, as I mentioned earlier this afternoon that I had. Maybe I am prejudiced, but I think our Legislature can stand up to most of them.

Some of the designs are a little different from ours but, as I walked through the ones I visited, I thought they could take a few lessons from us. For instance, the way we have our art displayed, from a visitor's standpoint as he comes through the building, I think is very interesting and educational for all our visitors to see. When I was in the two legislatures I mentioned, they seemed cold. There were very few pictures, very few things on the wall that would interest visitors, other than a lot of marble and so on.

When it comes to members' accommodation, as I said earlier this afternoon, I feel we do not have to take a second seat to the ones I have seen. That is not to say that in the case of the seven members we have in inner offices we should not try to eliminate those conditions as soon as we can. I believe that is what we are trying to do with the three proposals we brought in. Whenever we get discussing those again with the Board of Internal Economy and the members' services committee, I hope we will end up with some constructive ideas to add to our own and get on with the job of providing additional space for members.

Mr. Conway: The minister has drawn my attention and the attention of the House to a couple of things which I think deserve to be responded to very briefly. I would appreciate some comment from him because what he had to say, for example, about art is of some interest to me.

Not too long ago it was mentioned to me that the rather splendid art collection, which is now publicly housed in the halls of this particular building, is in considerable jeopardy and threat as a result of little or no control. I was told by one person, whose judgement on these matters I would normally respect, that the process by which these very valuable, important and attractive paintings are allowed to hang in the hallways in the worst of Toronto's summer humidity without very much climate control will very seriously and negatively affect the quality of the art work over time. Since the Minister of Government Services brought that to the attention of the House, I wonder whether he has a view on the prospect of problems in that connection.

I want to say as well that he commented about the Perth town chambers. It was a fault on my part. I was simply suggesting the Lanark county chambers by reference, only to suggest that we here in this legislative chamber have an extremely important mandate and jurisdiction. To compare it with other less immediate points of reference does not serve a very useful purpose as far as I am concerned.

I do not agree with him and I just want to reiterate my feelings about the building. I was surveying my own empire back in the north wing over the dinner hour. I know that my assistant would be angry if she knew I was in one way or another invoking her for part of this debate, but the conditions in which those three assistants are forced to manage in that particular part of this building are intolerable.

One imagines the executive washroom at the ministry as being more spacious than the entire ante-room of the three members in question in the north wing. I have to reiterate my disgust at some of the conditions that are prevalent here as far as members are concerned and to reiterate my unhappiness about the very successful, skilful and determined efforts by some to render this legislative building not so much as a place for private members as legislators as in the first instance an executive office building to meet the ever-growing requirements of the first minister.

I want to conclude my remarks by simply saying again that I think much could be served if the split jurisdiction of this building could be ended in the very near future and the Speaker of the assembly, representing each and every one of us, could be given complete and absolute control over a building which in most other cases and most other jurisdictions, as I understand it, is indeed the unchallenged preserve of the Speaker as well.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, in regard to the member's remarks on climate control and the protection of our art, I think we are all concerned about that. We have spent a lot of money over the last few years restoring it. We have an art consultant who has done a good job placing it and seeing that it is properly refinished. As we said this afternoon, for us to put in central air conditioning and do some of the things my predecessor had mentioned would necessitate three phases within the building itself and involve quite a heavy cost.

Wherever we are renovating at the present time, we are putting in a better system of air conditioning than window units. Millions of dollars would have to be invested, and there would be a lot of inconvenience to the members here if we went the other route. If we follow the proposal the member for Sudbury East (Mr. Martel) made this afternoon, proposal number two, and have extra—I believe it is 147,000 square feet, when we predicted we need 32,000 to look after the members—we will have some room to move around, if that suggestion is supported by the members of the Legislature and cabinet.

Mr. Conway: On that point, Mr. Chairman, I wonder aloud whether or not any analysis or any cost benefit has been done by the ministry to see whether the cost of a partially or more significantly ruined art collection has been determined as compared to the cost of making this building what it is now being asked to become, that is, an art gallery. It seems to me if we are going to display what I assume are hundreds or thousands or millions of dollars worth of art here in this building, then we have to at least consider the improvements that go along with an art gallery structure.

Recognizing the cost factor, and I think we are all sensitive to that, has any analysis been done about the impact and the cost of a partially or otherwise ruined art collection as a result of long-time exposure to conditions that are very deleterious to the quality of the materials?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: If I could briefly speak to that, Mr. Chairman, this afternoon for about two and a half hours I heard that my number one concern should be for the members in this Legislature. I said a little while ago if we were to do this it would mean a three-stage construction and members would be uprooted. I know our art collection is important to us, but I think we are really talking out of both sides of our mouths if we say, in this case, the art is more important than the members. Maybe I didn't hear that right. They are both important, but I think this afternoon the message I got was the members are number one.

Mr. Conway: Don't misunderstand me. I just wonder aloud whether you have any understanding or any feeling for the impact of displaying very valuable, important and historic Ontario and Canadian art collections over time in a facility that is not constructed for that kind of display. I am not at all suggesting that you rush out immediately and spend vast sums of money. What I am wondering about is the potential impact of ruining the art collection by housing it in a place that is not constructed for such a display.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: We will look into the member's suggestion.

Mr. Warner: Mr. Chairman, I have just a couple of things. Perhaps I missed it along the way, but I am wondering whether the minister said he is now prepared to relinquish those parts of the building at present under the control of the Ministry of Government Services to the Speaker of the assembly. Is that what you mentioned in your response?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: No.

Mr. Warner: Is there any particular reason why you are not prepared to do that?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I feel very much like my predecessors. I feel it is working quite well the way it is. Some members don't agree but I happen to feel it is. I guess it really boils down to your view against mine, but I think there are pros and cons and I think the members are well looked after with the Ministry of Government Services looking after the portion as at present.

Mr. Warner: I understand clearly now. The double standard will prevail: the higher standard for the government members and particularly ministers, and the lower standard for the rest of the members of the assembly. I object to that and I will continue to object to that. Only when all of the building comes under the direction of Mr. Speaker will each of the members of the assembly be treated equally.

In my opening remarks, Mr. Chairman, I said I would like some discussion on procurement policy and the minister perhaps hasn't had a chance to respond to that. I was wondering if he could open up that discussion on what he has done in terms of a procurement policy, particularly as it relates to Ontario-based small businesses.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, it might be of interest to the members to see where the additional space went after my predecessor talked about space, some of the secretariats were moved out downstairs and I became Minister of Government Services and was moved over to the Whitney Block. We have broken it down in percentages. The Legislative Assembly got an increase of 181 per cent; the Legislative Library got 23 per cent; the assistant clerks to the Clerk of the House got 31 per cent; the Progressive Conservative caucus got 39; the Liberal caucus got 30 per cent and the NDP got 25 per cent. I wonder, in the light of those percentages, if the honourable member would be better looked after having someone else look after a larger portion of the Legislature.

Mr. Warner: Come and visit our little closets in the north wing.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I visited there with your House leader, the member for Sudbury East (Mr. Martel), and I did make a commitment that we would try to improve the look of those offices. I went back and talked two or three times with our interior decorator about getting the work done on those seven inner offices and we didn't get very much support for doing it. I know we can't put outside windows where they are, but I think in the meantime, when we are talking about possible extra space for members, we should have got some co-operation to make those offices a little better for the seven members. To my knowledge we didn't get that.

Mr. Conway: How do you propose to give them a window?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: That will be in the future, but a lot of improvements could have been made with just a little bit of help from our interior decorator and so on.

As for a purchasing policy, we don't have a buy-Ontario policy but we do have a buy-Canada preference of about 10 per cent. We do not have one province to province.

8:20 p.m.

Mr. Warner: Mr. Chairman, I think perhaps the minister misunderstood my question. What I wanted to know is whether the ministry has a firm policy with respect to small businesses situated in Ontario; that is, do they get preferential treatment in any way? Do you make sure the first opportunity for tendering for a Ministry of Government Services project goes to Ontario-based small businesses, ahead of foreign-owned companies or large corporations? That is really what I was asking. Do you have some guideline, policy or some preferential treatment for Ontario-based small businesses?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, any small business that writes, which is not already on our list, asking to tender when tenders come up is added to the list. Many of the members opposite have written to me asking if So-and-so could be put on our tendering list, and this has always been done. In that way we try to include the small businesses. As you know now, we have even gone to paying interest. We hope there are not too many overdue accounts, but to help all businesses, not just small businesses, if there is a case where we have not paid in the allotted time, we pay the interest on that account. They do have a chance to take a business approach. Being a businessman myself, you have to put your own foot forward and at least apply and say you are interested in government work, if and when it comes up, and that you are willing to tender for it.

Mr. Warner: There seems to be a little communication problem, Mr. Chairman. If I am correct, in the United States of America there is a policy of the federal government in the country that a certain percentage of government contracts which go up for tender will be restricted to small business operations by their definition of small business. What I would like to know is whether or not this government has a policy that a certain percentage of the work that it puts out for tender from the Ministry of Government Services will be designated for small business, preferably Ontario-based, but beyond that, Canadian-based. In that way there is some guarantee that the small businesses, by our definition of small business, will be guaranteed some percentage of the business with the Ontario government.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, 55 to 60 per cent of our purchases are made from small businesses. This happens because out in the regions the directors up to a certain level can buy locally, and do. So again being a small businessman, that percentage looks pretty good to me.

Mr. Warner: But there is no guideline.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I do not know. I have met with my federal colleagues and my other provincial colleagues. I have had the opportunity to meet with them twice, in New Brunswick last year and this year in Winnipeg. Many of these things were discussed, but I do not recall any of them ever saying they had guidelines similar to what you have mentioned. Perhaps they do, but I am not aware that they ever spoke about it.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few comments to the minister and elicit his consideration of the recommendations or suggestions I would make to him.

In the first instance, Mr. Minister, have you given any consideration at all, in the period you have been the Minister of Government Services, to updating the method of voting in this House? We rise, we bow to the Speaker and we go through that tortuous routine. Maybe it is not tortuous; maybe it is good for us from the physical fitness point of view.

When one goes to the various states in the United States and sees the method they use in their legislative chambers, one wonders whether we are going to stay in the fifteenth century or whether we are going to move into the nineteenth century and hopefully the twentieth or twenty-first century.

Mr. Chairman: I have been listening to the honourable member and I feel this comes under the standing orders rather than this particular ministry.

Mr. B. Newman: If you want to rule me out of order, Mr. Chairman, that is quite all right. I will make a different type of comment.

It concerns improvements to the building itself. Is the minister considering the provision of an area in the building for the fitness of members? I can recall being on a committee that looked into it years ago when the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Henderson) was the Minister of Government Services. Also, in the last several years, the member for Armourdale (Mr. McCaffrey) chaired a committee that looked into the provision of fitness facilities for the members. What has happened to the studies and recommendations made concerning that?

May I have your answers to the few questions I have asked?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I am told my predecessors looked into that and checked it out with the Management Board of Cabinet, but we were never able to get financing for that. I know the honourable member exercises regularly himself. Perhaps, as we look across and see we all have a little tighter fit to the suit, something like this would be really good.

Over the supper hour, I was talking to one or two of the staff who jog every day. My deputy minister does his regular exercises. I do not know whether he is trying to tell me that as minister I should be doing the same.

It would be nice to have that to keep us all fit but, at the present time, I am told,

Management Board has not seen fit to grant us the money for that. The other reason may be space in the building. Perhaps when we get settled on where we are going as far as the three proposals are concerned, something like that might be looked at in the future.

Mr. Chairman: Is the member for Windsor-Walkerville finished?

Mr. B. Newman: That is all. I cannot get answers anyway.

Mr. Lawlor: I would like to put my spoke into the wheel on that same subject for a moment or two. The number of pear-shaped individuals around here is atrocious. It is difficult to contend with this. As far as I can see, there is hardly a single healthy or Atlas-like figure in the whole lot.

While I do not think I will be here to enjoy it, you, as minister, can do a great service to this assembly by having some relatively inexpensive room in the building for that purpose with a couple of machines and a bicycle. We do not need a track or a pool; we just need a few contraptions. You supply them in abundance to every high school in the province, but we do not seem to be able to get one here.

We could take an hour or two off or slip in between committee meetings, et cetera, and have a spurt of exercise. It is enormously valuable, stimulating and even makes the brain work on occasion.

As I remember, there were gestures towards Hart House at the University of Toronto for all of us to take out membership in those facilities. Some members of this House already belong and play squash and other games there. In our caucus, I remember signing a document in a sense petitioning for this particular scheme. I think it was found to be unduly expensive, taking out that kind of membership for all members of the House, particularly when some might not use it, so it came to naught.

8:30 p.m.

There is a lot of emphasis on health and health facilities these days with people being toned up and the sight of all the walkers on the landscape. None of them are colleagues of mine, so far as I can see. Very few of them even take bicycles, like certain former mayors of Toronto, as a kind of exemplary exercise to show us what a bunch of slouchers we are.

In the future, while I fall into desuetude and begin to decline into a sedentary life, as I trust it will be, I think you can give some stimulation to this place—God knows, something is necessary—and open a small gym in a room downstairs somewhere. Surely there are areas in that basement which are not being utilized. It may even have the beneficial effect, instead of them talking so much, of actually getting rid of some of that excess energy in a purely positive way, lifting all our burdens including that of the flesh.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I would say yes right off the bat if I was sure the last statement from the member for Lakeshore was correct. I refer to the remark that if we had regular exercise in the gym, it would get rid of a lot of the extra talking—we would wear it off in the gym instead of in here or other places. Even although I look a little overweight I try to get exercise on weekends so I am not opposed to it. We will look at it, although we can't move very far without money from Management Board. But we will look into it and see what can be done.

Mr. Lawlor: There is just one further sentence: I always used to think the most beneficial thing about election campaigns was the loss of avoirdupois at the end of the campaign. We can always lose 20 pounds, so the more campaigns the better.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to pursue this problem. The first speech I ever made in this House back in 1960 was based on fitness. The government promised to act on that but never has.

I cannot understand where we would spend $600,000 to try to convince people not to smoke and then we ourselves, as members, cannot convince the minister and his government to put aside some small portion or some small area in this building and the minimum amount of equipment. I just don't understand what is wrong with you people. Is the minister not concerned for the health and welfare of his own colleagues?

Mr. Chairman, can I have an assurance from the minister that he will pursue this with his cabinet colleagues so that maybe in the twenty-first century, if not in the immediate future, something will be done in here?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I think I said I would look into it. I am just as concerned as all the members in the House and as my colleagues over there. I like to see those smiling faces on the other side too. Perhaps if we exercised, from what the member for Lakeshore said, we would have a happier, healthier House. We will look into it—perhaps for the clerks as well.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Chairman, I guess as a pear-shaped contraption who has come here a little more recently from the world outside, I would like to return briefly to the state of this building. I get a fair bit of exercise running around the north wing of this building.

Certainly, there are very serious space problems, and some of those have already been touched on. They are space problems to the extent that when a parliamentary intern decides she wishes to come and work in my office for two or three months we literally have to find room in a broom closet because there is nowhere else. The space problem is so serious that when, simultaneously, a social work student from my riding wants to spend as little as one day a week working in my office to find out how this place works and what we do here, there is absolutely nowhere for her to sit except by sharing a desk with my assistant.

But space problems aside, the back end of this building is positively seedy. It is so bad it would not be accepted in any business, nonprofit organization, local government or anything else. It would not be accepted anywhere else.

To start from the bottom and move up, we have a carpet that has holes in it. It has patches of black plastic stuck over it to repair the holes. There are cigarette burns all over the place. Last week, along every join in the carpet, were little strips of invisible Scotch tape. It is invisible when you put it on paper but it looks terrible when you put it on the carpet. This week they put strips of the black plastic Scotch tape you buy from Canadian Tire along every join in the carpet.

Then we move up to the walls. The walls are yellowing. I should not say this with my colleagues around but I guess I have become used to offices that do not have windows. I am prepared, temporarily, to put up with the fact that there is not a window in my office, but when you look at the dirty, yellowing walls that have nail holes, pin holes and everything all over them you have to wonder what kind of place this is.

Then you look at the furniture. The method by which your ministry provides furniture to members opposite, Mr. Minister, is just incredible.

I do not know whether you ever tried to get a bookshelf, but three weeks ago, because of the burgeoning volume of paper in my office, I decided it was appropriate to try to obtain another bookshelf in order to hold some of the paper. It might have been better to throw some of it out but I decided that a little bit of what the government puts out is worth keeping so we can throw it back at you when the time comes. Mr. Minister, you would not believe the hassle you go through. The bookshelf arrived right enough, but the shelf that goes in the middle was two inches too short. After some phone calls and the like, they took it away and brought another one that is three inches too short. To this day I have a bookshelf with a centre shelf that is three inches too short, and it won't stay up. It is useless.

That is just one example, Mr. Minister. We have tried from time to time to get bits and pieces of furniture repaired or replaced when problems arise. There are always those kinds of problems.

Then we come to the ceiling, which is yellowing. Around every one of the air vents in the ceiling there is a big black mark where the soot that has come out of the air ducts has deposited itself on the ceiling.

I am prepared to accept that we do not need plush offices like those of the chairman of Imperial Oil, or even plush offices like those of some of the aldermen in the city of Hamilton. But I do think there is a responsibility on the government of the province to make sure the place does not look like a dump, so that when our constituents come to see us—some of whom may not even be our supporters; Tories do come and talk to me occasionally—and they look at the surroundings, they won't have to think to themselves, "What kind of a place is this?"

I hope you will really try to find a way of at least cleaning up the area that is there now so we can feel comfortable in it, instead of feeling we have to cower in the corner and keep blaming the mess on your government.

8:40 p.m.

I want to touch on one other matter that relates to the building. That is the problem of energy conservation. Does the minister know that every single night of the week in the north wing the janitor comes around, opens all the doors, turns on all the lights and leaves those lights on from 6 p.m., when he comes around, until 11 p.m. or midnight when he comes around to lock up the doors? Every single night, every office light in the north wing is burning regardless of whether the member is in the building. I have talked to him about this and he is a very reasonable and likeable man. He assures me this is the instruction he has received, that he is required to come around every night and to turn all the lights on and to leave them on for the entire evening.

I see other examples as I walk around this building in the evenings, where lights are left on unnecessarily, where energy is wasted unnecessarily. I hope the minister will look into that and find a way whereby we in this House can set an example in energy conservation, instead of being seen to be wasting it in an unnecessary and inappropriate fashion. I say to him, please make this place a little more habitable than it is now.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, many of the areas that the honourable member has mentioned really come under the jurisdiction of the Speaker and the Board of Internal Economy. I think if he talks to his representative, his House leader, the member for Sudbury East and mentions the furniture and this sort of thing, he will probably get it corrected.

As to the paint, when work needs to be done in that area, if we are requested to do it, we will. We try on a rotating basis to paint the different areas. I did say earlier this afternoon, perhaps the member was not here, that in regard to the seven inner offices, I made a commitment when I went around with his House leader and I believe—maybe not the leader of the Liberal Party, but some representative was there—

Mr. Nixon: To paint windows on inner offices.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I mentioned that, not to make windows, but to put in artificial windows or something to spruce them up a little for you. At that time, we did not receive, or our interior decorator did not receive, very much co-operation.

The member was talking to me about all those cigarette burns. I do not smoke, but it must be people in the offices who tramp them into the floor, or visitors. I am sure it is not the Minister of Government Services who is doing that. Perhaps a little discipline within the area would get away from those cigarette burns.

As far as the lights go, when I was in the north wing there was quite a hullabaloo, even by myself when I came in at night. Whether the House is sitting or not, most members still work in their offices, at crazy times maybe, or so our constituents would think. Some of them think we have very short hours, but we all know they are quite long. You can come over here at different times and see members using those offices.

I think the lights are on to make sure those members who are coming in or are there are not having to walk out through the halls in the dark, or come into a dark office. After all, we do have some ladies in all of our caucuses, and it may not just be the ladies who are nervous in the dark. Some of the rest of us cannot find our way around as well. I know when I was there, somebody would turn the lights off and you would hear a holler from one of the offices, "Turn those lights on," and a few adjectives sometimes that did not fit the occasion.

For the honourable member to know what we are doing in energy conservation or other areas, we are trying to help. I think he was out of the House this afternoon when I mentioned that next year we will be starting out on changing all our windows in the building and it will be a two-year program. As some of the honourable members mentioned, a draught is coming in around some of the windows. In the north wing you have a newer section so it is not as draughty as in some other parts in the front. We will have the windows replaced next year and in the following year.

I think I have covered most of the areas. The member should approach his House leader and the Board of Internal Economy about some of the problems he mentioned.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Chairman, I wish to respond to a couple of items. With regard to artificial windows, forget that. I really don't need to be fooled, thank you very much.

On the matter of lights, I recognize there may be some members who would prefer to come into lighted offices if they know they are going to be coming back later in the evening. But it really irks me to leave my office at 5:30 p.m. or 6 p.m., deliberately to turn the light out, as I always do, only to come back later in the evening and find the light has been turned on because the janitor or security person has been instructed to turn all the lights on.

That seems to me to be an absurd waste. I would draw the minister's attention to the "Save" program that has been implemented by the University of Toronto, one of whose offices I used to occupy. There the "Save" sticker, put on a light switch, means, "Don't turn it on unless you need it turned on." It is a very good program, one I would commend to the minister's attention for possible implementation in this building.

There was one other matter I intended to mention but which I forgot as I talked about the state of the building. I will be very brief. It relates to the state of the windows, particularly the very large window located on the north staircase of this building, at the far north end over the north door. Every time I go out of that doorway I look up and look out through the window, seeing the sun, or the stars or the clouds and every time my immediate reaction is that it is snowing outside. That window hasn't been cleaned in 37 years and there is a large population of pigeons living out there. It's a real mess. Perhaps the minister could take a look at that too.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I have lived and still live on a farm. I'm sure the honourable member opposite knows pigeons do gather and, if that window is washed on Monday, by the weekend it could be that way again. I can say without even checking that it has been washed in the last 37 years, but we'll check it again.

We did have a problem at the front of the building. We think we have corrected that.

Mr. Makarchuk: They've all moved to the back.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: One would think they were taking target practice.

On the matter of lighting, I listened all afternoon to people telling me whom I should be putting first—and that was the members. Is it more important for a member to come into his or her office and have it lit than to have what the member for Wentworth mentioned? I heard this afternoon from someone that one of his staff had tripped or fallen. I think it was over a rug, but it could have been in the dark.

I've been through the building fairly late at night at different times and it is seldom that as one comes in the east door one does not see that there are a fair number of members here, even on weekends.

We can look into it, if that is really the member's wish, but I have been told again this afternoon to look after the members and that is what I feel we are doing in this instance.

Mr. Nixon: I know you would agree with me, Mr. Chairman, that this is a very stimulating debate. Almost every comment back and forth makes one think of something one would like to contribute.

I was actually afraid that, in the temporary absence of the member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell), who is busy about the affairs of her constituency this evening, her point of view would not be adequately put forward. Having heard the member for Renfrew North, I need not have feared. I had not actually realized his accommodation was so bad. I had the office right next to it, which was a bit bigger than his, since I was a bit senior. I can see it would be inadequate under many circumstances.

8:50 p.m.

But I tell you, I have difficulty in supporting my colleague, and not just the member for Renfrew North but others who have spoken about office accommodation. I will have more to say about it, but my experience here is, the better the offices, the fewer people participate in this House. I am not sure what the correlation is but when you have an air-conditioned office, and they are air-conditioned in the north wing, and you have easy telephone access to your constituency, which is not true for all constituencies but is for some, there is a tendency to make what you call "one more call."

Mind you, even an important subject, a gripping subject of provincial importance of the type we are discussing tonight, you can see does not command the attendance and attention of the number of members one would expect. Even on the government side there are a few empty seats on an occasion such as this. It has to concern us. Frankly, it does concern me, I say most seriously, when we have the kind of debates where any reasonable person would expect all members to attend if possible. I am talking about the inauguration of constitutional debates and certain of the estimates and certain bills that really are of provincial importance. Still, we have somehow conditioned ourselves that other things, whatever they are, are important.

It is almost like employees who have two jobs. It never works because they are never at either place and each boss expects they are at the other job. I do not make that very clear, but when we defend ourselves against the criticisms that come from the gallery, when our friends and constituents come in and say, "I did not see you in your seat," or, "My God, there were a lot of empty seats and there was even one member reading a newspaper,"—of all heinous things to do—we have to explain to everybody that we are extremely busy. As the member has already said, we work far into the night and often on the weekends there are a number of committees functioning. We all know how valid and invalid those reasons are.

In my view, the excellence of office accommodation leads members more and more to become servants of their constituents, which obviously we are, rather than legislators, which too few of us tend to be. While we all pride ourselves in being able to contribute to a debate such as this, even without elaborate preparation, still it seems to me we tend to forget that our first responsibility is to be in here arguing about different points of view and putting forward an alternative on a political basis. I think that has to be the most important thing. After all, we are provided with constituency offices and secretaries here and there and all our phone bills are paid. We have people to deal with a good many of the routine matters.

A lot of the very wise members, particularly those who have survived, know when they deal with those matters themselves and it is their voice on the phone and their signature on the letter, with copies to all and sundry who might even be remotely interested in the subject, that that is the way to maintain the kind of service that all people really appreciate.

So I return to the point: the more elaborate our facilities are as individual members to do that part of the work, the more our duties as members in this House suffer. I simply put that point and I find I am a bit torn. As the honourable minister knows and the member for Renfrew North knows, I have a satisfactory office, very close to the House. It is not that big but it is big enough. As I look out through the enormous window all I can see is the new headquarters for Ontario Hydro. If you know anything about my political background, you know it keeps me humble.

I am well provided for and many members are reasonably well provided for. Whoever built and designed the north wing, except for its façade or outer structure, did not do us a service. The fact that they even put it on a different level with the original plan was a mistake—I will not say a stupid mistake, because there might have been reasons—but we feel we are going up and down stairs all the time. The honourable member talks about the crummy carpet and dirty walls. All those things are true. A few years ago there was a massive renovation, but the place looked third rate right away.

I worry about that a little bit, but I also worry about the grand luxury of ministers' offices. I don't know whether it ever occurs to you, when you wade through the broadloom and sink in the executive vibrating chair with the big back that almost curls around your ears, that it is really a bit much, a bit ridiculous. I just put it to you. I don't spend a lot of time in ministers' offices, thank goodness. When I get into one, of course, I will have it replaced with nothing but sackcloth and ashes, and I look forward to having the opportunity to do that, but I do think you and your colleagues, in competing one with the other for the very last word in luxury and services, are becoming a little bit close to the border of the area marked "ridiculous." I just advise you, that is one member's opinion.

I want to say something about the building and particularly this chamber. I think this is a gorgeous chamber.

Mr. Haggerty: Except for those television lights. Shoot them out.

Mr. Nixon: Well, there are a few things that bother me, but it really is a grand chamber. I don't think anybody ever comes in here but that he or she feels it is an impressive and suitable centre for the meeting of this assembly. It is much lighter than it used to be, the paintwork and so on is all good, the lighting has been improved, but those of us who do spend some time in here find even these lights get a little bit bothersome at times.

I, for one, would look forward some time to a rearrangement of the interior. Nobody agrees with me on this but I do want to put it forward. One of the recommendations made by the Camp commission on the future of legislative representation was the substantial increase in the number of members. We would have smaller constituencies and the redistribution would be more fairly implemented, but the numbers would be much greater. Of course, they can add more desks. I was interested to see the minister's officials provided us with a plan with a bit of a fourth row over there—that would be for Mickey and a few others—and it was a little bit longer in the ends and so on, so you can add numbers to this.

It is very difficult to make the number of members smaller. Former Premier George Henry did this as an economy measure in 1933. He reduced the House from about 120 members to 90. I believe there were close to 30 seats made redundant. You can imagine the carnage in the Conservative caucus when that came about and the blood-letting in all parts of the province when it came to nominations in the election. It turned out to be all academic because that was the election in which Mitch Hepburn came forward and all the Tories were slaughtered anyway, just as we are going to do in 1981.

The concept of having more members here does not bother me too much. I think it would be an excellent idea.

I would also like us to consider some time, particularly if we are going to have individual offices, as we have and we will have—and they are going to get better because I know the minister is going to respond to the complaints from a number of members, valid as they are—that perhaps we do not need the individual sort of seat and desk, individual microphone and individual everything that we have. It is obviously redundant most of the time, irrelevant, unnecessary, because there is nobody here. For a debate like this, I almost feel we ought to go down to a committee room and we could have a much easier discussion without using all of these grand facilities. But it is nice to be in here. We are elected as members of this House and we like to participate.

I would like to see this all done away with and replaced by benches à la Westminster. I suppose certain areas are reserved for the leadership in the government and the opposition, but essentially all the members are equal. If there is not a big crowd, you gather close to the table and the debate takes place, instead of having somebody dozing in the back and somebody reading at the end. I think it would be far better for all sorts of reasons if we could simply make it a better debating hall. You can imagine there would be plenty of room for more members and on grand occasions it would be even grander than it is now.

I am aware that nobody agrees with that concept, but having had an opportunity to examine the system at Westminster for a period of time, I was extremely impressed with the different attitude and the different qualities that are possible in that other system. As the arguments go on over the years, there might be an opportunity for us even to consider that.

When I was a boy and sitting in this gallery, these desks were arranged in a U. There was no public address system at all and it seemed to be easier for the individual members to communicate without a PA system. They didn't bother with such fancy frills as Hansard or anything like that in those days. We have come a long way since then, until every word that is uttered is taken down like a great pearl of wisdom, as it sometimes is, and preserved for all time.

Mr. Conway: Even some of the interjections.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, although not all.

I would agree with the comments that have been made about using all the facilities of this building for the members. Yet since this building is seen in the eyes of everyone, and in my own mind, as the seat of government, I believe the Premier (Mr. Davis) and his office and his ministers have every right to be here. Frankly, if I were to think of myself as one of those some time in the not too distant future, while I would have great respect for Mr. Speaker, I still feel our system calls for His Honour's chief advisers to have the power to recommend to His Honour that they be provided with the facilities they feel they need. The members of the House, through their spokesman, have the right similarly to be provided as they see fit with the facilities they need.

I am not one of those who feels Mr. Speaker has to have complete jurisdiction over everything in the Legislative Building. I think the cabinet ministers still have some rights. If we lose the next election, I might change my mind about that and push you right out, but I do feel that way.

As a matter of fact, it has changed dramatically. In the early days, the former member for Brant used to say, there were no offices for private members at all but the cabinet ministers had apartments in the building. They would bring the wife and family down and the wife would be cooking flapjacks in the morning. This building was far too big for the necessities of government as recently, let's say, as 1919, which is just the day before yesterday in the chronology of history.

We have come a long way since then. I do believe the way to find enough space in this building to house and serve the private members adequately is to persuade some of the cabinet ministers and some of the legislative officers to give over some of the space they use. Somebody pointed out, and it struck me as a good analogy, that we don't need three or four offices full of busy little beavers up the hall on the second floor addressing next year's Christmas cards for the Premier, and performing all those important duties that go on, when they could very well be elsewhere doing the duties that the Premier and his executive officers require.

Of course, I believe the Premier has to have his office. I don't blame him for having a cabinet meeting here and the important offices around him. But as I walk up and down the hallways of the east wing, I think he has too much space; I really do. I think it's a waste when we are looking with such difficulty for just a few extra square feet to provide properly for private members.

I think a reasonable discussion is all that is needed, and you are the man to do it. Take the Premier aside and explain to him that you will provide for his acre and a half of ladies who are addressing Christmas cards and answering all that great mail he gets. Tell him they could do it somewhere else. I really think that is so.

Mr. Conway: Let the record show that the minister is laughing.

Mr. Nixon: He's laughing at the prospect of telling the Premier something; that's for sure. He may not disagree entirely with the concept.

I also want to say something about the art that has got my colleague from Renfrew

North in such a furore because the humidity is just not right. It's an interesting argument, but I am really delighted that you or somebody has pulled those old chestnuts out of the gallery. I do not really think it is great art. Maybe it is, particularly now that representational art is a bit more in vogue.

I see you have even taken that monstrosity down at the end of the second floor. There is only one other monstrosity to take down and that is the portrait of John Robarts. I would be willing to move in this House that we allocate $40 or $50 for a new portrait just to replace that terrible thing that is sitting there. When I take my friends there, even though they are great Grits, they do not think we have done John Robarts a great service by hanging that terrible painting. He looks like the President of Egypt looking over the great pyramids. It really is terrible.

The one you must finally remove is the one across the hall. It has to be about 35 square feet of crimson paint with a yellow line that looks like nothing more than a nude lying on her back in the sand. You just pull it out some time. Of course, some people have more imagination than others.

There is one minor complaint and it has to do with a very fine painting that hangs out on the NDP side of the lobby here. It is of turkeys. Was there something in mind that made your art expert decide to hang the turkeys in the NDP lobby? It is a very fine painting, mind you, and they are a hell of a lot better turkeys than the ones sitting in the chairs.

Actually some of those pictures are absolutely excellent. My favourite of all is the one that is opposite the door of the gentlemen's retiring room at the end of second floor. It is enormous and it is entitled The Foreclosure of the Mortgage. If anybody has not seen that, just spend some time down there because the story will break your heart. There is a little baby in the crib and the poor old daddy is absolutely done in. He is in bed, the ladies are around, and it is game over in a way that could not be portrayed in any other way. I do not know what that painting is worth, but if it ever goes up for auction—I well might bid on it; I like it just where it is.

Continuing in a serious vein, the most valuable paintings we have, in my view, are the portraits of former Lieutenant Governors. There are a lot of good ones of Speakers and Premiers, but the most valuable ones are the ones hanging in the music room of the Lieutenant Governor's suite. Every time we go in there to have a glass of sherry with His Honour when he is giving royal assent I always like to go around and look at those portraits. They are truly excellent and I am sure they are valuable. Of course, we are not concerned because their great value is that they are here in this building.

I also think the portrait just outside the door to the left of John A. Macdonald and the other one of George Brown—and they are very properly placed so they can glare at each other a bit—are also the best portraits of those worthy gentlemen I know of anywhere. They are absolutely outstanding. I want to congratulate whoever had that initiative; I do not recall its being called for from the opposition side, but it should have been. Whoever had the initiative to do that really did something, in my opinion, that was worth while.

The member for Scarborough-Ellesmere was saying he felt the government should consider establishing an appropriate residence for His Honour. I want to be sure my views are known on that just so there is no mistake. I think it would be a very serious mistake for Ontario to undertake that.

Most of us in the course of our various responsibilities have visited other provinces and have been impressed with the majesty and the largess of the governments and taxpayers over the years in all of the provinces except this province. I do not think our Lieutenant Governors, except for a few exceptions, have publicly indicated they were concerned about this.

I was quite pleased to hear our present Lieutenant Governor, when he was sworn in, indicate that he wanted to provide a maximum of service with a minimum of pomp. I should not paraphrase his words, but that is the way I understood them. I think that being the gentleman he is, he certainly would not suggest we should provide him with anything other than the respect we all agree the office deserves.

9:10 p.m.

The last Government House in Ontario was constructed in 1917 and was called Chorley Park. It was built on a beautiful piece of property in Rosedale and, beginning about 1919, the Lieutenant Governors lived there until approximately 1936 or 1937. It was a political issue of the day. Naturally, it was built at the initiative of the Conservative government in office before 1919 and the building was said to have cost a little over $1 million. This seemed to be an extremely large amount indeed, particularly when it was undertaken during the war years.

Looking at some of the old political comments I have had a chance to read over in the last year or two, it was a singularly important issue. The opposition parties in particular somehow got themselves conditioned against the concept of Government House by criticizing the government for such an unwarranted expenditure in those times. That may be why some Liberals tend to react negatively even today to such a suggestion.

When the Liberals took over the seals of office in 1934, it was clear they did not want to continue with the fairly large expenditures associated with the office. The first indication came when the traditional dinner held at Chorley Park by His Honour for the returning members and their wives was boycotted by the Premier and also, under his instruction, by the cabinet. Although the dinner was planned, it was cancelled at the last moment since all the Lieutenant Governor's advisers had indicated by their attitude they did not want it to proceed.

As the war approached, the Lieutenant Governors tended to move away from some of the pomp that had been formerly associated with the office, and since the government was particularly concerned about cutting costs, the trappings of the office tended to be somewhat reduced. During those years, Chorley Park became a hospital. I understand after the war, and I did not research this the way I should have, the condition of the building was such that it was considered wise to have it taken down. That was the end of Government House in Ontario.

There was a time when a well known, well-to-do citizen, Sigmund Samuel, who donated a beautiful museum just across the road, also wanted one of his residences to be donated free of charge to the government for use as a Government House. On examination, it was found that the tax involvement in this regard meant it would cost, in a capital way, a good deal of money. It was decided by the Conservative government of the day, I believe it was Mr. Drew—

Mr. Worton: No, John Robarts.

Mr. Nixon: Robarts was not Premier when Sigmund Samuel was trying to give them the house.

It was decided by the government of the day that it was not going to proceed in that way.

My own feeling is that respect for the Lieutenant Governor in this House and this province has never been at a higher level. People understand the decisions and the power of government are all enacted in the name of the Lieutenant Governor and still the power lies with the people through their elected representatives. Frankly, I get a bit sensitive when I hear the Premier reaffirming his commitment to the concepts of the British tradition and the Queen herself.

Mr. Makarchuk: Is this part of Government Services?

Mr. Nixon: It is difficult even to object to that. On the other hand, since the New Democratic Party already raised the matter of Government House when the member for Brantford was not in attendance, aggrandizing the concept of the office is one we should not seriously consider.

We should provide for the expenses of the Lieutenant Governor, of course, and whatever else is necessary. As much as I believe the apartment the Lieutenant Governor now uses is a beautiful place—I am always impressed when I go in there—essentially, if it became completely necessary, that apartment, which used to be the Speaker's when the Lieutenant Governor was elsewhere, could be turned over for the use of the Speaker, and through him, for the use of all members.

I want to conclude by saying I know the minister and his predecessors have been fooling around for quite a while with property to the east of Bay Street. The government owns that whole block south of Wellesley. It is not one of the finest blocks in the city by way of the buildings there now. It is just a matter of time before one of the ministers gets up the energy, or the nerve, I suppose, to convince his cabinet colleagues to level that block and put up another huge edifice for whatever purpose.

(The needs and requirements of Government Services are never fulfilled. The minister will find the needs and requirements of the members of this House are never really fulfilled and satisfied, but they do continue to improve. We do have buildings around here that can be used. If services must be moved out of this building, and I believe they must, we have buildings already extant close by, not to be used by the members but by those people at present occupying space here who could very well perform their services without being directly in this building.)

I simply want to draw to the minister's attention again that the old Hydro building is even closer to this centre of government than the block he wants to build on the other side of Bay Street. It may not be the kind of building you are looking for, but I notice Hydro has a sign outside saying, "Will remodel for tenant," or something like that. I am sure we could have it made over into whatever we require for those people and and offices that might be moved out of here into that other building. It would be cheaper than levelling that big block east of Bay and putting up another huge building.

I would like to see most of that property kept in park land, if possible anyway, but I know this is going to be developing over the next few months and years. I do believe we can provide for the proper and growing requirements of the members of this Legislature without ripping everything down and without the expenditure of the kinds of funds the minister is talking about when he talks about the new building east of Bay.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Chairman, if we could, I would like to get into each individual vote. I think we've had a pretty good discussion on the needs of members. I was looking over the total expenditures of the minister's budget and it is $287 million. We have been talking for about three and a half hours mostly on this building, which of course is a very important building because of its location and because of the use made of it.

I was going to ask a couple of questions about this building too, about the general construction of the roof and its present condition and what you are going to have to do to maintain that condition. I haven't looked over it completely, but I have made a cursory examination of it and talked to some people around here. I am wondering about the present condition of the building, especially the roof and the supports to it, and how much remodelling it is going to have to have over the next few years. Is the minister aware of that?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, the roof on this main building has to be replaced. I was just asking my deputy if we had an estimate of the cost of replacement, but we have not at the present time. It would be quite costly. I am familiar with a large building near Cartier Square in Ottawa—the armouries, if anyone is familiar with it—where the federal government put a new copper roof on. It cost about three quarters of a million dollars, I understand. With the design and architecture of the roof here, I would imagine it would be quite expensive. At the present time, I would have to say we do not have an accurate estimate of the cost, but it will have to be done soon.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Chairman, could we go to vote 501 and then start down? I know some members want to bring up a couple of items on vote 502. I want to get into leasing, if I can.

Mr. Chairman: Shall I put the question, shall item 1 carry? No? On item 1, the member for Grey.

Mr. McKessock: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I think personnel services would come under vote 501.

Mr. Chairman: Shall item 1 carry or does the honourable member have something under item 1, main office? The member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a very brief comment concerning the building. We dealt with the various aspects of the building during some of the considerations in committee with respect to the Camp commission report. The commission was appointed by this Legislature to look into various aspects to do with the building. We did do some research and spent considerable time with respect to this particular building. Frankly, as far as I am concerned, I think it should be a legislative building, that is, a building that houses the chamber, the offices of the members and all the support staff who go to make up the legislative process.

Members' offices have been mentioned. That was one of the considerations in that particular report. Certainly, I think a lot of them are inadequate. The member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk talked about his office and some of the other offices, and the fact that attendance in this House sometimes is not all that great and is proportional to the grandeur of one's office. If my attendance in this House was conditional on the grandeur of my office, I would be here all the time because my office is not all that great. It is functional, mind you, but barely so. However, I never really complained about that.

It has not been an impediment to me in making one last call; I am always able to do that and carry on my work in the normal course. But I think it would improve the working conditions if one had more space, and if the circumstances surrounding the office were just a little better. I think a little more improvement is needed in that respect. All things come to him who waits so perhaps those things will come in the next little while.

I want to mention the lights, which were discussed previously. It seems to me there is a great waste in terms of lighting in this building. I do not come in often on the weekend—very seldom as a matter of fact, because I am not here; I am in my riding—but on occasions I do come in on the weekend when I happen to be in the city for one reason or the other. It seems to be very good on weekends. The control of the lighting is quite good, but it is not so good during the week.

When I leave my office at night I turn off the lights. My experience is somewhat similar to that of the member for Wentworth. I come back in later at night and he lights are turned on. I think the minister makes a point, but there is no reason the lighting in the halls cannot be left on while the lighting in the members' offices is turned off. After all, when you come in from the hall, the light switch is right inside the door. One should not be stumbling around in the dark if one is in full possession of one's faculties. I think there could be something done there to have instructions left with the supervisory people to make sure the lights in the members' offices are off after normal working hours. That would be a great energy saving.

I have another matter, Mr. Chairman. I think it really comes under the second vote, but if the minister wants to have me deal with it now I will certainly do so. It would save me getting up again.

Mr. Chairman: We have spent a considerable amount of time on item 1.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, a couple of members have mentioned the lighting. I will undertake to look into that. It was my understanding that what I mentioned earlier was the reason for the lights being left on, but if the members feel they should be turned off we will investigate and see what we can do. We are all energy conscious.

I should just mention while I am on my feet, that the Ministry of Government Services has in three years accomplished a 16 per cent saving in energy, which represents many millions of dollars of savings to our taxpayers, which is what we are all interested in. I just wanted members to know that our ministry is doing its part on energy conservation and has very heavy goals to meet in the next two or three years to even further that saving.

Item 1 agreed to.

Items 2 and 3 agreed to.

On item 4, personnel services:

Mr. McKessock: My point under item 4 pertains to when government personnel are transferred from one area to another. It is my understanding that if their house is not sold within a period of time, either they are paid for it or the ministry takes on the job of selling the house.

I know of a case recently where three Ontario Provincial Police officers and one employee from the Ministry of Natural Resources were transferred from the small town of Markdale. The point I wish to bring up is the government lists these houses, I believe it is with National Trust which then sublets them out to real estate firms. The firm is in Owen Sound and the houses I am referring to are in Markdale, which is 20 miles away. It seems to me—and I have had real estate firms contact me on this point,—it would be more logical for the government to give the listings to the real estate firm in the municipality where the houses are rather than have them listed with a company in Owen Sound, which then phones the real estate companies in Markdale to find out the prices of the houses and the Markdale firms do the work on it and yet do not have the listing for the houses.

A similar situation has happened under Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation in the federal government. At that time, I was also contacted by a real estate firm asking if, instead of having them listed with a firm in Owen Sound, they could be listed with the local firm. I contacted the federal minister in charge of the CMHC and they made that change. They have now listed them with the local firm rather than in the larger centre miles away from where the houses are for sale.

My question is, could the minister do the same thing as CMHC did in that regard? If personnel are leaving from any small municipality that has a real estate agent or firm in it, could these houses be listed with them rather than with a real estate firm many miles away?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, for the many cases that we have where employees are transferred from one place to another, we have very few complaints about this. What happens is they both get appraisals done and, providing the appraisal is accepted by both, they would have 90 days for a real estate firm to sell that at that price or higher. If one happened to come in at $50,000 and the other at $52,000, they would probably accept $51,000, using that as an example. If the owner of the house could sell it at $53,000 or $55,000, so be it. He would be ahead of it.

After the 90 days we would guarantee him the $51,000, as I used in the example. He and his wife would then be able to go out and purchase a new home in the area they were transferred to, as well as getting their relocation expenses out of that. Then we would try to sell that house for the $51,000 we paid the person who was transferred.

The member mentioned National Trust. In a high percentage of the cases we do get the appraised value for the house through National Trust which at this time is our agent. There are a few cases where, when we pay, say, the $51,000, conditions change. Maybe it is higher interest rates or employment in that area. In a few cases we have to have a reappraisal and have to accept something other than the $51,000 we paid the employee. All the cases where we do not get what we paid the employee for his or her home have to be submitted to cabinet for approval.

It seems to be working quite well. One I have spoken to seems quite happy. There seems to be a problem sometimes trying to get a house when a person moves from one area to another. I had someone in Brockville who was transferred to an area where he had to pay a higher cost for the same house. To get an equivalent house where the chap was being transferred to was probably going to cost $15,000 more. Those sorts of conditions I think will always happen. I don't know how we get around it. For the most part it is working well.

Mr. McKessock: I am sorry if I did not explain it well enough, but the minister has missed my point. I am speaking for the real estate agent in the small town where the houses are for sale. The agents are complaining to me, asking why the government does not list with them rather than with a real estate agent in Owen Sound. The Owen Sound company calls Markdale to find out what the price of a house is and the Markdale company is really doing the work but it is the Owen Sound company that has the listing. What the local real estate company is saying is it would like to have the listing.

The same thing happened with Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, as I mentioned previously. It was listing its homes for sale with a company in Owen Sound and one of my small towns contacted me and asked if the government could not list with it, instead of with a firm 25 or 30 miles away. At that time I wrote to the federal minister in charge of CMHC and he made that change. Instead of listing in Owen Sound, it now lists with Dundalk, Markdale or Flesherton. If the town has a real estate agent they will list with them rather than taking it 30 miles away.

My question is: Will the minister consider doing the same thing? Rather than have National Trust contact a firm in Owen Sound, if the houses are for sale in Markdale have them contact the agent in Markdale or Dundalk or wherever and list them there rather than 30 miles away.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, we do. Right now I mentioned we are using National Trust, but we do put that out for tender. It is usually the trust companies that get into this because it requires a fair bit of money on their part to carry this. Some of the smaller firms would not be able to do it. I understand they split the commissions with the real estate agents out in the areas. But I am told they have to be tied, in, in some way, with National Trust.

You ask if we would be willing to look at what the federal people are doing. As I mentioned, I think this is working quite well and I feel we should carry on the way we are doing it. I have not had any complaints other than where they go from one district to another where the cost of an equivalent house may be $10,000 to $15,000 more. They have been living in a three-bedroom modern bungalow and they want something the same in another district but the cost is higher. I have some sympathy for that, but I do not know how you would get around it. It is working well and I would not want to give a commitment that we go the same route as the federal people at this time.

Mr. McKessock: Mr. Chairman, I just want to make one further point I know it is working well as far as the personnel are concerned. It is the real estate companies that are upset. Another point is that the keys to the house are in Owen Sound—25 or 35 miles away—and yet there are real estate firms right in that town where the houses are that do not have access to the houses.

They are on a multiple-listing service, that is right. They will split the commission if they sell them, but they feel they should be listed in the local towns where the houses are for sale. As I say, CMHC was doing the same thing you were doing up until this year. After I contacted the federal government and the minister in charge, giving the same presentation as I am giving to you on behalf of the real estate agents, they did make that change. They now list in the local municipalities where the houses are for sale. I would ask if you would consider doing that as well.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, if the member is having a particular problem in his area regarding that, if he were to put it down in writing and send it into us we will see what we can do to try to correct this situation. But I would not give the commitment at this time that we will go the same route as the federal people have done.

Item 4 agreed to.

Items 5 to 10, inclusive, agreed to.

Vote 501 agreed to.

On vote 502, provision of accommodation program:

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Chairman, in your program administration, do you have any different attitude or changes in policy with regard to purchasing or lease buy-back? You are still in the lease buy-back system? I know in one building in Windsor you are leasing it back and at the end of 25 years you own the building. Are you still following that in some areas?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, we have three ways of providing accommodation for ministries and agencies of the government: outright lease; lease purchase, the one the member is talking about; and capital. One only has to look at how much capital we have had in the last few years. Perhaps the member was critic when the capital in our ministry was much greater than it is today. We have had to go to lease purchases on some of our buildings. We have found lease capital the best way to go and lease purchase very close to it.

We probably have the Kingston building on a lease purchase and the Oshawa building for Revenue is a lease purchase. Those are the only two new ones we have on lease purchase this year. There may be one or two in the future that will go to lease purchase, if Management Board agrees. With the limited capital we have, I think the member will agree we will either have to go that way or to straight lease. But lease purchase is better than straight lease.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Chairman, first of all, could I confirm that this is the appropriate vote with regard to the provision of courthouse accommodation? Given that it is, I would like to raise some questions with the minister about the provision of courthouse space in the city of Hamilton for the entire judicial district in Hamilton-Wentworth.

From time to time, my colleagues and I have been assured by your colleague the Attorney General (Mr. McMurtry) that he has been pushing as hard as he is able for additional court space in Hamilton because of the seriously overcrowded accommodation that exists at the moment. Particularly, there are simply too few courtrooms available for the use of the judicial system in Hamilton. I wonder how loudly those pressures from your colleague have been reaching your ears and whether you have been able to respond to them, whether you can respond to us tonight about the need for court space and about your ministry's intention to provide that court space in the very near future.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Perhaps I should explain that we now have a five-year forecast we are trying to follow. In order to get a priority we have it go through the policy fields. Each policy field decides what capital projects are going to be brought forward in that field. That is not to say if something very important comes up that needs to be done one cannot be stood down and another brought up in its place.

I believe the tone at the end of your statement was, "What is Government Services going to do about it?" We seem to have been the people who got it in the neck, so to speak. Now it is up to the policy fields to decide and help us in our five-year forecast as to what they want and what their priorities are within that field.

Knowing that, and having been in the ministry for 15 or 16 months now, I know the demands on added court facilities and changes to our present courts are not just limited to Hamilton. Changes need to be made in a lot of areas. We all know within the ministry that we could probably spend all the capital we have just meeting that one ministry's request of us. But it is really their responsibility to tell us what their priorities are and then we try to meet that priority for them. As far as Hamilton itself is concerned, I will have an answer here for you in a minute, about what priority that is given. Just bear with me for a minute and maybe we could go ahead with another member and then come back to that.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, while the minister is discussing court facilities and so forth, he is certainly aware of the Windsor situation and Windsor's need for additional court space. I did communicate with him and he replied to me by letter dated October 20 that he was going to provide additional court space in the provincial public building located directly across from the provincial courts building in the city of Windsor.

I think the legal profession in the community does not look upon it as a pro tem measure. They look upon the solution to the problem as requiring permanent space and that is why I did mention to you the possibility of leasing the Steinberg building that is directly across from the provincial courts building. The city would be willing to buy the building if you would be willing to rent space in that building because they could use the building for other purposes. Also, the new facilities would have substantial room for expansion, as we anticipate expansion will be necessary in the not too distant future.

Have your officials looked into the possibility of leasing one portion of the Steinberg building—not the whole building because it is not needed at all, but one portion of it so that courtroom facilities could be established there on a permanent basis? It struck me as strange that you were going into the provincial public building when the various offices in that building seem to be clamouring for additional space and apparently you must have dislocated several of the offices in there to provide that space as a resolution to the problem for additional court space in the city of Windsor.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, we were just discussing this. The Attorney General has a backlog in the city of Windsor, as you know, and we are making this space available. It was provided in the Ontario government building. I think it is good to use up our own building at this time when this space is available and is surplus. At such time as we need it for the other ministries that are in that building, then perhaps a suggestion similar to what you have just made would be in line. I think it would be false economy for us to have space in our own building that was not being occupied and go out and rent additional space, but we will keep your thoughts in mind, regarding the building you mentioned and others, for such time as we need more space or have to move them out of our government building there.

Just while I am on my feet, I understand that in Hamilton, if the member is listening, we have had no request, as I understand it from staff, to go ahead with additional courts in the Hamilton area. That is all I can say at this time.

Mr. Warner: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman: Did the minister say that there was no request from the Attorney General for additional court space in the city of Hamilton?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: I am sorry, I will rephrase that. We have had no requirements given to us from the Attorney General's department. That is not to say—I should correct myself—perhaps he needs the space, but we have not had any requirement saying how many courtrooms or whatever are required, if I can just be corrected on that.

9:50 p.m.

Mr. B. Newman: In my questioning of the minister concerning the court space in the Windsor area, I understood there was not sufficient space in that provincial public building. In talking to various people working in the building, they all tell me they are cramped for space in the building. If there is space in there, all well and good. I would not, by any stretch of the imagination, suggest renting other facilities if there are facilities available right in one of the provincial buildings. But my understanding is there was not sufficient space in there. If there is, as you or your officials say, then that is all well and good, but I am fairly positive you are still going to be pressured by the legal fraternity because, from my discussion with them, the amount of space there would not be sufficient for their needs.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, my staff tells me we do have extra space in the Ontario government building in Windsor where we hope to put in this extra courtroom to take care of the backlog. In the Windsor area we are asking the Attorney General to confirm his needs. When we get that information, we will be in a better position to say if any additional courts, besides the one in the Ontario government building, are needed.

Mr. B. Newman: I hope you will not delay in developing those facilities, because the backlog just continues to grow in numbers. Where justice is delayed justice is denied.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, that is why we are going ahead with one courtroom in the Ontario government building at this time, to look after some of that backlog, but we will be looking for a report from the Attorney General as to his exact needs for that area.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Chairman, I am just a little taken aback by the minister's reply on the Hamilton situation. I am not in any sense being critical of the minister, but my colleagues and I have been assured over the months and over the years by the Attorney General that he recognizes there is a serious problem in Hamilton with regard to lack of accommodation for the courts. Indeed we have had very recent acknowledgement, certainly in my interpretation, from the Attorney General that he is aware that the administration of justice in Hamilton-Wentworth is being frustrated by the lack of space.

Yet we hear tonight the Attorney General has not taken the trouble to put together a requisition for space, or whatever the request is, to go to the minister in order to rectify that. That just horrifies me, and I wonder if you could explain a little more what the process might be. What should the Attorney General have done in order to bring to your attention the need for space? Those of us who have the concerns of Hamilton-Wentworth at heart might be able to do something the Attorney General has failed to do, despite the fact he has given us repeated assurances that he is aware of the problem.

I find it quite incredible that there is a situation where there are very serious crime problems in parts of the city, very serious problems recognized by a lot of the lawyers and a lot of the assistant crown's, where there are too many remands and the courts are just not properly dealing with cases that come before them, not because of any inability of the courts themselves, but because they just do not have room to set up sufficient hearings and to deal with justice in a proper way. Then we learn tonight that the Attorney General has been sitting on his hands, that nothing is happening.

Mr. Gaunt: He is out there chasing all that hockey violence.

Mr. Isaacs: Hockey violence may be a problem in some places, but I have to tell the member for Huron-Bruce that hockey violence is not the greatest concern in the city of Hamilton when people are murdered at Hamilton Place. Violence is a serious concern and we need something done about it. It is the view of the police, the legal profession and many of those intimately involved in the administration of justice that one of the serious problems is a lack of court facilities in Hamilton. The courts are overcrowded, they are trying to push too many cases through the physical space that now exists and the problems in dealing with the criminal elements could be overcome, at least in part, if we had more courtrooms.

I hope the minister will initiate something along this line so we can begin to see some progress in dealing with Hamilton's crime problem. I am horrified to learn the Attorney General is not moving in that direction when he has been telling us for so long that he recognizes the problem.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: As I mentioned earlier, the Attorney General could probably use our complete budget as far as capital goes in a lot of areas in the province, including the great county of Lanark. We are usually law-abiding citizens, but we could use another courtroom as well.

I believe it comes down to which is a greater priority. The member for Windsor-Walkerville was talking about the problems they are having in his area. We know what the problems are in Ottawa and other areas.

There are a lot of priorities, and in fairness to the Attorney General, he has to try to put them in some sort of perspective.

For the benefit of the member for Wentworth, I have been given a note that says Mr. B. McLoughlin has been in Hamilton today. He is the accommodation person with the Attorney General's office. He was there looking over the situation as late as today. One has to keep in mind that the Attorney General has a lot of demands made on him and has to put them in their priorities. On any of these two, there would have to be Management Board approval. That has not been sought yet because we have not had the demands.

Mr. Warner: We understand what a priority is. What is so deeply disturbing is to learn the Hamilton court space is not even on the list of priorities. The Attorney General clearly indicated to us he understood the situation in Hamilton and that at least two extra courtrooms were needed.

The problem of violence in Hamilton has been brewing for some time. It is deeply disturbing to the community at large. The minister may or may not be aware of the murder that took place at Hamilton Place. As a result of that murder, the police were urged to crack down on the Parkdale gang and some of the other thugs in the community to try to restore some law and order to that community.

In so doing, we discovered there was a tremendous backlog of cases in the courts in Hamilton. The Attorney General acknowledged in a meeting we had with him that what would help in the Hamilton situation was the establishment of two more courts to try to clear the large backlog that existed.

We now discover he has done absolutely nothing; otherwise, the extra court space would be on your priority list. Maybe it would be at the bottom of the list. Of course, there are courts needed around the province. We all understand that, but at least he should have taken the initiative to forward the request for extra court space in Hamilton to your list of priorities. He should have done that months ago; yet he has done nothing. I am quite shocked.

I want the Minister of Government Services to understand I am not directing my frustration at him. I am hoping that message gets through to the Attorney General because the situation in Hamilton should not be tolerated any longer; it really should not. The people in Hamilton deserve much better.

Mr. B. Newman: Is the Windsor situation all clear as far as Management Board approval is concerned? Will you be using the provincial public building in setting up the additional courtroom facilities? The city would like to know that you will follow up on this rather than waiting for Management Board to come along and give or not give its approval.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: What we are doing in Windsor is a little different from the Hamilton situation. We have to take the Hamilton situation to Management Board when we get the requirements. On the Windsor one, I am told, we do not. The one courtroom I mentioned to the member will be finished and in operation as soon as possible to get rid of the backlog that is there.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, while we are on court houses, everybody has a problem with courthouses. This possibly speaks to the quality of the administration of justice in this province because it is a problem that seems to be common everywhere with the exception of the county of Peel.

As I understand it, the minister has had his officials down at the Brant county courthouse. We don't want a replacement, although perhaps at some time in the future we can use a new one. We do have a nice building with some historical significance to it which fits in well with the landscape in the square next to Victoria Park and so on. The building itself, however, is totally inadequate for the purposes it is supposed to serve in terms of facilities for the female staff, facilities for the judge, air conditioning, matters of security or storage of records. Anything you name, we ain't got it.

I was advised some time ago that your people have been down and certain architects have been hired and plans drawn up and all the things that were supposed to be done were on the road. Could the minister indicate at this time what stage he is at in this matter and when we may see some carpenters, builders, masons, plumbers and electricians on site and the building being renovated?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, the Brant county people have asked us to look at purchasing that building and we will be down to look at it in the future. We have had a lot of requests from different counties about buying the court facilities, because in most cases we take so much of the county building they feel we should take the whole operation. In some cases where they are looking for expansion of the courts that would mean we would need almost 100 per cent of the occupancy of that building.

We are going to have someone go down and have a look. If memory serves me correctly, they were not looking for an answer right away, but they could put it in their long-range forecast for something down the road, to know whether or not we were interested in a possible purchase of that facility.

Mr. Makarchuk: Whatever the situation is—and it seems to change from day to day, or new council to new council—I think initially they wanted something done to the section of the building used for the administration of justice. There were plans in the works that the ministry is going to do some work there. In effect, if you had a safety committee in that building it would probably condemn the building and say the working conditions are dangerous and the facilities, particularly for the female staff, are totally inadequate. Some arguments could be made in terms of health, and so on, where the operations would not be in line with the requirements of the various Ministry of Labour regulations.

I think the county council is interested and perhaps frustrated because it has been waiting for a long time to see what you are going to do with the building. The county chambers are not adequate for them so they want either you or them to take it over completely. I suppose their wish is that the county chambers could be moved into another building or possibly a new downtown redevelopment could be fitted in there. So there are various things down the line.

However, the building itself should be preserved and could possibly be renovated for total use as a court building. As I understand it, what is in the plans is that you are going to discuss purchasing the building and possibly renovating it. Is that the rumour right now, or is there something reasonably concrete on that matter?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Many of the old court buildings would probably not meet the Ontario Building Code standards today. We all realize that. Living in an old town as I do, probably my own in the county would not meet them all. You should be aware that the major improvements in the courthouse would be the responsibility of the county. The lease type improvements, the inside furnishings and so on of the courts, would be ours. That is the way it is broken down. It is too early yet to say whether we are interested. We have not had the money to buy county buildings since I took over the Ministry of Government Services. We have not had the money to purchase these. There were one or two purchased in the past.

We did agree to go down and tell them our intentions of what we would try to do in the future so they could plan. I suppose they would like to know whether we are interested in buying it all out. It may be that they will not go ahead with the improvements if they are going to sell it to us. They will let us do it when we get it. I am only guessing at things like that, but that is probably what would happen.

Mr. G. E. Smith: Mr. Chairman, as the minister may be aware, several years ago his ministry, in co-operation with the Ministry of the Attorney General and the Solicitor General, built a new court facility in Orillia on a leaseback arrangement. At that time, when the plans were being discussed, representatives from your ministry's property branch as well as from the Attorney General's department met with the then mayor of the city of Orillia. I had the privilege of sitting in on the meeting, along with some other people involved with the court facility.

It was indicated at that time, because of the location on Front Street, which is a very busy thoroughfare, that the government would consider a second entrance off a street running parallel to the back of the property. This satisfied the needs of the city council and those at the local level. As a matter of fact, there was property available at the time but I gather, because of the cost of the property and I suppose because of limited budgets, the ministry never went ahead with the second entrance or exit. It is still causing some real problems of heavy congestion. The property in question is no longer available; it has been used for other purposes.

What I am leading up to is how do you or your ministry staff propose to resolve this problem? It would seem, despite what your staff says, there is not really adequate parking on court days when the police are there with their cruisers bringing the prisoners in from Barrie. It is really a tight situation. I think you should be looking further down the road to resolve this problem if you are not already doing so.

I suppose this leads into another proposal that has been given to me. As you are likely aware, there are a number of provincial offices in Orillia, the sales tax office which is using the existing building, the Ministry of Industry and Tourism regional office, maybe half a dozen of them. While I am certain the landlords who rent the space to the various ministries are very happy with it, from time to time people come to me and say, "Why does the government not have a long-range plan to locate all the provincial offices in one building?"

I know this is done in some areas. I am not necessarily recommending it at this point in time, but do you have any policy or any long-range planning, maybe three or five years down the road, that there might be a provincial building in the city of Orillia to house all the government offices? Perhaps you could give some indication of just what your plans might be in the foreseeable or a little more far distant future. I would be interested in your comments.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I understand the court facilities in Orillia are in leased premises, not lease-purchases.

Mr. G. E. Smith: I am sorry, I meant leased. I did not indicate that you were going to purchase it eventually.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: My staff tells me we have looked into the parking there and there seems to be concern among some of the users that there is not adequate parking space. Our formula or criterion for arriving at how many spaces should be available has been met. It is something we can look into and monitor a little more closely. It is in keeping with the formula we use, so many parking spaces for the number of people using them.

I think at most courts on a particular court day, using my own area as an example, you are lucky to get within two blocks in any direction of the court. Again, that is not to say we have a lot of bad people in Lanark county. We will look into the parking area situation.

We have not looked at the consolidation of different ministries in Orillia because we did not think it was large enough yet to do that. We are trying to do it in areas where it seems feasible. As members know, we just opened a new Ontario government building in Sudbury a couple of weeks ago. I believe we have 14 ministries located in that building. It is something we are working towards. It has its pros and cons. Many of the people we lease from at the present time are, I think, providing a good service to us. When you consolidate, all those people are looking for new tenants.

One of the good parts about it is that everyone knows where it is and it has a high profile in the community. They are not spending a lot of time looking around for one particular ministry or the other, such as they would do if you find one ministry here and another somewhere else. That is one of the good things about it. We are doing it where the numbers seem to warrant and where funds are available, or where we can get someone to take it on a lease-purchase.

Mr. G. E. Smith: Just to clarify a point, I was not really suggesting that the minister build a government building. I was thinking of looking at expanding the leased facilities, if they were available in that particular area. I was passing on comments I have received from local people that there would be some convenience to have them in the area. It might be at this point that there would not be additional space in that general area, but I just draw it to the minister's attention that it has been suggested to me that there would be some convenience, particularly where we do have a number of offices in the area.

Certainly it provides some return on investment for some of the smaller landlords in the area and it might prove a hardship to them. I am not recommending it at this point. I am suggesting that perhaps even on a leasing arrangement, you might be taking a look at consolidating the offices in one area.

I am not really that concerned about parking. As you say, you do work on the formula. I do feel that from a safety standpoint, you should continue to monitor the exits and entrances—the one exit which goes out into a busy street—and perhaps be looking at some point in the future to following up the original suggestion that was made that there would be a second entrance and exit. I will leave it with you.

Mr. Deputy Chairman: The member for Huron-Bruce is on a list that Chairman Edighoffer left with me. I have others, so I am not asking you to speak. I am just trying to follow the list which was left for me.

Mr. Gaunt: I have a matter on the second item of the second vote.

Mr. Deputy Chairman: We are on vote 502. I think we can look at the whole vote together.

Mr. Gaunt: In that case, I am on the list. I just wanted to find out what the ministry has done with respect to the former Grandview Training School. I think it is about two miles south of Highway 401, on Highway 24, near downtown Galt.

I did have some communication with the ministry a number of months ago with respect to this particular property. I know the city of Cambridge came and conferred with the minister. I gather a number of other people came in at the same time. I think the regional police commission has taken up some of the property. I think there were a number of other organizations interested in some of the property. I am wondering how it sits at the moment.

Have we made any progress with respect to this particular property? Will the city of Cambridge actually get control of that property and then make their own deal as best they can with other interested parties? What is the situation? What will the price be? I gather it will be market value price, but I am wondering what has been accomplished in the seven or eight months that this matter has been on the minister's platter, so to speak. Have we made any progress? If not, when?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, just about a month ago, or less, I signed the agreement of sale for the regional police force to buy the front part of the lot next to the highway or the main street. As the member is probably well aware, my predecessor and myself met many times with Her Worship and members of her council. My predecessor mentioned, as I have mentioned, that there was no way we could sell that property for one dollar. Her Worship came back again and again, after we had said we could not accept that offer, with the dollar.

I told her there was no use in us continuing the discussion, if that is what it was. We told her we would look at something other than market value. I believe my deputy had discussions with one of the planners or someone from her staff and had come in with a price that would be for limited recreational use for the balance of the property after the regional police force area was sold off. That price was considerably less than market value, with a stipulation in it that if they wanted to use the property for other than the limited uses, they would have to pay market value at that time.

We have had other people who are interested in it. One group that approached me, if it were to purchase it, was interested in turning the area into small apartment building for senior citizens or some other people—they were apartments anyway.

I understood the mayor was going to make a submission to cabinet about it. That is where it stands at present. I would like to do something with it as soon as possible, because it has been sitting there for a considerable length of time. If we do not do something with it soon, I suppose the provincial auditor will be mentioning it, even though we are trying to work with everyone concerned to come to a suitable solution.

Mr. Gaunt: As I understand it, the regional police have taken the front seven acres. You are still negotiating with the city of Cambridge for the remaining part—the price of which has not been exactly determined. It is something less than market value. Is that the state of the nation?

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: That is basically what has happened. But I understand there was a submission that came in after—and I have a copy of it—we had said we would take something less than market value. The fact now skips my mind but it was quite a bit under the market value. Then the mayor and council saw fit to try to go around Government Services again and make a direct appeal to cabinet for the dollar. So until cabinet deals with that, I do not know where it stands.

As soon as it is dealt with and cabinet agrees that the Ministry of Government Services will handle it then I would be prepared—if they are not interested and still appear to be, in my words, playing around with us on it—to put it up for public auction.

Mr. Worton: Mr. Minister, on Friday of last week I had delivered to my residence correspondence and a report made by our chief of police to the board of police commissioners, to the crown attorney, to the city administrator, to the judge and to myself the information I have forwarded to the Attorney General with a copy to you, Mr. Minister. Briefly, it contains the concerns expressed by the chief to those people mentioned in regard to the lack of detention cells at the county court in Guelph.

While we were all pleased last week to participate in the opening of the new provincial jail, the removal of that provincial jail from the rear of the county buildings has now left us without any facilities close at hand for persons coming before the courts for trial. There have been instances in the past year that have caused the chief of police and the Ontario Provincial Police concern for the safety of the judge, court officials and the public.

You are aware of the good co-operation you have had with the county. You have treated them very fairly with regard to the county buildings and the old police building. They are at present renovating some of their offices and perhaps now would be an appropriate time for your staff to work out some arrangement whereby adequate detention cells or accommodation could be brought into being for the use of that county court.

After receiving the correspondence, I talked with the chief. I know him well enough to know he does not become alarmed easily and he only reacts when there is justification or need for something in the way of detention quarters. I would appreciate very much if you would have your staff and that of the Attorney General act on this matter as quickly as possible. In talking with you personally, you indicated that situations of a similar nature happen in other jurisdictions. When we now have something which is a matter of public knowledge, I do not think we should hesitate too long before doing something, because of the seriousness of the matter.

Hon. Mr. Wiseman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the honourable member. He did give me the correspondence earlier this afternoon during question period. I will discuss it with the Attorney General and with the Minister of Correctional Services (Mr. Walker), who will be involved in it as well. Last Tuesday we did have the privilege, with the member of opening the new detention centre in Guelph. It seemed like a pretty good centre, as those kinds of holding areas go. We will look into it and get back to the member.

Mr. Worton: I appreciate that consideration. One of the places I visited quite often was the county jail. It will be something out of the ordinary now on Sunday morning, on my way to church across the road, not to get called to the jail to discuss some matter about some person who feels he should not be in jail. He calls on me to tell me his story. I will now have a little farther to go to do that.

While it is taking away from my original intent, I must add we are well pleased with the new facility for these people in our area who do occasionally get off the track and into trouble.

The Deputy Chairman: What is the wish of the committee? I note the hour is 10:30. I have the member for Haldimand-Norfolk on my list yet.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Mr. Chairman, I think we will resume the review of the estimates on Friday.

The Deputy Chairman: I do not know what day they will be on again.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Whenever it is, I will leave my questioning until that time.

On motion by Hon. Mr. Wells, the committee of supply reported progress.

The House adjourned at 10:30 p.m.

REPORT IN TORONTO SUN

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker, on the point of privilege that we were discussing yesterday regarding the defamation of my character, I see the member for Rainy River (Mr. T. P. Reid) and the member for Wentworth North (Mr. Cunningham) are now in the chamber. You wished to give the latter an opportunity to respond.

Mr. Speaker: I am quite capable of looking after the affairs of the chair myself.

Mr. Cunningham: Mr. Speaker, this is the first occasion I have had to respond to the member's matter of privilege raised on several occasions in the House. I have read with some interest the article which appeared in the Toronto Sun of November 19 and to which the member for Oriole has referred on a number of occasions. To the best of my recollection, the facts as stated in that article in the Toronto Sun are accurate.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Mr. Speaker, in view of these recent events, I feel it incumbent upon myself to relate certain incidents that happened in the last week and make a clean breast of things here in the Legislature.

On Friday last, I went downtown to have lunch with a number of other people to what I considered was a respectable place. I was in a room with a number of other people waiting for lunch to begin, and it looked like a fairly respectable place. I was sitting there minding my own business when all of a sudden these people in funny white suits came out. I was not sure whether they were some rejects from the Gong Show or some people auditioning for Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, because I thought I saw Sneezy and Dopey and Sleepy in the crowd.

They had some entertainment that I was not aware they were going to have. One fellow got up and did his old imitation of Ed Sullivan, and then we started to have lunch. At that point, some ladies in various states of dress and undress got up and started dancing and, I think, singing. I can report to you, Mr. Speaker, that I do not think any of them was my waitress because my waiter had a moustache and I do not think he was among those on the stage.

In any case, I was quite surprised to be innocently involved in such a display, and I said to my companion, Chesty Morgan: "That is enough of this nonsense. This is shabby. Let's get out of here right after this performance is over."

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that in view of the recent events, I wanted to put that on the record before it appeared in the National Enquirer or anywhere else.

Mr. Speaker: I have heard the explanation of an alleged breach of privilege by the member for Oriole. We had an earlier denial of that by one of the accused, namely, the member for Rainy River, and we have now heard from the member for Wentworth North, who confirms that what was in the newspaper story is an accurate reflection of what transpired between the member for Wentworth North and the person who is responsible for the article that was written.

The communication that no one seems to deny was not a part of the record of this House. That is, I am in no position to say what was in the article or what was not in the article; therefore it was not a part of the official record of this House, and therefore it is not something upon which the chair can rule. Never at any time was the communication aired in this House, other than portions of it referred to by the member for Oriole.

Under the circumstances, I feel there is nothing that transpired in this House that can be seen as a breach of the member's privileges as a member of this House. While one always regrets it when something of this nature arises, when it does cast some reflection upon the conduct of a member of this House, erroneously or otherwise, it is most regrettable that something like this involving members of this House should have to arise.

The member for Oriole has asked for an apology from the member for Wentworth North. The latter has not tendered such an apology. I am going to give him an opportunity to do so if he so desires. However, if he desires not to, I would have to inform the member for Oriole that he will have to take whatever action he deems proper, in consultation with others more knowledgeable in this field than I am, outside this House.

Mr. Cunningham: I have nothing further to add, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: There is nothing further I can add to this incident. I have said all I am going to say on it. I declare the matter closed unless I get some direction from this House to the contrary, that is, other than what I have already stated.

Mr. Williams: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Really, I have given you ample opportunity to discuss this thing. I have consulted with my advisers. Will you please take your seat. I have gone over the record on numerous occasions since the honourable member raised the matter last week. I have discussed it with my advisers; I have studied it on my own. I have come to the only conclusion I can reach, given the information that has been placed before me. I consider the matter closed.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

HUMAN RIGHTS CODE AMENDMENTS

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, later this afternoon I shall be introducing a bill entitled, An Act to revise and extend Protection of Human Rights in Ontario. It is in substance and effect an entirely new human rights code and represents the culmination of the work begun some four and one half years ago by the Human Rights Code Review Committee under the able chairmanship of Thomas H. B. Symons.

While I do not wish to overdramatize the situation, I believe this is an especially important occasion, not only for those who have worked so tirelessly for human rights reform in Ontario, both within government and elsewhere, but also for the people of the province as a whole who, because of their tolerance, basic decency and respect for the rights of others, contribute so significantly to the quality of life in Ontario.

Before turning to the highlights of the bill, I should like briefly to review the history of human rights legislation in this province. Ontario was the first jurisdiction in Canada to enact a comprehensive code on human rights some 18 years ago. Important revisions have been made from time to time, but until now there has not been a comprehensive review of the code.

In its report, Life Together, delivered to my predecessor in August 1977, the Human Rights Code Review Committee urged that such a comprehensive revision be undertaken. The committee's specific recommendations, which resulted from meetings and deliberations with groups and individuals across the province from all walks of life, covered a broad range of issues.

2:10 p.m.

The bill I am introducing for first reading today addresses most of these issues, as well as some others not included in the committee's report. Apart from important structural changes to the code, which now establishes in part I a clearly defined charter of rights, there are some 23 new provisions falling into three broad categories: first, expansion of the code to cover new groups or classes of persons; second, expansion of the code to protect against types of conduct not previously prohibited, and third, miscellaneous provisions relating in the main to the administration of the code. Some of these are procedural, some have to do with the structure of the commission and some are related to expanding remedies for contravention.

If I may, I should now like to turn to the highlights of the bill. As to the expanded coverage, the following additions are being proposed:

Protection in all areas—employment, accommodation and the provision of goods and services to mentally and physically handicapped, and that is very broadly defined in the act. This will also protect the victims of past injuries, including those who have received workmen's compensation benefits;

Alteration of the lower limit of protection from discrimination on the grounds of age from 40 to 18 years of age—and I shall return to the question of age later in my statement;

Protection in all areas of coverage to persons because of their family status, subject to certain exceptions in the case of accommodation to preserve legitimate lifestyle preferences;

Protection in employment to those who have been convicted of offences under the law, but who have been rehabilitated, subject to certain bona fide and reasonable qualifications;

Protection on the basis of marital status, broadly defined in all areas, subject to certain exceptions in the case of owner-occupied and limited-size accommodation;

Protection in accommodation for those in receipt of public assistance, and Protection in employment for domestic workers.

Turning to the second category, that is, the added areas or activities that will be governed by the new code, the following are the highlights:

Protection against discrimination in the equal enjoyment of goods, services and facilities is broadened by removing the limiting phrase "available in any place to which the public is customarily admitted." Protection is added against discrimination in contracts, including the buying and selling of property. Protection from sexual harassment is made explicit.

[Applause.]

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Thank you very much.

Reprisals by persons in authority against those refusing or rejecting sexual solicitations is prohibited. Tenants and employees are given specific protection against harassment because of any prohibited ground of discrimination by landlords, fellow tenants, employers and fellow employees. Indirect or constructive discrimination is expressly prohibited, and discrimination because of association with members of a protected group is also prohibited.

The third miscellaneous category covers a number of significant administrative, procedural and structural matters. For example, the human rights code will bind the crown and will have primacy over all future legislation and over existing legislation two years after the new code comes into force, unless the legislation expressly states that it excludes the application of the code. Provision is also made to exempt public or private affirmative action plans or programs legitimately designed to benefit particular classes of persons.

The commission's powers are expanded and clarified. In particular, the commission will have the power to recommend the implementation of affirmative action plans or programs to rectify systemic discrimination. Recognizing the need to continue to promote racial harmony, the new code creates a race relations division of the commission, headed by a race relations commissioner.

The commission will be given the power to refer complaints to boards of inquiry for resolution, with the responsible minister having authority to appoint such boards. The commission will be required to give written reasons where it determines that a board will not be appointed. In addition, persons whose complaints are rejected by the commission will have the right to request that their complaints be reconsidered.

Provisions are included in the new code designed to expedite hearings by boards of inquiry. Under the new provisions, proceedings must be commenced within 30 days of the board's appointment and decisions must be issued within 30 days of the completion of hearings.

The remedial powers of the boards are expanded to permit boards to issue orders requiring landlords and employers to take appropriate action to prevent future harassment of tenants and employees by fellow tenants and fellow employees; to award damages for mental anguish in appropriate cases, and, in appropriate circumstances, to make orders for access to premises and facilities following findings of discrimination contrary to the code. The new code makes it a condition of every crown contract and subcontract that the contractor or subcontractor will not discriminate in employment.

I believe the bill addresses the major human rights issues fairly and compassionately. It does not represent the end of reform, but rather a new beginning. It will be apparent that some substantive issues discussed in Life Together have not been dealt with.

One that has given me and my colleagues particular difficulty is the upper limit of the definition of age. Members will recall that the member for York West (Mr. Leluk) recently introduced a private member's bill dealing with this issue. The government appreciates that there are persuasive arguments for raising the age limit to 70 or beyond and is very sympathetic to the concept of extending the age of mandatory retirement. We have great sympathy for the views of those who contend that healthy and able-bodied employees should not be forced into retirement against their wishes simply because a particular employer may have rigid, inflexible and universally applicable rules for the retirement of all employees.

On the other hand, there are arguments against appearing to encourage personnel policies and practices that would delay the benefits, financial and psychological, of retirement for our older workers. In addition, there are other complex labour market ramifications of extending the definition of age under the code, including the effect that might have on younger members of the labour force, where rates of unemployment are chronically the highest.

The findings and recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Pensions in Ontario, which I believe will soon deliver its report to the government, I hope will shed some light on the effect of a change in the age at which employees may be compulsorily retired. I think it would be unwise to propose any change on the eve of the royal commission's report on this important topic, but the government wishes to make it very clear at this time that pending further discussions of the issue before the standing committee, where it should be given first priority, it is prepared to introduce appropriate amendments.

In addition, following receipt of the royal commission's report, I will be announcing the appointment of a special adviser or advisers to review the entire matter and to make recommendations to me. An informal consultative process similar to the one adopted by Professor Weiler in his recent workmen's compensation study may be appropriate.

As I have said, in the evolving field of human rights there can never be an end to reform. I have characterized this as a new beginning in both substantive and symbolic terms. I have described the substance of the proposals. The symbolic importance of these revisions cannot be overemphasized. I hope the people of Ontario will recognize that the new code represents this government's re-dedication to the elimination of the corrosive effects of discrimination in our society.

Ultimately, of course, the success of laws, especially in this sensitive area, depends on the goodwill, tolerance and maturity of our people. While human rights laws are essential, we are dealing in the profoundest sense with matters of conscience and of the heart, some of which will always remain beyond the reach of any man-made law.

The other day I had the privilege to hear a distinguished visitor from the United States speaking about a related topic. He referred to the words of the ancient philosopher Mencius, writing 2,500 years ago to the following effect:

"The men of old, seeking to clarify and diffuse throughout the empire that light that comes from looking straight into the heart, first set up good government in their own states. Desiring good government in their own states, they first organized their families. Wishing to organize their families, they first disciplined themselves. Desiring to discipline themselves, they first rectified their hearts."

2:20 p.m.

I hope that as we deliberate on this important bill in the weeks ahead we can maintain this sense of perspective, and appreciate that whatever we finally enact will depend for its effectiveness on the rectification, as Mencius so eloquently put it, of our own hearts.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated in the House two weeks ago, I have received the MacLaren report, which recommends options on permanent liquid waste treatment facilities. I have had an opportunity to examine the recommendations thoroughly and I would like to table this report at this time. The appendices will be tabled as soon as they are printed.

As the members will remember, I referred the issue of liquid industrial waste to the standing committee on resources development in November 1978. As a basis for discussion, I put forward a seven-point program which represented our plan of attack on the liquid waste problem. After an intensive review of our proposals and the problem it would address, the committee submitted its report. At this time, I would like to remind the members once again how closely we have taken their advice in implementing our seven-point program. It is part of the addenda to our report.

There were 47 recommendations by that committee in that report. A total of 38 of those 47 either have been completely implemented or are in the planning stages of being implemented. The rest are under active consideration. Obviously the committee's report was of great assistance to us and we have taken great direction from it.

There were five specific options proposed for establishing facilities. In the initial stage of our plan for short-term facilities, we accepted the third option—joint public-private ownership of sites and facilities. We accepted the committee's view that we assist companies to establish new technology.

We have accepted its views and yet it is with concern and regret that I find deliberate attempts to halt implementation of those options. I need not outline for this House the litany of events which have frustrated our efforts to proceed with rational hearings. Certain actions have only intensified the public's focus on the not-in-my-backyard syndrome. Lost in that approach is the very crucial argument that the treatment proposed is the only way to guarantee the safety that the public so earnestly desires.

It is obvious from the amazingly consistent response we have received in every location, and experience throughout North America demonstrates, that we are encountering a kind of social phenomenon. My one goal is to stop the landfilling of untreated liquid waste. That is not only a strong commitment from me, but of this government. But quite frankly, the controversy surrounding each proposal has meant it has taken too long to implement what I am sure everyone agrees is a legitimate objective.

However, that interval has been used productively. There has been time for the completion of the MacLaren report, and it clearly indicates the pressing need for an immediate solution. Two weeks ago, I announced the freeze on ministry activities and participation in our short-term proposals. I wanted time to assess our other options and to weigh MacLaren's recommendations. In reaching today's decisions I have relied heavily on the standing committee's option of government ownership and control as well as on the MacLaren report.

In its first report, MacLaren outlined basic criteria for assessment of site. It was apparent there would be extreme difficulty in obtaining one site to meet all criteria. One MacLaren engineer said: "Under the criteria agreed on, we eliminated all areas in southern Ontario within five miles of any city, town or village, provincial and urban parks, all Indian reserves, conservation authority land, flood plain land, ecologically sensitive land and class one and two agricultural land. When we got through there wasn't much of the province left."

In early June I requested MacLaren to assess two additional sites: crown land in the South Cayuga area and land at Camp Borden previously suggested by the federal department, Environment Canada.

Besides a lack of suitable sites, it was clear that the public, as well as members of the House, feel that only government control and ownership will guarantee the safety of those facilities. Today's report recommends the province acquire one or more sites on which it would be possible to construct waste management facilities. It concludes that land in South Cayuga and five other areas has potential for such a site; those are in Huron county, Lambton county, Bruce county and two locations in Simcoe county.

The two sites preferred by MacLaren are the one in Huron and the one in the South Cayuga area. Both are considered "viable locations for the proposed facilities, subject to their geological suitability being confirmed by field studies." MacLaren states Cayuga offers an additional advantage because it is close to waste generators. I believe the fact that the government already owns much of the land is another major plus. This allows adequate government control of the site, a buffer zone can easily be achieved and there will be a minimal disruption in terms of existing land use and to any residents as well. The assembly of privately owned land in the other areas would result in massive expropriation and considerable cost to obtain the needed properties.

Before a decision could be made, we carried out soil tests in Cayuga. The engineering firm of Morrison Beatty Limited was retained. Its report states "the site appears to be ideally suited" for what we propose. Based on these factors, I have decided that land in the South Cayuga area will become the province's permanent liquid industrial waste treatment facility. It will have the best available technology and operate under the highest standards.

One important aspect of the government ownership means we can and do fully accept the responsibility as a government for the operation of such a site. The site itself will be run by a newly formed corporation with a board of directors of two representatives from the general public, two members from the local community, two technical experts and a chairman appointed by the government. They will be responsible for overseeing the development of the facility.

Called the Ontario Waste Management Corporation, this company will be incorporated immediately. I will shortly introduce legislation to set up a crown corporation and it will assume management and development responsibilities. To handle short-term needs, construction will begin as soon as possible on the secure landfill site, a solidification plant, a complete lab and special storage facilities. The site will ultimately contain an incineration unit and other treatment facilities.

I have accepted the MacLaren recommendation that the site itself will be 100 acres in size with a buffer zone of 640 acres. Additionally, we are developing a further control zone of approximately one mile on all sides from the boundaries of the facility. Within the buffer zone around the site no residence will be permitted. In the outer control zone we will welcome farming on a leaseback basis to demonstrate the suitable co-existence of the site and the normal activity for the area.

I have advised the co-proponents at Thorold and Harwich that we are withdrawing our participation from the short-term proposals. This new site will replace the interim storage proposal for PCBs in Middleport as well. We are, of course, prepared to meet all our legal obligations. The South Cayuga site will be designated to handle the bulk of Ontario's liquid wastes.

2:30 p.m.

Other points I would like to draw to your attention for this new facility are:

First, the waste management corporation will assist and supervise around the clock; that is, 24-hour-a-day security.

Second, with the lab facilities in place, no wastes will ever enter that site before the contents are fully known.

Third, there will be no radioactive material accepted.

Fourth, the province will assume the cost of upgrading and/or construction of the necessary roads to reduce transportation risks to the absolute minimum.

Fifth, the Ministry of the Environment will continue to fund research into alternative technologies, these to be incorporated within site when appropriate.

Sixth, the site will be operated on a break-even basis. The user fees will act as an incentive to encourage industry to reduce, recycle or reuse their wastes. The board will also investigate other ways to reduce waste volumes and encourage waste exchange programs.

Let there be no doubt of the urgent need for this facility. Our health and that of the environment depend on it. Because of that need I have come to another difficult decision. Since the final decision on site location and initial solidification technology is made, no hearing will be held under the Environmental Assessment Act or the Expropriations Act on the few properties the government does not yet own.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I will make only one interjection in my statement to reply to all those from the other side. It is rather interesting that the complete attempt to destroy the hearing process has gone on now for nearly a year. The decisions have been made on those sites well in advance of the hearing process. There is absolutely no one on that side of the House who can wave a finger at our not doing the hearing process. They have shortchanged it on every possible opportunity.

Much work must still be done to develop this facility, but I felt it was necessary to inform the public as soon as it was possible to do so.

The cost of this facility is estimated at approximately $60 million. That is certainly high, but the government feels cost should not be the limiting factor when what we need is the best technology it is possible to establish.

Unfortunately, we are not able to look to other jurisdictions in Canada for any guidance whatsoever, because there is no facility. There is no plan in any other jurisdiction in Canada. However, as soon as the board is in place, I intend to tour the facilities in Europe with the board so that it can copy or, where appropriate, improve the facilities, so that Ontario will have the best facilities in the world.

It is with some pride that I note the leadership role Ontario is taking in tackling this serious issue, and I fully intend to keep it that way.

Mr. G. I. Miller: On a point of privilege: is the minister telling the House today that he is going to go ahead with this project without a hearing before the province—

Mr. Speaker: Order. That is not a point of privilege; it is a question and you will be allowed to put it at the appropriate time.

Interjections.

ORAL QUESTIONS

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. S. Smith: A question on the South Cayuga matter for the Minister of the Environment, Mr. Speaker: Does the minister not recognize what a farce is being made of his own environmental assessment process, if he is willing to apply it for a number of important but relatively minor situations, and yet unwilling to apply it to what is to be, in his view, in many ways the most important environmentally sensitive project, a matter that will include all the liquid waste generated in the industrial portion of the province? Does he not recognize he is making an absolute farce and a travesty of his own otherwise reasonable legislation, in trying to exclude a hearing process in this very important matter?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I recognize that two years ago the opposition critic on that occasion made what was an obvious and clear commitment that this was a matter of crisis importance. I recall that discussion and I am sure he does as well. I do not think anyone questions the amount of activity the committee has put forward and how it has suggested what we do.

Mr. Gaunt: Not only did I say it, the NDP critic said it and so did the minister.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No one has argued that. I was not putting it forward as an argument. I simply put it forward as the member's statement, which I agree with. It is a matter of great urgency. This committee report makes that same point.

We have attempted with a great deal of effort, and rightly so, to follow those recommendations. As I said in my statement today, we are now in the process of implementing 38 of the 47 recommendations. I think if the members of this House would take this statement, the committee report—it is rather a small one—and read that report in detail, and I hope they will, they would find that an unbelievable number of accomplishments have occurred in two years.

I am glad to recite that, but when the Leader of the Opposition says to me that somehow or other we have short-circuited a system of hearing processes, I know place after place in this province where the members opposite have consistently refused even to let the concept go to a hearing. They have made their decision before the hearing. They do not even want to hear the review. They make their decision and as soon as there is a bandwagon on which they feel comfortable to hop, they hop on to it regardless of whether or not they come to grips with the very urgent problem of treating our liquid waste.

It is extremely important that we do so, and I make no apologies whatsoever for attacking what is one of the most serious social problems in this province and getting on with the job. We are protecting the area residents by putting them on the board. I think that is the way to go and I am proud of taking that forceful action.

Mr. S. Smith: Does the minister not recognize that without a proper hearing under his own legislation it is going to be very difficult for him or anyone else to convince the people of Ontario that South Cayuga turns out to be the one most suitable site in this entire province for liquid industrial waste, when it was not even one of the 17 sites looked at originally by the MacLaren people when they did their interim report, and when it is obvious and well known to everyone that the main reason South Cayuga is being used is because it represents a huge political embarrassment in the fact that the government finds itself in possession of that expensive land at this time?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I think there are many things that recommend the South Cayuga site. I will be glad to discuss those in detail any time the House should so wish. More particularly, I think we should recognize that a $425,000 report was presented to the House just this day to outline, to inform, to tell as much as is humanly possible about why a site is chosen and what is necessary for this province. That, I say, is what the report is all about.

I must conclude that comment by saying there has not been one, not one, positive, constructive suggestion by the members opposite of where a site should be located; not one on the basis of any recommendation whatsoever except perhaps a casual remark, "Why don't you locate it in South Cayuga?" That happens to be the recommendation of one of the members of the Liberal Party in our committee hearings. They have not addressed the problem; the MacLaren report has, and I think we should act on it.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister now explain how the people of the province can have any hope of believing that the minister believes in consulting the public, when the announcement that the South Cayuga site was being considered came only on October 27, just under a month ago, and yet the minister says in this statement that since that is now a firm decision there will be no further opportunity for the people in the area or the people of the province to consider whether that is an appropriate decision or to know whether the South Cayuga site is acceptable on environmental grounds? When the people of the province have the MacLaren report, which says it is neither an optimal nor a minimal site, why should they put credence in the word of the Minister of the Environment who issued a political dictate to the MacLaren report?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: May I remind the leader of the third party that the crown corporation is being established. This facility is not going to be run by the Ministry of the Environment, nor by the province; it will be run by a crown corporation. Two out of seven of those people on that crown corporation will be from the local community itself, a rather unusual but, I think, justifiable decision to make, so that the local people will have tremendous input into how that site is run. I think it is extremely logical and appropriate that the local people will have that kind of input.

I think it is also the guarantee the people of this province want, that a crown corporation will run the facility, because I know the people of Ontario are saying: "We want a facility and we want it now. The health of this province, the health of the people of this province are dependent upon having it," and they don't want the procrastination the member seems so interested in.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The report to the government, Treatment and/or Disposal Sites for Liquid Industrial Wastes and Hazardous Wastes, dated August 1979, indicates that using criteria, candidate regions were identified in figure two, with the optimal areas, shown in dark green, excluding agriculture land in classes one to four; and in the map that is provided in that report there is no indication that South Cayuga was even identified. Can the minister explain to this House how he can select it at this time, how he can justify using class one and class two land?

Of that 12,503 acres, 90.8 per cent is class one and class two under the old classification, and, under the new classification, from class one to class four is 93.3 per cent. Can the minister justify using good agricultural land for this type of use? What is the policy of this government as far as agricultural land in Ontario is concerned?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I think there is a slight distortion of the figures on the amount of land that will be used.

Mr. G. I. Miller: The distortion is not there; it is in this book.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: There will be a site using 100 acres of land. There will be a buffer zone around that using—

Mr. J. Reed: Just another 100 acres, so don't worry about it.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Read the report. I do not know whether the member has had a chance to do so yet. He has had it all of 20 minutes. If the member will look at the report he will find 100 acres for the site, 600 acres of a buffer zone around it—

Mr. G. I. Miller: Six hundred.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: That's right. It can and will be used for farming.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Will be used for farming.

Mr. Riddell: Why don't you give up 100 acres to be a horse pasture?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Will be used for farming, let me repeat as often as necessary. Last night I went to the community of South Cayuga and explained this concept—

Mr. Roy: You didn't explain. You dictated to them.

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, it is a little difficult to be heard. Last night I went to the area of South Cayuga and explained to the people of that community how the buffer zone around it will not only be used for farming, but will also demonstrate the coexistence of farming and other activities. Indeed, the council asked whether other activities would be possible and of course they will be. We will use all of that land. We intend, with the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, to demonstrate that not only can the land be used for its normal activity of farming as it is now, but that it can also be enhanced and improved. This will be a very modern facility that will coexist very well in that farm community.

Mr. Isaacs: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Given that the Minister of the Environment is claiming he is providing the best facility to the people of Ontario, why has he ignored the statement on page 3-17 of the MacLaren report that says Huron is preferable to South Cayuga environmentally? Why has he allowed political considerations to get involved with his selection of the best possible environmental site?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure whether the members for Huron-Bruce (Mr. Gaunt) and Huron-Middlesex (Mr. Riddell) want to associate themselves with that remark. But let me treat that comment rather seriously.

Mr. Gaunt: The going price is $100,000 an acre.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: You mean there is a price you would accept? Is that what you are saying?

Mr. Speaker: Would you get on with your answer?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Yes, I would like to, Mr. Speaker. I think if the member would do the House the favour of reading on, and putting it on the record, there were some other rather significant circumstances the report also talks about.

One of those is the fact that it will reduce the transportation mileage a great deal—a very significant factor to be considered when we choose between two sites. I would not argue for a moment that the Huron site was declared environmentally preferable to the South Cayuga site. But to counterbalance that and indeed add to the advantages of South Cayuga, there is a much reduced transportation distance; that is a very significant factor. Also, if we went to the Huron site it would mean we would have to disrupt hundreds, perhaps thousands, of people, which we will not have to do in the South Cayuga site. When you put all the factors together, there is no doubt in my mind that the South Cayuga site is the best possible site in this province.

Mr. S. Smith: A new question on the same topic to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister explain why it is he feels confident to choose this site without a proper environmental assessment hearing, when in fact the Dillon report, in looking at the same site for the possibility of disposal of PCBs, pointed out that the site is adjacent to an ecologically significant area along the Grand River, pointed out that instead of minimizing surface water or wetlands at risk that site crosses Holmes Creek, and pointed out that instead of minimizing incompatibility with surrounding and adjacent uses that site is "not compatible with agriculture and scattered residential surrounding the site"?

Given that the Dillon study found this was not a suitable place for PCBs, why has the minister now decided, without benefit of a proper hearing, that this is a suitable site not only for PCBs but for all the liquid wastes in the province?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, the MacLaren report is very comprehensive, and it deals with all those factors. I think, in summary, it does say the South Cayuga site, all things considered, is the best site. It also makes it very clear, as I said in my statement, that no one site meets all the parameters. We are well aware of that. One cannot find the perfect site, so one chooses and uses the best site it is humanly possible to find in Ontario. The $425,000 the government spent to do that search, I think, has answered the question in full detail. They conclude the South Cayuga site is by far the best.

Let me refresh the member's knowledge of this particular survey, all things considered. The original MacLaren report was done from a map survey; no one set foot on any land. Indeed, sites were chosen—and I think the critic for the Liberal Party on one occasion drew to my attention where a site, supposedly a good site, really was not. I know the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. Watson) identified the same kind of error in the first MacLaren report. The reason was that no one went out and did field tests. They took a survey of the province and tried to generalize about the areas they should look at in greater detail. I do not think MacLaren would argue that they did more than that.

On that basis, we then did the obvious thing—narrowed it down to fewer sites. The executive summary is a very small part of this comprehensive report. The total amount of work that has gone into searching for this site is enormous. The most exhaustive search that is humanly possible has been carried out by this government.

Mr. S. Smith: Is the minister now suggesting there will be no need or any project anywhere to undergo an environmental assessment hearing as long as there are one or possibly two reports done by some consulting engineers? Is he saying that as long as those reports are presented there is no need to go through the process of cross-examination of other experts with contrary opinions presenting their point of view? Will local citizens have no opportunity to question the findings of given consultants, wise as those consultants might be? Is the minister now suggesting there is no need for that cross-examination and presentation of contrary evidence, which is the basis of the appeal process, on any further environmentally considered site? If not, why has he chosen this one to eliminate this all-important concept?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: There is no doubt that is not the precedent being established here today at all. I think it has been said by many in this House that the matter of dealing with liquid wastes in this province is of great urgency. I accept that. I think it is important for all of us to understand how important that is, not only to protect our environment but to protect our health.

So often the statement has been made, "Not here." Around the province, one finds it is always the answer, "Not here." As I said in my statement, that misses the very significant point that as long as we keep saying "Not here" all of us have a real problem. We are living in jeopardy. We must treat our wastes and we must do it immediately. The urgency of this matter cannot be underestimated; we must proceed. Today I have outlined what I believe, and I think this government believes, will provide the greatest protection to the people by establishing a crown corporation that will have one purpose in mind. It will not only see that site is extremely well run but that the controls on it are extremely tight, that we get on with the job and we do it immediately.

Ms. Bryden: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The minister stated the opposition had opposed environmental assessment hearings and I would like to ask him to document any instance in which the opposition has opposed the application of the Environmental Assessment Act to waste disposal sites. Also, he says that not one constructive suggestion has come from the opposition, but he has adopted 38 out of the 43 recommendations of the committee, including our proposal for a crown corporation.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I am glad to know the member has recognized that I have accepted a lot of the recommendations of that committee, and I appreciate having that on the record. But where the committee has not been positive, where it has not made any constructive suggestions, is where to locate the site. It is great to go through the rhetoric that we need one, but the bottom line is where it will go. The committee has never indicated that it feels MacLaren has done a good job on that search, nor has it said anything to indicate it has a better knowledge of where to locate a site.

It is easy to talk about it, but on this side of the House we have to do something. That is why we are on this side of the House and why we will stay on this side of the House—because we will do something.

Mr. Kennedy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister advise when he anticipates work might commence on this project, when it might be fully operational; the order of the receiving and some order of the waste products it will handle?

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I did not hear quite all of the last part of that question.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I can fully understand why the minister would not have heard all of it. I did not myself. Would the honourable member like to repeat it?

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Everybody has to have ample opportunity to be heard in this House. It is just a common courtesy. The member for Mississauga South.

Mr. Kennedy: Mr. Speaker, the minister said he would be doing some studying with this commission in preparation for the commencement of the development of the site. Would he advise when he expects development to commence, when it might be partially operational, fully operational; and what the order of the receiving of the various waste products might be?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I will be pleased to try to do that. Obviously, some of these dates are the tentative dates we hope to be able to meet. First of all, we would expect the corporation to be formed early in the new year and the appropriate director to be named. Once they are named, then I think the only place the corporation members could go to view the appropriate facilities would be to Europe. I expect they will do that early in the new year.

We have already taken one member from our ministry staff who will be available on a full-time basis to assist the members of the corporation. That having been said, I would believe all of the necessary expropriation procedures can be completed, because they are very few in number, by the end of June. That means we feel we could start on this facility in early fall of 1981. We would like to get on with this facility immediately. I think it will take that much time to give the appropriate notices to the present tenants to acquire the options on the land, but I do believe we will be partially operational in the fall of 1981 and certainly fully operational in the year 1982.

NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a new question for the Minister of Energy with respect to the disposal of nuclear waste in northern Ontario, a matter which seems to be handled almost as irresponsibly as the disposal of liquid industrial waste in southern Ontario.

A few months ago, before embarking on its program of nuclear waste disposal research in the area of Forsberg Lake, the joint Canada-Ontario committee sought and got approval from the nearest organized municipality, the municipality of Atikokan, before it could go ahead. In comparable circumstances at East Bull Lake near Massey, that prior approval is neither being sought nor being given, but the research into nuclear waste disposal in the area is already under way.

Does this mean the procedure for approving research on sites as nuclear waste dumps in the north has been changed so it no longer requires approval from the local elected people in the nearest organized area? If so, has that been agreed to by the provincial government through its membership on the joint committee?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, just to clarify the issue, with respect to the particular interest of Massey, there was some correspondence when the announcement of the Atomic Energy Control Board was made with respect to the flyovers and the walkovers of five particular unorganized areas. There was an inquiry from the town which I felt was satisfied when they were assured at this stage of the game that all that was being done at this time was the flyover and the walkover.

I think the member perhaps exaggerates the matter. At the moment, that is all that has been done. It was quite public; there was consultation—in so far as those five particular areas were concerned—with the elected members, both federal and provincial, at this stage for the flyover and the walkover. The town of Massey, if that is the particular municipality in which the member is interested, was provided with the information which it requested for purposes of clarification with respect to that activity.

Mr. Cassidy: Are we to take it that the joint committee, of which Ontario is a member and which in the past worked by unanimous decision, has abandoned its policy of seeking municipal approvals prior to undertaking research on nuclear waste disposal sites in northern Ontario? If the minister has abandoned this approach, why is he no longer carrying out the commitment to ensure that northerners will be consulted before decisions are made as to where nuclear wastes will go in their areas?

3 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Welch: As I said in response to the comments of the member for York South (Mr. MacDonald) yesterday, we will have an opportunity to discuss the report of the select committee on Ontario Hydro affairs with respect to this subject. It is unfair and unreasonable to assume the consultative process has been abandoned. We are talking, at this stage, of walkover and flyover. As to the process and all other steps that will be taken before any final determination is made with respect to the disposition of waste, that is another matter. On the basis of that, as the member knows, the area has been confined to those five sites.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister not give us a commitment that local residents in a place like Atikokan for instance, where Atomic Energy of Canada Limited is already doing test drilling, will have the final say as to whether they will accept nuclear waste in that community or in any other community across the province? Are we going to find ourselves in the same situation where the ministry is going to go through the process and, at some point, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) or this minister is going to say: "You people are going to get it. Never mind the environmental assessment, never mind what the local people want, you are going to be stuck with it"? Will the minister give us the commitment that the local people will have the input and will make the decision as to whether they accept this stuff?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned when I was before the select committee, I have no difficulty in assuring there is a full consultative process in place with respect to these sites. I stop short of indicating there is going to be any veto on the part of any particular community. That was addressed to me at the time of the hearings. Certainly, there has to be a full consultative process and, ultimately, a decision will be made taking into account all the facts that are made public during that process.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does this in effect mean the provincial government and the Canada-Ontario waste management committee has determined that the waste management disposal site will be in an unorganized territory? Second, is the minister not aware that AECL has given a guarantee to a municipality in Manitoba that the emplacement site for waste disposal will not be put there just because that municipality has agreed to research at that site? If that is applicable to Manitoba, why is the Ontario government not fighting for the same kind of application in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, it is too early in the process to indicate a final decision has been made with respect to any of these five sites. That is the whole point of doing the experimentation and studies on site suitability. How would the member, at this stage of simply a flyover and a walkover, jump to the conclusion that any decision has been made with respect to any particular site?

Mr. Foulds: You are changing the rules. You are weaseling out of the commitment.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I made no commitment and you know it. Let the record show that is incorrect.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

CONTRACTED-OUT SERVICES

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour. The minister is aware of an Ontario Labour Relations Board decision early this month which upheld the right of the owners of the Kennedy Lodge Nursing Home in Toronto to contract out housekeeping and janitorial services even though 16 members of the service employees' union at that nursing home lost their jobs as a result. Does the minister not agree that the right of employers under the Labour Relations Act, as it now stands, to decide unilaterally to contract out and lay off workers as a consequence is a fundamental threat to the job security that workers should have when they have a collective agreement? Will he, therefore, undertake to make that kind of action by employers illegal through the Labour Relations Act?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, what the decision dealt with at the Kennedy Lodge Nursing Home was partially what the member reported. What the Ontario Labour Relations Board said was that following a long line of National Labour Relations Board hearings and decisions in the United States and, indeed, in this country, the practice of contracting out was acknowledged to be a usual and conventional business practice in North America.

What it then went on to say was that if there was evidence of activity that this was being used to discriminate against the union or to escape the union in any way it would have come to a different decision. But in the absence of such evidence it did not feel that such an approach was inappropriate in the light of the practice in North America.

Mr. Cassidy: Given the fact that 16 workers have been put out of work in that particular case because of contracting out at the Oakridge Villa Nursing Home, St. Raphael's Nursing Home and Heritage Nursing Home in Toronto, does the minister not agree that to give an employer the unfettered right to lay off organized workers through contracting out at a time when the workers have no remedy, either through the arbitration route or by exercising the right to strike, is a one-sided application of the labour law, that it is wrong to have the law so one-sided and that it is time we ensured through legislation that employers cannot take workers' jobs away and lay them off by use of this process of contracting out during the life of a contract?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, first of all, the member knows full well that the issue of contracting out comes up in many contract negotiations, so the parties do have an option to discuss this issue well beforehand. Second, I can only reiterate that contracting out of business is a normal business practice in North America. If the leader of the third party is saying to this government that we should change that practice in North America, I have to tell him that is not something we can do. But the Labour Relations Board clearly says—

Mr. Cassidy: In the middle of a contract, when the workers are defenceless—

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Just listen for a minute. The labour relations board clearly said that if there was any evidence that a company is doing this to escape its union then it would find differently.

Mr. Cassidy: Does the minister not understand that his function as the Minister of Labour, among other things, is to review the decisions of the labour relations board, to review the way that case law and practice develop with respect to the rights of employees and employers and, where a situation emerges which is one-sided or in which the workers are as defenceless as the workers at the Kennedy Lodge Nursing Home have found out that they are, to even the balance and to come in with legislation that protects those workers? Why should workers be compelled to try to negotiate a contract which their employer will not grant them, and why can they not have protection under the law so they are not put into the impossible position of these 16 workers who have lost their jobs through the negligence of this government and the Minister of Labour?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I do not accept that nonsensical statement about negligence on the part of this government. There is a practice of contracting out in North America, and that exists in this province. The mere fact that there was a case before the OLRB confirms the fact that in some instances, namely in the instance of trying to escape a union, redress is possible.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. McGuigan: Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of the Environment. I would like to ask how he could make a proposal for Harwich township based on the report that, by his own admission, there were no visual inspections of the 17 sites, and cause the Harwich township council to spend an estimated $100,000 in defence of this ill-conceived proposal? Is the minister willing to reimburse the taxpayers of the township of Harwich for up to $100,000, as he was willing to do for Browning-Ferris Industries?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, again I think I covered that point relatively well in my statement. I said we would accept all legal responsibilities.

NELSON CRUSHED STONE

Mr. Di Santo: A question to the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker: Is the Attorney General aware of the letter he received on October 20, from driver-owners who are working for Nelson Crushed Stone, in which there are very serious allegations against the management? Will the Attorney General tell the House if he is taking any action?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, the honourable member delivered a copy of a document dated October 20 to me yesterday, which indicated that a number of driver-owners in the service of Nelson Crushed Stone believe their rights have been infringed. They are alleging discrimination, instigation and provocation and abuse of power and management. There are no particulars of the allegations whatsoever.

3:10 p.m.

When I received this yesterday, I asked my staff if they had any information in the ministry to assist me in knowing what the allegations are. I have not had a report back from them so I simply say to the member, if he has any additional information which particularizes the allegations not particularized in this document, I would be happy to have it.

Mr. Di Santo: I am amazed that the Attorney General asks me to initiate an investigation. In view of the fact that the Attorney General received the letter on October 20, in view of the fact the practices of the employer in question were questioned in this House during the strike that occurred last June, in view of the fact the allegations are most serious, and in view of the fact the Ontario Provincial Police have been involved, will the Attorney General—

Mr. Speaker: Please put your question.

Mr. Di Santo: If the Attorney General had the decency to listen, Mr. Speaker, I would go ahead with my question, but since he does not want to listen, I refuse to go ahead.

FEDERAL AID TO TRANSPORTATION

Mr. Ashe: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transportation and Communications relating to a rather lengthy story in yesterday's Globe and Mail entitled "Ottawa Always Shortchanging Ontario on Transportation Aid."

Interjections.

Mr. Ashe: Keep it up, you are using up the time.

Mr. Speaker, knowing that sometimes the press takes a little poetic licence, could I ask the minister to substantiate whether it is fact that the federal government has reneged on a commitment for transit aid funding previously made to the minister, and whether it is fact that the federal government is committed to spend $40 million additional funding over and beyond the urban transportation assistance program in the Montreal area? Is it fact that the Liberal government in Ottawa has been shortchanging Ontario on its transportation assistance needs?

Mr. Eakins: I am glad you asked.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I was surprised someone from the other side of the House did not ask a question about this yesterday. Obviously the members of the Liberal caucus would not be interested in Ontario being shortchanged by the federal government.

I will try to recall the questions in the member's question. I would have to say the federal government definitely reneged on numerous commitments for transportation assistance within the province. I read a press clipping this morning relating to questions in the House of Commons in Ottawa yesterday where Mr. Pepin stated Ontario was getting $68 million a year in transportation funds and could do with it what it wished. I believe he would be fairly correct if he said the $68 million was over a five-year period. Under UTAP, Ontario gets about $16.25 million per year, which has to cover grade separations, railway relocations, transit and such. If Mr. Pepin wants to increase that to $68 million a year instead of $16.25 million, perhaps I can withdraw some of my criticism.

There was a commitment received. Mr. Pepin in a telex says there is nothing in his files to indicate a commitment by Mr. Mazankowski of the Clark government to additional funding to assist in the Milton-Streetsville-Mississauga GO line. Unless my filing system is a lot worse than I think it is, I am sure I can find a copy of the telex that was received from Mr. Mazankowski.

Mr. Kerrio: He was out of office when you got the answer.

Hon. Mr. Snow: No, he was not out of office when I got the telex, but very shortly after he was out of office, Mr. Pepin sent me another telex which I am sure I can find a copy of.

Mr. S. Smith: He sent it to you at Fort Lauderdale, if I am not mistaken.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Nothing wrong with Fort Lauderdale. A beautiful place; I wish I was there.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Snow: In fact, about 32 days from now, I hope to be there.

Mr. Speaker, I guess the part of the situation that I feel most annoyed about is the fact that although Ontario has been turned down in every instance for funding of Union Station, and the Bathurst Street grade separation project where there was a $35-million commitment, and although the additional $30 million promised by Mr. Mazankowski was withdrawn by Mr. Pepin, now a commitment of $50 million has been made for the transit system in Montreal.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: One of the members who does all the yakking about wasting time in question period is the member for Renfrew North (Mr. Conway).

Interjections.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, the thing that concerns me the most is something in addition to the special $50 million over and above UTAP funding that Mr. Pepin has promised to Montreal and the province of Quebec. He has also said that if Quebec will assign, say, $20 million of UTAP funds for transit—remember these are federal funds to start with—he will double that in addition. So he says, in other words, "If you will use $20 million of my money to build transit, I will give you another $40 million."

Mr. Breaugh: How come you can't get a deal like that for Ontario?

Mr. Wildman: How come Levesque gets more money than you do? Is he a better negotiator?

Hon. Mr. Snow: That is worse than playing the slots. It is difficult to understand the rationale in the decisions that are made out of Transport Canada.

AIR QUALITY LEAD CRITERIA

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of the Environment. Could the minister advise us, having in mind this government's often-repeated commitment to local autonomy, what was the result of the discussion in the ministry when the communication was received from the special studies branch of the Ministry of Labour? It recommended no changes or additions to the existing air quality lead criteria regardless of the recommendations made by the Toronto board of health in this area.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Perhaps the question might be more appropriately directed to either the Minister of Health (Mr. Timbrell) or the Minister of Labour (Mr. Elgie). We do look to those two ministries for the expertise in making decisions on health matters. I thought the question was, what was our internal response. I will be glad to get that and reply to the member more fully on a later occasion.

Mrs. Campbell: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the minister, when he is looking into the matter, would table in this House all the pertinent information upon which any decision to ignore the Toronto board of health was taken with reference to lead criteria?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I will look at all that information and I will make a further report. I am not prepared to say any more than that at the moment.

3:20 p.m.

ANIMAL TRAINING COLLARS

Mr. Philip: Mr. Speaker, a question to the Attorney General and Solicitor General, in his capacity as the cabinet minister responsible for laying charges under section 402 of the Criminal Code of Canada which deals with cruelty to animals: Is the minister aware that certain pet shops are selling training collars, which really could be called torture collars? These collars have prongs on the inside which dig into the animal's skin. The one I have was purchased by Tom Hughes of the Ontario Humane Society. Does the minister feel that shopkeepers who sell these devices might be charged under section 402 of the Criminal Code of Canada?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: I note the member for Etobicoke is holding a device in his hand. On the basis of his question and on the basis of what I am able to see from this distance, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, I am really not in a position to judge whether or not this would warrant a charge under the Criminal Code.

Mr. Foulds: If the minister promises to wear it, he will send it across.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: That sort of instrument might be appropriate to keep the member's colleague, the member for Scarborough-Ellesmere (Mr. Warner), under control.

I assume and I appreciate the question has a serious motive, and I will certainly discuss the matter with Mr. Hughes of the humane society.

Mr. Philip: Since, it is very difficult, as the minister would admit, to successfully obtain convictions under that section of the Criminal Code, and since it is the opinion of the Toronto Humane Society that a majority of cases of abuse with this collar go undetected, and assuming he comes to the same conclusion as the Toronto Humane Society that this is a cruel device which is not needed for training purposes, will the minister, possibly in co-operation with the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations, consider banning these hideous torture devices from sale in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. McMurtry: Mr. Speaker, I am not just sure at this moment what avenues may be open to us in this respect and what might be required legislatively or otherwise to ban the sale of such instruments, but I will certainly look into the matter and advise the member accordingly.

DARLINGTON NUCLEAR POWER STATION

Mr. Cureatz: Mr. Speaker, a question to the Minister of Energy: Is the minister contemplating the possible stretching out or the possible stopping of the construction of the Darlington Generating Station, which I know the mayor of Pickering and the new mayor-elect of Oshawa support, and which I am sure the member for Oshawa (Mr. Breaugh) also is supportive of?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, there certainly are no plans at the moment to alter the construction schedule as far as Darlington is concerned.

Mr. Nixon: The minister has indicated no change in the timetable is expected. Is he not aware that the predictions of energy load increase from Ontario Hydro have been completely thrown into a cocked hat, since the load has not grown in 1980 and it appears that instead of Darlington not being needed until the year 2000, it may very well be a decade later than that before Darling-ton's output will be needed, unless it is the intention to phase out the coal-fired burners?

Hon. Mr. Welch: I can only repeat that there are no plans for changing the timetable. Certainly it is too early to come to any conclusions with respect to some of these preliminary figures. I am sure the board will want a little more time to consider some of the long-term implications.

As far as I am concerned, I am getting plenty of advice and encouragement from people who can resist the temptation of partisan opportunism to encourage this government to become very positive with respect to the tremendous opportunities this province has with respect to its energy future because of its electrical capacity, and we should see this as a plus at the moment.

TOXIC HAZARD TESTING

Mr. Van Horne: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. It has recently been reported that 10 hospitals have been selected for toxic hazard testing by commercial firms which will report directly to the ministry. This seems to be a little bit of a breakaway from the intent, as I understand it, of the Occupational Health and Safety Act, and I am wondering if the hospitals' joint health and safety committees will be involved in this process. Also, other than the air testing, which apparently is the only thing that will be done, will the minister consider testing in such other hazardous areas as radiation and chemicals?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, we are beginning some studies in the area of the hospital industry. Radiation, as it relates to workers in the exposure area, is already dealt with under the radiation protection branch of the ministry. As to the details of exactly what stage that program is in, I would be glad to look into it and advise the member.

Mr. Van Horne: I am wondering if the minister would inquire at the same time if the occupational hygienist newly retained by the Ontario Hospital Association might also be involved in such a study.

Hon. Mr. Elgie: That will be up to the occupational health and safety division to decide whether there would be any assistance rendered by such persons.

FOREST FIRE REPORT

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Natural Resources. Can the minister confirm reports of the Thunder Bay media that he has now had in his possession for 10 days the Hughes report, a review of the past disastrous forest fire season in northwestern Ontario? Can he tell us when he plans to table the report in the House and make it public? Can he tell us if he has read it, and can he assure us that he has not locked it in his safe in order not to spill the beans?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary: That is the shortest answer on record from the Minister of Natural Resources

Mr. Speaker: The supplementary is supposed to be the result of the answer to the original question.

Mr. Foulds: Now that the minister has confirmed that he has had the report in his possession for 10 days, can he tell the House why he has not made that report public to this House and when he will do so?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I think I may give the same answer I gave to Mr. Baughman of the Lakehead newspaper: that I wanted to read it. I have read it. I want my staff to comment upon it and I want to make a statement when I release it, which I hope will be in the next couple of weeks, indicating those recommendations we propose to follow and any other comments that seem appropriate at the time.

FORT ERIE RACETRACK

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Is the minister aware that it was almost one year ago that the matter of the Fort Erie racetrack was debated in this assembly, and that the Ontario Jockey Club has indicated that if there is no A meeting in August 1981, there will be no B spring meeting, which essentially means the track will be closed, causing severe economic hardship in the community? Has the minister or the cabinet arrived at a decision as to what financial assistance is to be generated to enable the Fort Erie racetrack to remain in operation for the 1981 meet and the ensuing years?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, first of all it is a misnomer to say the Fort Erie racetrack issue has ever been debated here. I welcome the honourable member's interest in the future of the Fort Erie racetrack. It is encouraging that someone from the area other than my colleague, the member for Brock (Mr. Welch), is interested.

I am relatively confident and optimistic, as I always am, that the Fort Erie racetrack will function in 1981 and in 1982, in regard to both a B meet and an A meet. But unless the mountain comes to Muhammad—and I have a communiqué from the mountain, Mr. Whelan, which I have not been able to read yet; I do understand he wants to meet with me, which is an unusual change of events and not his normal attitude towards me—beyond 1982 there is no one who can guarantee the fate of Fort Erie because the only way that track will be viable is through offtrack betting.

Mr. Haggerty: I believe the date would be December 13, 1979, when the matter was debated here in a dialogue between the minister and myself. I am well aware of the minister's long-term solution of offtrack betting, but my main concern is inter-track betting by telephone from one track to another. Can he assure me that the Fort Erie racetrack will remain open under the federal scheme for thoroughbred racing?

Hon. Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I cannot speak for Mr. Whelan's proposals. I suppose the best description of what he has proposed would be a form of offtrack betting that will be of no benefit to the racing public, because one would have to put amounts one could draw upon into a non-interest-bearing deposit account all over the place. Personally, knowing something about the racing industry, I do not think the federal government intends to proceed with what it has outlined. Rather, I think this is a preliminary offer to provide for offtrack betting.

Coming back to the business of Fort Erie, I want it very clearly on the record, because I answered it, that I am optimistic Fort Erie will open for the B meeting and then the A meeting in 1981. It opened in 1980 because of the minister. In 1982, the same thing will happen. But beyond that, it is all in the hands of the mountain.

SUDBURY NURSING HOME

Mr. Germa: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health. Now that the nursing home inspection branch has confirmed that at least on six occasions Sudbury Nursing Home had breached the regulations, a fact he is aware of, is it his intention to lay charges against Sudbury Nursing Home as contained in the regulations?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Mr. Speaker, the member will acknowledge that I sent him a very lengthy letter as a result of inspections at the nursing home. It is my custom to send members full reports. It was based on the infractions or deficiencies noted and the action taken to date to correct them. There are no plans to lay charges.

On the question of the making of monthly charges for laundry services, as a result of that inspection an audit is being made of all 15 Extendicare nursing homes to see if that practice is current in their entire chain. If so, measures will be taken that are appropriate to the degree that it is happening.

Mr. Germa: Is the minister not aware that the same situation has pertained at Sudbury Nursing Home in the past and that without getting their attention and putting a penalty on them, the situation is not going to be corrected on a permanent basis?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: I have no qualms about using the prosecution tool where that is appropriate. We have used it in my time as minister probably as frequently as or more frequently than at any point in the past. All I am saying is that where that is appropriate and where we cannot get co-operation in any other way, we will use it. In this particular case we got co-operation and got the correction of deficiencies, and it is not appropriate.

Mr. Conway: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker. For the information of the members, can the Minister of Health indicate in his three years and some odd months as Minister of Health how many times he has initiated prosecution and legal action against offending nursing home licensees?

Hon. Mr. Timbrell: Off the top of my head, no. In some cases, just calling in the owners to meet with the administrators and our legal branch is sufficient. Threatening is also very effective.

MOTION TO SUSPEND NORMAL BUSINESS

Mr. Isaacs: Before the orders of the day, Mr. Speaker, I have already given notice to you of my intention to move that the regular business of the House be set aside in order that there be a debate on the matter of industrial waste disposal.

Mr. Speaker: Proper notice has been given. I will listen to the reasons why the honourable member thinks the ordinary business of the House should be set aside for up to five minutes.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, in view of the minister's statement, I believe it is very important that today this House engage in a full and open debate of the matter of industrial waste disposal and, in particular, the unacceptable approach that has been put before us today by the minister.

The minister is blaming the people of this province for their opposition to the ministry's previous ill-conceived programs. He is attempting to punish the people of this province by totally eliminating the public participation process on the South Cayuga proposal.

The news is not all bad and that is why I think it is important that we have a debate today. We welcome the principle of a crown corporation; we welcome the concept of finding the best possible site for a liquid industrial waste treatment facility, and we welcome the minister's acceptance, at long last, that the site should be fully in government hands. But we condemn the political interference we have seen so blatantly in the site selection process.

This afternoon we cannot comment on the matter of the disposal process because the second volume of the MacLaren report, or at least the executive summary we have been provided with today, leaves more questions unanswered than it provides answers to, as to what is going to happen on the site that is finally selected by whatever mechanism.

The minister has his approach totally wrong. I want to cite two examples to illustrate why that is the case.

In February of this year, a report prepared by the hazardous waste management committee in Alberta put, as its number one recommendation, that any proposal to build a treatment and storage facility should be accompanied by a comprehensive public involvement program conducted by the proponent, and approved and monitored by Alberta Environment. The minister has totally and utterly ignored his own legislation, his own boasting about public participation, in coming forward with the proposal today.

The second example I wish to mention is a paper presented by David Estrin, a prominent environmental lawyer, to the twenty-seventh Ontario Industrial Waste Conference on June 16 of this year. The paper is entitled Siting Hazardous Waste Disposal Facilities—How to Prevent Lawsuits and the Not-in-My-Backyard Syndrome. The paper is full of excellent proposals the minister could have followed to avoid the not-in-my-backyard syndrome.

Unfortunately, the minister has gone about this initiative in a manner that totally ignored the challenge that he himself recognized last year, and that is the need to gain widespread public acceptance of the existence of disposal facilities and the great need for new facilities.

The minister has implied that we face a crisis, but he has chosen the approach that makes the crisis worse. He has chosen a site before all the facts are in. The Morrison Beatty report he tabled today makes it very clear that the safety of the South Cayuga site for a liquid industrial waste facility has not yet been established according to engineering standards. Twelve months more work is needed before we know whether it is a suitable site.

If we have this debate this afternoon, I believe we can put proposals before the government which will help get us on the right track instead of up a dead-end siding that will lead to more problems sooner or later. The government has cut out the public participation process. We need a full and open debate of this matter in the House today so that we can try to prevent further waste of time and money on inappropriate proposals and so that the minister might be able to come back within days with a revised proposal that meets with approval from all sides of the House. I hope there will be support from all sides for just such a debate because it is a matter of overwhelming public concern in this province today.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, we support the need for a debate at this time on the matter. Surely it must be apparent that what is happening today is the repudiation by the government of its own highly trumpeted legislation, the Environmental Assessment Act, which has been hailed by many, especially by members of this government.

I can understand why the minister would want to leave at this time, I can well appreciate it, but given the way in which he has trumpeted the Environmental Assessment Act as the leading act of its time, today is an historic occasion. Today we heard that the act is to be set aside because of the alleged urgency of a problem which the minister himself has apparently been resolutely unable to deal with over the past many years. Members on this side of the House perceive the problem. Today we are told its urgency is of such a kind we can set aside the legislation of Ontario, we can set aside the Environmental Assessment Act so that the minister can go ahead and place a liquid waste disposal facility in a publicly owned area.

It is very interesting, when asked why he wants to set aside the Environmental Assessment Act, he tells us it is because of the urgency of the matter, because of the delay of the other procedure. The reason for the delays in the other procedures has been that the other sites selected by the ministry all turned out to be selected for reasons that were ill-conceived. Presumably, the minister himself is admitting that by withdrawing those applications. It was not a geological survey that decided on Harwich township; it was the fact those poor folks did not complain about an existing dump, so maybe they would not notice a slightly different kind.

The same goes with most of the selection procedures. Walker Brothers Quarries is another example. Maybe since they are already letting waste into the place, nobody will complain too much if some more gets in there. Because the government has adopted those criteria, the local people have understandably demanded the full due process of law and have received that so far. Similarly, I point out that one of the reasons things have taken so long is that the ministry itself has been so long in recognizing the problem.

When Colin Macfarlane, who has now been made head of the entire waste management branch of the ministry, was told of the waste being imported into the Upper Ottawa Street site in Hamilton, he chose to do nothing about it, saying the evidence came in Coke bottles. That was four years ago when much could have been done. So the delay of which the minister complains, and which he claims is the one reason for setting aside the legislation of Ontario, is of his own making. It reminds me of the person who kills his mother and father and then throws himself on the mercy of the court on the basis he is an orphan. The delay which is being used by the minister to justify this extraordinary move, this amazing and dismaying move to set aside the Environmental Assessment Act, was all of the ministry's own making. If people did protest, it was because they did not trust the ministry, the same ministry that presided over the magic box in Hamilton, the same ministry that pretended it knew nothing of what was going on in the Walker Brothers Quarries and then said a week later, "Oh, sorry. Yes, it does appear as though we did know what was going on in the quarry."

No wonder people have objected. There is no reason at all to set aside the Environmental Assessment Act. In addition to that, the people of Ontario are not stupid. They know perfectly well that it is too much to say a coincidence has occurred by which the very piece of land which is a huge political embarrassment to the government just by chance turns out to be the one place that is optimal in the whole of Ontario to put liquid waste into.

Nobody could believe a thing like that, and certainly the MacLaren people who did the report do not believe it either. They didn't even choose it as one of their 17 sites to look at. The ministry is fooling absolutely no one. Because the ministry is constantly putting these liquid wastes and PCBs in places like Middleport in Brant-Oxford-Norfolk riding, Smithville in Lincoln riding, Harwich township in Kent-Elgin, South Cayuga in Haldimand-Norfolk and also in Walker Brothers Quarries in St. Catharines riding—or at least partly in that riding—and because the second choice, if we reject this, is in Huron-Bruce riding, I am not going to suggest that they were chosen because they are Liberal ridings. I would merely point out that the chance of all those ridings being chosen just at random without political consideration at all is one in 16,000.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, the remarks of my friend the Leader of the Opposition have helped to substantiate the case that this debate should not proceed this afternoon. While he may feel his remarks are well meaning towards some subjects, exception can be taken to them and exception will be taken to them by the minister. They do not deal with the substance found in this report. I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that rule 34(c) says, "The matter proposed for discussion must relate to a genuine emergency, calling for immediate and urgent consideration."

I think all of the procedures in this House are geared towards meaningful debate and to make this House a meaningful institution. That meaning is achieved by notice being given and people being able to prepare. Let me state first that no notice was received of this particular motion by this party and by the government until about 1:50 p.m. this afternoon.

I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that is not the kind of thing that most of us would see as an emergency in the sense of something that is gripping the minds and hearts of the people of this province immediately through the media and elsewhere, or as one of those kind of matters they would believe should be debated in this Legislature as is the case of the special education bill which was due to start at this very time and which is not now going to proceed because I assume we will proceed on this particular matter.

To protect the integrity of this House all I am saying is that a report has been presented, an appendix has been presented and other appendices are still being printed. Moreover, we are being asked to engage in a special debate on a subject which has been debated in this House. It was debated for half the question period. It has been debated in the estimates. It is a subject which is of concern to the people of Ontario but which is not of an emergency nature that it needs to sweep aside, without adequate notice, the business of this House, particularly important business such as the special education bill which was due to be debated this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, I merely put that case to you. We have a rule that calls for emergency debates, and that is a very necessary procedure. Believing in the rules and standing order of this House and believing in meaningful debate for all members, I would have to submit that to proceed with an emergency debate of this nature now, with most members not even having a copy of these reports, is not a meaningful discussion. While this is a very important matter, it is not the kind of emergency matter the people who struck these standing orders saw in rule 34(c).

3:50 p.m.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have listened with great interest to the presentations made by the three members. I would have thought the motion put forward by the member for Wentworth (Mr. Isaacs) was based on some information, anxiety or apprehension he had prior to the introduction of the comprehensive and detailed statement made by the minister, so I would have to say his request for an emergency debate was based on other considerations.

On that basis, I know of my own knowledge this matter of the disposal of liquid waste has been discussed over the past several months on many occasions by the Leader of the Opposition and many others in the House. By the minister's own admission it is of great urgency and it is something that obviously affects a good many people, particularly in southwestern Ontario. However, the motion, which I was given notice of at 10:15 a.m., obviously did not take that into consideration. It took into consideration the general problem with regard to the disposal of liquid nuclear wastes. I would have to say on that basis, it does not fit four-square within the rules of standing order 34.

THIRD READING

The following bill was given third reading on motion:

Bill 167, An Act to amend the Chiropractic Act.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

House in committee of the whole.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman, on a point of privilege, I would like to correct the record, if I might.

Mr. Chairman: In what regard?

Mr. S. Smith: Earlier this afternoon I stated the chances of a Liberal riding having been picked at random for some of these environmental matters was one in 16,000. On closer calculation it is approximately one in 4,000. The odds are about 4,000 to one against it happening by chance. I wanted to be correct in my figures.

Consideration of Bill 82, An Act to amend the Education Act.

On section 3:

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Sweeney moves that section 3(1) be further amended by adding after "pupils" in the seventh line "with provisions for parents or guardians to appeal the committee decision."

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, this is to correct an oversight in terms of our discussions last week on the appeal mechanism. It was drawn to my attention that the appeal procedure is restricted or—maybe this is a better way to put it—could be interpreted to be restricted to a student whose placement was in question. Of course, we have to realize that initially a decision has to be made by the placement committee to identify a child as an exceptional pupil. The only purpose of this amendment is to provide a parent or a guardian with the opportunity to appeal a committee decision which may or may not have identified the child as an exceptional pupil.

It is fairly clear that until that particular decision is made the rest of the legislation does not have any impact on a particular pupil. Therefore, it is important that we provide the parents, right at the beginning of the activity, with an opportunity to say whether they agree or not with the committee decision, and that the minister make provision, as in my amendment, for the parent or guardian to appeal that committee decision.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, is this an amendment to subsection 1 or 2 of section 3?

Mr. Chairman: Subsection 1.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Where is it to be placed?

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I just used the line numbering. If we refer to the printed version of the bill, then we just simply count down, as I have in my amendment, to the seventh line of section 3(1). It is the first line of paragraph 5(iii). The amendment would then read: "committees to identify exceptional pupils with provision for parents or guardians to appeal the committee decision and to make and review placements of exceptional pupils."

In other words, the inserted clause would relate to the committee's task of identifying the exceptional pupil. The rest of it would flow from that.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, once again we are in the realm of the bizarre because the bill, as it is before us and as it came out of the social development committee, already has a comprehensive appeal procedure in it, and that comprehensive appeal procedure is section 7.

Section 7 of the bill, as it stands now and as it was passed in the social development committee, contains provisions for appeals against the three statutory powers of decision-making of a local board of education placement committee. Those three areas of decision-making are to review, first, the decision of whether a child is an exceptional pupil and, secondly, what specific special education program or special education service an exceptional pupil shall receive from the local board of education. The third area of statutory power of decision with respect to this bill has to do with the designation, hard-to-serve child, and whether a board is able to provide a service for a child so designated.

The appeal procedure in section 7 of the bill, as amended and as before us, covers all those three powers of decision. Why the Liberal Party is now moving amendments dealing with material already covered in the statute is beyond me. Well, it is not really beyond me; it is because they want to eliminate section 7 as it stands now and replace it with something that is substantially weaker. What they are doing here is saying, "We will add a section to the regulation that will empower the minister to set up some kind of appeal procedure with respect to the first of the statutory powers, the designation, exceptional child."

4 p.m.

I made the arguments last week and I do not intend to repeat them at length. The point is very simple. When an act confers a statutory power of decision on some other body, the statute should also spell out what the appeal procedures are in the statute. It is not the minister that is giving the statutory power of decision to a local board of education; it is this Legislature. It is our responsibility to give the appeal procedure in the act and not leave it to the minister through regulation.

Finally, if I may say why I am unwilling to leave the development of an appeal system to the minister by regulation, I would simply refer to Ontario regulation 704-A, which is the existing regulation that gives the so-called appeal to parents against decisions of the local placement committee. It is not an appeal system. During the hearings the minister was calling this an appeal procedure, an appeal mechanism, but it is not.

Let me read the operative part of the regulation that the minister characterizes as an appeal system. "The parent or pupil may at any time apply in writing to the chief executive office of the board," that is, the local board of education, "or to the secretary of the board for a review of the placement of the pupil by a committee, and shall state in his application the reasons for requesting the review." All that happens is the matter is reviewed.

That is the kind of appeal system the Minister of Education has put into regulation now. I say it is utterly irresponsible to place the appeal procedure into the regulation section of the act. It has to be spelled out in the statute. As a matter of fact, it is spelled out in the statute in section 7.

I want everybody to be very clear about this. I intend to vote against any and all amendments to Bill 82 this afternoon because, in so doing, I am voting for the bill as it was passed by the social development committee. That is the procedure we are required to go through here this afternoon. In order to vote for the victories that were obtained in the social development committee, we have to vote against the minister's amendments and the amendments of the Liberal Party. In so doing we are voting for a comprehensive appeal system that covers all the areas of decision-making without any fudging or fooling around. It provides a remedy if somebody wins an appeal, rather than the kind of nebulous, go-back-to-square-one proposals we have had before us.

Before it is too late, I wish my colleagues in the Liberal Party would stop what they are doing this afternoon and go back to the position they took in the social development committee with respect to special education—in fact, with respect to all decisions of the local boards of education placement committees. There needs to be an appeal procedure enshrined in the statute. It is there now. Let us please keep it in the bill.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address this section. I suppose if Bill 82 is reduced to its most basic fundamentals, there are three actions. One, there is the identifying of an exceptional pupil. Two, there is the placement of the exceptional pupil and, three, there is the service of the hard-to-serve pupil. This section, as amended by my colleague from Kitchener, does nothing more than clarify a situation that is already existent in the act. Should our amendments not pass and should the bill as it came from the social development committee pass in this House this afternoon, then the most that could happen and the most that could be said about my colleague from Kitchener's amendment is that it is redundant or superfluous, but it is not inconsistent. In fact, if our amendment should pass, then it is necessary to indicate as early as possible in this bill, as was done in section 2, that the appeal procedure be set out.

The minister has powers under regulation to set procedures. The purpose of the regulation is to administer, to organize and establish. The power to appeal comes from another section of the act later on. But the section, as it reads in Bill 82 now before us and before amendment by my colleague from Kitchener, indicates the committee can identify exceptional pupils but, in dealing with placements of exceptional pupils, this section allows the minister to set up a review procedure.

This section can be interpreted as being silent in view of the sections that are to come later on and with which we will be dealing, particularly section 7. This section is silent with respect to the review of the identification process. My colleague from Kitchener addresses himself only to that and it is only with that we are concerned at this time—that the identification process be subject to review and that the placement be subject to review.

Should this section be subject to interpretation in a court of law some day, it could easily be read that the identification process is not subject to review as is set out. We are addressing only that, and it is important later on perhaps. If it is not important later, it becomes superfluous but not inconsistent with the tenor of the bill.

Mr. McClellan: If the member had not deleted the statutory rights provision last week—

Mr. Stong: You did not vote for that, you clown.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, would you ask the member to withdraw the unparliamentary remark?

Mr. Stong: I withdraw, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member has withdrawn it.

Mr. McClellan: Yes, in such a graceful manner too.

The point is that under section 2 of the bill, which was changed last week, there was a very tough statutory rights provision that would have been the basis of any litigation beyond the appeal tribunal, so the member is simply backfilling.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, let us be very clear about what is happening here. Last week this bill was gutted and the strong provisions in the previous clause were watered down so that the bill no longer is a bill that ensures the rights of children to a mandatory education commensurate with their abilities.

In the subparagraph we have before us in section 7, we have an attempt to establish a wishy-washy kind of appeal rather than the appeal system that is already strongly built into the bill in this section. Perhaps the introduction of the amendments by the Liberal Party last week and the amendment that is before us is unparliamentary in the sense that we already had that provision in the bill. It happened to be numbered 7 rather than 2 or 3 but it was there. It was a very strong and tough legislated appeal procedure.

It was clear that under that appeal procedure in section 7, just as in all legislation, there would have to be some regulations devised. But those regulations would be dependent entirely upon the statutory authority embedded in the bill. What we have here is an attempt to recover some weak ground that the Liberal Party threw away last week.

I regret that because I think in the long run—certainly in the short term but in the long run as well—what we are doing in the House now is scrambling to find a modified appeal procedure that will not, unfortunately, serve the disabled learning children of this province as well as the provision that had been passed and well thought out by the social development committee previously. Therefore, I will join with my colleague from Bellwoods in voting against this provision. By the time we get to section 7 of the bill, the Liberal Party and the Conservative Party will have built their case for gutting the bill once again and weakening it by deleting section 7 or some such action.

I cannot in conscience vote for a weakening of the legislation as it was initially presented to the committee of the whole House.

4:10 p.m.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, it was my understanding that last Tuesday at the suggestion of the member for Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney) we passed an amendment to section 2, which enshrined in that section a mechanism for appeal of the actions taken within the function of a committee. That was in addition to an amendment that had been introduced during the hearings of the social development committee, introduced by my colleague, the member for Mississauga South (Mr. Kennedy), which is section 3(2) and is numbered 5a in the reprinted bill. I am sorry that there isn't a date on it, but it was reprinted as amended by the social development committee. It does outline that there will not only be an appeal mechanism, but there must be regulations developed in order to ensure the participation of parents and guardians in that appeal mechanism for the placement of children.

I can easily accept the amendment that the identification process be a part of that review and appeal mechanism most wholeheartedly, but I am wondering whether it is appropriately placed, as the member has suggested, in section 3(1) as paragraph 5(iii) or whether it should be in section 3(2) as paragraph 5a as in the amendment introduced earlier in the committee.

Mr. Grande: Mr. Chairman, I would simply like to make two points regarding this amendment. The minister states this is not an appropriate place because it was placed under section 3(2) last Thursday. I suggest to the Liberal Party and the Liberal member who got up a few minutes ago and said this amendment was redundant and superfluous—those were his words—if the section 7 we already have in the bill stands, that we in the Legislature, both opposition parties, have the power to ensure that section 7 of the bill stands. All we need to do is vote against the amendment to section 7 that the minister will bring forth in this House. Vote against it and we have section 7 of the bill as it came out of the social development committee.

Therefore, since you strongly believe that section 7 should stand and if this amendment is redundant and superfluous, I don't understand why you are putting it forward. May I suggest to the Liberal member for Kitchener-Wilmot and to the member for York Centre what they need to do is withdraw the amendment. It is indeed redundant and superfluous. Withdraw the amendment and then stand firm on section 7 as you have done in the social development committee. Anything less than that is going to be seen to be what it is, a watering down of the position you as a party took in the social development committee.

Let's stop playing games. We know what the legislation is about. We know what the minister intends to do through this legislation and by gutting this legislation. Don't be accomplices to what the minister wants this bill not to be. All we are saying to you is to stand firm. We have a good section in this bill which will ensure the right to an appeal procedure at all the different levels where decisions are made, whether it be a decision on programs, or a decision on whether a child is going to be called an exceptional child, or whether it would be obviously a decision to a tribunal, to the Ontario special education board. We have the best appeal system that can be set up. Take heart on that side of the House. We have a good appeal process. Let us not try to water it down by adding redundant and superfluous clauses to this bill.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, the minister suggested that the spirit of my amendment might perhaps be better placed in paragraph 5a of section 3(2) of the bill. When I was considering the amendment, I realized it could have been put either place. If it were to go in 5(a), we would probably have to put the word "identification" either before or after "placements" on the second line so there would be no doubt whatsoever that the right of appeal would be at both the identification and the placement level.

As I indicated at the beginning of my comments, I am attempting at this time to leave no doubt in the mind of anyone who has to interpret this legislation that it is at both those levels we want the right of appeal. I can accept that it would be equally effective in 5(a) and, if that is what the minister is suggesting, I am quite prepared to agree to that. I will write that out unless we can accept it simply on a voice vote.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is simply the addition of two words so that it would read, "governing procedures with respect to parents or guardians for appeals in respect of identification or placement of exceptional pupils in special education programs." That is inserting "identification and/or." It could be both.

Mr. Sweeney: If the minister is prepared to make that amendment, I would be prepared to withdraw my amendment.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I would be willing to move that amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Sweeney has withdrawn his amendment. Any further comments on section 3(2) of the bill?

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, what is the amendment that has been withdrawn and removed? Would you read it back to us please?

Mr. Chairman: I can read what has been withdrawn but that is all that has taken place so far. I have nothing in writing before me. The member for Kitchener-Wilmot has withdrawn the amendment.

Mr. McClellan: I had one question that does not have to do with the amendment. I am sure the minister can deal with it. It is simply a question of factual information. I had inquiries from a number of local associations for the mentally retarded asking if it is possible for a local board of education to purchase service from an association for the mentally retarded developmental centre, either under the existing provisions of Bill 82 or under regulations that would be promulgated, presumably under this section.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I would have to clarify that specifically but I believe it is possible at the present time and should continue to be possible although there is a great deal of activity going on in discussions with the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded at the present time about the way in which those programs will be provided.

Mr. McClellan: If I could just pursue this point, I am anxious to have the power in the bill that a board of education could purchase service from an association for the mentally retarded developmental centre. Would the minister undertake to have her officials advise us where that power rests within Bill 82 so that we can be reassured on that point.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, in keeping with the withdrawal of the motion by my colleague the member for Kitchener-Wilmot, and in view of the remarks of the minister, I had tabled an amendment to this subsection earlier this afternoon that is in keeping with what the minister had said. So I move that section 3(2)(5a) be amended by adding—

Mr. Foulds: We are still on section 1.

Mr. Stong: I am sorry. I am moving an amendment to subsection 2, if it is in order.

Mr. McClellan: Rather than hold up proceedings, I am quite willing to return to the question, if I can have an assurance from the minister that if that power is not in the bill, whatever action is necessary to put it in would be taken.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I was concerned about the amendment which we were—

Mr. Chairman: This is on subsection 2.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: That is what we were discussing.

Mr. Foulds: We have not reached the introduction of that yet.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Pardon me. Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Shall subsection 1 carry?

Mr. McClellan: Subject to coming back to that one point, yes.

Subsection 1 stood down.

On subsection 2:

Mr. Chairman: I have two amendments. I think they are very similar. One is by the member for York Centre and one is by the minister.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: In response to the question of the member for Bellwoods, while there are co-operative activities that go on voluntarily, at present boards are not able to purchase services from an association for the mentally retarded under the act. There is now much discussion being carried out in order to determine the most appropriate ways in which co-operatively to provide services, and I cannot at this time define the capability of a board to purchase a particular service from a voluntary agency.

Mr. McClellan: This represents a major problem then. I think a number of people, myself included, and certainly a number of the people within the associations for the mentally retarded, are really concerned about the capacity of local boards of education to develop programs for developmentally handicapped children. Secondly, a great many local associations for the mentally retarded have developmental centres in place and are providing a very excellent program for developmentally handicapped children.

Our concern is that this bill not place things in a state of confusion or jeopardy. It seems to me it would be sensible for the minister to remedy what I feel is a defect in her policy, and to make provisions, even if it is on a transitional basis, so that a local board is able to purchase service from the local branch of the OAMR. Are there policy objections to the purchase of service from the local OAMR branch, or what?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the policy at present is that the service is purchased or is provided by the Ministry of Community and Social Services programs which are available within those communities, and which may co-operate and work with the OAMR, but not through a specific institution established by OAMR. In fact, most of the co-operative service carried on is in the opposite direction; that is, that educational program is provided through a local board to an OAMR facility through agreements which are reached under the Education Act.

Mr. Foulds: I think we do need to clarify it. Is there a statutory inhibition in the present Education Act that prevents a school board from purchasing services from a local association for the mentally retarded? Do they have the authority at the present time to purchase such services? If that is in the present act, then I think we do not have difficulty. If it is not in the present act, then I believe my colleague is asking that an amendment be put in this bill, which is simply an amendment to the Education Act, so that authority clearly is in the Education Act and in this bill.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, if I may, I would submit that the authority is probably in the act under a broad interpretation of the regulation sections and it becomes a policy decision and, in a sense, an administrative decision as well for the ministry to decide whether it will permit that to happen in those circumstances and situations where it is warranted.

I do not intend to belabour the point: I simply wanted to raise it and find out what the situation was. It would be a money amendment at any rate and not within the purview of the opposition to move, but I commend that particular course of action to the ministry so at least that capability is there. It may not ever have to be exercised, but on the other hand, it may, and that flexibility should be afforded the ministry.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, if the member is suggesting that a local chapter of the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded should be capable of providing educational program for handicapped children under the purview of a board of education, I would express to him my concern that the very purpose of Bill 82 is to ensure that school boards themselves will have the capability of developing and providing the appropriate educational or instructional program for those handicapped children. In co-operation with OAMR, through all of the discussions which are going on, I am sure that is what is going to happen.

If the member is suggesting that boards would not have to develop that capability but could rely on a local voluntary agency to develop an educational program, then I think you are missing the intent of the bill completely.

Mr. McClellan: That is not what I said at all and there is no possible way that anybody could take that interpretation from what I said. I am talking about transitional, and where circumstances warrant—and I have no idea whether circumstances ever would warrant it. I am simply saying that is a flexibility that ought to be afforded and I am raising it at the request of a number of representatives from associations for the mentally retarded.

Yes, I understand the purpose of the bill. Thank you.

Section 3(1) agreed to.

On section 3(2):

Mr. Chairman: Honourable Miss Stephenson moves that paragraph 5a of subsection (1) of section 10 of the act as set out in section 3(2) of the bill be amended by adding the words "identification and/or" after the word "of" in line two and before the word "placements" in line two.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The expert on legislative drafting in the Liberal Party has just informed me that one cannot use and/or with an oblique between them in legislation. I stand corrected. Whatever is the appropriate form to ensure that either or both might be included, I will accept.

Mr. Stong: I tabled an amendment this afternoon dealing with this very section, in keeping with what you are suggesting, using the words "identification of and" to be placed before "placements."

4:30 p.m.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, the amendment does not scan. It would read, "in respect of placements of identification and/or exceptional pupils." Is that right?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No, it is in line two, "appeals in respect of identification and/or placements of exceptional pupils in special education programs."

Mr. Stong: In my respectful submission, the amendment as offered by the minister does not conform to proper drafting in the use of the words "and/or." I would offer an amendment to the minister either using the word "and" or "or." You have to use one or the other but you cannot have both. May I amend it to say "and"?

Mr. Chairman: Will the minister who made the amendment adjust that?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes. I have just been handed by legislative counsel—thank you—the appropriate amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Honourable Miss Stephenson moves that paragraph 5a of subsection 1 of section 10 of the act as set out in section 3(2) of the bill be amended by inserting after the word "of" where it appears for the first time in the second line, "identification and."

Mr. McClellan: I again say how superfluous the amendment is. If you look at section 7 of the bill dealing with section 34(10)(a) of the act, it says very clearly: "The board shall hear and determine appeals by parents and pupils from any decision of the placement committee." It is already in the statute. The game here is to move it into the regulation.

Mr. Stong: Lest by my silence I be read to acquiesce in my friend's last comments, just let it be said it is not yet superfluous.

Mr. McClellan: It will not be superfluous once they delete section 7 and replace it by the Mickey Mouse, watered-down version.

Mr. Chairman: Order. Shall the amendment carry?

All those in favour will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Section 3(2), as amended, agreed to.

On section 3(3):

Mr. McClellan: Do the regulations require payment of the cost of education at elementary and secondary schools by pupils, or is it optional?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I beg your pardon?

Mr. McClellan: We are talking about a number of children identified here. These are children admitted to a centre, facility, home or hospital. My question is what do the regulations require with respect to this group of children?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am not at all sure this is within the regulation, Mr. Chairman. It is my understanding that it is the responsibility that the provision of the educational program will be made under the Education Act, which means it is based upon a contribution of tax funds.

Mr. McClellan: This is the regulation section. This subsection permits you to make regulations with respect to the payment of the cost of education for these children.

My only question—I am sorry I put it so badly—is, is this optional or is it a requirement that the cost be paid?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is not optional in terms of the educational program for those children.

Mr. McClellan: So it does require you to make a payment?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes.

The Deputy Chairman: Any further discussion on subsection 3?

Section 3(3) agreed to.

Section 3, as amended, agreed to.

Sections 4 to 6, inclusive, agreed to.

On section 7:

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, last week I had introduced to the House proposed amendments to section 7 which would have deleted the entire section 7 as it appears in the reprinted bill and replaced it. I would ask the Chairman's permission to do the same this week.

At this point, I should like to move that my previous amendments dealing with section 7 of the bill be withdrawn and the following inserted in lieu thereof—thereafter follows five pages of amendments, which pages are in the hands of the members opposite.

The Deputy Chairman: The chair has no amendments before it at the present time. I think those amendments should be read into the record. You say that the critics have those. I think they should be read and moved.

Honourable Miss Stephenson moves that section 7 of the bill be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

7. (1) Section 34 of the said act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"34. (1) In this section,

"(a) 'board' includes the Metropolitan Toronto School Board;

"(b) 'hard-to-serve pupil' means a pupil who, under this section, is determined to be unable to profit by instruction offered by a board due to a mental handicap or a mental and one or more additional handicaps;

"(c) 'school' includes a pupil or class for trainable retarded pupils.

"(2) Where a principal considers that an exceptional pupil who attends his school is, because of a mental or a mental and one or more additional handicaps, unable to profit by instruction, or where the parent or guardian of a pupil considers that the pupil is, because of a mental or a mental and one or more additional handicaps, unable to profit by instruction, the principal shall refer the matter to the appropriate supervisory officer who shall refer the matter to the board, and the board shall appoint a committee of three persons, consisting of a supervisory officer, a principal and a legally qualified medical practitioner who has expertise in respect of the mental or other handicap of the pupil, none of whom is a person to whom the matter has been previously referred.

"(3) The committee referred to in subsection 2 shall,

“(a) in accordance with subsection 4, inquire into the alleged inability of the pupil to profit by instruction;

“(b) determine whether the pupil can profit by instruction or determine that the pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil,

“and the committee shall make a written report of its findings and of its determination to the board and to the parent or guardian of the pupil.

“(4) The committee shall, for the purposes of its inquiry, study all existing reports in respect of the pupil, hear the teachers, the parent or guardian of the pupil, where reasonably possible the pupil, and any other person who may be able to contribute information bearing upon the matter and may, with the consent of the parent or guardian of the pupil, and of the pupil where he is an adult and capable of giving such consent, obtain and consider in respect of the pupil, the report of an assessment conducted by a person considered by the committee to be competent for the purpose.

“(5) Any costs incurred in respect of an assessment or examination under this section, or in respect of the obtaining of other evidence required by the committee under subsection 3 or under subsection 6 shall be paid by the board referred to in subsection 2.

“(6) Where the parent or guardian of a person in respect of whom a determination has been made under clause c of subsection 3, or the person, where he is an adult,

“(a) believes that by reason of improvement in the condition of the person or other cause the person has become able to profit by instruction; and

“(b) furnishes to a supervisory officer of the board in whose jurisdiction the person resides, evidence or information to establish such belief,

“the board shall appoint a committee constituted in accordance with subsection 2 that shall review the determination in respect of the person last made under this section and confirm or alter such determination and for such purpose the committee has the powers and duties of a committee under subsection 3, which subsection applies with necessary modifications to such a review.

“(7) Where a committee under subsection 3 or subsection 6 determines that a pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil, the committee shall so notify the board and the board shall consider the recommendation and determine that the pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil or that the pupil is considered to need placement in a special educational program, as the case may be, and shall notify the parent or guardian of the pupil in writing of its determination.

“(8) Where the board determines that the pupil is considered to need placement in a special education program, the board shall refer the matter to the appropriate committee established under subparagraph (iii) of paragraph 5 of subsection 1 of section 10 that shall determine, designate or design an appropriate special education program for the exceptional pupil.

“(9) Where the board determines that the pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil and the parent or guardian of the pupil agrees with the said determination, the board shall assist the parent or guardian to locate a placement suited to the needs of the pupil and reimburse the parent or guardian for any expenses incurred by the parent or guardian in locating such placement.

“(10) Where,

“(a) the board determines that a pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil and the parent or guardian of the pupil disagrees with such determination and believes that the pupil is able to profit by instruction; or

“(b) the board locates a placement under subsection 9 and the parent or guardian disagrees with the placement,

“the parent or guardian of the pupil may, within 15 days of the receipt of the notice under subsection 7 or at any time prior to the implementation of the placement under subsection 9, notify the board in writing of the disagreement and the board shall forthwith refer the matter to the secretary of a special education tribunal establishment under subsection 1 of section 34a, by forwarding all the documentation outlining the special education programs and special education services that have been provided to the pupil and all existing reports and relevant material in respect of the pupil.

“(11) The board shall reimburse the parent or guardian for any expense he incurs in connection with the referral to and subsequent hearing by the tribunal referred to in subsection 10, provided that such expenses are approved by the tribunal.

“(12) The special education tribunal shall consider the referral and, after a hearing and review of the report of the committee referred to in subsection 3 and the determination of the board, shall find that,

“(a) the pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil;

“(b) the pupil is considered to need placement in a special education program; or

"(c) that the proposed placement under subsection 9 is or is not suited to the needs of the pupil

"and so notify in writing the parent or guardian of the pupil, the board and the minister.

"(13) Where the tribunal finds that the pupil is considered to need placement in a special education program, the board shall provide a special education program and special education services for the pupil and the board shall, within 60 days of receipt of the notice under subsection 12, inform the minister of the special education services that have been provided for the pupil.

"(14) Where, under subsection 12, the tribunal finds the pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil or that the placement under subsection 9 is not suited to the needs of the pupil, the board shall assist the parent or guardian to locate a placement or a new placement, as the case may be, suited to the needs of the pupil and reimburse the parent or guardian for any expenses incurred by the parent or guardian in locating such placement.

"(15) Where, pursuant to an application by the board or by the pupil or on his behalf for judicial review under the Judicial Review Procedure Act, 1971, the finding of the special education tribunal is set aside, the determination of the board under subsection 7 shall be referred to a special education tribunal for a new hearing conducted by members of the tribunal other than those who first heard the matter if the board or the parent or guardian of the pupil, as the case may be, makes application therefor to the secretary of the special education tribunal by registered mail within 15 days after the date of the order of the court setting aside the finding of the special education tribunal and the provisions of subsections 11, 12, 13 and 14 apply with the necessary modification in respect of a hearing by the special education tribunal under this subsection.

"(16) A placement of a hard-to-serve pupil under subsection 9 or 14 shall be made in Ontario, except where no placement suited to the needs of the pupil is available in Ontario.

"(17) Where a hard-to-serve pupil is placed under subsection 9 or 14, Ontario shall pay the cost, if any, of such placement.

"(2) The said act is amended by adding thereto the following section:

"34a (1) For the purposes of subsection 10 of section 34 the Lieutenant Governor in Council shall establish one or more tribunals known as special education tribunals and appoint a secretary of such tribunals.

"(2) The Lieutenant Governor in Council may by order,

"(a) establish the procedures that shall apply; and

"(b) authorize special education tribunals to fix and assess costs, with respect to matters dealt with by special education tribunals."

Did the member for York Centre have a comment?

Mr. Stong: I was going to ask a question, Mr. Chairman, but the minister covered it by including in her amendment subsection 2.

The Deputy Chairman: May the chair ask two questions? If the minister would refer to page 3 of your amendments the last paragraph with the last heavy number of lines, after "subsection 7," 10 lines from the bottom—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, do you mean in section 10 at the bottom of page 3?

The Deputy Chairman: Yes, that is right.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Receipt of the notice under subsection 7?

The Deputy Chairman: Yes. Now what are the next two words after "notice under subsection 7"?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: "Or any time prior to the implementation of the placement under subsection 9."

The Deputy Chairman: When you were reading it, you read, "or at any time."

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am sorry.

The Deputy Chairman: Then on page 4, in the third line of section 11, it reads, "to and subsequent." Is that "any subsequent" or "a subsequent." That is line 3 on page 4.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It reads "with the referral to and subsequent hearing by the tribunal."

The Deputy Chairman: All right, so "and" is correct there.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, in order to put our debate on this section in some kind of perspective, I must go back to the committee hearings of September 30, since our participation in those particular committee hearings has been referred to a number of times by other members of this House. I must say that the references to those committee hearings have not always been put in total perspective.

First of all, let us realize that right from the very beginning, going back to last May and June when this bill was first introduced, I have made it very clear that there were two aspects of the then current section 7 of the bill that troubled me greatly and that would have to be changed before it could get my support. I said we would have to eliminate the exclusion clause. I made it very clear that there was no way that we could say, on the one hand, that this legislation was designed to serve every single child or pupil in this province who had a special need and, at the same time, have an exclusion clause.

I made it very clear that, in my judgement, what we needed to say instead was that the school board had a responsibility to every single child admitted to its jurisdiction either to provide a program to meet that child's needs itself or to find an alternative program someplace else. Quite frankly, it does not matter where else it is, as long as it meets that child's needs. That was the exclusion concept.

The other part of section 7 I insisted had to be changed in some way was to provide for an appeal mechanism for parents because we spoke at that time of the number of parents in this province with children, particularly with severe learning disabilities and the experience they had with their particular school boards. In many cases, they tried but simply were not able and, in some cases, in my judgement, they did not try hard enough. In many cases, they did try but simply were unable to meet the child's needs, and we had to use such mechanisms as the vocational rehabilitation service of the Ministry of Community and Social Services. Those were the two essentials. There were a lot of other things we talked about, but they were the two essentials we still had to deal with.

Next I want to go to the standing committee on social development hearing of September 30, in which on at least three occasions I clearly indicated to the minister that I was still concerned about these two concepts. I introduced amendments which, in my judgement, would speak to that concern and would have corrected what I felt was a flaw in the legislation. For any number of reasons those amendments were not accepted.

I am looking at page 47 of the committee Hansard of September 30, in which I specifically plead with the minister and say in effect, "If you cannot accept my amendments and you know what it is that I am concerned about, please go back and make an amendment of your own that will speak to these concerns." I note in here particularly, "that there are children who are capable of being educated but who are not going to get what they need, who are going to be shunted off and who are going to be excluded in other ways. That is my concern."

On page 48, I refer once again to the amendment that was then before us which was presented to the committee initially by the Justice for Children association and then later, more directly, by the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan) as an amendment of his own. I made reference to that and I said to the minister I felt this particular amendment was too rigid, just too tight. I used those exact words. I said I would hope that we could deal with this issue in some more moderate way.

I once again appealed to the minister to take the legislation back and to bring in an amendment that would speak to the concerns. I pointed out, however, that if the minister was unwilling to do so, then I would be left with no alternative—and that was very clear from my words—but to support the amendment proposed by Justice for Children. In fact, that is what happened on September 30.

We are now faced with a different set of circumstances and that must be recognized. We are now faced with an amendment to section 7 which the minister has introduced and in which she has made some considerable steps forward. I clearly indicated on September 30 that if the minister was willing to move forward on this, if the minister was willing to recognize the concerns that had been expressed and make some changes to the section, I would be prepared to co-operate and to make the bill on those lines.

We have not yet gone all the way, but we have come a long way. We clearly have eliminated the exclusion clause, and for that I offer my support and co-operation to the minister. That is what we were asking for; the minister has recognized it and it is gone.

We clearly have a defined appeal mechanism. As the minister will note in some further amendments my colleague and I will make, we want to go a little bit beyond it. But the situation we are dealing with here today is a significantly different one than what we were dealing with on September 30. We now have a version of section 7 of this bill which is clearly different, which is clearly an improvement over what the minister had presented to us on September 30 and prior to September 30. To suggest that the only version of this bill we are looking at or that we should look at is the amended one that came out on September 30 is a distortion of the possibilities that are available to us.

First of all, I want to draw to the minister's attention a comment she made at a public forum to the board of education for the borough of York on Thursday of this week. There are a number of very good comments in that, but there is one in particular I would draw her attention to on page 6, and the minister will recognize it. She is referring to the new legislation and she says: "Many exceptional children with special needs just have not been able to have those needs met adequately in our publicly financed schools."

That was another way of the minister saying we needed something like Bill 82 to meet that very obvious need. She was saying that to the extent to which school boards in this province had done as much as they could, to the extent that school boards in this province have the financial and the human resources to meet all the needs of special education children in this province it was clearly not effective enough. She was saying we needed a piece of legislation that was going to do that, and we have come a long way in that.

Last week I introduced four amendments dealing with the broader interpretation of hard-to-serve pupil in this legislation. Instead of limiting the hard-to-serve pupil to "one who is unable to profit by instruction," I added words to make it read "unable to profit by instruction offered by a board." That was done with care and consideration. The point I want to make here now is that we have under the jurisdiction of the boards of this province children who, for whatever reason, simply are not getting an adequate education as offered by their boards.

The implementation of this bill over the next five years will go a long way towards relieving that. If the implementation of this bill goes, as the minister has stated it should and as she believes it should go, then we will probably be in a situation where every single school board in this province will meet the needs of every single student in its jurisdiction. That is the hope; that is the promise; that is the vision. I sincerely hope the minister is right, because that would be my promise. It would be my vision as well that we could in the public schools of this province meet the appropriate needs of every single child.

5 p.m.

However, despite our best intentions, despite our best efforts to put enough money into it and to put enough human resources into it, there is the distinct possibility there may still be some children whose needs cannot be met under the jurisdiction of a board. Those children are going to be defined as hard-to-serve children. Section 7 speaks to them. By adding the words, "offered by a board" after "instruction," what I am clearly referring to is any child for whom the board has done the best it can, but for whatever reason is simply not able to meet that child's needs, whatever those needs might be, whether they may be needs of care or educational needs. Therefore, that is the specific purpose of adding those words. I would suggest it is a significant addition. It is not just put in there for fluff.

The other amendments I had proposed previously concerned two different places—subsection 9 and subsection 14. In both cases, in the version the minister gave us last week, those sections did relate to placement of a child someplace else, either by a board or by the tribunal. The purpose of my amendments was to clearly indicate that either the board or the ministry would have to fund those placements. In the amendment the minister has given us today, she has responded to that in section (7) 17. It now says: "Where a hard-to-serve pupil is placed under subsection 9 or 14, Ontario shall pay the cost." I am pleased to see the minister has incorporated that section of my amendment.

A third point I attempted to make in my amendments was to draw attention to the fact that a child's needs may not be able to be met within the province. Therefore, I asked that the words "in Ontario" in subsection 9 and in subsection 14 be deleted. The purpose of that was to allow the child to be placed outside Ontario if the best efforts by school boards, the tribunal and the ministry could not meet the particular needs of a child within Ontario. Under this legislation, the tribunal or the board would not be prohibited from going outside the province to find what the child needs.

I notice in the minister's amended version in subsection 16 that she speaks to this as well. The minister says in the amendment: "Where a placement of a hard-to-serve pupil under subsection 9 or 14 shall be made in Ontario except where no placement suited to the needs of the pupil is available in Ontario." That speaks to the same point I am making once again. I will indicate clearly to the minister I will support that.

I made a fourth amendment with respect to the rights of the tribunal. Here I was referring to subsection 10, in which case it was not just the determination of a hard-to-serve pupil, but also the decision by the board to place a hard-to-serve pupil and that the parent or guardian, through the tribunal, would have the right to appeal both the identification of a hard-to-serve pupil and also the right to appeal the board's decision to place that pupil.

The minister, through the amendments given to us today, has made that change in subsection 10 of this section where in 10(b) the minister now has "the board locates a placement under subsection 9 and the parent or guardian disagrees with the placement." Once again, the minister has recognized the amendment I placed last week and has incorporated it into her own legislation.

I can say that the amendments I made available to the minister which were intended to broaden the definition of what a hard-to-serve pupil is and clearly to indicate who was going to pay the cost, where the service could be obtained and, finally, to insist that the placement decision of a hard-to-serve pupil should also be open to appeal, and not just the identification of the hard-to-serve pupil, have all been brought forward. I will most certainly support those sections of the amendment.

In the interval, as I read over the version of the amendment the minister made available to us last week, I realize there was an internal inconsistency by adding the words "offered by a board" in subsection 1, but not also adding them in subsection 2 and 3 where they appear again. Therefore, at this time I am introducing a further amendment which I believe the Chairman has in front of him. Actually, it will be an amendment to my amendment because part of it has already been done.

What I am referring to is my first amendment under section 7. I had moved that the minister's amendments be further amended, as she has done, by adding "offered by the board" after "instruction" in the sixth line of section 7(1) of the bill being section 34(1)(b) of the act. That has already been done. I would then go on in the fourth and seventh lines of section 7(2) and in the fifth and ninth lines of section 7(3).

I would draw to the attention of the Chairman and the minister that those are added only to be consistent with the change the minister has already accepted in section 7(1) of the bill. There is no hidden intent there whatsoever. I am assuming that since the minister has accepted the concept in section 7(1), she will equally accept the same concept in subsections 2 and 3 of adding "offered by a board."

At this time, I would like to state an understanding and to have the minister, at some point before the afternoon is over, assure me that my understanding is correct. We are speaking here of a piece of legislation which is not intended to be fully implemented until 1985.

First, it is my understanding the minister made known to us that school boards across the province would be expected—and there would be some kind of monitoring going on—to be implementing in a phased-in procedure as much of this legislation as they are able each year between now and 1985. In other words, between now and 1985 we are talking about a transitional period before the bill becomes fully implemented and fully effective. However, during that period of time, school boards do not have the choice to ignore this legislation. The school boards are bound by this legislation to the degree they have both the financial and human resources to implement it. The minister is going to monitor it to be sure they do that. That is my first understanding, if the minister would confirm it.

Second, my understanding is during that transition-implementation period, the provision now available to parents and guardians in this province to go before the vocational rehabilitation board and ask for assistance for their children with special needs will be continued. As part of it, I would understand that any child who by 1985 was in the process of being assisted by the vocational rehabilitation board would certainly have that continued understanding, if the minister would clearly identify that.

5:10 p.m.

At this point, I will let my amendment stand. If the minister wishes at this time to correct anything I have said or to add to it, then I wish she would please do so.

The Deputy Chairman: I would direct a word to the member for Kitchener-Wilmot. The clerk has before us some amendments which I think you tabled some time ago. You have not moved them yet. Since this is such a long and rather complicated amendment that the minister has put forward, my proposal would be to move it section by section.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: If I may, the member for Kitchener-Wilmot had produced some subamendments to the amendments which I introduced last Tuesday. In discussing these, it was felt it would be less confusing for the members of the House if those areas in which we could agree were incorporated into an entirely new amendment. This was the reason I suggested earlier that it would be my position that I would withdraw the amendment I introduced last Tuesday and introduce the new amendment to section 7 which incorporates all but one of the amendments the member for Kitchener-Wilmot suggested. He suggested this afternoon that his were additions, made after perusing the new amendment we introduced, in order to provide for consistency.

The Deputy Chairman: Since we did not get to section 7 last week, your amendment was not formally put. Therefore, there is no need to withdraw it. I simply have before me now the amendment you put today.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, if I may, the list of amendments which the member for Kitchener-Wilmot introduced last week no longer applies because they have been incorporated into the amendment which I introduced this week, except for the additional words, "offered by a board" in two other places.

The Deputy Chairman: I don't know whether the member for Kitchener-Wilmot agrees that this is the case. If he does not, I am asking him to hold the amendments he may want to make until we come to the appropriate sections of this amendment.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, it might be simpler for everyone if I made it clear, as I attempted to do in my overview of what has happened in the last couple of months, that I now recognize that the second, third and fourth amendments I have before you are no longer applicable because the minister has included them in her new amendment. Therefore, I withdraw those three.

However, I have indicated that the second and third parts of my first amendment are still applicable. I think the simplest thing for me to do for your benefit is to cross out what is no longer applicable, and to leave what is applicable there. I will do that now.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, while the honourable member is writing, I would like an opportunity to speak both to the amendment and to any subsequent subamendments. I will concede that the Minister of Education has moved a considerable distance with respect to the so-called hard-to-serve child who is unable to profit by instruction. When we were in committee, the Minister of Education was insisting that the language of the old section 34 of the Education Act be retained and that children not able to profit by instruction would be excluded and virtually dropped.

Interjection.

Mr. McClellan: I interpret the language; "the board will assist to locate" as meaning "dropped." The minister has moved some distance and, regrettably, so has the Liberal Party but in the other direction.

Mr. Foulds: The minister's advance is the Liberal Party's retreat.

Mr. McClellan: That's right. We have an amendment before us and, regardless of what the member for Kitchener-Wilmot will do, it only deals with one particular situation. That is the situation of the child who is designated a hard-to-serve pupil who, because of a mental handicap or a mental or one or more additional handicaps, is unable to profit by instruction. We are still talking only about one group of children; we are still talking about those children who used to be excluded under section 34 of the Education Act. That is all we are talking about. We are not talking about a comprehensive appeal system that covers all areas of decision-making of a local board of education placement committee. We are only talking about decisions that are made with respect to children who are designated hard-to-serve pupils.

I will concede that the refinements that have been made in the area of an appeal procedure for hard-to-serve children have been substantial, so that we appear at this time to have an appeal mechanism that could result in the end in a child actually getting a program. I still have concerns that the procedures aren't spelled out with respect to what happens when one goes before this tribunal, but at least most of the areas that were silent have been filled in so that the dots have been completed.

The main problem for us remains that it is an utterly partial appeal system. There is still no appeal provision within the amendments being put forward by the Liberals and Conservatives that deals with the question of who is an exceptional pupil and who is not. There is still no appeal provision in the statute as proposed by the Liberals and Conservatives with respect to what kind of special education programs and special education services an exceptional pupil will get.

All we have is an answer to the question of what happens to the hard-to-serve pupil who is unable to profit by instruction because of a mental handicap. That is what it says and that is what it is. Don't try to pretend it is something it isn't. That is the game that is being played here this afternoon and it is absolutely infuriating because a fraud is being perpetrated when you try to say an appeal system covers everybody when it doesn't. The reality is in the language.

Before one can appeal under what is before us, the board of education has to determine that a pupil is a hard-to-serve pupil. That is the only group of children that can appeal under what is in front of us, that is, children who have been designated by a board of education as hard-to-serve pupils. That is the reality. That is what the statute says, and a hard-to-serve pupil is defined. It is not an exceptional pupil and it is not an exceptional pupil who is entitled to special education services. It is a pupil who is determined to be unable to profit by instruction offered by the board due to a mental handicap or one or more additional handicaps. That is a very restrictive definition. It is very clear what that will mean in terms of the operation of the appeal procedure. Let us not have any nonsense about this being comprehensive or universal because it isn't. It is restricted to that one group of children.

It is important that at least that replaces the old exclusion provision and, as I said, I am pleased that the minister has moved that far. But she has not moved to provide an appeal for the question: "Who is an exceptional pupil?" The local board of education will define that.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Sections 2 and 3.

Mr. McClellan: Those are regulation sections. If you don't understand at this time the difference between an appeal procedure that is in the statute and one that is left to your discretion through regulation, I don't intend to go through it again. I have gone through it three or four times already.

5:20 p.m.

We have seen your appeal procedure in regulation 704-78 under the Education Act I referred to earlier. You called it an appeal procedure when we were in committee. You did not call it a review procedure; you called it an appeal procedure. You insisted it was an appeal procedure until it was pointed out to you what a sham it was.

I think it is our responsibility to put a genuine appeal procedure into the statute. That is precisely what the existing section 7, which we passed in the social development committee, does. It covers all three areas of decision-making: who is an exceptional pupil, what kind of special education programs and services a child should get and, finally, how to deal with the so-called hard-to-serve child. We have covered all three areas of decision-making in the bill. It is right in front of us. It is eminently supportable.

I regret very much the other two parties do not intend to support section 7 as amended by the committee. Rather, they intend to try to pass off this very limited appeal system as somehow covering all of the areas which require appeal. If we in the Legislature are prepared to give such enormous powers of decision-making to any outside body, we have an obligation to provide a means of redress to the citizen against wrong decisions. Surely we can all accept that principle.

We say simply that human beings are not infallible. Bureaucrats are not infallible; they make mistakes. They are likely to make a mistake with respect to whether some child in this province is an exceptional pupil or not, and if they make a mistake that child will not be eligible for special education. Some official of a local board of education may make a mistake with respect to which special education program a particular child should be receiving and, unless there is an appeal procedure, that mistake cannot be corrected. It is as simple as that.

As I said, we have dealt through the amendment and the subamendment with hard-to-serve kids, but in the process we are wiping out the appeal system on the other two questions. It is a nonsensical retreat on the part of my colleague the member for Kitchener-Wilmot, however nicely he wants to put it. The minister simply is as intransigent as ever.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, when Bill 82 was originally introduced in the House, it was debated in principle. That principle was to meet a need which existed in society and that was a need which existed in children who had special needs in the educational process. In addressing that principle, this entire House unanimously passed Bill 82 in principle. In other words, we wanted to come up with a bill which met and satisfied the special needs known as exceptional needs in this bill.

The committee was set up and the bill was sent to committee. The committee reviewed the bill clause by clause. In committee, amendments were made to the bill as an indication to the House what the committee wanted and as a direction to the House. The matter is now back before the House for reconsideration on a clause-by-clause procedure.

Last week we considered the rights section. The rights section, as it has been dubbed by the party on the left, dealt with issues concerning all children. This was clearly inconsistent with the principle of the bill because the bill was passed in principle to deal with exceptional children with exceptional needs. So the rights section was amended by this House in committee of the whole last week to meet and satisfy the principle of the bill. In fact, written into that rights section was that the bill dealt with exceptional children. We as a House on the whole met with the principle and reviewed and amended the bill to conform to the principle that this House unanimously passed.

Not only that but last week, pursuant to the amendments by this party, we included words such as "appropriate program." We included the fact that there should be no extra cost to the parents for the appropriate program and we also enshrined in that rights legislation a guarantee of an appeal, which I might say without referring at great length to it, the party on my left voted against.

We now have before us section 7. An amendment to section 7 was moved by the minister. At the outset, in recognition of the need that existed in society, and perhaps because of the lengthy delay and the problems parents of children with exceptional handicaps were experiencing, confidence probably was eroded and parents no longer had the same trust or expected the same treatment. They did not enjoy the same confidence in the ministry as they would otherwise have done.

Now we have a bill before us in its present form from the committee that deals with three fundamental procedures. Number one is the identification of a student as an exceptional student, and we also have a definition in the present bill of what an exceptionality is. Not only does the present bill from the committee deal with identification, but it also deals with placement in section 7. Not only that, but it deals with the hard-to-serve student whose needs cannot be satisfied in the present system.

The minister has moved an amendment to that section which, in my respectful submission, is almost a 180-degree deviation from what the committee had recommended for this House's passage in committee of the whole House. In so far as that deviation occurred and in so far as the amendment we are now considering deals with the one problem that is before the House, that is, setting up an appeal mechanism for the hard-to-serve children, the amendment is acceptable and applaudable, but it is lacking in two very significant areas.

First, it is lacking in the area of identification, setting up an appeal procedure and guaranteeing that appeal procedure, independent of the minister's discretion, for the parents of the child who are not satisfied with the placement. Second, the section, as amended by the minister, does not deal with the placement and the review of placement of any other child except the hard-to-serve child. The hard-to-serve child is looked after very well and the bill is extremely fair in that regard. Because this amendment is a matter of a complete turnabout, so to speak, we almost have to deal with it in principle as opposed to going through it section by section and clause by clause.

In the light of the remarks that were made by my colleague from Kitchener-Wilmot (Mr. Sweeney), I have amendments I want and intend to offer to this clause. As the clause is set up, it deals with and serves only the hard-to-serve pupil. The thrust is directed toward that segment of our school population that falls within this definition. It sets up identification; it sets up a committee for review; it sets up going back to the board; it sets up a special educational tribunal. Even from the educational tribunal, one can appeal to a judge who can refer it back to the tribunal for reconsideration. This is all to deal with the hard-to-serve pupil. Nothing is said in this section about the placement or the identification in terms of review. It is because this section is silent in those two regards that I have amendments to offer to the minister.

5:30 p.m.

As have other members, I have been deluged by mail, by phone calls, by telegrams. I have met with the York County Board of Education which has expressed its concerns to me. Their first concern is that in its present form Bill 82 is overbearing, unwieldy and perhaps unworkable. This is as it came out of the committee.

I accept the observations given to me by expert educators. I accept what they say about its implementation. It has also been brought to my attention that the appeal procedure, as set up in Bill 82 from committee, overrides the responsibility and takes away the responsibility from the Minister of Education for providing education and providing special programs. I accept that as an observation as well.

First and foremost, I accept the statement made in a letter that was written to me by the chairman of the York County Board of Education. She said: "Let me make it clear that the York County Board of Education is not opposed to the idea of universal accessibility to an appropriate education for every child." I accept that. I accept the fact that this bill is necessary because it meets a need in society, but the form in which the minister has introduced her amendments is not acceptable to this member.

I might say that at the appropriate time—and I need guidance on this—there are two principles that section 7 does not cover that we intend to offer as amendments. We will offer as an amendment the right to appeal the identification. We will offer as an amendment the right to appeal the placement, and there is already written into this section, a right to appeal for the hard-to-serve pupil. The appeal mechanism is important. The hard-to-serve pupil, under the present amendment offered by the minister, can go to a committee, can go to a board, can go to a tribunal and can go to a court.

I accept the observations of educators and those in the boards of education who fear an onslaught. I accept it in this regard only as an onslaught of litigation. I accept it in only where the exceptionally gifted child's needs are not met. Perhaps that will be the source of most of our appeals; perhaps it will not. It is conjecture and a projection, but I accept the observations of educators when they tell me that is the quarter from which they fear the most appeals.

It is very important that the appeal mechanism for the hard-to-serve child be maintained, but it is equally important that appeal mechanisms be guaranteed and set up independently at the discretion of the minister with respect to identification and placement.

My amendments to this section, which will be tabled at the proper time, will set up an appeal procedure so that in the case of identification and placement the parent, guardian or student—the person affected if he is an adult—will have the right to appeal to the minister, will have the right to appeal to the board and will have the right to go to a tribunal. At that point, his appeal depends on leave given by the tribunal to go further only in relation to the identification and the placement of individual exceptional pupils.

I realize we cannot take out of the hands of the boards or the ministry the right to educate, the obligation to educate and the responsibility to set up appropriate programs. We do not intend to do that. Also, it is my respectful submission to this House that it is distinguishable; that in terms of the identification and placement process there is a distinction between that process and the process of satisfying a child or pupil who is hard to serve. A pupil who is hard to serve can eventually go to court as a right to determine his rights under the present amendment. It is far-reaching and the minister has come a long way. She is to be congratulated for that.

I am not proposing that a parent or a child who wishes to appeal his identification or placement be given an appeal to the court as a right, but that when the appeal procedure goes beyond the board or the committee set up by the board, it be determined by granting of leave by the special tribunal which is already set up.

It seems to me that the aspect of an appeal from identification and the aspect of an appeal from placement should be written into this section. I happen to agree with the member for Bellwoods (Mr. McClellan)—unbelievable as that is—that the sections we have passed now are procedural only and that the appeal mechanism must be set out in this section. It is my intention to move at the appropriate time those amendments to the minister's sections to guarantee the right of appeal along the same terms that she has set out already with respect to the hard-to-serve student.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, I rise in some perplexity because of the previous speaker.

Interjections.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Foulds: I do not know why "perplexity" is such a provocative word in this Legislature. Over the past few days we have seen a lot of provocation dealing with other matters.

First, I sympathize with the previous speaker and wish him luck in his endeavours. Regrettable though I find it, I think the easiest solution would be to vote against the minister's amendments and stick with section 7 as it exists in the bill. That is the easiest and most straightforward solution to the problem. That may very well happen.

I hope the member for York Centre (Mr. Stong) has persuaded himself to come that far because his amendments, as he is proposing them, do not really meet the needs to which he is speaking. I glanced at those amendments quickly and, although they broaden the appeal procedure, the amendments, as we have received them, do not tell us what happens with that appeal procedure. They do not tell us what recourse the parent has if he or she is dissatisfied with the placement of the child.

However, I think the previous speaker has done the House a great service because he has eloquently pinpointed, as has my colleague from Bellwoods, the very grave weakness in the legislation as the minister is now proposing it. This is that the appeal system that is a right for the parent on behalf of his or her child is only for the hard-to-serve pupil. The principle we supported on second reading—all parties in this House—must be maintained in this legislation and must not be gutted by the minister's present amendment. That principle was that all exceptional children—gifted, mentally retarded, hard-to-serve pupils and those many pupils across this province that suffer from the many, many, different forms of dyslexia—would have the right to appeal. They do not have that right at the present time. They will not have that right if the minister's amendment is carried.

The amendment the minister proposes is weak in one important section in legislative terms even as it refers to the hard-to-serve pupil, because, in subsection 16, it is pure hope that is to be legislated that the hard-to-serve pupil will receive a placement. There is no guarantee in the legislation that if the placement is not in Ontario, the child will be placed some place outside Ontario and the cost borne. As I read subsection 16, "a placement of a hard-to-serve pupil under subsection 9 or 14 shall be made in Ontario except where no placement suited to the needs of the pupil is available in Ontario." It is absolutely silent on where and how we place that pupil. As the minister amends the clause, it does not even legislatively guarantee an appeal procedure and a placement for the hard-to-serve pupil.

Therefore, I cannot in any conscience support the amendment as proposed by the minister because it fails in two important aspects. It fails to serve the specific needs of the specific pupil defined in the section and, secondly, the appeal system in the bill fails to guarantee legislatively the appeal for all the children this bill was meant to serve in the first place.

I would plead with my friend, if not my colleague, the member for York Centre (Mr. Stong) to realize the importance of what he said and to consider whether or not the minister's amendment, no matter how it is amended, can serve the purpose he desires it to serve because the purpose he desires it to serve is good, worthy and laudable. Frankly, I don't care about the politics of the situation. I don't care about alienating the vested interest groups in education across the province on this issue. I don't care which political party in the province gets the benefit or the credit for introducing the amendments or the bill that serves exceptional children.

I don't want to sound particularly righteous about it, but what we should be concerned with as legislators is whether the bill serves the children we say it will serve. I don't care who gets the credit, but it is important when we are passing a piece of legislation, and it is important when we are debating the clause-by-clause sections of the bill that we stick to the purpose, as enunciated in the minister's statement when she first made it before the House and as enunciated in the principle most of us debated on second reading, that it supports the principles the social development committee argued, formulated and forged during the summer, and that it supports the rights and aspirations of the parents and children who have not been served by the educational system of this province for far too long.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the amendments which were introduced to section 7 provide for a very important activity within this bill. The purpose of Bill 82 is to guarantee an education program for all children within the province. If a child is found not to be profiting by instruction, it is absolutely essential that the rights guaranteed under this act be protected as fully as they possibly can.

I think we have moved a very great distance in the provision of an appeal mechanism for that section of the bill which is something all of us consider extremely important. But we have already introduced in three places, in section 2 and in two places in section 3, the provision of an appeal mechanism for identification and placement of all exceptional children.

It is my understanding that the legal strength of a program, policy or mechanism established under a regulation is equal to that which has been established under an act. It is my understanding that the appeal mechanism will be just as strong established under the regulatory capacity which is provided.

The member for York Centre (Mr. Stong) has made some very interesting suggestions which I think we should consider incorporating. The appeal mechanism, which truly bears no relationship to the review mechanism, which was established in regulation 704 and which I have promised to introduce to all of the members of the House at the time of royal assent to this bill, will provide for three stages of review and appeal of the identification and placement of all exceptional children. I mean all of them, not just those who may move on to the stage which is set out in section 7.

I think this is an appropriate mechanism because it does fully involve at the very initial level the parents or guardians of the child and the child himself in the provision of information and in the provision of opinion and concept about both identification and placement. It does involve those who are responsible first at the local level for the delivery of education and establishment of educational program, and it provides for a mechanism for agreement if that can be reached. If no agreement is reached, the mechanism will ensure that the director of education, with the approval of the board, must refer that case to a further appeal mechanism at the regional level.

There is an additional interesting thought which the member for York Centre introduced this afternoon and is proposing in an amendment. I would ask him to hold that and permit us to incorporate into the regulated structure as best we can, through some consultation, to see if we can't strengthen the appeal mechanism as established in sections 2 and 3(1) and 3(2) within the bill which we have already passed.

Mr. Foulds: Why are you twisting in the wind like this?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am not twisting. I am perfectly comfortable with the concepts that have been introduced. I am indeed happy that the members of this Legislature are supportive of our very strong feeling that Bill 82 is an important piece of legislation which does require introduction but, in addition, requires the full co-operation of all those who have responsibility under legislation for the development and the delivery of educational programs for children.

There is no doubt in my mind that there isn't any one group within this House that has a monopoly on concern for children with exceptionalities, indeed for any children. I think that concern is shared equally and probably as deeply and is accepted by all parties in this House. But I would remind the members of the House that we do have an educational system which does, in many instances, provide a very superior program. We need to ensure that educational system will function in co-operation with the legislation in order to ensure that those exceptional children are well served.

From all of my consultations over the past two and a half years, I feel very strongly that the kind of bill we introduced and the kind of amendments we have proposed will not in any way diminish the absolutely essential co-operation we require for the delivery of that educational program through all of the agencies involved in the educational system in this province.

Therefore, I would ask the member for York Centre (Mr. Stong), rather than introducing his amendments, to hold them, to allow us to participate in examination of the principles included in that in order to strengthen the kind of appeal mechanism we shall be introducing in regulations and which this House will see before this bill receives royal assent.

Mr. Chairman: Before I recognize another member of the committee, we have a very extensive amendment before the committee and I have listened carefully to them. Some members are referring to amendments they are planning on placing to certain sub-amendments. I believe other members have suggested they may vote against the complete amendment. I just wonder if I could have some guidance from the committee as to how they would like to handle this, whether they would like to commence the amendment section by section or still continue with general debate on the overall amendment.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, may I just ask the chair a couple of questions for clarification? Bill 82 came from the committee. The minister has offered amendments. We have amendments to the amendment by the minister. I understand that ours are voted on first. We must have, reserved for us, the right to turn down the minister's amendments if we don't agree with them, in so far as they don't meet what we feel should be in this bill.

The difficulty is that if we go through this particular section clause by clause and one section passes, it could very well be that another section of the minister's amendments will not pass and we will be left with a hotchpotch. Because the amendments the minister has introduced are such a deviation from what the committee said and are completely acceptable, in so far as they go, it seems to me that this member at least needs some guidance as to what procedure we should follow so that we will not end up with an amendment partially acceptable and passed and partially not acceptable and failed.

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, we are ready for the vote on the amendment from the minister, if that is all that is before us. If the member for York Centre has an amendment to the amendment, then he should move it. Otherwise, I think we should proceed with the vote. I have indicated what our position is. We intend to vote against amendments or subamendments in order to protect what is in the bill now in section 7.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I believe it was you yourself, at the beginning of this discussion this afternoon, who indicated that section 7 of this bill is such a long, complicated one that it should almost be taken as a bill itself.

At this particular time, the minister has indicated that she is prepared to take my colleague's amendments and to determine the extent to which she can incorporate them into her own amendments and come back to us with an amendment which has already incorporated some of my amendments. We don't know at this time the degree to which the minister can do that. I think what the minister has said is that she is prepared to look not only at this section, but also to go back and take another look at sections 2 and 3, unless I am misunderstanding her.

Basically, I am suggesting that since it is so close to recess time now we provide the minister with the opportunity of looking at the amendments my colleague has proposed and letting us know at eight o'clock the degree to which she is willing to accept those amendments. If she means something other than that, I would be willing to hear what the minister is saying.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am sorry I obviously did not make myself clear. What I was suggesting was that we had already introduced in section 2 and in section 3(1) and (2), of this bill provisions for the development of an appeal procedure for both identification and placement that would follow the introduction of the act.

I was asking the member for York Centre to give us the opportunity to look at the ways in which we could incorporate into the regulations, which would govern that appeal mechanism, the kinds of suggestions he was making, because it is my understanding that a mechanism established under regulation has strength equal to that which is established under legislation.

Because we have introduced that requirement in sections 2 and 3, I believe there can be no doubt—and I have committed myself to the members of the House—that those regulations will be available before this bill receives royal assent in order to ensure that the appropriate mechanism—at least a two-staged and probably a three-staged appeal mechanism for identification and placement—would be introduced. It was not that I was suggesting I could incorporate them into my amendments at this stage. I am sorry that you misunderstood that.

Mr. Chairman: I have listened carefully to many of the members. I get the feeling from what has been said that we should go through it section by section. That gives all members the opportunity to vote against, make amendments or vote for it. If the committee is agreeable, we could now start going through it section by section. If the committee is agreeable, I will call the amendment to section 7 of the bill, dealing with section 34(1) of the act. Are there any comments on section 7(1)?

The committee divided on Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment to section 7(1) of the bill dealing with section 34(1) of the act, which was approved on the following vote:

Ayes 53; nays 25.

Section 7(1), as amended, agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Gregory: Mr. Chairman, before we adjourn for dinner, I am wondering if we could have some kind of agreement from the House that after eight o'clock we stack votes until 10:15?

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, for procedural reasons we are willing to stack the subsections of section 7, but section 7 in total must be voted on whenever that comes before we can proceed with the rest of the bill.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, in order to make sense of what we are doing here, that would be a reasonable suggestion that we do stack them until 10:15 tonight, dealing with section 7 only.

Mr. Warner: No, Mr. Chairman, that is not agreeable to this caucus.

Mr. Foulds: We can only stack the subsections in section 7 until we get to the end of section 7.

Mr. Chairman: There doesn't seem to be unanimous agreement. I wonder if there could be some consultation over the dinner hour and I will ask the committee for a decision when we resume.

The House recessed at 6:17 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1980

The House resumed at 8:09 p.m.

House in committee of the whole.

Resuming consideration of Bill 82, An Act to amend the Education Act.

On section 7(1), section 34 of the act:

Mr. Chairman: Before the committee recessed there was some discussion regarding the stacking of the votes. Does the committee wish to deal with that now or when we come to the actual voting?

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I think the agreement has been that we will stack the votes for the various subsections of section 34 of the act as set out in section 1 and then we will proceed from there to deal with each section in turn. In other words, as the Chairman may note, there are 17 subsections to section 7. We are going to go from subsection to subsection and then stack them at the end so that we will vote on them. Instead of voting on each subsection in turn, we will make the amendments and then vote on the whole package of section 7 at the end. That is what I understand the agreement to be.

Mr. Chairman: As I understand it, the agreement of the committee is to stack any votes on the amendments to section 7 and vote on them at the end of that time.

Mr. McClellan: That is agreeable to us, Mr. Chairman. The outcome of the vote on section 7 will depend on whether we have additional amendments to offer. I think we are all anxious to try to get through this bill this evening. That sounds like a sensible procedure.

Mr. Chairman: I hope that is understood by the members of the committee.

On subsection 2:

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I believe you have before you an amendment which reads: "Moved by Mr. Sweeney that Honourable Miss Stephenson's amendment be further amended by adding, 'offered by the board' after the word 'instruction' in the fourth and seventh lines of section 34(2)."

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Sweeney moves that Honourable Miss Stephenson's amendment be further amended by adding "offered by the board" after the word "instruction" in the fourth and seventh lines of section 34(2).

Mr. McClellan: I would simply like to say that is not helpful if the object of the exercise is to extend the right of appeal to the decision of whether a student is an exceptional pupil or whether an exceptional pupil has the right to special education programs and special education services. The reality is that you cannot make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. You cannot turn this section into a broader section because of the definitions at the beginning. The section, as it has been put forward by the minister, is limited to dealing with the question of appeals on behalf of hard-to-serve pupils. There is no way you can broaden that.

Mr. Foulds: I have a question. I wonder why the member is offering the amendment. I am curious about it.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, if I may speak to it, the definition of hard-to-serve pupil in section 34(1) was expanded to include the words "offered by the board" after the word "instruction." I moved the amendment in section 34(1) and will move it again in subsection 3 simply to have internal consistency. Whenever we use the expression, "unable to profit by instruction" we simply add the words, "offered by the board." That is the reason for it.

Mr. Grande: I have a question of the minister. That is, if amendments are made to section 34(2), how closely are they related to the schematic visual representation the minister gave us with her first amendment? You have seen that? Where you have "PPRC," I would assume that is a program placement review committee. The decision of that placement committee would go to the school principal. If the principal agrees, then the child would be in a special education program. My question is what happens there if the parent disagrees at that stage.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the child would already be in a program, and if in that situation either the principal or the parent felt the child was not profiting by instruction, the principal would be bound to refer that to a supervisory officer, and through the supervisory officer to the board, which must establish a committee.

Mr. Grande: Mr. Chairman, could the minister give me an idea of how many children in the system we are talking about at present? Are we talking about the famous two cases, whereby last year those children would have been excluded as a result of section 34, or are we talking about a larger number of children? Could the minister give me an idea of how many children we are talking about in this section?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, it would be impossible to give the honourable member a specific figure. It is certainly a considerably larger number of children than the two who are currently excluded. Indeed, this bill gives the right to every child within a board's jurisdiction to be placed in a program within the school system. Obviously, it is a much larger number, but I really can't tell the member what the larger number is at this stage of the game, and I don't think the member could either.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Mr. Sweeney's amendment to Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Amendment stacked.

On subsection 3:

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Sweeney moves that Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment be further amended by adding "offered by the board" after "instruction" in the fifth and ninth lines of section 34(3).

Mr. McClellan: I simply repeat that this does not do any more to this subsection than the same thing did to the previous subsection. We have a complete appeal system in section 7 of the bill as it stands. This is completely superfluous and unnecessary.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Mr. Sweeney's amendment to Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Amendment stacked.

On subsection 4:

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 4, as amended, agreed to.

On subsection 5:

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 5, as amended, agreed to.

8:20 p.m.

On subsection 6:

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that I would offer on this section. However, I have received a notice from the minister wherein she indicates to me that the principle of my amendment will be adapted—I do not know if it will be here or later. I am prepared to have it stood down at this time until I have an opportunity to view the amendments the minister intends to offer. They are not here yet; they are on their way up I understand.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the amendment will be 34a and the current 34a will be renumbered 34b. That seemed to be the most appropriate placement for it.

Mr. Stong: I respect that and I am prepared to wait. I feel the amendments will be acceptable to me. I have not seen them yet and I do not want to lose my position in line on this section.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is possible that we might stand down the remainder of section 7 until that amendment is available. We could proceed with the sections thereafter, about which I think there is little debate, and then return to section 7.

Mr. McClellan: With respect to the suggestion the minister has made, I may or may not have an amendment to the sections following section 7 depending on what happens to section 7. So if we do stand down the section, I would want to reserve the right to move an amendment to the sections following it. That would be a new section 8, and the rest of the bill would be numbered accordingly. I'll agree to this as long as it is understood that I can move an amendment to be inserted after section 7, should that be necessary.

Does the minister know how long it will be before we have the amendment?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Five minutes.

Section 7 stood down.

Sections 8 to 17, inclusive, agreed to.

On section 18:

Mr. McClellan: This is just a factual question. I gather this is a discretionary power.

Can the minister tell us what would happen if the board of education refused to do what is set out in section 18? That is, if the board of education refused to employ and pay teachers to conduct an education program in a centre facility home, et cetera, despite a clear need and despite a sense on the part of the minister that action is required, what would happen?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The boards of education have up to this point been extremely co-operative in the establishment of programs and the payment of teachers because they are encouraged to be co-operative by the funding mechanism established to provide that kind of service. We have had no difficulty in encouraging boards to participate in that kind of program in the past and I doubt we will have any difficulty in the future.

Mr. McClellan: Does the minister not feel there should be some kind of fail-safe provision in there, that there should be some onus on the ministry if a local board does refuse to take the appropriate action?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: This bill puts an onus on the ministry now to ensure all those pupils will be provided with an educational program. That is inherent in the bill. It is explicitly stated very early in the bill that the minister shall ensure that all exceptional pupils shall have a program provided for them. This part is not excluded from that assurance, nor from that responsibility.

Mr. McClellan: It is part of the same issue. If we had a stronger appeal procedure, if we had section 7 as it stands in the bill we would not have to worry about this. I suppose the outcome would be the same.

Section 17 agreed to.

Sections 18 to 24, inclusive, agreed to.

On section 7(1), section 34 of the act, subsection 6:

Mr. McClellan: Before the minister reads her amendment, could somebody arrange to have some additional copies made? I have one copy of a handwritten amendment to section 7 to be moved by Miss Stephenson. I wonder if somebody could arrange to have some additional copies made because I don't want to give my only copy to the pages while they scurry off to Xerox it.

Mr. Chairman: Hopefully, there will be some more available.

The committee could then go to the minister's amendment to section 7(3).

Mr. McClellan: We have done that.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: We had finished section 34(5).

Mr. Chairman: Are we ready to go on with section 34(6)? Oh, we are; fine.

Mr. Foulds: No, we are not. As one member of the House who happens to be vitally interested in the bill, I would like to have the proposed amendment in front of me in writing. I don't think that is too much to ask.

Mr. Chairman: Madam Minister, do you have that other amendment ready yet?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I have one copy I might send to the member for Port Arthur, but that is all I have at the moment.

Mr. McClellan: Are your staff incapable of running a Xerox machine?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No, they are not and they have been attempting to do this.

8:30 p.m.

Mr. McClellan: Well, they have not done it once yet. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make this point of order. I have had to send the only copy of every single amendment I received by a page-boy to have a Xerox copy made for my colleagues. Surely the ministry, with all its resources, could do us the courtesy of providing copies of amendments in sufficient quantity that the members of the assembly have them when the stuff is being debated.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: You have three copies of the amendments.

Mr. Foulds: On the point of order, Mr. Chairman: There are 125 members in this Legislature. We knew before we broke for the supper hour that there were two hours in which there was some agreement within the "Social Credit coalition" about what the amendments to the act were going to be. I do not think it is asking too much that once the decision had been reached about what the "Social Credit coalition" agreed to, the government ministry should Xerox about 20 copies of the amendments so that they would be before members of the House.

I know it is normal to give critics copies of the amendment. The standing orders ask us to have those amendments a day or two in advance. Most of the time, we in the opposition are able to comply with that standing order. We recognize the particular difficulty the minister has faced with this bill. Is it too much to ask that she be prepared for some kind of fallback position and some kind of compromise? Is it too much to ask the minister and her staff to treat this Legislature with some courtesy so that the standing orders are met?

The minister is determined to remove from the Legislature its right, with the acquiescence of the Liberal Party, to enact in legislation certain things that this party believes should be enacted in legislation rather than through regulation. We would at least like to see the words that are being formed in the statute while we are debating it. I do not think that is an unreasonable request.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, having been treated with the utmost discourtesy by the third party, which will remain the third party forever, I would like you to know we have worked very diligently with the help of legal counsel in order to draft this appropriately. It was completed, I tell the honourable member, at eight o'clock.

Mr. Foulds: It takes you 25 minutes to Xerox a dozen copies of three pages?

Mr. Chairman: Order. The honourable member has had his opportunity to speak.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, all I can say is that we have done our best to comply with the rules of the House. We shall continue to do so, and we also attempt to be courteous in all situations, which is something the third party has never heard of.

Interjections.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. M. N. Davison: Mr. Chairman, I find it very offensive that the minister just adopted the attitude she has taken with regard to the discussion taking place. I think the matters raised by my colleagues, the members for Bellwoods and Port Arthur, are serious. We do, in this party, consider this to be a very serious bill. We do consider the issue before us to be a very serious matter. We are simply asking that the minister provide us with the requirements of the standing orders of this Legislative Assembly. If the minister wants to take the position that this is somehow or other against her own position, I quite agree that maybe that is true. But I do think the minister should comply with the rules of this House just as anyone else here has to do.

Mr. Chairman: I might remind the members again of standing order 58: "When time permits, amendments proposed to be moved to bills in any committee shall be filed with the Clerk of the House at least two hours before the bill is considered, and copies of such proposed amendments shall be distributed to all parties."

Interjections.

Mr. Chairman: Order, back to section 34(6) of the act. The member for York Centre is not moving an amendment?

Mr. Stong: No, I am not, Mr. Chairman, in the light of the amendments that have come into my possession.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, I throw myself upon the mercy of the committee of the whole. I have before me an amendment by the Minister of Education that was handwritten. It has not yet been read into the record, is that right?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No, because it does not come until the end of the section.

Mr. Foulds: It says here, "I move that section 7 of the bill be amended by adding thereto the following subsection 3." It seems to me we passed subsection 3. What did you do, stand it down? Did I miss that? Is a new subsection 3 being introduced?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: We are on subsection 1.

Mr. Chairman: We are on section 34(6).

Mr. Foulds: All right, thank you.

Mr. Chairman: As a matter of fact, a short time ago I asked the committee if they wanted to discuss this and they said "no."

All those in favour of Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 6, as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, I had indicated that I would be moving an amendment, but I will not. I withdraw my amendment. I withdraw all the amendments that I have put through for section 7.

Mr. Chairman: You have not actually put any.

On subsection 7:

Mr. McClellan: I am quite nonplussed. The member for York Centre had an amendment to subsection 7, which he hoped—

Mr. Stong: Subsection 6?

Mr. McClellan: I am talking about the amendment to subsection 7, which, at least before we broke for supper, the member indicated would somehow transmogrify this section in such a way that it would become a means for having appeals against decisions of the local placement committee of the board with respect to whether a child was an exceptional pupil and whether the placement was adequate.

Mr. Stong: Subsection 7?

Mr. McClellan: Yes, we are talking about subsection 7, right. The amendment he drafted does neither of those things, and the amendment the minister has submitted seems to do even less. I do not pretend to be able fully to understand the amendment that the minister has submitted, for the simple reason that I cannot read all of the handwriting.

Mr. Makarchuk: Was it written by a doctor?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is not mine.

Mr. McClellan: I should hope not. It was obviously written by a doctor, though, because it is utterly illegible.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Matter of fact, it was written by legal counsel.

Mr. McClellan: It was written by a lawyer or a doctor.

The problem remains that it is, first, an amendment to the section that talks about hard-to-serve pupils. Again, the amendment that the minister intends to move, which is a replacement for the amendment that the member for York Centre was going to move to subsection 7—

Mr. Stong: Now we have a new section coming up which will deal with it.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Read it.

Mr. McClellan: We will get into the substance of the debate when the minister gets around—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: How can the member debate an amendment which has been withdrawn?

Mr. McClellan: I can make any comment that I want to make on any section of the bill, unless the minister somehow—

8:40 p.m.

Mr. Chairman: Order. The section before the committee is 34(7) of the act.

Mr. Foulds: That is what my colleague is commenting on.

Mr. McClellan: Correct. The problem remains, as the section stands, that it is limited to appeals against decisions with respect to hard-to-serve pupils and nothing that has been introduced, or is intended to be introduced later on down the pike, changes that.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 7, as amended, agreed to.

On subsection 8:

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 8, as amended, agreed to.

Subsection 9:

Mr. McClellan: I want to make a comment on this subsection. This is the subsection that contains the language that was carried over from a previous amendment that had not actually been moved by the minister, but we did discuss it in the social development committee. The language is, "the board shall assist the parent or guardian to locate placement suited to the needs of the pupil."

I want to point out to the committee that we still have that very nebulous and ambiguous language, "the board shall assist to locate." I simply wanted to contrast that with the provision in section 7 of the bill, as amended by the social development committee, which this is intended to replace.

The Ontario Special Education Board, under Bill 82 as it is printed, would have the power to design, determine or designate an appropriate placement for a child who had been successful in an appeal before the tribunal, and that is a very substantial difference. I realize the minister has put forward objections to the power our amendment gave to the Ontario Special Education Board. Nevertheless, we feel it is really essential if there is to be a meaningful remedy out of the appeal process. I do not see it as a remedy that, having won an appeal, the matter goes back to the local board of education and the board assists the parent in locating proper placement. The emphasis is on "assist" not on "locate."

I understand there have been some changes to the minister's position and if as a result of an appeal a person is successful and a placement is obtained, Ontario will pay the cost of the placement, but there is still a measure of ambiguity with respect to whether or not a placement will be found. I still feel it makes a lot more sense to empower the tribunal with the capacity to design, determine and designate an appropriate placement upon the successful outcome of an appeal.

While I am dealing with that, I should mention in passing, as I am sure the minister and my colleagues in the Liberal Party know, that if some miracle happens and this amendment is defeated, we do intend to amend section 13, which has to do with the exercise of power of the tribunal, so that our tribunal will make recommendations to the minister and the minister will implement those recommendations. At any rate, we are very far apart on both language and concept with respect to where the onus should lie. We do not intend to support the subsection in front of us or any amendments to it.

The Deputy Chairman: Any further discussion on section 34(9) of the act?

Mr. Bounsall: I don't wish to prolong the debate, but I would like to hear from the minister on this part. This is the part that in its various versions and now back again before us in this form, has always worried me. Can the minister categorically say that when a child is determined to be hard to serve there will never be a board in this province with which there will be a problem in having that board assist the parent or guardian to locate a placement?

When the child is designated hard to serve, the parent would like to get the child placed or find a place for that child that would best serve him, and the parent expects the board to assist in that duty. The board does nothing, except to say, "We don't know of any place. Do you? Why don't you keep looking?" Parents feel the board is doing nothing but checking periodically with them.

Can the minister guarantee that will never happen in Ontario, that there will never be a situation where a frustrated parent will say, "My child has been designated hard to serve and the board, although the act says it must assist me, is really doing nothing active to assist in placing my child."

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, I really do not have the kind of jaundiced view about all human beings that seems to pervade some of the members opposite. I believe that when boards are given a responsibility or are designated that responsibility or provided with that responsibility through legislation, they do carry it out. I would anticipate that all boards would do that. Some, obviously, with more enthusiasm than others, but it is obvious those given responsibility under this act will carry out that responsibility.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Chairman, I want to make it very clear I do not take a jaundiced view of this bill. I think that most boards in this province will do their level best to live up to the spirit of this bill. But we are writing legislation now that covers every contingency. I am concerned that some time, some place, somewhere, some board will put parents in this situation. What recourse in this legislation do parents have to see the board, which should know a lot more than they do, being in the business of providing education, does meaningfully search for a place that serves their child?

This is my point. When you read on to section 34(10), there is an appeal mechanism to the tribunal, if they don't agree the child is hard to serve or they don't agree with the placement. But what if there simply isn't any, or much, activity in trying to find a placement? I am not saying this is going to be the rule, but it could well be the exception. What recourse do parents have?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, parents have the recourse they have at the present time about any number of situations, that is, to notify either the regional office or the minister. When that happens, of course, there is discussion immediately with the board in terms of discharging the responsibility which is legislated for the board to pursue.

The Deputy Chairman: All those in favour of section 34(9) standing as part of the amendment will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 9, as amended, agreed to.

On subsection 10:

The Deputy Chairman: All those in favour of section 34(10) standing as part of the amendment will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 10, as amended, agreed to.

On subsection 11:

The Deputy Chairman: All those in favour of section 34(11) standing as part of the amendment will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 11, as amended, agreed to.

On subsection 12:

The Deputy Chairman: All those in favour of section 34(12) being part of the amendment will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 12 agreed to.

8:50 p.m.

On subsection 13:

Mr. McClellan: This is one of the sections that has to do with the remedy under a successful appeal to the minister's tribunal. It is some remedy when the way the tribunal finds if the pupil is considered to need placement is that it is referred back to the board. I can foresee a kind of perpetual wheel of litigation if that is all that happens by way of remedy. It gets back to the point I made a few moments ago. I still feel it would be useful and helpful to empower the tribunal with the capacity to determine, design and designate where the tribunal felt that was appropriate.

It is not something that would be done in every circumstance, but I think it is important to have the tribunal established with the capacity to do that if the circumstances warrant it. I point out that the Social Assistance Review Board has the power to do precisely that. The way it works in practice is it does not come up with a program out of the air or out of the blue or even really on its own initiative.

What happens before the Social Assistance Review Board is that the parents usually come before the board with a specific program in mind. The Social Assistance Review Board is given the power in the legislation to substitute its decision for the decision of the director of the vocational rehabilitation services branch of the Ministry of Community and Social Services. This is precisely what it does. It makes a determination with respect to exactly what program will be available for the child who wins an appeal. It is a major failure of this minister's amendment that that remedy is not available to the tribunal.

I say again, for the nineteenth time, that remedy is available under the appeal procedure at present printed in the bill. We intend to vote against this subsection.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Surely it is reasonable to suggest that those who should be responsible for the delivery of an educational program should also be made responsible and accountable for the program which is delivered.

It would appear to me it is much more appropriate to have the tribunal hear the appeal of the parents regarding a placement for and the designation of that child to determine, on the basis of all the evidence which is provided, that the child is either hard to serve or does require placement in a special education program within the board's jurisdiction or within another board's jurisdiction if that board is unable. This act does provide for that capability on the part of boards.

If a board is unable to provide the program for a child, the tribunal, it seems to me, has the responsibility to determine where in the province there may be a board with that capability so that the child may receive the benefit of that program. But I am not at all sure that a special tribunal should have the responsibility for designing programs for children for whom it has only had the responsibility of reviewing all the information made available, without having had the responsibility of supervising that child or being in constant attendance upon that child and for whom there will be no on-going accountability.

Mr. McClellan: I want to point out to the minister that we are not denying local responsibility. We are acknowledging that there has been a failure on the part of a particular local board of education because this subsection deals with a situation where an appeal has been successful. That is not an acknowledgement of blame or fault, but it is an acknowledgement that something was wrong with the process in the first instance at the local level because it is a successful appeal.

All I am saying is that I prefer the language of subsection 12 as it is printed in the bill, which gives the special education board a threefold power. They can affirm the decision of the local board, if they think the local board made the right decision, or they can rescind that decision, send it back to the local board, as you have done, and tell them to make another decision. But, third, if the circumstances warrant, they can rescind the decision of the local board and determine, design or designate an appropriate program.

All I am saying is that it would be useful if the circumstances warrant and if there is a major problem at the local level, if the tribunal had the capacity to act as a fail-safe mechanism so that people are not being bounced around through an appeal system that has no real remedy. That is the concern I am trying to bring to the minister's attention. The language of the statute as printed in the bill again is preferable to the amendment before us and we intend to vote against the subsection.

Mr. Foulds: I have a question for the minister. What does the minister plan to do when she is informed by the board of the special education services that have been provided and if she or her ministry finds that those services are inadequate? Are you going to make that kind of judgement? Is that why you want to be informed?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: The reason for the requirement that the minister be informed is to ensure that the decision of the tribunal has been carried out by the local board. If there is some question about it, obviously the regional officer with responsibilities for special education will also be informed and will be continuing to monitor that situation.

Mr. Foulds: What remedial action can you take? You talk about monitoring and that is all well and good. But what happens if there is a child who needs education and fails to get that for the three weeks to six months that it might take to go through the appeal process? The board provides a program 60 days later. Two months later you are notified what the program is and you make a decision and get it down the pike to a regional officer. He looks at it and says it is inadequate. He can monitor it, and for three months, four months, five months or six months the child has not had an adequate educational program. What remedial action can you take?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: If the member will read the definitions in the early part of the legislation, he will note that "special education program" connotes inherently a continuous review of the progress of the child through the program as well. That review is going to be carried out and if the child is not progressing appropriately, a review of the program will be carried out. The entire situation can be repeated at that stage, if necessary.

Mr. Foulds: I find these reviews very intriguing and interesting, but I am trying to determine from the minister what remedial action, under this subsection, she can guarantee that the Ministry of Education will ensure that the child has some remedial education.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: We are not talking about remedial education; we are talking about special education in this circumstance. Specifically, the responsibility has been laid upon the board through this legislation. The definitions ensure that program will be established and that there will be continuing assessment and continuous review. All of the mechanisms which are currently in place in many boards where this system is now functioning will be functioning right across the province for all children within the province. 9 p.m.

I have sufficient faith in the dedication of teachers and in the dedication of members of school boards to believe they will carry out their responsibilities as they are delineated within the legislation. I know the ministry will also carry out its responsibilities; of that I can assure you. But I have to tell you that as a human being having to deal with human beings, I am not sure you could guarantee 100 per cent absolutely everything in any circumstance at any time.

If you are asking me to write legislation which is going to cover the circumstance of one child only in the province, I have to tell you I don't think we can do that. What we are attempting to do is write legislation which will guarantee for as many children as we have within our jurisdiction who have exceptionalities the appropriate educational program. I believe the kind of legislation and certainly the concurrent activity of implementation through the pilot project system is one of the ways in which we are ensuring that remedy will be available for those children.

The Deputy Chairman: Does the member for Port Arthur wish to carry this same subject on longer?

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, with due respect, if this were question period I would file dissatisfaction with the answer supplied by the minister. My question is a fairly straightforward one. What do you do when you have reviewed a program and the ministry finds that program is inadequate for the special education required by that child as defined by the tribunal? How do you remedy that situation?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: In that situation, Mr. Chairman, I would consult with the special education branch of my ministry. We would review what is being provided and, as a result of that activity, there would be consultation with the board in that circumstance as there is in many circumstances right now.

Mr. Foulds: After the consultation with the board, how do you hope to ensure that the program your officials deem necessary is supplied by that board? Where is your authority?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: My authority is to review the function of the review process within the child's special education program in order to ensure that the program is being delivered.

Mr. McClellan: The only obligation under this section is that you be informed. What it says is "... within sixty days of receipt of the notice ..." of the decision of the tribunal, the minister will be informed "... of the special education services that have been provided for the pupil." The question is still unanswered. What happens if the program is totally inadequate? You have absolutely no remedy at all. The power lies with the local board. If the placement is still inadequate, the parents have to appeal again. What kind of a remedy is that?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I would draw the attention of the members to the beginning of this bill where there is a statement which plainly provides that the minister shall ensure that the children receiving special education programs, shall, in fact, receive them. That is a responsibility which, in our process of implementation through the pilot project, we will be determining more closely in terms of form and mechanism. That is in section 2.

Mr. McClellan: The bill, as I just finished reading it, is very clear. The minister will be informed and the minister has no other power under the act or the regulations than to be informed. Tell me what your powers are so that you can reassure us on this point.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: At the present time, I prefer to utilize the powers of persuasion, co-operative activity and consultation, rather than attempting to use a large mallet to kill a fly in many instances. I believe in this instance that kind of activity is probably going to be more productive than spelling out the kind of pejorative and punitive legal remedy, which I believe the members opposite wish to have included in this bill.

The Deputy Chairman: The member for York Centre tried to get my eye some time ago and I don't know whether he has a comment to make or not, but let him have an opportunity.

Mr. Stong: The question I had has been answered. It was on this point, but it has been answered.

Mr. Foulds: No one is asking you on the floor of the Legislature to design a special education program for every individual who needs a special education program in the province.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Thank you.

Mr. Foulds: I accept the minister's thanks with gratitude that knows no bounds. I ask the minister to answer this simple question. In those rare instances, and I admit they will be rare, where you find the program is inadequate, and where you find the board, for whatever reason, is incapable of providing the program the tribunal finds should be developed for that pupil, what legislative authority do you have to ensure the program is developed either by that board or by some other board so there is either a purchase of service or a straight delivery of service?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Since this act empowers the boards to purchase services from other boards, it is perfectly obvious that if they do not have the capability, or feel they cannot design a program specifically for one child, they will have the power to purchase that service from a board which has a program of that kind.

In addition to that, as I said very much earlier, it would seem to me appropriate that in making its decision about a program for this child the tribunal could, in consultation with the board if the board suggested it did not have the capacity to develop that program, recommend programs provided by other boards.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall subsection 13 stand as part of the bill?

All those in favour will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 13 agreed to.

On subsection 14:

Mr. McClellan: We have the same comments and the same vote.

The Deputy Chairman: All those in favour will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 14 agreed to.

On subsection 15:

Mr. McClellan: I would like to ask a question out of idle curiosity regarding the new tribunal we are talking about establishing. Does the Statutory Powers Procedure Act apply to the proceedings of that special education tribunal?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall subsection 15 stand as part of the proposed amendment?

All those in favour will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay".

Still, in my opinion the ayes have it.

Subsection 15 agreed to.

On subsection 16:

Mr. Foulds: This is the subsection I spoke on when I made some remarks on the whole series of amendments the minister has introduced in this section. I put the question to her as clearly and as bluntly as I can. What is there in this subsection that allows the hard-to-serve pupil, who cannot be served in Ontario, to seek those services elsewhere and for that to be covered by the ministry? Where does that happen?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: By the government.

Mr. Foulds: What I want to know is where.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It happens in subsection 17, as a matter of fact.

9:10 p.m.

Mr. Foulds: On subsection 9, all I find is that "the board shall assist the parent or guardian to locate" the necessary special education. There is no guarantee in that subsection that it will be located in or outside of Ontario. When I go to subsection 14, I notice that "the board shall assist the parent or guardian to locate a placement." Then I see in subsection 16 it "shall be made in Ontario, except where no placement suited to the needs of the pupil is available in Ontario."

What I perceive here is a giant loophole. I would like the minister to allay my fears and tell me how that loophole is plugged so that a child who needs, and for whom it is determined he or she needs the services outlined in the section, can get them and can get them outside of the province. What guarantee do we have that placement will be made and the ministry will pick up the costs?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: In this subsection, we are speaking of hard-to-serve pupils for whom in all probability the requirements for care and treatment are uppermost and supersede requirements for an educational program. In this province we have a number of establishments, institutions and facilities to accommodate that child.

With the requirement by the legislation that each board will assist the parents to ensure the appropriate placement of children who are so designated with information, which will be provided to the boards by the ministry and by the other two ministries potentially involved—the Ministry of Community and Social Services and the Ministry of Health—in their search for the appropriate placement for a child so designated by a tribunal and with the recommendations of the tribunal given to the board as well, there is no doubt in my mind those boards will assist and that provisions 16 and 17 of the act will prevail.

Mr. Foulds: Provision 16, as I read the legislative language says, it "shall be made in Ontario." There is nothing I see where it says, "There shall be a placement." Quote me those words anywhere in this subsection where it says that there shall be a placement. You do not have them. They are not in the legislation.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: It is not specifically worded that way but the spirit of the bill, which the member chooses to ignore constantly, is that kind of assistance will be provided to parents to ensure that placement will occur.

Mr. McClellan: Say one wants an appeal and one invites some great spirit: "Oh, great spirit, come upon us. Thank you very much." What kind of appeal system is that? When one goes to court and win, one wins a judgement and something consequential happens. When one goes to any of the other appeal bodies under any of the other statutes in this province and one wins an appeal, something consequential happens, something real happens. It is not some nebulous atmospheric entity, some spirit that descends upon the waters and somehow solves the problem. It is precisely this dilemma that makes your amendment unacceptable.

We have tried to come up with language, and it is printed in the bill that deals with that. The only way we could think of to deal with that—maybe there are other ways—was to empower the tribunal with the capacity to design, determine or designate a program, to recommend that program to the minister and oblige the minister to implement it.

I am not saying that is Mosaic and has to be engraved in stone. There may be other ways. I was not able to think of another way. I am sure there are other ways, but what the minister has is utterly nebulous and guarantees nothing.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Chairman, the minister says the spirit of the legislation will prevail. I am reminded of the Biblical phrase about the spirit being willing but the flesh being weak. What we have had in the province for many decades is very weak flesh when it comes to the spirit of the Ministry of Education in meeting the needs of children for special education. I am sorry that the minister is such a person of faith. I find myself forced into a position of scepticism which, historically, she and her ministry have forced upon us when it comes to the matter of meeting the needs of special education.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Hogwash. Absolute balderdash.

Mr. Foulds: Never mind privately mouthing obscenities and insults at me.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I do not mouth obscenities.

Mr. Foulds: Personal insults, that verge on the unparliamentary, let me put it that way.

What we are trying to do in this legislation, what we have constantly tried to do, is to ensure that all children in the province who have need of special education will receive it. What we have found in the three key subsections of this section that the minister is introducing, gutting and negating—section 7 that was passed by the social development committee aided and abetted by her colleagues in the Liberal Party—is a guarantee of assistance to the parents, and a guarantee that the placement shall be in Ontario; but there is no guarantee that there shall be a placement.

I am afraid this subsection will, I hope, haunt members of the Liberal Party for years to come, because the Conservative government is going to use these loopholes over the next five, 10, 15 or 20 years. Just as they have avoided introducing this legislation—

Hon. Miss Stephenson: To whom is the honourable member talking?

Mr. Foulds: I am talking to the minister. Would you just get the wax out of your ears and listen for a change?

Mr. Chairman: Order. Would the member address his remarks to the chair?

Mr. Foulds: I am talking to the chairman.

Mr. Chairman: To subsection 16.

Mr. Foulds: Subsection 16 is exactly what I am on, Mr. Chairman, because it is subsection 16 that allows the loophole to the minister and her officials, and allows the loophole because it is referenced to subsections 14 and 19 which do not plug that loophole. That means children who are hard to serve pupils are not guaranteed the right to an education. Let us be very blunt about that. That is what this amendment by the minister does. It avoids as strenuously as it can giving that clear-cut right, assurance and guarantee to parents with hard to serve children.

Mr. Sweeney: Mr. Chairman, I would ask the minister to clarify this: My understanding of subsections 9 and 14 is that, in both cases, the direction is to the board: "The board shall locate a placement."

Mr. Foulds: "Shall assist."

Mr. Sweeney: Just a minute. The member has had his chance to blow off.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Sweeney: "Assist the parent or guardian." I understand that to mean it would be in co-operation with it, rather than the board's unilaterally, all by itself, going out and locating something and saying to the parent or guardian: "There it is. Take it or leave it." That is my understanding of that.

Because there would appear to be the possibility of misunderstanding that, might I suggest to the minister that the wording be, "the board shall locate," and then, "in co-operation with the parent or guardian, a placement suited to the needs of the pupil."

It is my understanding that is what those words are intended to mean.

But if it is possible it is going to be misunderstood in the way in which it has been described, that probably would avoid that misunderstanding. I certainly would not support a statement just saying that the board is going to do the location all by itself without any co-operation or any involvement of the parent or guardian. I certainly do not think that is appropriate.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the use of the word "assist" was to ensure that the board would, with all of the facilities and all of the information available to it, provide help to the parent of that child to find the appropriate place. It would appear that really is the appropriate kind of language as well. I am not sure we should suggest, as the member suggested, that the board unilaterally should locate the placement. It should be something which is done in a co-operative fashion.

That is what the purpose of the wording is in this section. We thought for several weeks about this and we cannot think of a better word to connote the kind of supportive co-operation which the board is required to provide by these sections of the legislation. This legislation does require that they provide it. I really cannot think of a better way to say it.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, I agree with my colleague from Kitchener-Wilmot and I did not approach this bill with a jaundiced view that some people have of the operations of our educators. I also believe in the presumption of regularity in the carrying out of the terms of this bill. However, I can ferret out that there is no obligation, although it could be read that it would be subject to interpretation. I agree with the minister that the spirit of the bill points out the obligation to the board to be of assistance and to pay the costs. Taken together, if there is a placement outside of Ontario, then I feel the board would be ordered.

However, because there is room for argument in subsection 16 and because it is the minister's clear intention that where there is no placement suitable in Ontario suitable placement outside Ontario is envisaged by this act, perhaps we should make the language crystal clear to conform with her intentions. Perhaps we should consider an amendment.

It seems to me we should include in this subsection a provision that where there is no placement possibility in Ontario, placement outside of Ontario is encompassed. That is the way I read it—however, it is arguable and to avoid an unnecessary court action over the interpretation I think we should satisfy members of the last party here and make it crystal clear.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that is precisely what subsection 16 says: that if there is not a placement suited to the needs of the pupil within Ontario, placement will be made outside the province.

It does say that. "A placement of hard to serve pupil under subsection 9 or 14 shall be made in Ontario, except where no placement suited to the needs of the pupil is available in Ontario." That means there will be a placement.

Mr. Chairman, I must express a modicum of concern about this section even as it is now written and that I have grave misgivings. I recognize that until the day the province is able to provide for all of the programs necessary this section is necessary, but I do have grave misgivings about spending Ontario taxpayers' money outside of the province.

However, recognizing the limitations which may be in place obviously for the next one or two years, and may even be in place in exceptional circumstances after September 1, 1985, I think it is appropriate that this subsection be in. I do believe the section says if the placement cannot be met, if the needs of the pupil cannot be met by a placement within Ontario, that placement will occur outside Ontario.

Mr. Stong: In order to make this subsection crystal clear, may I suggest an amendment be offered so that the subsection would read: "A placement of a hard to serve pupil under subsection 9 or 14 shall be made in Ontario, but where no placement suited to the needs of the pupil is available in Ontario, such placement can be made outside of Ontario"?

Mr. Foulds: How about "shall"? How about putting "shall" in there?

Mr. Stong: You offer the amendment. I'll vote for it.

Mr. Foulds: You offer the amendment.

Mr. Stong: I already have.

Mr. Chairman: Any further comments?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I am perfectly willing to move that subsection 16 be amended by including after the phrase "is available in Ontario" "a placement may be made outside Ontario."

Mr. Chairman: I'm sure the minister will put that in writing.

Hon. Miss Stephenson moves that subsection 16 be amended by adding after "in Ontario" in line four, the following, "a placement may be made outside Ontario."

All those in favour of Hon. Miss Stephenson's amendment to the amendment will please say "aye."

Section 7(2) agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Hon. Miss Stephenson moves that section 7 of the bill be amended by adding thereto the following subsection 3:

"The said act is amended by adding thereto the following section:

"34b(1) Where a parent or guardian of a pupil has exhausted all rights of appeal under the regulations in respect of the identification or placement of the pupil as an exceptional pupil and is still dissatisfied with the decision in respect of the identification or placement the parent or guardian may apply to the secretary of a special education tribunal for a hearing for leave to appeal to a regional tribunal established by the minister under subsection 2 in respect of the identification or placement.

"(2) Where leave to appeal is granted under subsection 1, a regional tribunal shall be established by the minister to hear the appeal of the parent or guardian.

"(3) Notwithstanding subsection 1, a special education tribunal may with the consent of the parties before it in lieu of granting leave to appeal to a regional tribunal, hear and dispose of the appeal of the parent or guardian.

"(4) The Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations governing the provision, establishment, organization and administration of a regional tribunal and regulating and controlling the practice and procedure before such tribunal including the costs of persons before such tribunal.

"(5) The decision of a special education tribunal or of a regional tribunal under this section is final and binding upon the parties to any such decision."

Mr. McClellan: This is the long-awaited compromise that is the magnificent achievement of my colleagues to the right in collaboration with the minister. At face value it is an appeal system with respect to the other two matters, whether a child is an exceptional pupil or not, and what kind of special education programs and services the child will get.

There are only a couple of minor problems. First of all, the parents need permission in order to hold an appeal. One has to get permission to have an appeal. What kind of a right of appeal is that, when some authority has to grant permission to have the appeal in the first instance?

That is not the only defect. There is no remedy. It does not say what happens if you win the appeal. What happens? Does the spirit descend on you again? Does the atmosphere somehow crystallize? Does the great cloud of unknowing somehow materialize? What happens if you win the appeal? I will tell you what happens if you win the appeal: nothing. That is the kind of an appeal system the other two parties have managed to cook up over the supper hour, and what an empty meal that is. This is a ridiculous proposition to substitute for the very clear appeal provisions in section 7 of Bill 82.

Finally, as if it was not enough that you had to beg for an appeal and you had no remedy if you won the appeal, it has a privative clause, subsection 5: "The decision of . . . a tribunal is final and binding upon the parties to any such decision."

At least the minister was gracious enough to allow an appeal to the court with respect to the disposition of hard to serve children, and here she has closed it off. I do not know why you would put a privative clause in this section. I point out to you, in case you are not aware, that your privative clause is relatively meaningless. There would be the right of appeal through the provincial Ombudsman.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: There is always the right of appeal to the Ombudsman.

Mr. McClellan: Are you denying that?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: No.

Mr. McClellan: It is a serious defect, that you would try to put a privative clause in this section. At any rate, this amendment is the very essence of emptiness. I must congratulate my colleagues on the right—after weeks and weeks of deliberation to come up with such a significant product. But it is too ridiculous to even contemplate supporting.

Mr. Stong: Mr. Chairman, in so far as the present section 7 and its original introduction as an amendment to this bill went, it covered extremely well the situations involving hard to serve pupils. Regarding the two operations of the bill that were not covered by way of review, namely the identification and the placement, the minister has now introduced a mechanism for appeal. In principle, that is acceptable.

I do, however, have questions of the minister. What does she mean when she refers to a regional tribunal? There is no definition of that in the act and it was not envisaged in my principle. I would like to know what that means. I would also like to know if the amendments that I had intended to move did give a remedy. The section that is introduced by the minister does not direct the board to do anything in terms of setting up the appropriate educational program, so it is lacking in that sense. There ought to be a remedy set out in this section.

With respect, this being the final decision, we know, as has already been mentioned, there is an appeal to the Ombudsman, but there is always an appeal to the court on the grounds of denial of natural justice, so there is no quarrel with that.

My two areas of doubt concern the concept of a regional tribunal that is introduced for the first time in this section, and also there ought to be a power in the regional tribunal or the special tribunal to direct the boards to set up the appropriate program, as is done with hard-to-serve pupils.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, the provisions for the examination of the problem by the tribunal would carry forward as they do in the previous section 7 for children who are determined to require a special education program. The kinds of decisions which the tribunal would make in that circumstance would prevail in this circumstance for those children, relating to program based upon identification or placement questions.

The regional tribunal is very similar to the concept we had for the provincial tribunal. That is that there would be, perhaps at the provincial level, not just one tribunal but several sitting at a time. A member of the concerned association might be one member, a member representing the school system another, and one member of the board as chairman who would be as independent as it is possible to be, representing neither one of the special interest organizations nor the school system specifically.

It was our intention with the regional concept to ensure that there would be available within, for example, the region served by a regional office, a mechanism whereby a tribunal of that sort could be established to serve the region. Since we have six regional offices we felt that was probably the most appropriate way in which to establish the idea of the regional special education tribunal.

There is a possibility, of course, that the special education tribunal hearing a case may determine that a case is so unusual it would be unlikely that a regional tribunal would be able to find an appropriate remedy. It might make the decision to hear it themselves at the provincial level, rather than at the regional level. We thought that responsibility should be provided for the special education tribunal, given the wisdom of those individuals.

Mr. Stong: On that concept, I follow the event wherein the parents, for instance, do elect to appeal the decision on the identification of their pupil. We realize it only follows the natural course that if the appeal were allowed then the previous decision is upheld and that child is either identified as an exceptional student or not; or if the appeal is overturned then the converse is true.

What happens with respect to the placement, however? There is no remedy set out here with respect to the disagreement of the tribunal on the decision as to where to place the student. What follows from this decision in that event? If an appeal with respect to identification is overturned, then a child, by virtue of that appeal, can be classified as an exceptional student and fall within the definition of the act. There is no difficulty there. Unlike other people in this Legislature, I do not find any difficulty in reading what that means. But if this board allows the appeal of the parents with respect to the placement of the child, what remedy can it impose in those circumstances?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: If the placement of the child is questioned and is appealed and the board determines that an appropriate placement is required, then the board which has responsibility for the child whose case is being appealed is told by the tribunal that that program will be established, or that it must purchase that program for the child from another board as it is set out after subsection 10—I believe it is 12 or 13 of section 7. Excluding the hard-to-serve pupils, the same kinds of remedies which are available to those children determined by a tribunal to require placement in a special educational program would prevail in this circumstance as well.

Mr. Stong: To make it crystal clear, again, it seems to me there ought to be an addition to this amendment that would indicate that the board can make an order causing the implementation of the remedies available in section 7, if nothing more than just to make a determination. I know the remedies are set out in this section but, again, to make it crystal clear that the board does have some kind of remedy and can make an order, it appears to me it ought to be incorporated in this subsection that the tribunal can make an order against the board.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: I suppose subsection 13 could be duplicated at some point at the end of that section, which would ensure that the tribunal, having found the pupil to need placement in a special education program, requires the board to provide that program, and that the board is required to notify the minister that that order is complied with.

Mr. Stong: In the light of the fact that the minister is establishing regional tribunals, and that there is no definition of tribunals, section 34a(1), which sets up the special education tribunal, ought to have it made clear that that includes both the provincial and the regional tribunals as envisaged by this amendment.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Section 34a(2) undoubtedly should have added to it, "shall establish one or more tribunals known as special education tribunals, provincial or regional." Okay? The addition of those three words—

[Failure of sound system.]

Mr. Chairman: Hon. Miss Stephenson moves that section 34a(1) be amended by adding, after the word "tribunals" in line four, the words "provincial or regional."

Mr. McClellan: We have already covered that.

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Yes, we have.

Mr. Chairman: I will have to ask the committee if it is agreeable to revert to section 34a(1). Is the committee agreeable?

Mr. Foulds: What is the request?

Mr. Chairman: The request is to revert to section 34a(1) and add the words "provincial or regional" in line four.

Mr. Foulds: I am sorry but I can't find it in the welter of papers before me.

On section 34a(1):

Mr. Chairman: Any questions or comments?

Mr. Foulds: I have a question. I suppose one question is, where the hell are we? I have before me a sheet of amendments that the minister introduced to section 7. Under that, if we are amending the act rather than the bill, I want to know whether we are amending—

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Foulds: Are we amending this act? Are we amending the bill that is before the House or are we amending the amendments that the minister introduced, and which set of amendments is it that we are amending?

Mr. Chairman: To answer the member for Port Arthur's question, I asked if the committee was agreeable to revert to section 34a(1) and it agreed.

Mr. Foulds: The difficulty I have with that is, in the mimeographed sheet I have in front of me, section 34a(2) is the section that reads, "Where a principal considers . . ." Is there another section?

Mr. Chairman: Is the honourable member on page five?

Mr. Foulds: It is not on my page five.

Mr. Chairman: Any questions?

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Page five, which was distributed to you much earlier is section 34a(1). For purposes of clarification we should also delete from line one, "subsection 10." This section should now read: "For the purposes of section 34 the Lieutenant Governor in Council shall establish one or more tribunals known as special education tribunals, provincial or regional, and appoint a secretary of such tribunals." It does not apply only to subsection 10.

9:50 p.m.

Mr. Chairman: It should read, "For the purposes of section 34." Delete "subsection 10 of."

All those in favour of the amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of section 7(2), as amended, will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

Section 7(2), as amended, agreed to.

In my opinion the ayes have it.

On section 7(3):

Hon. Miss Stephenson: Mr. Chairman, if I may, we have the addition requested by the member for York Centre.

Mr. Chairman: Hon. Miss Stephenson moves that section 7(3) dealing with section 34b be amended by adding the following subsection: "(6) The tribunal hearing the appeal may (a) dismiss the appeal or (b) grant the appeal and make such order as it considers necessary with respect to the identification or placement of the pupil."

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Those in favour of section 7(3), as amended, will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the ayes have it.

Section 7(3) as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: That completes section 7. I believe the committee agreed to stack the votes and then vote. I cannot do that yet because we have two stacked votes that have to be called. I would like to remind the members this will be a 10-minute bell.

The committee divided on Mr. Sweeney's amendment to the amendment to section 34(2) of the act as set out in section 7(1) of the bill, which was agreed to on the following vote:

Ayes 54; nays 25.

The committee divided on Mr. Sweeney's amendment to the amendment to section 34(3) of the act as set out in section 7(1) of the bill, which was agreed to on the same vote.

The committee divided on section 7, as amended, which was agreed to on the following vote:

Ayes 54; nays 25.

The Deputy Chairman: I believe the member for Bellwoods reserved the right to introduce a new subsection if those other amendments carried. Does he still wish to do so?

Mr. McClellan: Mr. Chairman, I had hoped to move an amendment which would have provided for a substantial appeal procedure with respect to the remaining two items on exceptional pupils, the question of what kind of special education programs or special education services a child would get. Instead we have the Mickey Mouse proposal the House has just passed, and my amendment would be out of order.

Bill 82, as amended, reported.

On motion by Hon. Miss Stephenson, the committee of the whole House reported one bill with amendments.

10:10 p.m.

ASSESSMENT AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Maeck moved second reading of Bill 185. An Act to amend the Assessment Act.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I have a short opening statement. This is a bill that all members of the House are familiar with because it is an annual bill that we bring in. When I introduced Bill 185 for first reading on November 13—

Mr. Nixon: Look what the minister is doing to the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. Will the honourable members please keep their conversations down? If you are leaving, leave quietly.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: I knew this was not a popular bill, Mr. Speaker, but I did not realize they were all going to leave. I thought some would stay around.

Mr. Speaker: I want to assure the honourable minister that I am listening, if no one else is.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: When I introduced Bill 185 for first reading on November 13, I made some explanatory comments which I would like to expand upon as we begin to consider the bill in detail.

The majority of the amendments are of an administrative nature. They update and provide further clarification on certain operating provisions within the Assessment Act. However, the major thrust of the bill is to postpone until December 1981 the return of assessment rolls to full market value and to continue the section 86(3) reassessment program.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, in 1978 the government made available to municipalities the section 86 reassessment program. This bill will ensure that assessment rolls remain frozen for a further year and that the section 86(3) reassessment program is available to municipalities and school boards in unorganized territories to correct inequalities within classes of properties without allowing tax shifts from one class of property to another.

Since its introduction, the section 86(3) program has been implemented successfully in 108 municipalities. Approximately 130 more municipalities will be reassessed under section 86(3) for 1981 taxation purposes. The interest expressed by these municipalities indicates substantial support for this program. Indeed, the Association of Municipalities of Ontario has endorsed the section 86(3) program as a valuable first step in the move to property tax reform.

Mr. Laughren: The minister should smile when he says that.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: I say to the member for Nickel Belt that this is very legitimate information.

I have no further information to offer at this time. The members are all familiar with this bill because it has been before the House, I believe, seven times. To go into further detail would probably be a waste of time on my part.

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Speaker, I do not know if I can follow the minister's opening comments due to the noise in the Legislature.

I will address Bill 185, An Act to amend the Assessment Act, with some reluctance. It seems to be an annual event that has been going on now for about five years. I believe it is annually since 1975 that we have brought in the normal amendment to defer the market value assessment and the continuation of the section 86(3) program.

I think the seed for a market value assessment concept was planted some 10 or 12 years ago. It was widely acknowledged that the Ontario property tax assessments contained many inequities, and through government action they are, in most municipalities in Ontario, frozen at the level of the value shown on the 1970 assessment rolls. The unjust property assessment inequities continue to grow, affecting residential property taxes in almost every municipality in Ontario.

Since all assessment is the responsibility of the province there has been no noticeable improvement in municipal assessment practices, and the ability to maintain equity is a long way off.

If one accepts the voluntary program initiated by the minister under section 86(3) of the Assessment Act, the Ontario government's present policy of using section 86 to implement reassessment within classes of property based on the 1975 market value is not satisfactory. It leads to unfair shifts in property tax burdens in counties and regions, burdening some of the municipalities that have undertaken reassessment. Moreover, this piecemeal approach will not create a uniformly wide base for the proposed grants and cost-sharing which was the main purpose of the assessment reform.

I find alarming the concern expressed by the policy statement on market value assessment issued by the Institute of Municipal Assessors of Ontario in May 1980. I quote from that statement:

"Inequities are produced by the passage of time as property values do not change uniformly across all classes of property or in all areas of municipalities. Market value assessments can be readily updated every two or three years to prevent such inequities. Consequently, market value assessments would produce assessments that would be both equitable and demonstrably fair, and would no longer be considered to be the product of an arbitrary application of some remote process.

"The Institute of Municipal Assessors of Ontario wishes to express its deep concern regarding the serious inequities that presently exist and continue to multiply as consequences of the obsolete assessment system maintained in most municipalities in Ontario. The institute therefore respectfully urges all members of the Legislative Assembly to recognize the gravity of the situation, and take all necessary steps to provide the remedy of implementation of market value assessment throughout Ontario.

"Implicit in the market value concept is the historically socially accepted proposition that municipal taxes should be based on property values which reflect long-term ratepayer investment and commitment. If public policy dictates differentiation in the tax burden as among ratepayers or classes of ratepayers, such differentiation should be apparent and not hidden.

"At the present time, the system hides the fact the tax burden is unevenly distributed. Equally important is the fact that these disparities are the result of changes in values over many years rather than a result of any stated policy.

"At the present time, due to the variety of mythologies employed, the special knowledge and subjective judgements inherent in the present assessment process, the statutory restrictions upon the disclosure of information, the lack of information available even to the assessors as the result of the age of the records and the disappearance of the authors of these records, and the further statutory restrictions upon the taxpayer's ability to compare his or her assessment with other assessments in the same municipality, the municipal taxpayer is simply unable to determine whether he or she is being treated fairly."

That does not speak too highly of the minister's program in the deferment of market value assessment and the continuation of the section 86(3) program. I suggest that is an alarming statement. I think this is the indication the municipal assessors have been trying to bring forward to this government for, I should say, 20 years—it is 15 years anyway, that is for sure.

It has continued since 1970, when they had great hopes of removing the inequity in municipal assessment. The previous Treasurer, Darcy McKeough, indicated over the years that some measures had to be taken to improve the assessment practices in the province. Year after year we have seen the minister bring in an amendment for further deferment of market value assessment.

I have said on previous occasions it is a rather tough area to move into, but I think it could have been done on reasonable terms and on a reasonable basis. Year after year as I stand up here I repeat, the same as the minister repeats the introduction of the amendment to the Assessment Act, if he had made the manual mandatory across the province and given it to each municipal assessor it would have been completed by now. The inequities would have disappeared. We would have had market value assessment, or revaluation or reassessment of all property in Ontario, whatever method the minister wants to apply. It is a problem that I do not think section 86(3) is going to resolve because we come to the apportioned cost and I don't believe section 86(3) touches the industrial or commercial assessment.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Yes.

Mr. Haggerty: I thought it was just residential property within a municipality of the same nature. The minister says it does relate to industrial assessment.

I think this is one area where there is difficulty in accepting market value assessment because the approach value taken for the guidelines of the criteria established by the ministry, which assessors have to apply, is the difficulty as it relates to residential property and the shifting of property tax more on to residential property than applies to commercial or industrial assessment. That is the area the minister has encountered over the years, the matter of how one arrives at an assessment on industrial property. There is no way I know of, or that even the minister is aware of, that can actually put a true value on industrial assessment. They are not being sold every day. Perhaps more are going into receivership now than ever. I do not know how you can arrive at a value there.

This is an area the ministry should have looked at before getting into the area of market value assessment. They used the wrong calculation some place in arriving at a fair value of industrial assessment. I suppose the minister could look at the current buildings going up and, from the construction costs, can arrive at a reasonable value on industrial assessment, but I do not think he can find a fair way to bring about older industrial assessment. I suggest that is the area the ministry should be looking at.

I suggest to the minister he can improve market value assessment. I suggested to the ministry staff it should bring in market value assessment at a different rate. There have been enough studies in this area to suggest market value should be 50 per cent of the assessed market value. Why not bring it in at 25 per cent and then phase it in over a period of five years and move in that direction? It may resolve some of the problems in the municipalities.

It is indicated there are 180 municipalities that have requested reassessment under section 86(3). There are some 600 more municipalities that would have to move in that direction. There are two now in the Niagara region that have accepted section 86(3) for reassessment, the town of Niagara and the township of Wainfleet. I tell the minister, that is going to cause a problem with the regional costs and apportionment costs alone.

I think when one or two municipalities request revaluation or reassessment in a municipality under section 86(3), it should apply across the whole region; or, if a municipality applies it within a county structure, the same thing should apply. Reassessment should take place in every municipality to remove the inequities across the whole region or county. What is bound to happen now is not going to remove the unjust apportionment costs that may follow reassessment under section 86(3).

When we look at reassessment, I think the province should be looking at another area, of revenue sharing agreements. The province should return to paying the higher share of the educational tax. That is one area, if you move into market value, in which, if you pick up 60 per cent of the costs of education instead of 51 per cent, the burden on the property tax payer will be reduced. That is another area that should be taken into consideration when one looks at property reassessment and property tax reform.

I also think there should be further consideration to be given to part of a better revenue sharing deal, modifying the existing transfer systems so as to reduce the reliance on a per capita formula, a policy that has a determined effect on those municipalities which are not growing. In many cases—to use the township of Wainfleet, for example: here is a rural municipality that is not going to have the industrial base or even the commercial base. On a reassessment under section 83, they could be penalized severely under the regional system of taxation for other costs and so on.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: But we do not increase their assessment rate.

Mr. Haggerty: Oh yes, there will be additional costs as it relates to the apportionment costs for the roads and for welfare services within the municipality, and apportionment costs for what—even library services and children's aid.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: We do not increase their assessment rates.

Mr. Haggerty: No, it is just moved from one—the factor, whatever it may be, is still maintained under the present assessment. If it is $4 million or $6 million, that level is still maintained. All one is doing is juggling the figures around. Someone comes along and says, "This property here may be assessed at $1,000 too high. We will lower that and we will assess this one here $1,000." All one is doing is exchanging the value figures on property which may not even be correct.

Hon. Mr. Maeck: But the total assessment remains the same.

Mr. Haggerty: I still do not think the inequities are going to be removed under the present system. To remove any mistrust that now exists, even under the section 86(3) assessment, if it is used in certain municipalities, I would recommend to the minister that where section 86(3) is requested by a municipal council for purposes of revaluation of property of similar nature, the minister consider contracting out the new evaluation; thus we can bring in independent property appraisers for the purpose of checking out the methodology, and for the use of provincial assessors. It is time now for the assessment practices and the methodology to be subject to the scrutiny of the public and of the provincial assessors.

In other words, let the peers—the taxpayers—be the judge of that. I suggest this is an area wherein I would consider contracting out, under section 86(3), to see how accurate the minister's policy or criteria for assessment are in Ontario. He may find out there are a number of discrepancies within that municipality that may be corrected by an independent appraiser's approach to it.

On motion by Mr. Haggerty, the debate was adjourned.

The House adjourned at 10:29 .m.

STATEMENT BY THE MINISTRY

RADIATION SITES

Hon. Mr. Elgie: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on an article in this morning's Globe and Mail headlined, "New Radiation Tests Ordered by AECB for 148 Locations."

Perhaps I might begin by saying the only law that refers specifically to the permissible limits of exposure to ionizing radiation is the Atomic Energy Control Act, an act of the federal Parliament, and more specifically, regulation P.C. 1978-1195 thereunder. However, since 1975, various provincial governments, including Ontario's, have co-operated with federal authorities in programs to guard against health hazards arising as a result of exposure to ionizing radiation.

We have taken the view that there is little purpose to be served in arguing about jurisdictional responsibilities; rather our concern has been to see that there is maximum co-operation between the two levels of government and that available expertise is shared and effectively deployed. The 148 locations referred to in the newspaper article are located across Canada. Approximately 70 of these are in Ontario.

The existence of this situation came to light in 1975, following the discovery that a building on Church Street in Toronto had high radiation levels. Subsequently the list of 148 locations across Canada was compiled by the Atomic Energy Control Board from a number of sources.

In February 1975 a group consisting of staff from the AECB, the federal Department of Health and Welfare and the Ontario Ministry of Health conducted a survey of the sites within Ontario to determine whether buildings or sites other than the Church Street location constituted health hazards. This survey did not reveal radiation levels that were likely to result in exposure in excess of the criteria permitted under the regulations enacted pursuant to the Atomic Energy Control Act.

In 1976 the AECB established a federal-provincial task force on radioactivity. In 1977 that task force published criteria or guidelines to assist in deciding whether or not decontamination should be carried out in any of the locations. These criteria or guidelines were followed in carrying out decontamination procedures at the Church Street property in Toronto, at the various properties in Port Hope, Elliot Lake and Bancroft, where work is still in progress, and at Deloro.

Questions have now arisen concerning the remaining sites in Ontario and elsewhere in Canada. These concerns have been brought to the attention of the AECB. My officials have been in close touch with the president of the AECB and his officials to determine the appropriate action to be taken. The president of the AECB proposes that the survey conducted in 1975 now be reviewed in the light of the criteria or guidelines published by the federal-provincial task force.

We are in agreement with this proposal and have indicated to Mr. Jennekens we are prepared to co-operate in such a review. I understand that within the next few days the Ontario government will be receiving a specific written proposal from the AECB as to how this review should be conducted, what further action, if any, might be undertaken, and what further remedial action, if any, might be required.

I might add that based upon tests conducted at the sites referred to in the recent newspaper articles, namely the Malvern subdivision in Scarborough and the property on Davenport Road in Toronto, there is no indication of health hazards to anyone. We shall, however, continue to co-operate in the review that the president of the AECB proposes.

ORAL QUESTIONS

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my first question to the Minister of Agriculture and Food on the subject of South Cayuga.

Given that the land on which the liquid waste plant in South Cayuga will be located is among the best farm land in Canada, from the point of view of both soil and heat units, the amount of sunlight and warmth that falls upon the land, and given the resolution passed unanimously yesterday by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture demanding a full justification of the South Cayuga site and a hearing on the matter by the Environmental Assessment Board, will the honourable minister explain to this House how he can allow the matter to proceed without such a hearing and what his participation in the decision-making process was?

Did he speak up against this within the cabinet and within those places where the decision was made, or did he meekly acquiesce to let this happen?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, in response to the honourable member and the resolution that passed at yesterday's meeting of the OFA, I have not had an opportunity to read the resolution or to know the actual wording of the resolution.

Mr. S. Smith: Come on.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I am being honest. Apparently the member has access to something I do not have, but I do not have a copy of that resolution. However, this morning I was at the OFA meeting along with several of my colleagues from cabinet. The Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) took 15 minutes this morning and went into full detail. He told the group the background of the environmental hearing, the whole suggestion.

Mr. S. Smith: That is not the question I asked about your participation.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: My response to the question this morning was that we, as the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, identified the type of soil it was. We made the Minister of the Environment aware of what the conditions were. If the member would read the announcements the Minister of the Environment made respecting this, it is the intention there will only be certain types of agriculture grown around this site. They will not be agricultural products that will be consumed directly by the consumer.

Mr. S. Smith: What did you say about it?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: It was a full government decision to put this site in Cayuga. 2:10 p.m.

Mr. S. Smith: Since it does appear as though the minister has simply acquiesced in this particular decision, can I ask the minister to confirm what was reported in the Chatham Daily News of August 4, 1980? Concerning the Lambton site, which the MacLaren consultants were very high on and felt was a very close second, could the minister say whether it is true, as reported in that newspaper, that "following a closed cabinet meeting it was decided not to locate the dump in the riding of Lambton." Is that a fact or not?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: The member was never more wrong in his life. One third of the total industrial waste of Ontario is disposed of 10 miles from my house, right in the centre of Lambton, so the member was never more wrong. He really does not know what is going on. There are dry cellars in the centre of Moore township, five miles from Sarnia, as the member for Sarnia (Mr. Blundy) can tell him. The member is absolutely wrong. One third of the industrial waste of this province—

Mr. S. Smith: I did not ask the minister about one third of the industrial waste.

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, one third of the industrial waste is disposed of within 10 miles of my house. The item is wrong; the member is wrong. He really does not know the situation. He was never more wrong in his life.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the Minister of Agriculture and Food explain the differing treatment of urban residents and farmers in the cases of the proposed industrial waste facility five kilometres from the town of Thorold and the proposed facility at South Cayuga? Why is it that when the ministry and the government intended to put a liquid waste disposal facility in an urbanized area in the Niagara Peninsula, the government was prepared to have an environmental assessment that would have provided some assurance to people in the area, if it went through, that the environment was protected, but when it is farmers who are involved in South Cayuga there is no such assurance because the government has waived the necessity of having an environmental assessment?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, if the leader of the New Democratic Party had waited until this morning and gone down to a meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, he could have had all his questions answered. I would suggest he ask that particular question of the Minister of the Environment. Everybody at the federation this morning understood it. I will let that minister answer the question.

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of privilege: This is not the Ontario Federation of Agriculture; this is the Legislature and the government.

Mr. Speaker: That is not a point of privilege either.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the Minister of Agriculture and Food is aware that under the old classification, 90.8 per cent of the land in South Cayuga was classified as one and two agricultural land, and that under the new classification, 93 per cent of the land is classified as one, two, three and four. Under the honourable minister's own guidelines and the recommendations brought in for the Ministry of the Environment, development of treatment or disposal sites for liquid industrial wastes and hazardous wastes should not be using class one, two, three and four land. What is the policy of the minister's government in response to the quality of the land?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, we are well aware of the classification of the land. I can point it out acre by acre to the honourable member if he wishes. This situation was judged by government and it was decided that it was a most appropriate site to serve the people of this province.

Mr. Swart: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I ask the minister, in his answer to the initial question, do we understand—and I assume we do—that much more than 100 acres will be taken out of agricultural production and perhaps much more than 740 acres? The minister is not going to allow edible food for human consumption to be grown in quite a substantial area around that, and perhaps rightly so. My question to the minister is, how can he justify that volume of good agricultural land being taken out of production when there is an extreme shortage of class one and two land and many of the other sites are on very poor agricultural land?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, it is easy to see that the honourable member has not studied the proposal. The proposal is for 100 acres of land for the actual site for the treatment plant. The area surrounding it will be growing agricultural crops—not crops such as lettuce and tomatoes, but agricultural crops.

Mr. Riddell: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Accepting the honourable minister's statement that Lambton county accepts its share of liquid industrial waste, is it not true that before the provincial government decided on Harwich township as the recipient of the dump, it had been a toss-up between locating in Harwich or expanding an existing waste plant near the town of Brigden in Lambton? Is it not true that the minister used his weight in caucus to say there was no way that was going to come to Lambton county? If the minister's staff made comments on the site at South Cayuga, would he please table any reports or comments that they made?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, it is easy to understand that the honourable member really has not studied the situation. Had the honourable member been where the official critic of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food should have been this morning, he would have heard the whole explanation. He would have heard that Huron county was the first choice.

The Lambton site for industrial waste was established in the late 1960s. It is one of the more up-to-date sites in Ontario. Yes, we have had our problems with it. One has problems with industrial waste wherever one is, but about two years ago, Tricil Limited upgraded their plant. None of us likes it and there is no sense kidding ourselves, but it is doing the job. There was no interference on my part with the minister in making his decisions as to whether they would enlarge the Lambton site or whether they would choose other sites.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I have a question on the same topic again to the Minister of the Environment.

In the honourable minister's statement on Tuesday, he referred to a new corporation to operate the disposal site. He said this Ontario Waste Management Corporation will be incorporated immediately. He then referred to forthcoming legislation to set up a crown corporation to assume management and development responsibility. Could I ask the minister, are these two different corporations, and if so, could he explain the point of having two different corporations? Could he confirm if it is correct that under his general policy, a private corporation would be exempt from environmental assessment whereas a crown corporation would not be exempt?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the latter part of that question: First, there is no relationship to that at all; it applies to government activity.

Before I answer the middle part of that question, I would like to tell the honourable members of the House that I have to put a word in to the credit of the member for Lambton and Minister of Agriculture and Food.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, don't let him wander. You don't let me get off the topic.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. The question dealt specifically with crown corporations. It had nothing to do with the previous question.

2:20 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: It is rather sad that the one person who has done the most to deal with the problem should even be remotely criticized. That happens to be the member for Lambton. He has really done his share.

However, on the crown corporation, one would flow from the other. It would be necessary to have the appropriate legislation in this Legislature to establish a crown corporation. It does not deny the possibility of having a corporation formed which, when the appropriate legislation was presented, would become the crown corporation with the appropriate terms of reference drawn forth.

Mr. S. Smith: I had trouble hearing the answer to that question. I would ask the minister when he stands again if he would accept that a private corporation would be exempt from environmental assessment whereas a crown corporation would not be exempt? I want a direct answer to that when he stands again. Specifically, could he also tell us who will be the shareholders of this private corporation? Is it to be a nonprofit corporation? Exactly how is it to be incorporated? Who will hold the assets, and what will the arrangement be in its dealings with the government?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The shareholder, obviously, would be the crown, and any assets would flow to the crown. For the first part of that question, there was no thought that by establishing a private corporation it would be exempt. That was an entirely different question. I made the statement on Tuesday that dealt with the environmental assessment aspect of it. It had no relationship to whether or not it was or was not a private company. The same terms apply to both.

Mr. Cassidy: Could the minister say whether it is the government's intention, either through supplementary estimates or through legislation, to bring this matter before the Legislature before the House rises about December 12; or is it the government's intention, having rammed the decision on South Cayuga into consideration with the MacLaren study, now to seek to make the establishment of that liquid waste facility a fait accompli with no consultation whatsoever with the elected representatives of Ontario here in the Legislature?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I would be more than pleased to have this discussed in a committee if the members wish. If they want to refer it to a committee for a full discussion, that has been my habit ever since I became minister. I do not think the question is readily discussed in detail in the question period to the degree that a matter of such vital importance to this province can be discussed. If the honourable member is asking if I would be happy to have me and my staff go to a committee hearing, of course I would. I would go any time the members wish it.

As far as coming to this Legislature, I am here every day. The member can ask me about it any time he wishes to in question period. He knows that. I do not know why he would not respond accordingly.

Mr. S. Smith: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: If the first corporation, the one the minister is going to set up right now to get things going, is to have only one shareholder, basically the crown, and that is to be followed by a crown corporation for which he will bring a bill into the House, is the only reason he is setting up the first corporation, rather than coming directly in with a crown corporation bill, simply to avoid the possibility of having a vote in this Legislature on his crown corporation?

They both, in effect, will be owned by the crown. What conceivable reason could there be for doing it in this rather odd way with two separate corporations, rather than simply having the decency and the honesty to come before the House with a resolution for the crown corporation, and a bill that we can then vote on in a democratic manner?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I said no to that question three times already. When the crown corporation is to be formed it will be formed because of legislation that has been introduced in this House, where the members opposite will have their opportunity to vote on it. As soon as I am able to receive a phone call I would like to make a statement here today about the membership of that corporation, or at least a part of it. I want to have that confirmed; I believe it is correct. But I am more than happy to serve notice now about what I think will be a significant statement forthcoming in a very short period of time.

Mr. Speaker: If it is forthcoming we will ask for a consensus of the House to revert to statements.

Mr. Isaacs: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the honourable minister assure us there will be no activities on the South Cayuga site that mean the acceptance of any waste on to that site before the crown corporation has been considered and voted on by this Legislature? Is he going to use the private company as an end run around the House—

Mr. S. Smith: That is exactly what it is going to do precisely.

Mr. Isaacs: —or will he make sure that nothing is done that involves waste until there has been a vote here on the crown corporation?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: It may disappoint the leader of the Liberal Party, but he will have to learn to live with the fact that there will be no activity on that site until a crown corporation is formed.

As I have said for the fourth time, that will be an act of this House. There will be no activity on the site until after June 30 at the earliest, regardless of what happens; that is, activity meaning the acceptance of waste. I think that was the reference point the honourable member made. Under no circumstances will waste be accepted there prior to June 30.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question which I want to direct to the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs in his role as acting Premier in the absence of the Deputy Premier and of the Premier.

Could the acting Premier tell the House whether we can now take it the cabinet has approved in principle the exemption from the Environmental Assessment Act of the South Cayuga liquid industrial waste site? Can he say on what grounds it was that cabinet decided, once again, to overrule its own law which was adopted five years ago and has yet to be applied to any major environmental project of this province?

Hon. Mr. Wells: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I am not acting Premier. I am the government House leader and that is the position I am speaking from. I would be happy to have the member's question directed towards me, but I would answer him by saying he should direct that question towards the minister.

I think any minister of this government who presents a position in a policy statement obviously does so with the full support of cabinet. If the member wishes to have the reasons for bringing forward that policy, the Minister of the Environment is fully qualified and can effectively give him the reasons for what he is doing.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs indicates this action of the Minister of the Environment was taken with the full support of the cabinet, can he say whether the cabinet or the Premier consulted with the advisory group set up to advise the cabinet on environmental questions, that is, the environmental assessment steering committee which is headed by Dr. D. A. Chant of the University of Toronto?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The same response would pertain to that question as to the first one. I think the member should refer that question to the minister.

I think I made it very clear. First of all, I am not sure where my friend studied parliamentary democracy, but when a minister of this government stands up under "Statements by the Ministry" in this House and makes a government policy statement, it has the support of the whole cabinet. I think he should be aware of that.

That minister takes the responsibility for that statement and will give him a complete answer to any kind of question such as he has brought forward, as to whom he advised and what advice he got and so forth. I think if my friend would ask the minister that question he will get an answer.

Mr. Cassidy: If I can redirect my question to the Minister of the Environment, could the minister tell the House, are we to take it the cabinet has now approved in principle the exemption of the South Cayuga project from the Environmental Assessment Act? Would the minister tell us on what environmental and technical data the cabinet made that approval, to railroad approval and override completely the Environmental Assessment Act of 1975?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The answer, very clearly, is yes, cabinet has made that decision. Information was supplied to cabinet at great length on which it based its decision.

Mr. S. Smith: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The member will have an opportunity. We have spent 23 minutes on this question. I will allow one final supplementary.

2:30 p.m

Mr. S. Smith: But it is on the matter of who he received advice from, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister confirm that he did not receive advice on this matter from the Waste Management Advisory Board and, furthermore, that he did not receive any advice on the matter, nor did MacLaren from the Grand River Conservation Authority? As the minister well knows there is a flood plain at the Grand River, at least in the control area of his project. Will he confirm that he received advice from neither of those bodies?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, it is a matter for the Waste Management Advisory Board to have a referral from the ministry. Basically, they are free to comment on any particular item they wish. But I think it is already understood they are primarily interested in solid waste. That was, has been and will continue to be their major role in advising us on solid waste. I did not go to the committee and ask them for their advice on liquid waste because we have a very comprehensive study doing that. Whether MacLaren went to the conservation authority, I do not know. At that stage, we were asking the consultants to make their report. It cost us $425,000 and they have done that.

Mr. Cassidy: With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I have a new question for the Minister of the Environment. Can the minister say what environmental and technical information was submitted to cabinet to justify the exemption from environmental assessment of the South Cayuga project? On top of the MacLaren report, was there any other data or information? What was that data or what were those reports, and will the minister agree to make that information available to the public and to this Legislature?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I think most people know that top cabinet documents are not subject to me releasing them to this House. Of course, there were papers and information for cabinet's perusal; but they were cabinet documents and they will remain that way.

Mr. Cassidy: Since what the minister is saying is, "We know best on the basis of information that we have seen but that we are not going to share with the public, the Legislature and the people in South Cayuga or anywhere else," will the minister not agree that the reason he will not share it is because there are no other technical assessments of any validity on that site; he has not had the time to assess them; and the only comprehensive report he has indicates quite clearly there is a requirement for further field studies to confirm the geological data before it can be decided whether South Cayuga is an adequate site? How can the minister go forward with South Cayuga when he does not know and has not done the technical studies to justify it, and he will not publish the information he says he has?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: With respect, Mr. Speaker, there is the Morrison Beatty study, which had specific information on that site. I tabled that. Surely the leader of the third party has seen that one, has he not? I know I am not permitted to ask a question, sir. It was tabled and sent to him. I will assume he saw that technical data. That report does say there needs to be further investigation. But it is also clear in my statement that the crown corporation would be charged with the responsibility of making sure that site was totally suitable for the purposes intended, and that with the public representation on that particular crown corporation they would be able to make that information available for the people.

I think we have said it often—I hope eventually it will be heard—that corporation is as open and free with its information as is possible. There are no conditions to be put on that crown corporation with regard to dispensing all—I mean all—of the technical data for that site. We have nothing to hide. We want the people to know and they will be given every opportunity to have that information. It is the responsibility of the crown corporation to make those decisions, with local people having a great deal of input into them.

Mr. S. Smith: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker, on this subject of documents to be tabled: The minister told us the other day there were appendices to the MacLaren report. Anyone reading the report can tell that all we got was a summary and that the meat of the report is in the appendices. Could the minister tell us, first, if he has read those appendices himself? If he has, will he make a photocopy of them and give us a copy rather than force us to wait for these to be printed, as he stated on Tuesday?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have voluminous volumes and I will make them available as soon as printed, as I said. We are talking about a matter of days. I am not going to photocopy literally hundreds of pages when they are at the printer and will be delivered here within days, when he can have as many as he wants.

Mr. Cassidy: Since the minister says he has nothing to hide and that all the data will be shared with the public of Ontario, would the minister undertake to start now by tabling all of the information that went before the cabinet, including the political rationale that justified an act of crass political expediency?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The answer is no.

FOOD INDUSTRY PRACTICES

Mr. Riddell: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. When I asked the minister on October 21 about the action he would be taking concerning the report of the Royal Commission of Inquiry into Discounting and Allowances in the Food Industry in Ontario, he replied that he would not be taking action until he got input from the whole world.

The president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture stated at the convention that the report is completely unacceptable and has asked the government to reject it. Will the minister now assure us that he will reject this report and bring in appropriate legislation such as we proposed or the Ontario Federation of Agriculture proposed to protect the producers and the small processors and grocers of the province?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I have received one report from the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and I have received one letter from a Liberal Party member supporting the federation. I have had no other input whatsoever. I am waiting for that input.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the minister would be direct instead of dissembling. When I put the same question to him yesterday, he said the letter for rejection of that report had gone to the Premier and he was leaving it totally to the Premier. Is he still leaving it with the Premier, or is he gathering and soliciting letters before he makes up his mind?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I believe all members of the Legislature got a copy of that report from the federation. That is the letter I referred to the Premier.

Mr. MacDonald: Would the minister respond to the question of whether or not he is rejecting the report?

Mr. Speaker: He has done that in his own way.

SOVIET INVOLVEMENT IN POLAND

Mr. Duksza: I have a question of the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs. As a Polish-Canadian I rise on a most urgent matter, Mr. Speaker. In view of the massing of the Soviet troops on the Russian-Polish border and veiled threats of invasion of Poland in the USSR, and in view of the fact the changes in Polish society are a significant development towards democracy and must be encouraged, will the minister undertake to introduce a resolution to the Legislature as soon as possible expressing the support of the people of Ontario for the socioeconomic rights of Polish people?

Would such a resolution also express the concern and opposition of the people of Ontario to the possible Russian intervention in Poland and third, in case of Soviet intervention, the intention of Ontario to exercise whatever political, economic and other sanctions it can against the Soviet Union in opposition to such invasion?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I suppose traditionally it would be said that this is a matter within the purview of the federal government. However, my friend has brought up this question because of his very deep feelings about it. The position of this government and the Premier in the case of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan is well known, and the Premier said at that time all our fellow citizens were convinced the Soviet Union had gone too far in regard to what happened there. He said that as Canadians we must stand with the free nations of the world in drawing the line and making our position known.

As members of this House know, we put that position forward, along with the government of Canada, very vocally at that time. In fact, even before the government of Canada had made up its mind, we strongly supported and recommended the boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games.

I think all of us in this House welcome the moves that have been taken to bring more democracy to the institutions in Poland. I think that move is applauded by all of us and that all of us would deplore any interference, particularly outside interference, to cause those gains to be turned back or to cause interference with them. I think anything that caused that to happen would be the subject of grave concern and would not have our support.

However, I think it is premature to suggest that any resolution such as my friend has suggested be introduced here. Certainly, it is well that we be aware of that kind of thing but, as I say, I think it would be premature for any resolution to be introduced at this time.

Mr. Duksza: I appreciate and thank the minister for those sentiments but I think an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. If he would accept our resolution, expressing the sentiments of all of us here, I think it would have a beneficial effect and may stop the Russians from considering intervention in Poland. It is within the purview of the powers of the Legislature to do so, or the minister could, on the other hand, move towards sending these sentiments to the federal government, which has been somewhat at a loss to express them. It is better to do it now than regret it in bitterness later.

Mr. Speaker: That was really a statement, not a question.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I was just going to say, Mr. Speaker, I do not think this House ever passed any official resolution regarding the Afghanistan situation. I do not think there is anyone in Ontario or Canada who doubted our feeling about Soviet involvement in that particular country and I think at the present time, from the exchange that has taken place and the support that I sense in this House and that my friend senses, there is no doubt where our sentiments are and what they would be if any action were to occur in Poland.

Mr. B. Newman: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I suggest to the House leader that he inform the federal government of the feeling of the province of Ontario with respect to the discussion that has taken place in here so it would know that Ontario is definitely opposed to the proposed actions of the Soviet government?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to communicate with the Department of External Affairs and inform it that this House certainly supports the kind of progress and progressive things that are happening in Poland and would certainly regret anything that would turn those progressive steps back.

Mr. Dukszta: Mr. Speaker, may I ask you something on a point of order?

Mr. Speaker: There is really nothing out of order. If the House in its wisdom wants to pass a resolution, it would be my responsibility to transmit it to the federal government.

Mr. Dukszta: May I ask a point of privilege then on a different matter?

Mr. Speaker: Have your privileges been abused in some way?

Mr. Dukszta: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: I will hear it, but I cannot think of any conceivable way in which your privileges have been abused since you asked the question.

Mr. Dukszta: I wonder if I could ask the House for unanimous consent for that resolution to pass?

Mr. Speaker: No, you can not.

FEDERAL AID TO TRANSPORTATION

Mr. Cureatz: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Snow) I will direct my question to the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs. Would the minister relate this question to the Minister of Transportation and Communications? As a follow-up to my colleague the member for Durham West (Mr. Ashe) would the minister assure us that he would continue with his federal counterpart to ensure the positive supply of federal funds for commuter rail traffic in Ontario? If such funds are obtained, would the minister ensure that they would be put forward for the extension of the GO train system to the city of Oshawa?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to pass that on to my colleague. I can tell you that in this particular matter my colleague, the Minister of Transportation and Communications, has the full support of all cabinet and all members of this side of the House and, I am sure, the other side, in drawing to the federal government's attention that its promises to aid urban transit have never been fulfilled. We want to see a little action in that regard. Once that action occurs, improvements will occur in the system.

Mr. J. Reed: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: When the minister is conveying his message to the Minister of Transportation and Communications, will he make sure that both ends of the GO system get equal consideration?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to pass that on, but I just have to get a slight parochial comment in here. I really believe the western end of the GO system has had a lot more consideration than the eastern end out where I live. We are looking for an extension of the GO system to Agincourt.

Mr. Speaker: We have heard from the east and the south. Now we will hear from the middle.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister aware of the fact that all these questions on urban transportation coming from the Tory back-benchers are just a parroting of what Sinclair Stevens asked in the House of Commons the day before?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding the fact that I just had lunch with Sinc Stevens, although he was sitting at the head table and I was not talking with him—he was two or three seats removed—I was not aware they were the questions he had asked. I am not sure what the relevance of that is.

Mr. MacDonald: The relevance is it is an orchestrated Tory attack.

GUELPH TEXTILE FIRM

Mr. Worton: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism. Could he inform the House what financial arrangements have been made with the former owner of the Guelph textile firm in relation to his ministry and the federal ministry? As I understand from news reports, this firm is going to re-establish effective January 1, and I would like to know what amounts of money the minister is putting into this firm?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I will have to get that information for the member. I will report in the morning.

Mr. Worton: I would like to know, if the minister is considering refinancing it—and the paper does indicate that—would he take into consideration as part of that refinancing, as part of the condition of this firm getting money, seeing that the former employees of that firm get their holiday pay and the employees who had NSF cheques given to them in lieu of wages get their money back?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That seems reasonable. I will report to the member in the morning.

DURHAM REGIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL HEARING

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of the Environment concerning the environmental assessment of the proposed liquid waste treatment facility in Ajax. Can the minister assure us that the report which I understand is to be released tomorrow is the report prepared solely by the three-member panel of the Environmental Assessment Board that sat through the hearing and heard all the evidence, or had some other people who were not at the hearing some influence in the writing of the board's decision?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I have said many times that I do not give direction to that board. They will issue the results of their hearing, and whether it is a board decision or the three-man panel that heard the matter, I do not know, nor do I have any inclination to find out. It is their business. They are at arm's length from our ministry and will continue to exist that way.

I notice that the member's colleague has already said, regardless of what the decision is he is opposed to it, and I know the member is opposed to it, another prime illustration where he demands a hearing and then makes the judgement one day ahead. The member does not wait for their decision.

Mr. Isaacs: It is absurd for the minister to say we are opposed to whatever the decision is. What nonsense.

Is the minister aware that if the hearing had been held under the Environmental Assessment Act the legislation would have required that no member of the board shall participate in a decision of the Ontario Municipal Board unless he was present throughout the hearings and heard the evidence and argument of the parties, but because it was held under the Environmental Protection Act, which contains no such guarantee, there is every possibility members of the board who have not heard all the evidence and who did not sit through the hearings have participated in the decision?

Does the minister not think the judge of a matter should be the judge who sat through the hearings and not somebody else who may be influenced by who knows what?

2:50 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I think this is a well known procedure. It is not unusual for it to be followed by the OMB. I would like to comment on the fact that the chairman of that board was complimented extremely highly by the citizen protest group, which said it had great confidence in the chairman and in the board, notwithstanding the fact it was going to oppose it. That is the kind of comment that I think gives due credit to those in opposition. It has confidence in the board. I wish the members opposite would let it perform its function.

Mr. Gaunt: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister confirm that the chairman of the panel which heard the Ajax matter has resigned? Would he also confirm that the reason the member resigned was given as interference, in the sense that the full board reversed the decision which the panel recommended?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I will confirm the former for sure. Yes, he has resigned, but the letter of resignation makes absolutely no reference to that at all and I would be absolutely amazed if it is true. I will be glad to table the letter of resignation from that particular chairman. It sets out very clearly why he resigned.

FARM BUILDING MATERIALS

Mr. Watson: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Revenue. In view of the confusion that exists at the present time with the information bulletin that went out regarding farm building materials—the document said the sales tax was to be taken off for renovating and constructing homes and apartments—can the minister tell us if materials purchased for the construction of farm buildings are exempt from the seven per cent sales tax on this temporary basis?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I can confirm all the building materials listed in the bulletin are all exempt, whether they are for agricultural farms or industrial purposes or otherwise.

Mr. Watson: In view of the fact constituents of mine have not been given this, would the minister's office issue some press release indicating that farm building materials are exempt?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: I think what the member is referring to is a small sentence in the bulletin which says, "The following building materials which are used for constructing and renovating homes and apartments are eligible for the exempting." That is what has caused the confusion. It may be that I will have to send out another bulletin to clarify that.

Mr. McKessock: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I would like to ask the minister if this change has been made since the question was asked of the Treasurer (Mr. F. S. Miller) this morning at the Ontario Federation of Agriculture breakfast?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: No, Mr. Speaker. I think if anyone had called my ministry a week ago he would have been given the same answer I have given today. There has been no change in this particular policy.

MEDICAL AND DENTAL PROCEDURES

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Health (Mr. Timbrell) I would like to ask a question of the government House leader. After his glorious foray into the field of external affairs, I wonder if he would join me in interceding on behalf of one of my constituents, a Mrs. Isabelle Smith, who had a medical and dental procedure denied coverage under regulation 43 of the Health Insurance Act? Such a procedure was necessary, according to the medical information I have here, because she did not have a proper food intake. In other words, she could not eat adequately.

Does the House leader not feel that such a procedure is necessary for the health of an individual in order to eat adequately, and would he intercede and see to it that regulation 43 of the act is changed?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, obviously that question should be referred to the Minister of Health.

Mr. Roy: The minister is going to help me and see to it that he gets it?

Hon. Mr. Wells: If the member would like. Is the member not going to be here tomorrow to ask him?

Mr. Makarchuk: He's not going to be here on Monday either.

Mr. Roy: I think I am in this House more often than he is lately. My record is better than one out of four.

By way of supplementary, instead of standing up there and getting smart is the minister going to intercede on behalf of this constituent of mine? Is he going to see to it the Minister of Health gets this question and is he going to put some pressure on to amend regulation 43 of the act?

Hon. Mr. Wells: I really believe the duty of interceding with the Minister of Health is one of the things all of us are elected to do on behalf of our constituents, and I am sure my friend does that very well. I suggest he continue to do that with the Minister of Health.

URANIUM MINING MONITORING

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour. Is the minister aware of the problems some of the construction workers and electricians in Elliot Lake are having when doing contract work in the area of the mine and the mill? Are they being monitored for their exposure to radiation? Can the minister tell us what arrangements are made for contracted-out workers in that vicinity to be monitored for exposure to either radon daughters or to the poor uranium or yellowcake in the mill?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: It was my understanding when I visited that Elliot Lake mine about a year ago the monitoring was the same as it was with the regular work force. If that is not so, I would be glad to check on it, but I was not aware of any difference in it.

Mr. Laughren: I wonder if the minister could check into complaints by those workers that when they are exposed—in some cases they are in greater exposure than the miners themselves who are being monitored—the mine safety branch of his ministry tell them there is no danger. At the same time the branch will not provide them with the appropriate monitoring badges and so forth to make sure they have a way of measuring their exposure. Will the minister look after that, please?

Hon. Mr. Elgie: I will certainly look into it. I did not get that kind of story when I visited there a year ago about lack of inspectors and the necessity for proper monitoring procedures, but I will be glad to look into it.

ASSISTANCE TO CANFARM

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. In view of the fact the federal Minister of Agriculture has reneged on his commitment to financially support Canfarm, will the minister undertake to try to convince the federal government to reconsider this decision?

Mr. Makarchuk: What is going on? Is there an election coming up and you guys are trying to get a higher profile? Or are you trying to prove—

Mr. Havrot: Why do you keep yapping every day? Why do you get up and ask stupid questions?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, the Canfarm operation was set up—I am not sure how many years ago—with a grant from the government of Canada. Was it 1969? But about three years ago—I do not have the exact times here—the government of Canada reduced the grant. Last year Canfarm found themselves unable to finish their year.

Mr. Peter Hannam retired as the president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and took on Canfarm in the hope he could review it and bring it back so that it would be of service. Many thousands of farmers across Canada are using this in the technical operation of their farms. Towards the end of last year I did send a cheque for $150,000 to this operation to help it continue. Recently I received a financial statement from this company where they need a great deal of money, many times the amount of that cheque. I believe one province has pledged support. We in Ontario are quite willing to do our share in conjunction with other provinces. We believe there will have to be assistance from the government of Canada to bring it back. We believe it is an important service for the people.

3 p.m.

The honourable member really asked me what pressure I will put on the government of Canada. I believe they are as knowledgeable about the situation as I am. I believe they are aware and I believe they are evaluating their position. We in Ontario stand by, ready to do our share.

Mr. J. Johnson: It is my understanding that Canfarm could continue to operate if it were to receive an outright loan or grant of $2 million from the federal government. Would the minister work with Peter Hannam and Canfarm Co-operative and see if he can arrange to help them in some way to obtain this financing from the federal government?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: I will be very happy to meet with Mr. Hannam, as he is well aware. A year ago when he came to my office and put the overall situation before me, I made arrangements for the cheque to be sent out. Yes, I will be glad to meet with Mr. Hannam, but I state again that I believe the government of Canada is well aware of the problem and of the services being provided.

Mr. McKessock: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: When the minister says the Ontario government is ready to do its share, does he mean on a per capita percentage basis of the farmers in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I believe about half of the farmers using Canfarm are from Ontario, although I do not have the exact numbers. We have not turned them down. We are still appraising it. I believe Alberta has suggested—and I only believe this, it is not firm—that they will put up $50,000. I believe that is the only commitment. I am ready to look at the usage of Canfarm as to the total service across Canada.

UNICEF CHRISTMAS CARDS

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, on November 21 the member for Beaches-Woodbine asked me if it is true that the retail sales tax is applicable to handling, shipping and postage charges for Unicef Christmas cards as indicated on the order forms sent out by Unicef this year.

The answer is that the retail sales tax is applicable for handling, shipping and postage charges as part of the fair value where ownership transfers from delivery of goods. When ownership transfers before delivery or shipping, the retail sales tax does not apply to the handling, shipping and postage charges. The sale of Unicef Christmas cards falls into the former category and tax is properly applicable to such charges.

Ms. Bryden: Supplementary Mr. Speaker: Since the minister has confirmed that this government in some cases applies the regressive sales tax to shipping, handling and postage charges on mail orders, I would like to ask the minister if he might not get the Christmas spirit and bring in a total exemption for Christmas cards that are sold by charitable organizations in order to encourage this form of fund raising?

Hon. Mr. Maeck: Mr. Speaker, I have been known to have the Christmas spirit from time to time, as has the member across the floor and the member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell). I think she gets it once in a while too.

It would be a very confusing administrative problem to do what the member for Beaches-Woodbine has suggested. However, for her information and for the members of the Legislature, to show that we are from time to time rather appreciative of these types of charitable organizations, I think it is only perhaps a week or two ago that an order in council was signed giving a remission of over $30,000 in sales tax to Unicef on purchases they had made in order to make the Christmas cards to sell, so they could collect the sales tax on handling and postage.

BENDIX CORPORATION

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism. Is the honourable minister aware that John Moynahan, the president of Local 195, United Automobile Workers, learned last week that Bendix has called for return to the United States of one set of dies from Central Stampings Limited in Windsor and is in the process of asking for the recall of another set? Has the minister approached Bendix and asked it to stop such practices?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I could not give the honourable member a firsthand report on the discussions with Bendix. I expect I will be able to do that by the morning.

My staff is in weekly contact with Bendix, so I will see if it can give me an update on that situation and report to the House.

Mr. B. Newman: Would the minister use his powers of persuasion and let Bendix know that the withdrawal of such dies is a violation of the intent of the auto trade pact?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will be pleased to comment on that when I get a report.

NOTICE OF DISSATISFACTION

Mr. Speaker: The member for Wentworth (Mr. Isaacs) has expressed his dissatisfaction with an answer given by the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) concerning the proposed Ajax liquid waste treatment plant. This matter will be debated at 10:30 tonight.

PETITIONS

ANNUAL REPORT, MINISTRY OF THE ENVIRONMENT, 1978-79

Mr. Cassidy: Pursuant to standing order 33(b) of the assembly, the undersigned members of the assembly hereby petition that the annual report of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, which was tabled in the House on December 13, 1979, sessional paper 285, be referred to the standing committee on resources development for such consideration and report as the committee may determine.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of that referral is specifically so that the standing committee on resources development can look into the intolerable way the Minister of the Environment is proceeding with respect to the choice of South Cayuga for liquid industrial waste disposal facilities.

ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT BOARD HEARING

Mr. G. I. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I have a petition for the Premier of Ontario (Mr. Davis). Would the Premier rescind a decision of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) and file the province's own environmental assessment process, which includes a full environmental study under the terms of the Environmental Assessment Act and an independent public hearing by the Environmental Assessment Board before proceeding with any such facility? The petition was signed unanimously by the council of the region of Haldimand-Norfolk.

REPORT
STANDING COMMITTEE
ON SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Riddell, on behalf of Mr. Gaunt, from the standing committee on social development reported the following resolution:

That supply in the following amounts and to defray the expenses of the Ministry of Labour be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1981:

Ministry administration program, $8,682,-400; industrial relations program, $3,499,-000; women's program $993,000; occupational health and safety program, $25,017,-000; employment standards program, $3,776,-000; manpower commission, $1,466,000; human rights commission program, $3,090,-000; labour relations board program, $2,918,000.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister of the Environment was trying to get the attention of the chair, I think, for purposes of making a statement. Do we have unanimous consent to revert to statements?

Agreed to.

3:10 p.m.

STATEMENT BY THE MINISTRY
ONTARIO WASTE MANAGEMENT
CORPORATION

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I want to make a rather brief but I think very important statement to the Legislature while all the honourable members are here rather than at night.

First of all, I would like to think the debate would be better postponed for a matter of two weeks. I am not asking for that—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The minister is anticipating something that is going to come before the House. If he wants to make a statement he is free to do so.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I would like to suggest, therefore, that I have two or three announcements to make at this time which I think are extremely important and will have a profound effect upon that consideration.

The first consideration is we would like to be able to propose the names of the people who will sit as the board of directors of the crown corporation.

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker: It is extremely hard to hear the minister. I do not believe we have had copies of the minister's statement, as is the custom. Could the minister either take the marbles out of his mouth or speak into the mike?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I confess to having a rather poor voice today. I have been a little preoccupied in the last 48 hours. I have been doing a fair amount of verbal communication. I will try to speak directly into the mike.

I think the quality of that board will have a profound effect on how it is seen to do its normal functions and duties.

Second, at a meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture this morning, the very respected Dr. C. L. Emery, the director of the Northumberland County Federation of Agriculture was there. He is a well known and accepted authority on environmental affairs. He proposed the resolution they passed yesterday be reconsidered. The assembled delegates agreed to have that item reopened for further discussion.

Dr. Emery proposed that a concept of a crown corporation and government-owned facility as announced be endorsed, and that in his opinion the hearing process would not resolve the issues. He said what is required at this time is consultation and co-operation because of the severity and importance of these urgently needed waste disposal facilities. He then recommended an advisory committee to the corporation be set up under the aegis of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, that it be funded by the Ontario government and that it have free access to all information in order to make public its report and recommendations. He recommended it be able to draw on whatever expertise it feels is necessary—legal, technical and medical.

I accepted the Ontario Federation of Agriculture's suggestion completely. The committee will have full and total access to all documentation and technical details. Along with the corporation itself, it will be able to hold public hearings throughout Ontario. This item was referred to the executive, which will make a decision on December 10. Needless to say, I hope it decides in the affirmative.

Mr. Breithaupt: What executive?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: The Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Interjection.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No. I would not say that in the agricultural community if I were the member. The farmers have a lot to do with protecting the environment.

Mr. Breithaupt: So do a lot of other people.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: You had better believe they have a lot.

Interjections.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I would also like to announce today that the most eminent environmentalist of our day and of our time, Dr. Donald Chant, will serve as chairman of the board of directors of the crown corporation. Dr. Chant is an extremely well respected environmentalist and current chairman of the Premier's (Mr. Davis) steering committee on environmental assessment.

After due consideration he agrees that the concept of this facility and the site selection need not be subject to a hearing under the Environmental Assessment Act. However, he also believes that hearings should be held on the merits of the technology under the Environmental Protection Act.

I have also agreed that detailed geo-technical surveys will most certainly be a part of this site development. I said that earlier in the statement today. That is the end of the statement, but I would like to table for members the curriculum vitae of Dr. Chant.

Mr. Breithaupt: We are not debating that.

Mr. Speaker: Is that the end of the minister's statement?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I will table it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. S. Smith: Could I have a copy of that statement, Mr. Speaker? I couldn't hear it.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I cannot understand why I did not hear some objection from the opposition parties. You did agree to revert to statements. However, you allowed the minister to proceed without having a copy of that statement. If I can anticipate the member for Port Arthur, is it about the lack of a copy of the statement?

Mr. Foulds: No.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, it is unusual to have a statement at the end of questions as we had today. It is also particularly unusual in that the statement was germane to questions that were being raised over the course of the question period. I would wonder whether the Speaker would permit perhaps one question apiece from the two opposition parties on the statement that the Minister of the Environment has just given.

Mr. Speaker: In the same spirit in which the minister asked the House to revert to statements so he could bring forward this very important information, and in that there was unanimous consent to allow him to do that, do I have the unanimous consent of the House for one question each from the leaders of the opposition parties having to do with the statement?

Agreed to.

ONTARIO WASTE MANAGEMENT CORPORATION

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, since I could not hear the statement, it is difficult to know what the man said. For clarification, basically by way of my statement, could the minister confirm that what he has just said is that there will be an environmental hearing on the subject of the technology to be used on the site in South Cayuga, but not with respect to the qualities of the site itself?

Could he clarify that aspect of what he just said? Did he really say Dr. Chant feels there is no need for further consideration concerning the selection of the site? Is that what Dr. Chant said? If so, why is the Ontario Federation of Agriculture now going to have hearings, with the minister's blessing, about the selection of the site?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, let me put it in these words: Dr. Chant was asked about this just yesterday, and that is why I was not able to give members an answer at two o'clock. He has thought about it very intensively because it is a very important matter for him to decide on. He has given that a lot of consideration and has said he would act as chairman of that crown corporation. He has said he thinks an environmental assessment hearing is not desirable, not necessary on the site itself in the concept of a crown corporation operating that site.

In other words, the site location is finalized. Dr. Chant believes it is best that it should be. He has viewed in those 24 hours at great depth the MacLaren report. Based on that assessment, he thinks the site discussion, the need and all of those aspects of an environmental assessment proposal, and no doubt a hearing, should be waived.

He rightly asks that the technology of that facility be subject, of course, to the scrutiny of the board. That was already agreed to. There was no question there at all. The technology will be subject to the scrutiny of the board. He wishes that the scrutiny be done at public hearings. I agree. It can be done under the Environmental Protection Act, or some similar assistance can be given to him in having the public hearings.

He asked—and we had already agreed to that at the federation meeting this morning—that there be a geotechnical survey of that site. Again, it was obvious it would be part of the board's original and first activity.

3:20 p.m.

Those are the two conditions that Dr. Chant wanted clearly identified. He will serve as the chairman of the crown corporation. I think we are unbelievably fortunate to have a man of that great calibre serve in that very vital role.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, would the Minister of the Environment explain why the ministry is so obsessed with its desire not to have an environmental assessment and environmental assessment hearing on this particular project to the point that the chairman of the steering committee, who would normally recommend as to whether or not the exemption should be granted, has now been brought into the crown corporation and to the extent that the minister keeps on trying to pretend that the environmental assessment would take such a long time, when we have learned from the people of MacLaren that they could, now, with what they have in hand, prepare the environmental assessment in a matter of two or three months? In other words, the environmental assessment and the hearing could be completed by the June 30 date, before which the minister says, "Nothing is going to be done on that site."

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid the leader of the third party does not understand the full implications of applying that act. One must look at a lot of other considerations as part of that assessment hearing. It is Dr. Emery's belief—and I thought he said it very well this morning; I am sorry some of the members of the third party did not take time out to go to the OFA meeting, or maybe one or two did, I do not know—

Mr. Riddell: Were his proposals endorsed by the OFA?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: He asked that his proposal be referred to the executive, who will make a decision on endorsing his proposals at the December 10 board meeting.

Mr. Breithaupt: You put him on the board too.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I will come to that. The meeting appropriately, after having passed quite a contrary resolution yesterday—it is a little difficult to be heard, Mr. Speaker—obviously wanted the time to consider and wanted its executive to have the time to consider.

I think Dr. Emery, in his statement this morning, put it extremely well. I have read this statement to Dr. Emery because I did not want him to have any doubt about what was being said on his behalf. I have just finished speaking to Dr. Emery. He makes it very clear—and he made it extremely clear down there—that this is not the time to question that site; now is the time to get on with full discussions of solving that problem.

It is a very serious environmental health problem. It is not the time for the debate of hearings but for the spirit of co-operation. I will rest that verdict with the OFA. What they are proposing, Mr. Speaker, is that—

Mr. Breithaupt: What have they to do with it?

Mr. Speaker: Order. Does the minister have anything further to add to the original question? Let us just ignore the interruptions.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Right. The question was what would the role of the federation be? They will organize that committee and then be an advisory committee, because what Dr. Emery said is so true. There will be four people on the crown corporation representing the public. I am pleased that they should make up the corporation with only two technical experts.

In their wisdom, the OFA said that what they need is more technical advice. I think that is eminently logical. Based on that, we have agreed to work in the spirit of co-operation with the federation and have them advise the corporation on all aspects of the technical considerations for that site. I think they made a very important move this morning. I endorse it and I hope it follows through.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege: I think the rights of the citizens in my riding have been taken advantage of by the fact that they are being treated as third-class citizens by not being given a proper environmental assessment protection.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have nothing to do with protecting the rights of citizens of the province. I have a responsibility to protect your rights as a member.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, I have been very disturbed about this process of the government automatically asking for leave to revert to ministerial statements and so on. As a private member, any time I am here for the rest of this session and the government asks for permission to revert to statements, I will object.

Mr. Speaker: That is an option and a prerogative that is open to the honourable member. I hope he is not suggesting there was anything irregular. I asked for unanimous consent and I got it.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

DEVOLUTION OF ESTATES AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Walker, on behalf of Hon. Mr. McMurtry, moved first reading of Bill 210, An Act to amend the Devolution of Estates Act.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Walker: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce today a bill to amend the Devolution of Estates Act. Within the past year, certain problems encountered in attempting to deal with the estates of persons dying in Ontario who leave beneficiaries in the Soviet Union have been brought to the attention of the minister.

It appears that exorbitant charges by the Soviet government, or its agents, and the low exchange rate for conversion of dollars into rubles result in a beneficiary receiving less than the amount he should receive. While it is clear that Ontario legislation cannot completely rectify such problems, we should attempt to prevent such abuses to the extent this is possible.

The Devolution of Estates Amendment Act, 1980, contains a provision whereby a court order is required before money can be paid out of an estate in Ontario to a beneficiary in certain countries to be designated by regulations before it is received by the beneficiary. This provision is based on legislation in the United States, such as section 2218 of the Surrogate Court Procedure Act of New York. Under that section, surrogate court may withhold payment of money unless it is satisfied that the claimant will have the benefit or use or control of it. The money can properly be withheld if it appears that its full value will not reach the beneficiary by reason of various fees and taxes and an unrealistic exchange rate.

A further provision in the Devolution of Estates Amendment Act, 1980, requires a person who receives property in respect of which an order has been made as agent, solicitor or assignee, to file a report with the surrogate clerk for Ontario in a form and containing such information as will be prescribed by regulation. Where the property is transferred directly to a foreign beneficiary, the personal representative must file such a report.

ANSWER TO QUESTION ON NOTICE PAPER

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I wish to table the answer to question 403 standing on the Notice Paper. (See appendix, page 4697.)

MOTION TO SUSPEND NORMAL BUSINESS

Mr. S. Smith moved, pursuant to standing order 34(a), that the business of the House be set aside so that the House may debate a matter of urgent public importance, that being the statement made by the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott) regarding the establishment of a toxic liquid waste dump in South Cayuga to be approved without environmental assessment.

Mr. Speaker: Proper notice has been given of this, and I will hear the honourable member for up to five minutes as to reasons why he feels the ordinary business of the House should be set aside.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, you will recall that on Tuesday a somewhat similar motion roughly bearing on the subject of liquid waste was presented by another honourable member of the House. But at that time you ruled, correctly in my view, that the matter had not yet been presented by the honourable minister at the time you had received the notice, and that therefore that particular subject would not have been a fit subject for the emergency debate.

This would appear to be the first opportunity that has presented itself for us to have that urgent debate on this matter, which I said then and believe now to be in the public interest—an extremely important matter inasmuch as the people of Haldimand-Norfolk are going to be subjected to this particular facility being thrust into the property that has been described in South Cayuga without proper environmental assessment hearings.

The concern we have is that there is no neighbourhood in Ontario that can consider itself safe. If the largest environmental project of its kind can be placed into one area without a proper environmental hearing, how can one justifiably demand such a hearing in any other situation which will undoubtedly be less massive than this one? We feel this decision represents an important precedent, an important milestone, and is one which should not be allowed to pass without our taking every opportunity to show the people of Ontario that what seems on paper and on the books to be good environmental legislation protects no one when the government of the day wishes to be high-handed and wishes to impose its will on the people.

We believe that in the emergency debate we are recommending to you, Mr. Speaker, it would be important for the minister to speak first for his party to explain his point of view and also to give further clarification of some of the statements he made at the end of question period today. We feel he might even be allowed to speak more than once if there is concurrence in the House on the matter, because we believe the information he brought on Tuesday is of extreme importance and has been somewhat confused, rather than clarified, by the statements he made a few moments ago.

The fact of the matter is this: Irrespective of whether the minister has been able somehow or other to convince a prominent individual to become chairman of this particular body, and irrespective of whether some particular member of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture has accepted the job of looking at site selection, even though the site selection apparently has already been finalized according to the person who is newly appointed, the people of Ontario are not going to be totally fooled by this.

They can see as clearly as anyone else that the land in question is held by the government because of a foolish and politically embarrassing decision by this government to acquire at very high cost a large parcel of land in one of the areas of Ontario thought to be suitable for an idyllic, pollution-free housing environment just a few years ago. Left with this political embarrassment on its hands, the government has plainly decided to push ahead to try to solve its toxic waste problem.

In the old saying, if you have a lemon, you at least try to make lemonade. They were stuck with this piece of land and, to try to make the best of a bad situation, they have decided to try to push through this toxic waste facility against the wishes of the people in Haldimand-Norfolk and to do so without any opportunity for proper examination of the MacLaren report or its appendices which, after all, are terribly important. I wonder if even Dr. Chant has seen the appendices to the report. They have done it without any opportunity to see any of the hydrogeological studies that may have been ordered in other areas and, particularly, without any opportunity for contrary opinions to be expressed in front of a neutral hearing officer.

If the environmental assessment legislation in Ontario is to be set aside in this case, if it is inadequate, if the minister feels the board cannot do the job and a group from the OFA—

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. S. Smith:—should do the job, I say no site in Ontario is safe from this high-handed method of imposition by the government. We must have this debate as soon as possible.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I also want to urge that we hold an emergency debate today on what the government intends to do, not just with respect to the choice of the South Cayuga site but also with respect to the rationale that led the cabinet to endorse the Minister of the Environment's proposal and thereby to jettison the Environmental Assessment Act, as it was passed in 1975. The fact is—and this is now an emergency—the Environmental Assessment Act is effectively a dead letter today if the government is allowed to continue with the decision it announced in the House two days ago.

We are faced with a fait accompli about the choice of a site when the residents and people in the Cayuga area had no idea until a month ago they were even being considered as a site for liquid industrial waste disposal. We have seen a systematic effort by the government to dismantle all the normal procedural devices that exist to ensure there is public consideration about a project as major and all-encompassing as this one.

The cabinet has now approved the project. The cabinet has waived the process not just of a hearing on an environmental assessment, but also the environmental assessment itself. I really wonder what the government is trying to hide in this fantastic effort to avoid the process of environmental assessment, a process by which one questions whether there are alternative sites, what the technical considerations are and what the environmental consequences could be.

3:40 p.m.

We could be sitting on another environmental landmine at South Cayuga without knowing what those consequences are going to be, because the government has decided to waive these particular provisions of the act. That is what is happening right now and that is why we need to debate this as a matter of emergency.

Not only that, this is an emergency because, from the way the government is proceeding, it seems clear it is prepared to move heaven and earth to try to eliminate any public consideration through the Legislature, the Parliament of Ontario, about this particular procedure or development until it is well down the road. The government has not announced an intention to bring in legislation to set up the crown corporation before we rise about the middle of December. There is no indication it will bring supplementary estimates in before we rise at the middle of December. In other words, there is no indication it will be bringing to this Legislature, apart from an emergency debate, what it actually intends to do.

On the other side, there is tremendous concern in the area. Two hundred people turned out on November 13 in the area because they did not know what the devil was going on and they felt they had a right to know. We have a minister and a ministry whose behaviour in the past have consistently been that "we in the Ministry of the Environment know best and anybody out there who questions our expertise is simply wrong." The minister has once again repeated that particular position in the attitudes he has struck in the Legislature today.

Finally, another reason for having an emergency debate is the bizarre announcement today that the watchdog of the environmental assessment steering committee, Dr. D. A. Chant, a respected and eminent environmentalist, is now being put into the crown corporation and is therefore not in a position where he and his steering committee could objectively advise the government over whether or not an environmental assessment was to be held or not.

I know the reason for that. I suspect Dr. Chant, having had his committee's advice rejected in the case of the Darlington nuclear power plant and in the case of the Elora Gorge decision, has just simply thrown up his hands. Dr. Chant has said, "Look, if you can't beat them, I am going to have to try to join them and see whether there is not something I can do to prevent the most harmful consequences of this particular proposal."

The Morrison Beatty hydrogeological report says at least another 12 months of hydrogeological studies are required before it is possible to go forward with that proposal. The MacLaren report likewise says very explicitly: "It is recommended that the ministry undertake field studies, such as confirming geological data by a series of soil borings, et cetera, on the Huron and South Cayuga sites to confirm their suitability.

Should these sites prove to be geologically unsuitable, similar investigations are recommended for the Lambton and for the Bruce sites."

In other words, the document the ministry has offered as the proof that South Cayuga is the appropriate place to put this liquid waste disposal facility is not confirmed by the MacLaren consultants. They say there remains a possibility, which can only be explored by means of further tests, that the site will be unsuitable.

I am saying we need an emergency debate because the government should not be allowed simply to dispose of all of the devices that have been put into place to protect the interests of this Parliament, of the people of Ontario and of South Cayuga. It is time the minister agreed to have that assessment and he can get it done in good time.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I argued a few days ago against an emergency debate on a matter very much related to this and, at the time, you found the case had not been made for an emergency debate based on the particular motion that was put forward. At that time, I indicated to you there were several reports which had just been received by members and which we had not had time to consider fully—the MacLaren and Morrison Beatty reports. Those reports have now been received and I am sure the honourable members have had time to consider them.

Members have also had time to consider the statement made by my colleague the Minister of the Environment. I think, in making a ruling today on this motion, several facts should be taken into consideration. The first fact is that the Minister of the Environment has made a very courageous statement and has come to grips with and brought forward a solution to a very vexing problem in this province and one which no one else seems to want to come to grips with. That is the first thing.

The second fact that must be considered is that the statement the honourable minister has made has been misrepresented by many of the people sitting opposite and that misrepresentation is carrying on out to the general public and needs to be corrected. I think the opportunity to correct that rests in a debate in this House today. In other words, what may not have been an emergency a few days ago is now an emergency because a courageous act by a minister of this government is being misrepresented in a manner that is causing it to be misunderstood by many of the people of this province.

It can be argued that the misunderstanding is sufficient to cause us to say that the minister and the members of this government should be given an opportunity—and they can do it exceedingly well—to explain all the ramifications of this decision and to challenge members opposite, if they want to criticize this particular solution to a very vexing problem, to come up with some alternative solution. They should not just argue about negatives. They should not just put roadblocks in the way of progress. They should not just belittle names of people. They should just sit there and come up with some positive solutions as to what they would do.

Because we have had an opportunity to consider the reports, because this is now a matter of public knowledge, because there is misunderstanding about it, and because there is legitimate concern in some quarters that can be very adequately cleared up by the minister and other members of this party during this debate, we would not oppose this matter being considered. In fact, we believe that a case can be made for us to debate this today and that it does fall within the parameters of rule 34(a).

Mr. Speaker: I have listened with great interest to all the members who have spoken. There is unanimous accord that it is of urgent public importance. I think it is quite obvious that due to the nature of the debate, it has province-wide implications. It deals with a specific incident of recent occurrence.

Lest I be accused of being inconsistent in the light of the fact that I turned down a similar debate, the specific request to set aside the business of the House was with reference to a specific occurrence that did not have the obvious implications it does now, since members have had 48 hours to discuss the implications of the statement made by the Minister of the Environment. I am going to say that it does fall within the four walls of standing order 34.

Now the only question before the House is, shall the debate proceed?

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The debate will proceed. I want to remind honourable members that each one who wishes to speak will be limited to 10 minutes and the debate will conclude without any motion before the House at six o'clock.

Mr. S. Smith: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I would be very glad to hear the minister first if he cares to say anything or add anything, and also to hear him wind up. If not, I will be happy to start. It is up to the minister, I just want him to have that privilege if he wishes it.

Mr. Speaker: It is normal procedure that the honourable member who moves the motion will speak for 10 minutes and, unless there is some agreement to do otherwise, we will be guided by past practice.

3:50 p.m.

LIQUID INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, we have been told repeatedly in this House that Ontario enjoys the benefits of some of the most advanced environmental protection legislation on the books anywhere. I agree that we have, on the books, the best environmental protection legislation. The problem is that we seem to have an aversion to utilizing it to protect the citizens of Ontario.

Never has there been a more blatant case, however, than this one. The minister found himself with an interim report from some consultants who had looked at some 17 sites around Ontario. They had rejected a good many other places in the province and had looked at 17 and come up with about five they thought should be further studied because they would be suitable to receive liquid waste.

Plainly the minister, or some other agent of government, then instructed the consultants to go back and look at another site. This was the site held by the government as a consequence of some exceedingly foolish and ill-considered expenditures of some $30 million to purchase land for an alleged town that was going to be built in a district called South Cayuga. As a result of that, the consultants were put in a dilemma. They found themselves having to go back on what they had done.

The meat of this report is contained in appendices which none of us in this House has had the opportunity to examine yet. But even in the summary we have been given, they say they did not look at South Cayuga in the first place because it did not meet their criteria. These criteria included the avoidance of using excellent agricultural land.

Then a funny thing happened. They say that while processing data collected during site visits, they came to realize that none of the areas studied really met the original spirit and intent. A lot of the places they figured were grade five and six agricultural land had been upgraded from time to time and some of it was up to grade one and two agricultural land. Conversely, some of the one and two land had fallen into disarray and disuse and was now down to five and six.

That is what they said. I don't blame the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. Watson) for laughing; I found it funny as well. But that is what they say—it is on page 3-15. They say certain lands had been significantly upgraded by local drainage work and had become very productive while other lands had been allowed to deteriorate. Logic dictated they should not be that concerned with agricultural productivity and so they decided to forget about that and look at South Cayuga.

They had what they called revised or refined agricultural criteria, which are never explained. Using those, the Huron area was identified as the most suitable of the five, with Lambton and Bruce being the best alternatives and very close seconds. That is what they found once they ignored the agricultural criteria. But, they say, the primary constraining factor in Lambton is that there is existing agricultural use on the land.

So what they did first was eliminate agriculture as a consideration so they could look at South Cayuga. Having then looked at South Cayuga, they found Huron was the best and Lambton a very close second. They decided then to eliminate Lambton on the very agricultural criteria they had set aside in the first place to enable them to look at South Cayuga.

It is obvious the kind of backflips and somersaults being done by these consultants have plainly been done in an effort to keep whatever is left of their scientific reputation while meeting the minister's order, which is to find some way to get South Cayuga accepted as the place to dump the toxic waste.

All right. All that has been said. But, Mr. Speaker, look at the situation. We find ourselves with the environmental protection legislation being set aside by the government. So keen are they to avoid their own laws that they have created two corporations instead of one. There will be one corporation to get them through until possibly the next election, certainly until this House rises at Christmas, and then a second corporation some time in the future which the House will have to vote on.

It is evident there is no need for two corporations when one will do. Both will be owned by the crown. There is plainly not the slightest difference between the two, but the minister wishes to avoid a vote by the elected representatives of the people. Not only is he avoiding his own laws, which apply to everybody else—and let me tell you, if you are an ordinary citizen, you cannot even expand a pig barn in Ontario without getting some environmental approval—but the minister can create this corporation and dump this liquid waste without any consideration of the kind of legislation that is supposed to be protecting all of us.

We are told today of some very interesting developments. First of all, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture condemned the ministry for its actions. Then, apparently, some particular fellow of this federation, some chap from Northumberland, undoubtedly a fine gentleman, came up with some proposal off the top of his head that said—

Mr. Cassidy: Probably a Tory.

Mr. S. Smith: We can speculate as to whom he was trying to rescue and for what political purpose, but I do not have to say that.

He came up with a marvelous idea that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture—not the National Farmers Union, not the Christian Farmers Federation, not the Ontario Federation of Labour, not any of the environmental groups, not Pollution Probe, not any of the special interest groups, not any of the conservation authorities—a particular group called the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, for which I have the greatest of respect in agricultural matters, should set itself up somehow by means of a subcommittee. This has not even been approved by the OFA; it is just the idea of one guy.

The ministry leaped at the proposal and said, "Whereas the board of experts appointed by law and the statutes of Ontario shall not be permitted to examine the matter and to have public hearings, this group of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture shall be entitled to go about the province and have public hearings of some kind."

Will it be able to compel people to testify under oath? If so, how can it possibly happen unless the members of the group are made royal commissioners? I ask the minister this. Would he kindly attend to this question for a moment? Will he listen for a moment, please? Is he intending to make the OFA group royal commissioners or, under the Public Inquiries Act, will he be intending—

The Deputy Speaker: Order.

Mr. S. Smith: I yield to the minister.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: What I have said to the federation, and I make that statement again—

Mr. S. Smith: Just say yes or no. Will they be under the Public Inquiries Act? I am sorry, I do not yield the floor.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Does the member want the information?

Mr. S. Smith: Just say yes or no. Are they going to be under the Public Inquiries Act or are they not?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Does the member want the information?

Mr. S. Smith: The answer is yes or no, Mr. Minister. There is no other answer.

The Deputy Speaker: Order. Has the honourable member yielded the floor?

Mr. S. Smith: No, I have not yielded the floor. I will not yield for a filibuster. We will hear when the minister speaks, Mr. Speaker. We will hear whether or not this group from the OFA will be given subpoena power, whether groups will be able to appear in front of the OFA and be funded to bring in experts and to have money to pay for these experts. We will find out whether testimony will be compelled under oath, whether they will have the power of the Public Inquiries Act or its equivalent.

We will find out when the minister speaks, and then we will presumably find out something that I am certainly waiting to hear, which is why some particular individual from the OFA is to be permitted to do what the Environmental Assessment Board is not to be permitted to do. What conceivable rationale can there be for this to happen?

The Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. S. Smith: I finish with simply one sentence. Irrespective of whether the minister has been able to create a certain propaganda for himself by getting Dr. Chant by some means or other and for some purpose or other, by getting an environmentalist seemingly to agree—and we will wait to hear from him—the fact remains, if South Cayuga can go without an environmental assessment, no neighbourhood, no town, no piece of farm land in Ontario is safe from this arrogant group of ministers and sooner or later, preferably sooner, they will be turfed out as a consequence.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, the government House leader said just before we had this debate that he felt it was appropriate to have it because there had been misunderstanding of the government's position. I cannot imagine how that accusation can be made, because the public, the people I have talked to since the minister's announcement on Tuesday, understand very clearly what has happened.

They understand this is an arrogant government; a government which is high-handed; a government which has moved from the basis of political expediency and, in the process, a government which has torpedoed a piece of legislation, the Environmental Assessment Act of 1975, which has been the mainstay of the speeches of Ministers of the Environment over the course of the last five years, in defending the environmental record of the government of Ontario.

What is happening in this regard is similar to the behaviour of the government in many other areas as well. We know what is happening with doctors opting out. We know what is happening with the financial plight of hospitals trying to serve the people of Ontario. This government has tried to pretend no problems exist. We know about the government's refusal to provide adequate day care facilities across the province. They have tried to come up with $1 million and say that solved the problem. We know the difficulties in getting equality for women in the province. The government pretends there is no problem, it simply ignores the realities of Ontario right now. We know the problems of laid-off workers. The government comes up with a bit of papier mâché and tries to pretend that is a full and final solution, when 50,000 workers have been laid off.

We know in South Cayuga the people in that particular community had no foreknowledge at all, prior to August of this year, that their community was even being considered for this liquid waste disposal facility. They did not know for sure until October 27 that the matter had been referred to the MacLaren company for it to report upon. It was not until two days ago that they learned the finger had descended on South Cayuga and that the government had decided to put the liquid waste disposal facility in South Cayuga.

I have to say that the whole manner in which the government, both the cabinet and the Minister of the Environment, has treated this particular affair raises enormous questions in my mind about a minister, a ministry and a government which already had enormous credibility problems with respect to the matter of the environment.

The MacLaren report was meant to be an independent appraisal of what sites were appropriate for liquid industrial waste disposal across the province, but in the end, because the minister said, "I do not care what you suggested in your interim report, you have to look at this one," it no longer can claim to have independence. It is a $425,000 justification for the site that the minister wanted to have chosen. Even there, let us make it clear, the MacLaren report has not said it is the only site. It has not said it is the preferred site. It has said that further geological studies are required and it has said that those studies may in fact, indicate that South Cayuga is not the appropriate site to go on.

The ministry paid some more of the taxpayers' money to Morrison Beatty Limited to do a hydrogeological study on South Cayuga. They too say that another 12 months are required. The ministry, however, has taken a railroading approach through cabinet and through the community, regardless of the fact that further studies are required.

It is not just the overriding of our laws that concerns me, it is also what I feel is the very compromising approach that is being taken to a respected environmental expert, Dr. Donald Chant, in appointing him to the crown corporation. I feel extremely uneasy about what is being done.

If I can put it on the record, Dr. Chant is the chairman of the environmental assessment steering committee. That is a committee which advises the Premier, not just the minister, on questions respecting the environment and which is specifically charged with advising the Premier and the cabinet from time to time about whether environmental assessments should take place.

The government knew that in this particular case the question of the overriding of the environmental assessment was going to be a very clear issue in the minds, not just of people in South Cayuga but all across this province. What it has done is effectively to remove Dr. Chant's ability to act objectively in recommending whether the environmental assessment should take place. There is no way we can get around that. From the moment Dr. Chant was asked to take on the position in the crown corporation, he no longer could act impartially as far as the environmental assessment steering committee's functions were involved. It seems to me that is another example of this government's willingness to go to any lengths to try to steamroller over the procedure which has normally been followed in the past.

I call on the minister to explain in this debate why it is he has gone to such lengths to try to avoid the environmental assessment process. He keeps claiming it will take year after year. The facts are that in the case of the Thorold dump of Walker Brothers Quarries, the minister had a company which was engaged in breaking the law and which has now been charged by the Ontario Provincial Police—

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Is that correct? Do you want to put that on the record?

Mr. Cassidy: The company has been charged by the OPP. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and others have engaged in activity which by any definition of the law—although the courts will have to decide—look like prima facie cases where the law was not being followed by that company. It has been acknowledged by the ministry that the company was accepting liquid industrial wastes in contravention of its own permit for that particular site. Down at Harwich—

Hon. Mr. Parrott: What company has been charged? I want to know.

Mr. Cassidy: The minister will have his turn.

Down at Harwich, the government got itself at loggerheads with the local council. The fact is there have been no hearings under the Environmental Assessment Act. The fact is it is not the hearing process which has caused the delay. It has been the approach of this ministry, the confrontation this ministry has consistently sought regardless of its assurances to the contrary.

The minister and the government have a credibility problem with respect to the way they are handling this particular process. Now I think it is up to the minister to explain why he is rejecting the environmental assessment process.

Does he reject the consideration of alternatives which is in that act? Does he reject the measurement of effects on the environment which is called for in the assessment required under that act? Does he reject the need to put forward plans for protecting the environment which is called for in that act? Does he reject the need to evaluate alternatives which is required in that act? Does he reject the requirement of the act that no funding and no licence shall be given until the environmental assessment process has been completed? It is clear that he does. Under those circumstances one has to ask, what good is it to have a piece of legislation if the government is never prepared to use that particular legislation?

Experience in the past where environmental assessment hearings have taken place has further put into question the capacity of the Ministry of the Environment to get the story straight even with months of preparation. In the case of the Nanticoke project and in the case—

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No assessment act applied there. Get your facts straight.

Mr. Cassidy: All right. In the case of Nanticoke, the Environmental Assessment Board recommended against approval of the proposal. It said, among other things, that the Minister of the Environment had accepted data and figures from the applicant without inquiring fully into the validity. It indicated the ministry had neither the experience nor expertise properly to evaluate the technology which was being put forward in that case. It established that although the minister had a responsibility to evaluate the assessment, the ministry had blown its evaluation of the assessment and missed salient data which was very important and which led the assessment board to reject that application. That was the case of a proposal which went through the whole assessment procedure. I ask myself in a case where—Dr. Chant had this for a day—the cabinet had this for a period of a week—

4:10 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: A point of order, Mr. Speaker—

The Deputy Speaker: What's your point of order?

Hon. Mr. Parrott: I would simply like to correct the record to this point. I believe the member said it was an environmental assessment hearing for that project. Is that his statement? Was it under the Environmental Assessment Act? I just want to know whether that is being put on the record or not.

Mr. Cassidy: The Environmental Assessment Board under the Environmental Protection Act. The minister is picking at straws. The minister is being picky.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: It is an entirely different procedure.

Mr. Cassidy: The fact is that the ministry's own evaluation did not stand up in that case. The minister is now suggesting that the Environmental Protection Act should be thrown out the window in addition to the Environmental Assessment Act. If that is the position of the ministry, I suggest they bring in a repeal act for the Environmental Assessment Act. If that is what he wants to do, he should do it up front and not weasel around with regulations—

The Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. Cassidy: I was here in 1975—

Hon. Mr. Parrott: You just know the decision. You don't understand. It's sad.

Mr. Cassidy: I certainly do understand. I understand that should apply to every project, large and small, and the minister should not exempt or waive the application of the act every time there is a major proposal coming before the people of the province.

The Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's time has expired.

Mr. Eaton: Mr. Speaker, in rising to discuss this action of the honourable minister, I want to start by commending the minister for taking such action. I think we all realize the problem we face in this province in handling liquid industrial waste.

Mr. Kerrio: Who has been running the store for 37 years?

Mr. Eaton: It's a problem that probably every jurisdiction in North America is faced with at this time and one that some jurisdictions are taking action on. This minister is taking the leading action in North America to solve this problem. He is a minister who is dedicated to seeing the job is carried out properly.

Some of the actions of the opposition at times make the job almost impossible. I always felt the role of the opposition was to be critical, to put forth suggestions on what could be done in given situations. But it has become obvious the only role the opposition is playing in this province is one of obstruction. Any time there is some suggestion a site might be located in a particular area the opposition has gone in and tried to create a scare before the fact. They have utterly destroyed the process of trying to carry through on assessment hearings.

Mr. Cunningham: Why isn't it in Middlesex?

Mr. Eaton: Somebody said why not Middlesex. Middlesex was on the list in the MacLaren report.

Mr. Cunningham: You screamed and cried.

Mr. Eaton: I did not say a word against it. I took the facts as we had them and at that point there were very few facts because the MacLaren report just indicated possible sites in this province. But one of the NDP members came into the riding and created scares. The NDP came in and gave complete misinformation. They put figures at 500,000 times what they actually were, as we raised it in the estimates of the Ministry of the Environment. It was just atrocious misrepresentation of a situation.

Without the facts, without starting on any assessment in the area, they came in and suggested circulating a petition—"Let's get a petition going against having the site come here." That utterly destroys any process that can take place in assessing a problem and assessing what the impact might be, having any environment hearings, because scare tactics are carried out before any process ever takes place. This is a problem that faces everybody in Ontario and everybody has to deal with it responsibly.

It was refreshing to hear some of the people at the Ontario Federation of Agriculture this morning when they moved a resolution to try to work with the minister, to have people involved in some way so that they could know exactly what was going on in the process and exactly what was to happen. It was obvious in discussions that the minister had with them this morning they had already been fed misinformation again and someone was already trying to get a scare tactic going in that area to reject outright any location of an industrial waste plant. Before any assessment could take place or before any hearing could take place, they wanted to have people scared so they would object to having it there; yet at the same time they want the problem dealt with.

This minister is taking steps to deal with the problem. He is taking steps to work with the people, wherever the plant might be located, and there is not even an assurance at this point that it will be located at the South Cayuga site. That is the site the minister has chosen. There will be a lot of work going on before it is finally said that this is where it will be located. That scare tactic still goes on among the members of the opposition.

It is the responsibility of the opposition, as well, to try to take a look at the facts properly, to try to assess what is needed, to try to assess the technology that is going to be applied. Probably the best technology in the world will be applied to this site to handle liquid industrial waste in this province. Surely this is what we want; this is the way we want the waste handled. If we continued the way we were, with an area suggested and immediately an attempt made to block it, we would never get this technology developed in Ontario. There were certainly people at the federation meeting this morning who said, "We must get on with the job; we have a lot at stake."

The agricultural industry uses a lot of chemicals in producing food in this province. Those chemicals produce some of the industrial wastes that have to be disposed of here. It is in that light they are concerned. They want to see industrial waste treated. Certainly there is going to be emotion involved in whatever area it will take place. But I think that type of suggestion today shows the responsibility, particularly of the agricultural community, and they were not limiting it to their own organization to be involved in a committee. They were suggesting they would take the leadership to promote the committee, but that lawyers, environmentalists and engineers be involved in it, people who would take a responsible look at it. Those people could then pass on their comments and their facts to the public and could deal with the public so there is not suspicion cast by the opposition that it is the government that is doing it.

It really is a belittlement by the Leader of the Opposition when he suggests that it is a political ploy of any kind on the part of the government to have people like that involved. Surely all the citizens of this province want to see people involved in it, who are interested in seeing that the job is carried out correctly. Members opposite destroy the process by the actions of people going out and starting their scare-mongering before that process can be followed through.

Interjections.

The Deputy Speaker: Order.

Mr. Eaton: This process can be a leader in North America. It can be an example for other jurisdictions to follow in treating their waste, and we need that.

Mr. Swart: On prime land?

4:20 p.m.

Mr. Eaton: I think anybody in this province should be prepared to sacrifice 100 acres of prime agricultural land to see that industrial waste in this province is treated. The importance of this treating of industrial waste far outweighs 100 acres of land. The industrial waste that is being spread around this province at this time by irresponsible people and the blocking of the process of being able to treat it by irresponsible operations could do a lot more than damage 100 acres of land in this province. It could put all kinds of acres out of production. This is what has to be considered at this time.

I would hate to see the members opposite do it because where would they put it? They would go to every community and say, "We can't put it in your community." On the basis of facts, on the basis of information, this minister is taking leadership in doing what needs to be done in this province in regard to treating industrial waste.

He deserves the consideration and support of the people of this province to do it, and to do it in a rational way. I am sure if people look at it rationally and not just for political purposes, as some people on the other side are doing, not just for scare-mongering, this job will be done, and it will be a landmark in North America for the treatment of industrial wastes.

Mr. G. I. Miller: Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of pleasure that I rise to speak in this emergency debate this afternoon. We have come to the crossroads in the history of Ontario when we are beginning to deal realistically with our wastes and trying to manage them properly. I think that is a step in the right direction, and I would be the first to agree we should be doing it in a proper manner. We have been trying to deal with this matter ever since I came into the Legislature in 1975. Because the government would not bring forward proper policies and guidelines to deal with it, we have got into a position at this time where we are in a panic position.

We are talking about an area in the riding of Haldimand-Norfolk, along the northern shores of Lake Erie, which happens to be represented by a Liberal member at the present time. I am proud to be a representative of that area. I was born and raised there and have made my living there. I have worked with that soil from the time I was 12 years old, and I think I understand it as well as anybody in this House, and maybe as well as anybody in Ontario.

We are talking about 12,500 acres of soil that is number one and two class land as classified according to the old classification—90 per cent of it. It is a resource we can make no more of. We have no more access to it. If we do not guard it properly, it goes down the drain, never to be retrieved. As I drive from home to Toronto every day, I see the good land being utilized along the QEW. When I was a boy it was beautiful orchards, beautiful farm land. It has disappeared; it has been paved over. We have no more access to it.

The same thing could happen with this particular piece of land we are talking about in Haldimand county: 12,500 acres of class one and class two land. We have already established a steel plant in my area, which is coming on stream. They own 6,500 acres of land. They have not even got one plant there at the present time, with the exception of Charles Jones Industrial Limited and Marsh Engineering. They have the oxygen plant. But there are 3,500 acres of land there not being utilized. If the government really wants to take a look at some place to be utilized as a waste disposal site, that land is already zoned for heavy industry. It is already being properly utilized. Why not take 100 acres of that land and put the proper equipment in and deal with it? Why should the industry of our province not take some responsibility for dealing with its wastes?

Farmers recycle their waste and put it on the fields. It makes the crops grow better. We do not ask for support. The Minister of the Environment, living in the great county of Oxford, must understand that. But he has not cared to look at it. The government has 12,500 acres of land for which it paid $2,000 an acre. The Minister of the Environment thinks it is dear; he is getting criticized for it. Down the road a few years that land may well be worth $5,000 an acre for agricultural purposes.

I will give the honourable members an example. In Norfolk county—again going back 50 years—one could buy all the land one could get one's hands on for $2,500 for 100 acres. What does it cost today? I just had a call from one of my constituents who was buying 164 acres and how much was he quoted for a farm credit loan? Does the minister want to guess? It was something like $750,000, which works out to $5,000 an acre. I am telling the minister this because it is properly managed. If he lets them come into that area and start this plant, although it only takes 100 acres as the member for Middlesex said, what happens to the land around it? Can crops be grown around it? My understanding is that that land goes down the drain. The food cannot even be eaten.

I agree we need a bridge there. That is being held out like candy to us. I agree we need a bridge there, but do we need the bridge to get from Port Colborne to the industrial park? I have pointed out to the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Snow) many times, because we have access to an industrial park, we have access to Dunnville and we have access to Port Colborne. In the meantime, leave it as agricultural land.

They should spend $425,000 for a drainage study to improve the drainage. I have been trying to get the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Henderson) to do just that, to put it under the Department of Regional Economic Expansion program, because I understand Haldimand needs some improvement in drainage. It needs some special attention because they are not getting a return for their dollar. If they could get a return on the dollar from the land, they could compete with industry any time.

The minister is making a mistake. As I indicated to the Speaker today, the minister is treating the people as third-class citizens by not even providing the rights of law established in this House. He is going against that very grain.

Now he says that we are going out on the street and misleading people. We are not misleading people. I would like to read my press release:

"The government's decision to locate a liquid industrial waste site in South Cayuga is irresponsible and totally unacceptable. Any attempt to bulldoze this decision through this Legislature in the same way that regional government was forced down our throats must be fought every step of the way and I intend to do that."

As the member representing the riding of Haldimand-Norfolk, I do not just consider my riding but the rights of everybody in Ontario. The government of Ontario does not accept its responsibilities when it tries to locate those sites within Liberal ridings to its own political benefit.

I received a resolution from the region of Haldimand-Norfolk today and I would like to read it to the minister. The reason I did not put it to him in question period was because it was addressed to the Premier (Mr. Davis) and I knew the Premier was not here:

"Would the Premier rescind the decision of the Minister of the Environment and follow the province's own environmental assessment process, which includes a full environmental study under the terms of the Environmental Assessment Act and an independent public hearing by the Environmental Assessment Board, before proceeding with any such facility?"

That was supported unanimously by the council of the region of Haldimand-Norfolk. That is not mine. It is from the people who represent that area. They are just asking for justice, the same as anyone else in the province and, as I said to the Speaker, they are not third-rate citizens. We have people who live on the other side of the Grand River. We have a parcel on the Grand River which is being used by the public—a public park, run privately. Doesn't the government think they should have some protection? How can they justify spending these hundreds of thousands of dollars to protect their own seats over there?

I think the minister is on the wrong track and if he does not reverse it, he is going to have to go to the people of Ontario and explain it, because he is wrong. The Minister of Agriculture and Food is not meeting his responsibilities to protect the land. We have asked him, in all fairness, to stand up for agriculture because agriculture is good for the steel company of Nanticoke. Agriculture is good for that hydro plant at Nanticoke. Agriculture is good for the Texaco oil refinery there. Agriculture is good for Port Maitland, which is making plans to put up holding areas for storage of our grain to give it access to the St. Lawrence Seaway.

4:30 p.m.

They are taking away from that area any possibility of developing agriculture in the future just because they paid $2,000 an acre. It may be cheap down the road. They are going to have to stand up and take the flak. We did not make that decision. They are the ones who did and they are going to have to stand by it.

Mr. Swart: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak against the decision made by the honourable minister. In doing so, I recognize he has made a couple of moves in the right direction. First, the waste is going to be handled by a crown corporation; second, the location is somewhat removed from large and perhaps even small urban areas.

What the minister has done is objectionable for two fundamental reasons around which everybody else's remarks have revolved. First, he has abolished the environmental assessment procedure, has bypassed it; second, he is locating this on prime farm land.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: You are the guy who, more than anyone else, destroyed it. You should be ashamed to rise in your seat and say that.

Mr. Swart: The reason the minister gives is that there is such urgency at the present time and that is why he must abolish the environmental hearing. There is some validity to saying there is urgency at this time but we are at this point now through the fault of his ministry and his government. There is no mistake about it. He is the author of his own misfortune with regard to the rejection his government has been getting from the public.

The minister's actions in the last two years have been totally inexcusable. First, over the two years he has ignored his own reports. He knows very well that the interim report for The Development of Treatment and Disposal Sites for Liquid Industrial Waste, which was done by MacLaren, makes specific recommendations, and the two sites he chose did not conform to any of the recommendations made in that original report. The site the minister has now chosen conforms only in part, even though that report lays out 30 to 70 other sites that do conform with the criteria listed in this report.

I think I am correct in saying—if not, the minister can correct me when he gets up to speak—that the minister stated his previous selections had conformed with section three of the interim report on liquid industrial waste of the standing committee on resources development. I say to the minister categorically—and I would like him to deal with it when he gets up—that the sites selected in Thorold and Harwich did not conform with any of the five options. The number three option, which the minister quoted yesterday, called for joint public-private ownership in operation of sites and facilities. Where was the joint public-private ownership in Thorold? Where was it in Harwich? It is totally private in Thorold. It did not conform with one of those five options.

This was put before the minister over two years ago and he frittered away those two years. Now he says he does not have time for an environmental assessment.

Mr. Kerrio: They are not even on the list.

Mr. Swart: I know. The one we have now is not even on this list.

The minister has lost the support of the public and what he has done has been rejected because of his lack of inspection.

The minister replied to a letter of mine, which I wrote last June to tell him there were not adequate inspection officers in the Niagara Peninsula, by saying—and he will recall this—that the opposition parties, including the New Democratic Party, had demanded funds for the environment be cut down. I challenge the minister now to get up in this House and name one member on this side of the House who asked that funds in the Ministry of the Environment be cut back. I challenge him to do that. He said that to me in the letter.

The minister did not do the inspection. He does not know what was going on in the area. This is one of the main reasons he has been rejected by the public.

It is the citizens who have had to police the minister's dump sites and where the industrial waste was going. This was true in Thorold. The minister did not know there were problems there or that there were problems in Upper Ottawa Street. He knew nothing until they were brought to his attention. It is no wonder the public rejects his government's attempts to dispose of industrial waste. They have every right to have such little faith in his government.

The minister's failure also has been due in no small part to the secretiveness of what he has been doing. He had a report on the Thorold site last January that told him there was liquid industrial waste in the boreholes. One of them even was reported to have had paint in it.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: No, it did not say that.

Mr. Swart: I have the report here. It certainly did say there was paint in one of the boreholes where there was not supposed to be waste of any kind.

Hon. Mr. Parrott: Read that into the record.

Mr. Swart: I have the report here and the minister knows it.

The minister's failure has been due to the inadequacies of inspection and his doctrinaire beliefs that he had to let private enterprise do the whole thing. He has now come around after two years to taking the right move in that direction, but that was what caused a lot of the problems he had.

Everything the minister has done up to this time in the disposal of industrial liquid wastes has been wrong and now it is time he did it right. He cannot do it right at this site in South Cayuga without an environmental assessment. There must be an environmental assessment.

Finally I want to deal with the issue of using prime land. I hope when the minister gets up he will say how much of the prime land in that area will be prohibited from growing crops which can go directly to human consumption. I hope he will make that comment because the Minister of Agriculture and Food did not say that.

We know there are 640 more acres taken out under the total of something like 12,600 acres. We know there are going to be about 75 million gallons of liquid waste that is going to have to be stored around there someplace after it is solidified or treated by whatever process the minister is going to be using. We know this site is contrary to the interim report that was provided to him by MacLaren. There are perhaps 70 other sites in total, either optimum or minimum, which they first recommended before the minister told them where they should go to bail his government out of the money it has spent up there.

It is deplorable that this government, which has done nothing to date to preserve the farm land in this province—

Mr. Eaton: That is baloney.

Mr. Swart: I challenge the honourable members over there to name one single major development that has been deferred or stopped because it was to be located on prime farm land. They simply cannot do it in the Niagara Peninsula or any place else. It is full speed ahead to develop on the very best land in this province.

Even their own document that was put out, their food land guidelines, should tell them this is not the place to locate that site. It says such things as, "Lands are to be available for agricultural use"—that is the high priority agricultural land. On a long-term basis, the type of land use permitted should only include uses compatible with agriculture and so on. That thing is no more worth the paper it is written on than the Environmental Assessment Act if the minister goes ahead and breaks this at the present time.

Mr. Turner: Where would you put it?

Mr. Eaton: You don't want the job done. That is what it boils down to.

Mr. Swart: The honourable members on that side of the House have no concern at all about the world food prices we are coming into at the present time. They have no concern at all about the lack of self-sufficiency of food production in this province or in this nation. They shake their heads; they don't have any concern about that.

4:40 p.m.

Just two or three days ago in the paper there was a reference to a starvation alert. "The world needs to go on a global alert because its food stocks are so dangerously low, the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization said Friday." I also have another report from the Globe and Mail of September 16.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. MacBeth): The member's time has expired.

Mr. Swart: It forecasts one million dead in Africa this year. Yet the government is prepared on any pretext to go ahead with the destruction of the best land in this province. It is a pattern it has followed for 37 years, and we in this party are going to do everything we can to stop it.

Mr. Ashe: Mr. Speaker, I am indeed proud to be able to stand up so close to a man with guts. There are really not too many people in this particular House who have the guts of the present Minister of the Environment (Mr. Parrott). It must be extremely easy to sit over there and constantly criticize until they finally convince themselves they cannot have a positive thought to save their lives. That is what goes on all of the time. They say the government is not doing this and the government is not doing that; there is liquid industrial waste being dumped here and there is liquid industrial waste being dumped there; the government is not getting on with the job; it is not solving the problem.

What happens when the government takes an action through a minister, through a ministry or somebody who does something right? The first thing they do is criticize. It really does not matter what the process is, they immediately criticize it. They immediately then use some representatives, whether they be honourable members or people retained to advise people on the other side, whether they be leaders of the opposition or others to see if they can go out and disturb the area in question.

It is a matter, I suppose, of conscience be damned, of getting on with the problem and problem solving be damned. They stand up and say, "Yes, we are all in support of a better environment but," and it is in that big "but" that the political overtones really come through. It is not a matter of saying, "Yes, we think this is good about it. We think there is a little weakness here. Yes, we would make a very positive, concrete recommendation there that might help. We will be part of a co-operative government process and part of a legislative process that will end up as the best for the people of Ontario and that will end up with the problem being solved that everybody acknowledges exists." I really have not heard anybody who does not acknowledge the problem exists. But, no, that is not what they do over there.

What happens when there are hearings? As a matter of fact, right in my riding, as many of the members in this chamber are well aware and as some of the people sitting in the galleries right now are aware, there has been a proposal put forth by the regional municipality in which I reside and part of which I represent to convert a redundant sewage treatment plant to a treatment plant to treat liquid industrial waste. That was the proposal. Some of the same people I am talking about went out and stirred up the people.

There is no doubt people have quite legitimate concerns. They want it proven whether something is right or something is wrong. We went that process. I am very pleased to say the people of Ajax were much more responsible and receptive to their natural feelings than those in some of the other areas which were being proposed for an environmental assessment.

What happens there? The people are turned off and have their minds made up before the process is even allowed to happen because things are stirred up from within.

Mr. McGuigan: Come down and tell the people of Harwich they are irresponsible.

Mr. Ashe: How can members opposite talk about the problem there is in having a hearing when they are already telling them it does not matter what the hearing says because the answer is no? Let us get on and be realistic. You cannot have your cake both ways. You cannot have your cake and eat it too. One has to be on one side or the other.

Mr. McGuigan: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege: I did not at any time tell the people of Harwich they could not have a hearing. I fought for the matter of their having funding for the hearing. I challenge the member or any member on that side to find where I said that. Until he can find that, I demand he withdraw his statement.

Mr. Ashe: The member must have a guilty conscience. I do not know that I was talking about him when I pointed over there, but if it makes him feel better, that is fine. I will acknowledge, I do not know if he personally made those kinds of statements. I will say categorically that some of the members over there made those kinds of statements in his area. I apologize to him personally if he did not.

Mr. McGuigan: I would say again, no one on our side of the House made irresponsible statements regarding Harwich. Perhaps people did from another party that came in, but not from this party.

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member may speak for himself. I do not see how he can speak for the entire group.

Mr. Ashe: It is also on the record that I feel, and I think it has been acknowledged by many, there is a process in place. How can the member, or any member in here, consciously get up and say, "We have a process, we have law, we have to live by it," and at the same time go out there and say, "We are opposed to it"? That is the same as saying, "It does not matter what the process says. We do not even want the process to happen because our minds are made up."

The member has said that whether he wanted the process to happen or not, he made a conclusion, and the same thing has happened in many places. The answer is, the problem is still there. We have a minister who has the guts to get on and solve the problem. Let us do it responsibly and let us try to get something concrete out of it. There are even some suggestions vis-à-vis the choice of that particular site.

Mr. McGuigan: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege: I did not draw any such conclusions. I call on the minister, who was at a meeting in Blenheim in Harwich township, at which I clearly said I supported the law and I would not take part in any activity that violated the laws of this province. The minister was there and heard me say that.

The Acting Speaker: The point has been made.

Mr. Ashe: I hope the Speaker is keeping track of the time and all of mine is not being used.

The Acting Speaker: I have that in the back of my mind.

Mr. Ashe: There have, of course, also been suggestions as to the choice of that particular site. I would even suggest that some of the innuendoes that have been put out here, today particularly and I suppose to a lesser degree on Tuesday, would really impugn the integrity of the MacLaren engineering firm and the reasons and motivations that ended up in its report.

Of course, that is up to that particular organization, which I am sure has the expertise and the qualifications to defend its integrity. I am really surprised that certain members would even think that low of a professional organization. I believe they have professionals working there and they are widely recognized as being a highly professional organization.

What we are really talking about here is a problem that has to be solved. We are talking about solving it in a reasonable and responsible way. Once again, we have the rural community through some of the spokesmen opposite saying, "They do not recognize famine in the world; they are going to abuse 100 acres of land." What rubbish—100 acres. They say, "Bring it into the urban community." But those same people will go around into the urban community—again, the town of Ajax, which I represent, is exactly that; it is a relatively small urban community —they go in there and say, "Not in the urban community; put it out in the sticks; put it out in the boondocks." They cannot have their cake and eat it too.

There were even advisers who came, for example, into my area, professional advisers who, as a matter of fact, would not even put their own professional views in front of their peers for examination. I suspect their actual motivations in that.

4:50 p.m.

Those suspicions have some validity. But some of these situations are suspect when it is a matter of you're agin it if it is here, maybe for the exact opposite reasons. However that really is irrelevant. It is a matter of always being opposed to everything and anything. I think it is nice to know that we have a minister, a government and a province that are recognizing the problem and want to solve it in a reasonable, fashionable, responsible way to the betterment of us all, to get away from the irresponsible dumping and misuse of our lands going on now in the disposal of these same products.

People do not want to comprehend that the problem does not store itself. It does not just disappear for the two or three years some members would want to add to the process. It is here, now. I would even go so far as to say there are some lands now being degraded in this province because there is no place to go. This government, through the guts of this minister, is solving that problem and it deserves the support of this Legislature.

Mr. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, earlier today the Minister of the Environment stated in this House that Dr. Chant "recommends the concept of this facility and the site selection need not be subject to hearing under the Environmental Assessment Act."

That implies to me that Dr. Chant in some way endorses the action of the government in not having an Environmental Assessment Act hearing for that site selection. But the fact is I have just spoken to Dr. Chant and he makes the following statement, which I am authorized to read in the House to correct the record. He says:

"I do regret that the site selection was not subject to a proper environmental assessment hearing, but given that the government has decided that the facility is going to be in South Cayuga, I am willing to operate that facility to make certain that it is the best facility that money can buy."

I want to make it very plain that Dr. Chant does not in any way endorse the fact that there was not an environmental assessment hearing. He simply said that given that the site is a fait accompli and the facility is to be there because the government has so decided, he is prepared to operate the facility.

The Acting Speaker: The opposition has been placed on the record.

Mr. Nixon: It concerns me that the information just put on the record by my colleague, the Leader of the Opposition does not fall directly in line with the statement made by the minister earlier today.

I was very concerned that copies of the minister's statement were not available because they were so important. The intent of using Dr. Chant and Dr. Emery, apparently a well known member of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, to carry the argument is substantially unfair. I hesitate and do not use the word "misleading," but I feel there was at least an attempt to carry the argument by fastening it to the reputation of these men rather than having it on its own merits.

I represent a constituency right next to that of the Minister of the Environment. We have no problem whatsoever co-operating in local affairs. The question from the minister and his colleagues is a valid one: What would we do instead? I would say the best answer is that we, and they, should simply obey the law. If there is a problem with the buildup of toxic waste from industry without a reasonable procedure for disposal, I can only assign some of the blame to the present Minister of the Environment.

The blame must be shared with his colleagues and predecessors going back 15 years because the policy of the Conservative government has been to vacillate and play protective politics with an issue that they knew must be solved at some time. The chickens have come home to roost. The toxic wastes are gathering in the present minister's puddle and he must do something about it. We agree on all sides.

All sorts of alternatives have been proposed. One of the most outlandish was to store some of these toxic wastes in Middleport, the constituency of Brant. We debated that in the House and a number of questions were asked. The minister adhered to the concept of an environmental hearing in that case, which was proper. In fact, it postponed the breaking of ground for such a temporary storage facility by 18 to 24 months.

Now the minister has simply forgotten that area and I am glad, but the alternative on which he has lighted, putting the toxic wastes in South Cayuga without an environmental hearing is completely unacceptable. I cannot accept the argument that we have no time for an environmental hearing, a concept that has been intrinsic in what the minister and other spokesmen for the government have said. Deciding once and for all the disposition of toxic wastes is an important, and I might as well say politically sensitive, matter. If the minister had the guts to which his colleague alluded in the most previous speech, he should certainly have undertaken to retain the very best independent advisers and consultants from any place in Ontario and asked them to come up with their principal recommendation for the disposal of these toxic wastes.

You know, Mr. Speaker, the South Cayuga area was not even referred to in MacLaren's interim report. The only thing that recommends South Cayuga is that the government owns it and therefore can move forward without the problems that might be involved in an expropriation hearing.

They have asked what we would do, and what should be done if MacLaren has the people who are best in this. It concerns me that their reports, which do not even show that South Cayuga should be the repository for these wastes, do not even show red or pink behind the crosshatched blue, indicating that it was considered previously as a depository. There is every indication that the suggestion came from the minister or his officials and that is what concerns me.

Surely these experts should be given the responsibility for making the recommendation and the minister should then say: "Okay. Here is their recommendation. We will have an environmental hearing and I don't give a damn if it is a Liberal, Tory or NDP riding." Frankly, I don't think he does.

I am not prepared to get on my high horse about that in spite of the odds and difficulties presented to me and my colleagues over these many months. The minister asks what we would do and the simplest and best answer is to say we would do what the government should do, and that is obey the law, which calls for an environmental hearing. To proceed in any other fashion is an indication of the fiasco which has resulted because of the way in which the minister and his predecessors have dealt with this problem over the last 15 years, not an indication of good or great political leadership.

This is what concerns me. If the minister thinks that by a show of bravado and bringing in the names of reputations of the federation of agriculture and Dr. Chant he is going to ride roughshod over the opposition, he is mistaken. He knows the special political problems he faces in this House with getting approval for any of the proposals that were a part of his announcement on Tuesday and his additional announcements today.

I can assure him, and you Mr. Speaker, that all of us, including our critic who will speak later in this debate, are deeply concerned about the mess this province has got itself into with industrial toxic wastes, liquid wastes, and what we are going to do about it. I do not accept the contention that is inherent, that there is no time for a hearing. We have wasted the last six years in the muddle of the various policies of the minister and his predecessor, but we can get the kind of co-operation in this House called for from the last speaker if the minister is to say we are in this terrible situation, toxic wastes are metaphorically rising up past our collective necks, and here is the proposal, not based on a political situation under which he has to use up land John White bought by mistake—that has already been put forward.

The area of South Cayuga has not figured in any of the recommendations from the experts who had the freedom to roam the province and come up with a proposal, but if he is prepared to allow the experts, untrammelled by political advice, to come up with the best recommendation and then hold an environmental hearing, I, for one, am prepared to say that is where the stuff goes even if it is in my backyard in South Dumfries.

Mr. Isaacs: Mr. Speaker, I think the challenge that was thrown out by the House leader for the Conservative Party is probably the reason why it is so important that we have this debate today and why I believed it was so important that we have it on Tuesday. I don't think things have changed substantially. We have to identify the problem, we have to look for the causes, and then we have to get the agreement of the people of Ontario for the procedures and programs the government and this Legislature wish to implement.

The minister does us some credit, and indeed does my colleague the member for Welland-Thorold a great deal of credit when he accuses him of being responsible for the cancellation of the Walker Brothers proposal before the Environmental Assessment Board. I would be overwhelmed if I felt that we in the New Democratic Party had that kind of power over the people of this province. I want to say to the minister that it was not because of our actions that the council of the city of Thorold and the people of that community and the people of the town of Harwich and the council of Harwich decided they did not want those facilities to proceed in the way the minister had proposed in his role as coproponent with those two companies. If we had that kind of influence over councils that are not even dominated by members of this party, it would be an impressive day indeed. That day will come and the day will come when we are on that side of the House.

Let us look at the problems because we have very little time in this debate. The problems are three. The first problem is that great volumes of liquid industrial waste are being generated in this province. We have approximately 9 million kilograms of PCBs in Ontario today. We have 62 million gallons a year of liquid waste being produced by industry in this province today, and this figure is projected to go to 75 million gallons by 1984. We have a situation where, if the US government were to close the border to our liquid waste trucks, we would have an immediate crisis. We recognize that problem.

The second difficulty is that the government has been totally unable to get the people of this province on its side when attempting to deal with this problem. That is because of a total lack of credibility of this government when dealing with environmental matters. I want to quote very briefly from a paper by David Estrin entitled Siting Hazardous Waste Disposal Facilities—How to Prevent Lawsuits and the Not-in-my-Backyard Syndrome. The paper was presented to the Ontario Industrial Waste Conference in June of this year, and I know the minister's staff was there. Mr. Estrin, who is a well known environmental lawyer, says:

"Dr. Parrott has to be congratulated for bringing to the Ministry of the Environment a fresh attitude of 'Let's get something done about this grave problem.' Unfortunately, the ministry went about attempting to implement this initiative in a manner that totally ignored the very challenge that Dr. Parrott recognized in a speech in 1979—the need to gain widespread public acceptance of the existence of disposal facilities and the great need for new facilities."

Mr. Estrin does go on further to explain how it is necessary to get public leaders, not only in this House, but out there in the community, to trust in the credibility and technical competence of the Ministry of the Environment, and also says what is so desperately needed is a belief among the members of the public that the ministry is willing to allow the public to participate in the decision-making process. That process includes the siting decisions.

I want to use the MacLaren report, which we got on Tuesday, at lunchtime, to illustrate the point we are making today in this House. I want to tell the minister that although he has said the MacLaren report justifies his decision, in fact it does not justify his decision. Further, I say to him we are prepared to endorse wholeheartedly the recommendations contained in the MacLaren report. I want to go through them briefly and read portions into the record.

"1. It is recommended that the ministry continue to actively encourage industrial waste generators to minimize waste volumes by such techniques as process change, recycle, waste exchange, on-site treatment or a combination of these." We endorse that recommendation.

"2. It is recommended that the province proceed as soon as practical to acquire one or more sites where it would be possible to establish the following facilities:

"(i) a secure landfill;

"(ii) a high temperature incineration complex . . .

"(iii) a physical/chemical treatment complex . . ." We endorse that recommendation. We do have some questions about what is meant by secure landfill.

"3. It is recommended that the ministry explore the feasibility of using underground facilities, such as dry mines as an alternative to secure landfilling of solid waste or for the storage of relatively innocuous wastes . . ." There aren't any dry mines in South Cayuga and I don't think the recommendation is connected in any way with what the minister announced on Tuesday. In any event, we endorse it.

"4. When the ministry has selected a site for the establishment of waste management facilities, it should consider the development of a deep well for the disposal of residual saline solutions . . ." We endorse that, but not a deep well in South Cayuga because it has been illustrated before, in the case of the Nanticoke deep well proposal, that area is unsuitable for a deep well. Yet the minister has not stated categorically there will be no deep well on that site. Indeed, by endorsing the report, he is allowing us to believe there could be a deep well on that site.

"5. It is recommended that a generous buffer strip be established around any waste management facilities and that the buffer be used for agricultural purposes not directly linked to the food chain (e.g., sod farming, nurseries and flowering seed production, growth of Christmas trees, et cetera). Provisionally, a minimum width of 500 metres is suggested for the buffer."

That recommendation confirms exactly what my colleague from Welland-Thorold said, that the land, all 740 acres, is likely to be taken out of food production, not just primary but secondary food production as well, because there aren't any animals that eat sod, flowering seeds or Christmas trees that subsequently go into the food chain.

"6. It is recommended that Ontario finance, own and control the facilities . . ." We agree. We welcome that. The minister has made his best step yet in dealing with the problem, but it is still not good enough.

"7. It is recommended that the province attempt to establish a waste management facility on a single site . . ." We agree. We concur. We endorse the minister's grasp of that.

The next recommendation is an important one.

"8. Experience in Europe has shown that some three years may be required to design, construct and commission a comprehensive, central waste management facility. Until such time as the recommended facilities are operational, the ministry should proceed with the interim solutions which it initiated in 1979 to alleviate the current situation with respect to liquid industrial waste management, viz, establish at least one interim storage facility . . ." and "establish one or two solidification plants . . ."

We have already addressed the problem of the minister's 1979 announcement and how that too totally lacked credibility because the homework had not been done previously. Nevertheless, if the minister is suggesting to us the South Cayuga site is going to be a temporary facility, as well as a permanent facility and that there may be things done on that site which are not to be done in a permanent facility, then we have to object very strenuously indeed. It is a fact that from the minister's announcement on Tuesday we do not even know what he plans to do on that site, let alone how it is going to be done or how we can be assured it is safe.

Recommendation nine talks about a complete review of the waybill system, which is long overdue and was not mentioned in the minister's announcement.

5:10 p.m.

I want to sum up in one sentence by saying that everything in the MacLaren report is supportable. Every recommendation in there can be dealt with through the environmental assessment process and in no other way. Every MacLaren recommendation can only be dealt with through our existing legislation. Let us get on with it. Let us get the hearing started as soon as possible in the new year so it can be completed in time for the facility to be operational.

Mr. Kennedy: Mr. Speaker, perhaps this afternoon and on several occasions there has been more heat than light addressed to this issue. I have some familiarity with the county of Haldimand and know of the texture of the Haldimand clay loam that has made such a contribution to this province's agricultural production over the years. I also know that in the selection of this site, as has been pointed out but lost along the way, we are speaking in terms of only 100 acres for the site with 640 adjacent acres as a buffer zone and in addition a control zone of a mile for safety reasons.

The impact on agricultural production in the total picture is so negligible, as has been stated by the member for Durham West (Mr. Ashe), it should not occupy the time of this House in discussion. If we look at any of the recent agricultural statistics, we will see in every crop an increase per acre production across this province and the reduction, if any, in this is so negligible we can dismiss it.

Besides that, within the control zone, agriculture can be carried on. I want to say if we do not address this problem and dispose safely of our liquid and other industrial wastes, there will not be any food within the food chain free of impurities. The whole province will have this problem right across its area if we do not come to grips with the problem, gather this material together and destruct it safely.

The first NDP speaker mentioned there is a problem of credibility with the minister. This just is not so. We have in this current minister a man of integrity, of honesty and ability, a forthright individual who has devoted a great deal of time to wrestling with this problem. He has come up with a solution that should be supported by all members of this House.

Over the years we have debated disposal of industrial wastes and selection of sites. I well recall being involved in a discussion on one occasion a year or two ago where the member for Windsor-Sandwich (Mr. Bounsall)—and I see he is here—said we cannot have this process going on in the builtup areas. He said what should be selected is a large tract of land somewhere in the less populated areas of this province. I say to that member that I followed him in his remarks and endorsed that. Now this has occurred and it behooves us to come to grips with it and support this site.

There are two issues that seem to be addressed. One is agricultural production, which can be set aside, because in the total picture it is not urgent or important. The other one has to be risk and health. The minister has pointed out in his statement that the equipment being used will engage the best technology known anywhere in the world. They are going to go and find it. There will be a process that will ensure total destruction. If it is totally destroyed—and that is what will occur—there is no risk to health. In addition, we have the buffer zone and the control zone.

If anyone thinks I do not have some appreciation of the fear of any jeopardy to the health of people, I can set his mind at rest on that issue. I have been there and I know all about it. I know that with the facility there that risk is eliminated.

The other thing that was brought up is the need for an environmental assessment hearing. The member for Brant-Oxford-Norfolk (Mr. Nixon) indicated the minister was in violation of the law by the action he has taken. This is simply not the case. That act was put together to give ministerial discretion in such situations as this and it is being applied. When that bill was put to this Legislature, there was a lengthy debate and it went through. As I recall it, it went through after a great deal of input, both from witnesses who came and from the members. It was not a bill that was swiftly put through. It was put through with all these factors taken into account and was endorsed by this House. Therefore, the minister is within the law in using this discretionary power.

The other point I want to make is the concern that there would not be involvement of the public. I can assure the members, again from experience, that there will be involvement of the public, both unofficially and officially, through the makeup of the corporation that will be conducting the affairs of the facility. In that corporation are two resident members and, as has been announced, a chairman with unexcelled qualifications to chair the corporation.

I do not know in what further direction we could go, unless we are again going to procrastinate and not do anything. If we do procrastinate we can fairly state, as is the case now being demonstrated, there will be impurities in the food produced in this province, not only animal but plant as well. Plant, animal and marine life will be affected if we do not come to grips with the situation and get this plant established and in operation.

I want to congratulate and commend a courageous minister who has not brought this forward lightly. He has been working with it since he took over his present onerous office which he handles so well. He has been receptive, open and accessible to all groups. I have heard this across the province and so have the members opposite. Not only that, if we get this plant in place, our technology without doubt will ensure that Ontario will continue—and I emphasize continue—to lead in environmental protection matters. The spinoff and the benefits from what we learn, achieve and put in place to deal with these hazardous wastes will be available to other jurisdictions, not only in Canada but anywhere else in the world. I think it is a problem that must be addressed beyond our boundaries as well.

I commend the minister for taking this lead, for finding out all the technical information that is available and building that in, as well as any improvements we can make, to ensure the most sophisticated, safe system that can be produced. We should, in this Legislature, proceed without further delay. Certainly, the public have a right to know what is going on and that information will be available to them. As I have said, the minister shares this and will continue to do so.

I have some understanding of the concern of the member for that riding and of the people, but from the experience that I, and some others here have had, that fear—perhaps if it is a fear of the unknown that will be known—need not unduly perturb them because there is no way this government is going to do anything to jeopardize the health of its residents. On the contrary, if we do not move on this, I submit we will be jeopardizing the health of the people of this province.

Mr. Kerrio: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to a very important issue. I am sure that all members on all sides feel that this particular problem is one of quite long standing. I must say at the outset that the government should accept the responsibility for the problem as it exists today.

There has never been any jurisdiction throughout the land that has been in charge of the shop as long as the government of Ontario. For some of the members to come here and suggest that we members on this side are negative and all we can do is tear down what the government puts before the House is ludicrous in the face of the fact that we would not be dealing with this problem today if this government had taken a responsible position.

The member for Mississauga South can stand in his place and suggest that he is a responsible person, but when there was going to be a test run on burning PCBs in Mississauga he vociferously opposed the research. We were not talking about some kind of involvement of long standing; we were talking about research for the benefit of the people of Ontario and all of Canada. All that member had to do was stand in his place and say, "Yes, in the interests of the people across Ontario, I think we should allow this research to go on." It is ludicrous to suggest that we on this side of the House stand in the way of progress when a member on the government side can take that position and then stand here and try to defend the position of this minister.

I have been very much involved in the concerns as they relate to the toxins going into the river at Niagara. My concern has to do with the fact that there have been many governments in many jurisdictions not caring and not doing the proper thing. Recently, SCA Chemical Services Limited was dumping in the river. We need solidification processes in Ontario so that we don't put those wastes in the river. I say the situation in Niagara-Thorold was handled so badly that the citizens of Thorold were up in arms against the Walker Brothers site, and justifiably so.

If this government had put in place some kind of ministerial group that would go down and look at the situation and properly monitor that site, we would not have had the opposition from the citizens

We are still faced with the dilemma today that with all the government money and with all their expertise, the citizens of this nation still have to band together to defend themselves against the people they put in place to do the job for them. It just isn't happening.

What happened in Niagara is a disaster. In attempting to enter an agreement with Walker Brothers to put in a solidification process, this minister did not see to it that the Ontario Provincial Police investigation was accelerated so they could get on with the charges that were going to be laid or not laid. It is still going on. The minister and the Solicitor General (Mr. McMurtry) have not seen fit to do what the people are demanding. They have put me in an awkward position because I have been waiting for the evidence to come forth to understand what the minister is trying to do.
